And the city's hue and cry,
And the endless tasks to do,
Men, I'm sure, are better, too;
Gentler, kinder, more content,
More like men their Maker meant.

Watch them, know them, as they toil
Nearer to the fruitful soil;
Men of orchard, field and stream,
Closer to God's purpose seem.
Far more patient than are we
Of the city's husbandry.

SUNDAY DRIVER STILL EVIDENT

Easternn Seaboard Reports Gas Sales Declined Only 10 P. C. Over Weekend

New York, Aug. 11 (AP)—Regardless of the gasoline curfew, the Sunday driver, with his entourage of relatives and his picnic basket remains.

Unifficial attendance figures at beaches and parks in New York and New Jersey gave this picture of the Sunday traffic situation after a week of petroleum co-ordinator Harold Ickes' nightly curfew plan:

Coney Island for the sixth time this summer reported an attendance of more than 1,000,000, while Jones Beach drew 118,000 bathers, most of whom arrived in automobiles.

Meanwhile, mixed results for the curfew's first week were reported by filling stations. Some companies noted a decline of from 1 to 15 per cent in gasoline sales, others said they were selling as much as they did before last Sunday.

PAIN IN ABDOMEN

Speaking of one of his methods of trying to decide whether the patient's pain in abdomen is due to an ulcer, to cancer, or to the gall bladder, a physician tells us that he asks the patient to show "exactly" the painful spot. If the patient puts his hand over the middle of abdomen, two or three inches above the umbilicus or navel, the physician suspects inflammation of stomach in young people and cancer in those who are middle-aged or past. If the patient puts his hand over the upper right hand part of the abdomen, the physician suspects gall bladder trouble. If, however, he does not use his hand to cover the spot but places just the tip of his index finger on the painful spot, the physician suspects ulcer of the stomach or ulcer of the small intestine, which latter may not be an inch away from the stomach.

Of course, these are not the only signs of these three ailments nor are they the most important signs but taken with other signs and symptoms, they help the physician in deciding what is causing the pain.

In addition to the location or position of the pain, the physician wants to know just when the pain occurs.

If pain occurs a few minutes after eating, it is likely due to an inflamed stomach—gastritis.

If pain occurs 1 to 3 hours after eating, it is usually due to an ulcer of the stomach, and if 2 to 4 hours after eating, to ulcer of the small intestine.

If pain occurs 3 to 6 hours after eating, it is often due to liver or gall-bladder disturbances.

If pain is relieved by eating, it is usually due to ulcer; if aggravated by food, it may be due to inflammation of the stomach or to cancer.

Now, nervousness, anxiety, worry, very often cause pain similar to ulcer pain and sometimes cause a constant pain at upper part of the stomach just below the breast bone.

By means of the fluoroscope, X-ray films, test meals, much other information is obtained, for, after all, pain is just one symptom.

By Such Small Things See England

London, Aug. 11 (By Wireless).—The Archbishop of Canterbury, frail in black gaiters, a huge gold cross on his chest, his white hair like an aureole around his pale old face, is framed in the shattered arches of the twelfth century chapel in the Lambeth Palace, which has been the residence of the head of the Church of England for 800 years.

'All ruined," he says, "but by an act of God the altars were untouched."

His chin trembles. . . . The sixteenth century library is gutted, the floor littered with cindered, ruined books. "It is very hard to burn a book." The leaves cleave together under pressure. Only the fly-leaves burn. I open one. It is dated 1768 and written in Latin. "The Canon Law of France."

The House of Commons, bombed and burned, is clean and slick-looking in the empty cellar-like ruin so strangely small. The middle is black. On much of what once was the floor charred papers are scattered. "Votes and proceedings of the House of Commons, Monday, the 8th day of June, 1868" . . . of galleries flanking the House where Ayes demolished Nays untouched.

England still says so.

The gallows humor and ironic understatement of Londoners. . . . The taxi driver's account: "Nothing happened to me throughout it all, but my Aunt Maud 'ad a bit of a bad time. 'Ad 'er 'ead blowed off." . . . A fire fighter says, "We wasn't what you'd call really prepared at first for the fires, but the bombings were a bit of an innovation in England."

The fire fighters. . . . Men and women sleeping in stations on mattresses on the floor, ready to spring into the streets at the sound of the siren. . . . An immense army of them, part-time workers, whole-time workers, paid and unpaid, ladies and ladies' maids, dentists and carpenters, lawyers and teamsters, Oxford accents, East End accents, each knowing his or her exact task, each ready for unforeseen emergency—fire fighters, soldiers of the realm.

Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, broad and brawny, says, "I talked that pacifist palaver, too. Now I know that you have to create peace, not hope for it by default. I now know the defence of the people is the first social service. But the man who works must eat, and you cannot revolutionize diet in the midst of war. Coal miners sometimes lose from three to seven pounds of weight in one day in the mines. A miner's wife and children cut their own rations in order to feed their men. Tell our brother workers in the United States to see that we get more meat, sugar, cheese and tea. That is a British workman's diet."

A Cambridge intellectual: "Workers are eating more sensibly than they have in years. They always had too much protein and not enough vegetables."

Take your choice.

Sir Herbert Richmond, Cambridge naval historian, discussing detachedly the similarities and differences of this and the Napoleonic wars . . Conscientious objectors are more tolerantly treated in this war than in the last. They are gravely heard before a tribunal, and after being exempted from military service they volunteer in the most dangerous civilian service, such as bomb evacuation and fire fighting, but they are cold shouldered by their fellows. They suffer and argue.

A young girl, pink, white and fluffy-haired, in the khaki uniform of the Auxiliary Army, trudging six miles from Oxford to join a camp where she is a telephone operator. "It's a wonderful life. We all love it, only you don't get to see your mother often. We do get homesick. I've never been in London. Is it really so bad there? I saw a bomb once, and it fell in a field. I never met an American before. We love Americans. We think they are heroes for helping us when they don't actually need to. We sing songs about Americans. A nice one is called 'God Bless America.' Did you ever meet one of those beautiful film stars?"

PRIVATE SOLDIERS

One of the highest compliments that can be paid any man is to say he is a good soldier.

Yet the original idea behind the word "soldier" was that of a hireling or mercenary.

"Soldier" is derived indirectly from Latin "solidus," a coin or piece of money.

The French word "sou," a small sum of money, is from the same source.

"Soldier" at first referred to the pay or wages received by men in the Roman army.

An enlisted man is a common soldier as distinguished from an officer.

"Officers and men" is a common expression in connection with armies. It is really a shortened form of "officers and enlisted men."

A man just mustered into the army is known as "recruit," which literally means "new growth."

A volunteer is a soldier who enlists of his own accord.

Conscripts, draftees, inductees and selectees are soldiers mustered into service under conscription, draft or selective service acts.

A common soldier under the rank of non-commissioned officer is a private soldier or simply a private.

Originally private soldiers were the private fighting men of individual kings, dukes and other leaders as distinguished from soldiers in the service of the state.

A private soldier without any distinction whatever is a buck private.

A first class private gets a little more pay than a buck private.

A new recruit, still without training, is called a rookie or rooky. The term is supposed to be a corruption of "recruit."

Corporals and sergeants of various grades are known as "noncoms," short for non-commissioned officers.

In the British army commissioned officers below the rank of captain are sub-alterns.

A private soldier enlisted for a term in the army is a regular.

A veteran (from Latin "vetus," old) is a seasoned soldier.

Men in the organized militia of the various states are National Guardsmen. "Militia" is derived from Latin "milites," soldiers, but it is generally applied to a body of citizen soldiers as distinguished from regulars.

POWERFUL CANADIAN ARMY BUILT TO REALISTIC PLAN TO FIGHT GERMAN PANZERS

Co-ordination With British and Carefully Thought-out Training Plan, the Secret of Canadian Army's Efficiency and Strength.—

By KIM BEATTIE

(This is the first in a series of articles on the Canadian Army's Training and Reinforcing Program.)

The first requisite of a successful leader in war is realism. We can thank God that Britain's and Canada's military leaders are realists. Neither the British nor Canadian Army Commanders or Chiefs of Staff have been led astray by newspaper headlines of lightning-strokes against ill-equipped old-style armies, into hopes of a walk-over war. They have no dreams of an army of magicians. They have not pleasantly conjured up for themselves a mythical force of machines and scientists, such as the comic supplements portray, which will crash through all opposition with fantastic ease.

General Sir John Dill, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, G.O.C. Home Forces, in which the Canadian Corps serves, Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Corps Commander, and Major-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the Canadian General Staff, are facing the blunt facts of the ruthlessness of the struggle in which we are engaged. They foresee the hard truths of the battles of decision, which will only be won by fighting.

Implacable Purpose

Unlike impractical side-line strategists, which all wars know. And unlike some impatient arm-chair critics, which all armies have, and who seem to think that a modern soldier can be created overnight, they are realistically building an army of hard-fighting, well-drilled soldier-technicians — to meet and defeat the German Army!

That, and nothing else, and nothing else diverts them from the implacable pursuit of that purpose.

The men who are building, training and commanding the Canadian Army clearly see the need for haste, but they also know that a modern army can be created through a long, tedious process of hard work and hard training. They know that an undisciplined soldier was a danger to himself, his comrades and his cause in all older wars, and that a half-trained soldier in today's scientific warfare is a positive menace. They know that the individual soldier is of much greater importance and is far more difficult to train for mechanized war than in any previous military age.

Sense of Urgency

If complaints about too much complacency in Canada are sometimes justified, they are not applicable to the men who are building the Canadian Army. From Minister of National Defence, the Hon. J. L. Ralston, down, there is no greater sense of urgency anywhere than in the Army's creators and commanders. And nowhere in the Dominion are firm character and patient resolution so imperative, or under a greater strain, as the war drums on in the distance and crisis succeeds crisis. They know the imminence and extent of the threat, but they also know it would be suicidal to put inefficient men into the field. They know that nothing can be skimped or left out, nothing left to chance, in fitting the Canadian recruit for the modern battlefield.

That is, perhaps, the most apt description of the Canadian Army-in-Training, — an Army which leaves nothing to chance.

Generals McNaughton and Crerar, who are bringing Canada's idea of the most efficient modern army it is possible to create into existence on the manoeuvre fields of England and the parade-squares and training grounds of Canada are working to a carefully thought-out plan. The program of training reinforcements and additional units for the Canadian Corps overseas, takes the recruit progressively through months of basic and advanced training, plus technical and trade-training for the great hosts of skilled specialists, plus large-scale manoeuvres and field practices for all.

A Powerful Tangible

It is a long-range program which began from a standing start of less than 10,000 men in all three Canadian fighting services. It has been hampered from the outset by an inevitable shortage of equipment. It has had to be changed again and again to meet ever-altering tactics and war situations, but which, despite all setbacks and handicaps, is now swiftly transforming that strategic conception into a tangible, powerful, well-trained army.

The whole gigantic training structure in Canada, with its scores of camps, depots and training centres sited across the Dominion, and with many complex and diverse aims within it, is single-mindedly striving toward one definite end; that is to the day when it will battle in Canada's name against the Nazi scourge beside the British Army. Every effort is made to ensure that Canadian reinforcements will be of maximum usefulness in the Canadian Corps in operations with the British Army against the common enemy.

The Canadian Army Plan is necessarily one which is coordinated with British Army tactics and equipment. The entire program of development and expansion, effecting almost every detail of training and equipping from raw recruit to finished modern soldier, has been worked out as a co-ordinated effort. The objective is that everything which Lieut.-Gen. McNaughton and his Staff have observed and learned overseas has been fitted into Major-General Crerar's training scheme at home. Everything which the British Army has noted on the battle-fronts, everything which British Intelligence reports have disclosed in new enemy tactics, formations, arms and method have been incorporated into the training program in Canada.

Invaluable Policy

This definite pointing of Canadian troops to the conditions they will meet in action, while they are still in Canada, is obviously invaluable. It has been enhanced by an exchange of regimental and staff officers, and by a regular system of returning instructors to Canada for a stay of eight months, when they are replaced by fresh instructors with overseas experience. Canadian officers go overseas to absorb first-hand impressions, and return. British officers are loaned, and Canadian officers are transferred back to Canada, to take the latest Canadian Corps and British Army ideas to the home training ground.

The worth and influence of such a practice is tremendous. The extent to which it is carried out as illustrated in the 3rd Canadian Division which reached England late last month. Its Commander, Major-Gen. C. B. Price, had overseas experience in this war before taking command; so did its principal General Staff Officer, its senior Administration Staff Officer, its Senior Artillery Officer, its Army Service Corps Commander, two of its infantry brigadiers and all its infantry and artillery brigade majors. Almost the entire actual training staff thus had overseas experience in this war before the Division left Canada.

That far-sighted policy is now in full swing. New and constantly changing tactics and methods are being incorporated and developed with a minimum of disturbance and time-loss.

Long, Sound Training

Another new, and important feature of the over-riding Canadian training plan is the provision which gives Canadian troops much more training in Canada than they received in the last war.

Under the new system, the individual soldier completes his four months of basic, weapon and specialist or trade-training, joins his unit and then undergoes sub-unit and unit training by company and battalion, or their equivalent in Canada. If time, equipment and the war situation permits brigade manoeuvres are also carried on, and the day is near when Canadian reinforcements will leave Canada ready, in all respects, for action.

How well and far the policy has progressed is clearly evident. The intention of last winter and this spring to send to congested England only those troops who are nearly ready for the fight, is already a reality. The 1st Division, which arrived in England in December, 1939, still required to complete most of its training overseas. The 2nd Division also had considerable work to do. But the 3rd Division, which recently arrived, was able to enter into the last phase of their training at once. The senior officers, junior leaders and men were so close to completion of the long training grind that they could start ambitious tactical schemes by divisional or larger formations immediately.

Equipment is Rolling

The final objective — to send men overseas equipped and trained for instant action — is not yet fully reached. Limitations of equipment as well as operational requirements have prevented it.

But the end of the period when lack of equipment is a retarding influence is almost in sight. Canada's tremendous munitions and supply effort is starting to roll out the bombers, the guns, the tanks and the automatic weapons. The man behind the lathes and rivet-guns is almost ready to equip the Canadian Army for war in all that project's multitudinous details, from steel helmet to sole studs, from pay-book to gas mask, and including everything but seige guns and minor items. When that time comes — and it is coming rapidly — Canadian troops will take on the final polish of the fully-trained, scientific soldier at home, or in the least possible time after sailing.

Even the existing program of augmenting, reinforcing and equipping the Canadian Army overseas is co-ordinated with the British. It is the outgrowth of the visit to England last year of Defence Minister Ralston and the Chief of Staff. They conferred with Prime Minister Churchill, Mr. Anthony Eden, Capt. Margesson, and the Chiefs of Staff of the three British Services. An agreement was reached on the most useful and effective army contribution Canada could make. And the entire effort of developing, training and equipping the Canadian Army at home, and of enlarging the establishment overseas, has been in line with those British-Canadian decisions and arrangements.

The Canadian Army

In the fourteen months since the Empire rallied from the shock of the debacle in France and the Low Countries, the Canadian Army exclusive of the Reserve, has become a force of well over 200,000 men, enlisted for service on any front and wherever duty may require them, plus another 170,000 subject to call for service in Canada, and about 6,500 ex-servicemen organized as the Veterans Guard of Canada.

On England's front-line are the 1st, the 2nd, the bulk of the 3rd Divisions and the Army Tank Brigade. In training in Canada are the 4th Division, the 5th (Armoured) Division, their auxiliary and ancillary troops, and sufficient battalions to provide the infantry for a sixth division.

Behind all the hours of their training is the clear knowledge that the substitution of machines for men in attack, and in order to obtain speed and range as well as hitting power, has resulted in an enormous change in the importance of each individual soldier. The long-standing prophecy that the arrival of machine-age war would make the private soldier an insignificant cog, a mere robot for the scientist and mechanical engineer, has proven a fallacy. The opposite has happened. It is safe to say that never before in the history of arms has so much depended upon the training, the resource and initiative of the individual fighting man.

That realization explains why Generals McNaughton and Crerar have rigidly insisted upon a more thorough grounding in the fundamentals and basic weapons of soldiering than was called for in the last war. It has surprised the civilian world, but mechanization has made training in the elementary phases the most important of all. Canada is building an army which gains great power from its machines, but success will lie, in the last analysis, in the strength that comes from co-ordination and teamwork. That can only be obtained from a sound foundation, from a system of training which calls for a long, perhaps wearying and monotonous, but still imperative period of basic training.

First Things First

It is a case of first things first. To send a partly trained soldier out on today's swift far-ranging manoeuvres as soon as he is given a uniform, as some impatient observers seem to propose, would mean a fiasco. Without training by section and platoon he will snarl the exercise by company and battalion. Enough of him, and you have a mob with a mob's confusion, impotence, lack of purpose and direction. Train him soundly in the basic weapons and sub-unit movements and then give him a sensible progression to advanced weapons and tactics, and you have a spare part which will fit perfectly into place in the huge, complex machine called The Army.

(Why the tank has made basic training all important, how the mechanized Canadian Army will fight in theory, how the demand for thousands of technicians is being met, and how the procedure of promotion from the ranks is carried out and new officers are trained, will be told in subsequent articles by Mr. Beattie.)

● There's a patriotic fervour in Canada. Men are drilling and marching off to war. Factories roar night and day. Trains and ships and planes speed men and materials to their destinations. And the 1941 war-time Canadian National Exhibition will show you much of this excitement. The Navy, Army and Air Force are building giant displays. The Department of Munitions and Supply will show you the "tools of war" being manufactured, before your very eyes—for use by Empire armies. The Red Cross has a magnificent building to itself. Women's organizations will show the work they do for troops and bombed-out cities of England.

These are but some of the war highlights of the most important Exhibition ever held in Canada.

China Stands To Block The Japanese

By O. M. GREEN
In the London Listener

When Japan started her war on China four years ago, anyone who had prophesied that the Chinese would still be fighting today with confidence and success would have been considered slightly mad. Yet is is the simple fact that, in spite of the loss of much territory and all her coastal cities, China is in every respect stronger than when she began.

At least four times Japan has made private overtures for peace, twice through the previous German Ambassador in China, Dr. Trautmann. It is said that General Chiang Kai-Shek has promised to shoot the next person who comes to him on a like errand. If the story is not true, it certainly expresses the feeling of the vast majority of Chinese.

Fearfully as China has suffered from the war, the Chinese say frankly that it has done more for them in these four years than would otherwise have been done in 40.

First there is the amazing development of Western or Free China, an area of perhaps two million square miles, guarded from invasion by great mountain ranges. It contains incalculable wealth, both mineral and agricultural, the development of which since the Chinese Government retreated there in October, 1938, is the wonder of every foreign visitor. Unlike Japan, who must import all her sinews of war and industry, China has practically everything she needs under her hand. That is one source of her staying power.

The other is that for the first time in history, all classes of her people down to the humblest peasant are united behind their great leader, that truly great man, General Chiang Kai-Shek. Partly this is due to a general awakening of the national spirit since the Revolution of 1911; partly, and still more effectively, to the cruelty of the Japanese armies. Their ruthless bombing of hundreds of undefended villages, the slaughter and misery they have inflicted on millions of helpless men and women have inspired a horror of Japan which makes the Chinese feel that death itself would be better than to live under her rule; just as we feel about the Germans.

The fall of France gave Japan an unlooked-for opportunity to recoup herself for her heavy losses in China. She has already got a stranglehold on the rich resources of Indo-China, in the north of which she has compelled Vichy to allow her to station troops and establish air bases. From this she went on to make demands on The Netherlands East Indies which would have put them pretty well under her control. She openly cast lustful eyes on the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States. Then she made the grand mistake of allying herself with the Axis, no doubt in the hope of intimidating us and America.

This is not the occasion to discuss the strategic situation in the Far East, but there is every justification for quiet confidence that the necessary steps to meet any eventualities have been taken by all concerned. Even Japan's neutrality pact with Russia is a fresh cause of perplexity to her, since, owing to Hitler's perfidy, which has twice let Japan down very badly, Russia is inferentially ranged on the opposite to her. Worst of all, Japan's blind and hectic diplomacy has definitely united China's struggles and our own. We and America have pledged ouselves to help China and we have helped her, and shall help her still more.

• • •

China is the great stumbling-block to Japan's ambitions. Her armies, more numerous, better equipped and trained than ever before, have repeatedly defeated the Japanese in the past eighteen months. Japan has already lost over a million men in China, while another million are securely pinned down there, unable to get out or to strike a decisive blow. And meanwhile her privations increase, her debts mount up sky-high, her trade dwindles.

It is with very different emotions from those of China, that Japan enters the fifth year of the war, which she started with such gay vision of a military picnic and a rich repast at the end.

Hair Styles for the Choosing

A wave pompadeur effect is one of the new points in this coiffure

BY HELEN FOLLET

TIME WAS when the clever, gifted hairdresser was a rare find, for whose services the cash customer fought tooth and nail. Now the world is full of them. Beauty schools are giving more thorough training every year, and work is done with taste and efficiency. If the famous stylists call themselves artists, that's all right with us; they are. Women the world over are indebted to them for what they have done to make human wool not only presentable but beautiful.

Hairdressers have their associations, gather in convention, where matters are talked over, styles created. Sometimes clients accept these styles, sometimes they don't. Often one arrangement is evolved from another.

Becoming Styles

The strides made by the beauty industry and the beauteous appearance of the sisterhood are due to the fact that operators and designers get together, the strong ones lending a helping hand to the others.

Present day coiffures are blends of the romantic past and the modern touch. They link up in grand shape. The personality coiffure has developed to a high degree. You don't have to tag along with the crowd. You can have your hair styled to suit your face and features; it will be different, but it will conform with the mode.

Many a fashionable lady sports the high hairdress which, it was said, could never get a toehold. Times had to be taken for growing tresses before they could be upped. The long bob is still good, thought there has been talk about shearing. Mature women look a bit silly with flowing locks, so they have the medium cut, hair done in sculptured curls along the nape line or swept to one side in a swirl with wide, fluid waves.

Bangs seem to be booming. They must be soft, have the ends done in little scrolls, carry one or two shadow undulations.

Medicine in the News

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M.D.

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Big Families and Extraordinary Fecundity

A few years ago a nation wide search for the largest family in the United States revealed the Latorras, 21 strong. The father, Mike Latorra was 49 years old; the mother, Rosa, was 44 years old. Their children included a woman, 26, mother of five children of her own; another, 25, mother of three; another, 24, mother of three; a woman, 22; another 21, a girl Sarah, 21, her twin; Isabel, 19; Vito, 17; Michael, 16; Rocco his twin; Joseph, 15; Frank, 12; Mary, 11; Nicholas, 10; John, 8; Philip, 6; Nancy, 5; Rose, 2; Benito Guy, 11 months, and on the way a twentieth.

Many larger families have been recorded in the history of medicine. There is the case of a woman who had twenty-two children in twenty-six years, giving birth to one child at a time, where Mrs. Latorra had two sets of twins. There is the record of a woman who was married at the age of sixteen and died when she was sixty-four who had borne 39 children, one at a time and with the same husband.

In the British records there is another instance of a woman with 39 children, and there is even an old record, somewhat in doubt, of a Scotch weaver and his wife who had 62 children, all of whom lived to be baptized. There is also an account of a man named Pearsons, who was married four times, having 39 children by the first three wives and 14 by the last. He was six feet tall and lived to be 96 years old.

The possibilities of fatherhood for the individual male are, of course, tremendous providing enough women are available and his time not otherwise too much occupied. Newspaper accounts tell of a farmer of North Carolina who was 65 years old in 1893. By that time he had been married twice and had 45 children by the two wives. There were also fifty grandchildren.

The possibilities in relation to birth are amazing. Pregnancy has been reported frequently in girls as young as eight years of age, particularly in tropical countries and among the Eskimo. Dr. Alan Guttmacher of Johns Hopkins delivered a colored girl eleven years and nine days old of a six and three-quarter pound boy which she nursed successfully. Her mother, who was only thirteen years old at the birth of the daughter was thus a grandma at twenty-four. He also reports the case of a woman who had her first child at the age of fifty-two, and another who had her seventh at the age of sixty-two. Records are also available of a case of twins in a girl of thirteen and the Spanish records tell of a girl who had a child before she was twelve and twins before reaching fourteen years of age. There are many cases of women around sixty years of age who have had children.

Boys may become virile as early as fourteen, perhaps earlier, and men may retain their power until ages well advanced, although in the latter cases the evidence is always difficult to evaluate.

The most interesting case in early days was that of Thomas Parr, an Englishman, said to have lived to the age of 152 years and 9 months. William Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, did a postmortem examination on the body of Parr, and the records indicate to modern pathologists that he was probably far younger. But to make the story better Parr did not marry until he was eighty, after which he had a daughter, and a son who lived to be one hundred and twenty-seven years old. After the death of his wife, Parr remarried at the age of 120 and was reputed to have been potent. He was charged with the birth of an illegitimate child at the age of 105.

Fashion Flashes

Last call for summer fashions. Nice for the vacationist is a collarless frock of quilted white pique, with green buttons from top to hem to match the green belt.

Grace and charm appear in every fold of the chiffon evening frock. Lupin blue is used for an exquisite frock with simple bodice and tightly pleated skirt. A full-length cape of matching chiffon caught at the neck with a spray of lupins in simulated star sapphires and moonstones.

You will like the new autumn gloves soon to appear on the market. Chamois colored doeskin cross-stitched in black makes a smart suit glove. Stitching is used around the cuffs and for the fingers.

Praise be that the closed toe is back again and appears in every autumn shoe line. Nice for walking is a spat shoe of gray doeskin combined with black patent leather.

You'll be seeing a great many fur-trimmed tailored reefers come winter. Typical of this trend is a reefer of black woolen, double-breasted with dolman armholes. Notched revers of mink and mink gauntlet-type cuffs.

Specially designed for the popular collarless jacket is a suit blouse of star sapphire satin made with a scarf neckline. Simulated star sapphire buttons and cuff-links.

15th Reunion of Grills Family At Oak Lake

The fifteenth annual re-union of the Grills family was held at Sarles Beach, Oak Lake, on Aug. 7th with a crowd of one hundred and forty-two sitting down together to eat dinner. Later a good number came, making the crowd nearly two hundred.

During the dinner collection was taken. This amounted to $17.46. Mr. Douglas Rutherford, the president called the meeting to order for a business period. A minute of silence was observed in respect for those who had died since the last re-union. It was moved and seconded that the president, Mr. Rutherford and secretary, Mrs. Harry Grills of Campbellford hold office for 1942. Program committee of sports for 1942 were appointed: Mr. Clifford Anderson, Myrtle Miller and Mrs. Jack Rannie. The lucky draw slip went to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dunk. War Savings Stamps. Oldest person: Mr. Willie Grills, seventy-nine. The prize to youngest to Jack Watson Dunk, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunk. The prize to the person farthest distance went to Mrs. Everette Phillips of Toronto. It was decided to hold the 1942 picnic at Sarles Beach the 1st Thursday in August.

Following are the prize winners in sports:

Boys 1 to 5 years, Teddy Grills; Boys 6 to 8, Bobby Bibby, 2nd, Roy Bennett; Girls 6 to 8, Jean Rannie; Boys 9 to 12, Keith Anderson; Girls 9 to 12, Eva Barton; Pig race 13 to 16, Ruth Bennett and Art Grills; Loudest dinner call, Mrs. Annie Anderson; Sock race, Tom Chadwick; Needle Threading, Mr. and Mrs. Chadwick; Station to station race, Douglas Rutherford and Jean Peake.

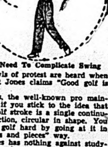
Good Golf Can Be Easy—Opinion of Ernest Jones



No Need To Complicate Swing

Howls of protest are heard when Ernest Jones claims "Good golf is easy."

It is, the well-known pro maintains, if you stick to the idea that the golf stroke is a single continuous action, circular in shape. You make golf hard by going at it in a "bits and pieces" way.

Jones has nothing against studying the details of a good player's movement as he swings his club.

You see that the body turns well toward the right as the club swings back, the left heel is lifted from the ground, the wrists bend inward toward the point of the right shoulder as the club head reaches the limit of the backward swing—and so on!

But, he points out, these actions are the results of your good swing rather than its cause. Piecing them together into a good swing is as hard as piecing arcs together to make a circle. Begin with the circle instead!

Learn how to SWING your club—not just move it. You may be doing the latter when you think you are doing the former.

How to acquire a really good swing is explained and diagrammed by Ernest Jones in our 32-page booklet. Tells how to hold your club, stand, balance. A guide for beginners and more advanced players.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Parents Object to Her Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl, 18 years old and have been employed for a year. I also assist as much as I can in the housework. My mother married a second time, and we live with my stepfather's folks. Although I like to help in the house, they are always finding fault with everything I do.

My parents want me to go out and meet people, but when I do plan to go somewhere, they find a dozen things for me to do before I go, and they often object to my friends. I'm so anxious to make friends and have good times.

Lonely Girl

As your parents don't like your friends, why not appeal to them for helpful suggestions? Sometimes families, without in the least meaning to be inconsiderate, are like that. They urge their daughters to go and meet people and then do nothing in the way of little hospitalities to make this possible.

If you belong to a church, let me urge you to join their clubs or societies. And, of course, there is always the Y.W.C.A They have various clubs for girls of all ages. In my opinion, a girl who is employed and then comes home and helps with the housework is entitled to some recreation.

Likes Pal's Ex-Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I like formerly was my pal's girl friend. When they broke up I asked her if I had a chance. She replied that all men are alike and that she wouldn't take any of them seriously.

I'm very fond of her and don't care to even look at another girl. She's exactly the type for me. Do you think she will learn to care for me?

Wondering.

When a girl tells you that all men are alike and that she doesn't take any of them seriously, she's just flirting. I should say your chance is quite as good as the next, if you don't show her too plainly how much you care. Good luck to you.

She's Independent About Making Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 17 and my love affairs have always been the least of my worries. I had a boy friend, who was 20, and we went together for about four months. He always got mad if I went out with other young men. However, I didn't let that stop me. He thought enough of me to accept my behaviour.

Another time I had a date on Friday, and he was to call me before Sunday for the next date. He didn't call me up. When he came to my house and wanted me to go to the show, I couldn't accept because I had invited some friends in for the evening.

Again he came over without asking, and as it was eight o'clock and I had already made plans for the evening, he had to be disappointed again. That made him angry and he said he doesn't want to see me anymore. I said all right—I'm the type of girl who likes to plan ahead for a date.

My girl friends think it's permissible if boy friends want to kiss them goodnight. What do you think?

Senior.

Your independence about dates is so refreshing that I'm not going to dwell on my sympathy for the young man with whom it seems to me you were a trifle short but your system works!

I get so many letters from girls who sit around, moping and tearful, just waiting for the date-breaker who never comes, that it's highly interesting to see what magic a little spirit brings forth. No, certainly; it's not the thing to kiss boy friends—all and sundry—goodnight. That is reserved for the special friend who is likely to be your fiance.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Settling the Question of What to Wear When You go Dancing

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a young girl is invited to go dancing somewhere (not a special dance) how does she know if she should wear an evening dress? 2. If she does wear an evening dress, must she wear hat and gloves?

T.

1. It's the proper thing and now always taken for granted, for us to inquire about what type of dress we are expected to wear when we go to any kind of party. Don't have any hesitation about asking "What shall we wear?" If he says, "Let's dress. I'll wear my white dinner jacket," you'll know that you are expected to wear a summery dance dress and no hat. But if he says, "Let's not dress. I'll wear a business suit," you should wear a street-length afternoon dress and hat.

2. If you wear an evening dress (probably an informal one during these warm months), you wouldn't wear a hat or gloves.

You Must Identify Self

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please give me some advice on this business of signing one's name so as not to be taken for something you're not. I dislike always writing (Miss) by my signature on a note or letter, but otherwise I am always taken for a Mister. What's the rule? My name, you will admit, could be taken for a man's name as well as a woman's.

Leslie.

I'm afraid, dear girl, that you'll just have to go on writing "Miss" in parenthesis at the left of your signature when you sign letters to persons who wouldn't have any other way of knowing how to address a reply to you. There are many Marions, Sidneys, Shirleys and others with the same problem.

Dressing For a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct for me to use letter-paper bearing my husband's initials for business and general correspondence? 2. Is it proper for guests at a church wedding to wear long dresses? The ceremony is to be at three o'clock in the afternoon, with a reception following at the home. We are not relatives.

E.

1. Your husband's initials on letter-paper, used for either social or business letters, indicates, of course, that the letter-paper is his. For your social letters you should use letter-paper carrying your own initials, or else use plain white paper. The paper on which you wrote to me, with your name and address printed at the top is appropriate for business and professional letters, for family letters and for certain informal types of letters.

2. In some communities we see many women wearing long dresses to afternoon weddings and receptions. In large cities, women customarily wear street length dresses to afternoon wedding. But anywhere a woman guest at an afternoon wedding will be correctly dressed if she wears a street-length dress of a material and color inclined to formality, with an appropriate hat and well-chosen accessories. In other words the type of costume that she would wear to a formal luncheon or to a tea.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, August 12

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to most propitious planetary vibrations this should be a day on which all matters should move to important culminations, under high pressure and with the tempo greatly accelerated. Much practical and constructive work should be accomplished under the spur of unusually stimulated forces and faculties, and with the encouragement and concrete assistance of those in power and financial stability.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of splendid advancement and achitvement, under the stimuli of dynamic energies, bold initiative and unusual mental and creative abilities, which attract the support of those able and willing to promote worthy propositions of high order. Push to cherished goals, but with a measure of self-restraint.

A child born on this day will have great mental, physical and creative energy and initiative, with determination, application and persistency to attain advanced goals, in which its superiors and those in power cooperate.

Curve CONTROL

THERE are two of you, your dream self and your right-now, as-you-are-at-this-moment self. And what one girl out of thousands did to make her dream self become a reality, any girl with a real desire can do.

Let me tell you a true story of a young lady. A stenographer by profession, this young lady had sedentary bulges, and was 20 pounds overweight. Her posture was very bad, her measurements from one inch to eight and one-half inches too generous, and her inferiority complex rated high. Now, thanks to a strict training course outlined by a famous success school, this young lady brought her weight and her measurements down to normal. She mastered the art of arranging her hair and putting on make-up becomingly, perfected her posture and made a new life for herself.

The chart at the bottom of this page is copied from Miss M.B.'s student record kept on file in the school's office. Read this record of achievement and take heart, all you who are overweight, underweight, or out of proportion. Regardless of one's individual problems, the same satisfactory results can be accomplished.

These new measurements and the new weight were accomplished in six weeks' time, and anyone with the same determination to be made over as Miss M.B. can achieve the same results. Rebuilding the body, filling out hollows, giving the figure rounded contours, raising the bust and every other figure problem, as well as those described today, are solved in the lessons supplied by this school and which are followed right in one's home.

In addition to the lessons, which are sent to the students each week, a complete outfit of all possible make-up and beauty aids goes to the student. The correct use of these aids for the individual's needs is part of the training course.

First the record of the student-to-be, together with her name, address, occupation, and coloring of skin and hair is sent to the expert in charge of the school. Then the correctly-chosen make-up and beauty aids, with folders and booklets of the first week's lesson are sent to the "student." Of course, buckling down to the job of making one's self over means work, but it requires no more effort than sitting around pining because your figure isn't what it should be, or because you haven't found a place in the social scheme.

So, if you need regimentation, if you're interested in kowing how one girl's dream self became a reality, let me take you through this splendid course. Space does not permit me to go into the hundreds of steps and suggestions given in this course, but I can touch lightly on the highlights.

The first three days of the first week's training is given over to diet tips, special limbering-up exercises and the basic care of skin and hair.

Then, on the fourth day, the accentuated perfect position (the most important exercise in this course) is introduced. This is the exercise designed to get the body in perfect alignment. It overcomes slumped shoulders, abdominal and hip bulges, and aids in correcting almost every figure fault. Other tips suggest ways and means of overcoming other beauty faults.

In addition to correct dieting and exercising, the second week introduces the beauty angle position for beauty. Care of feet, hands, body, training of voice through breath control and other important essentials are taught. One of the week's leaflets contains, in addition to other exercises and tips, exercises which may be done while riding in a bus, train or car to and from work. There's not a minute lost in this cleverly-planned course and every step takes the would-be beauty nearer her goal.

The lessons for the third week solve many problems of facial skin care, do's and don'ts for always looking lovely, hair troubles, and, of course, dieting and exercising for beauty of face and figure.

The fourth week ushers in a whole new series of exercises and further suggestions for creating the right hairdo and putting on the best make-up for good looks. This course has been planned to take a minimum of time and effort.

The fifth week is jammed full of worthy suggestions destined to bring a new you into focus. Posture is perfected, make-up faults are overcome, hair is made to glisten, feet and legs are put into good walking or running order, and dance steps that make the body supple are introduced. Suggestions for clothes that flatter are given.

The sixth week rounds out the course with further tips for grooming finger and toe nails, hands and feet; how to climb stairs for grace and poise, and suggestions too numerous to mention. All of the exercises and suggestions for improving one's appearance are so well organized that the steps work together to complete the job of making a "new woman" out of the student.

A rigid routine will accomplish the miracle of making a dream self become real

1 The accentuated perfect position designed to bring the body into proper alignment is one of the most important exercises in curve control. It overcomes many faults of the figure.

2

A special exercise that reduces and firms thighs and legs should be a part of every program designed to correct figure faults. It is shown at right.

3

The scooting-for-fun exercise puts every muscle of the body into action and works on overcoming out-of-proportion curves and making the body youthful, trim and firm.

PROBLEMS

I HAVE been on a very rigid diet for the past three months and although I have lost many pounds, my face and neck are much too thin and I look many years older. Isn't it possible for one to lose weight without the loss showing too much in the face? Have you a good diet? MRS. J. JAMES.

A good diet permits one to lose weight where necessary and does not cause weakness or depression. Send along a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will forward you my leaflet of suggestions for losing weight without damage to your youthful appearance. I wouldn't advise you to follow any diet immediately.

Your articles have proved my only beauty guide and I have improved my appearance ever so much. Recently I have had my posture called to my attention and I should like so much to improve it. What exercise should I do to overcome lazy shoulders?

MRS. H. EARLE.

Stand erect and brace your shoulders against a wall. Then walk away with your shoulders still braced against an imaginary wall. Get the feel of the wall at your shoulders and maintain this posture all of the time. It will soon become a habit. Also learn to hold your abdomen in. You didn't mention lack of abdominal control, but these two problems usually go hand in hand. When sitting or standing, and whenever possible during the day, draw in your abdominal muscles. Hold for a second, relax, and repeat as often as possible during the day. This will strengthen the abdominal muscles.

My make-up has suddenly gone berserk. I have always taken pride in putting on a nice make-up, but since my skin has become tan and I have used a darker shade, powder cakes on my nose and around my mouth. What is my trouble?

LILLIE.

Your skin may have become unusually dry, due to the tanning process, and your foundation and powder may not be suited to it. If the skin is dry, try to correct it by the frequent use of lubricating creams. Then look to your cosmetics, and if they are too heavy in consistency or too dark in color, by all means change them to suit your skin.

Due to exposure to the sun, my hair has become very streaked. It is naturally blonde, but the outer layer has gotten several shades lighter. I would like to keep the faded hairs light and wonder if it is possible to make the darker hairs match. DINAH.

I have a formula for making a splendid blonde hair shampoo, together with complete directions for using, which you may have upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. This shampoo is not a bleach, but will keep blonde hair light and tend to brighten hair which is off-color.

Have you a formula for making a hand lotion which includes lemons? RUTH B.

Lemon hand lotion is made this way: Combine two parts strained lemon juice, one part glycerine, one part rubbing alcohol. Place these in a bottle and keep in a cool place. Shake the bottle well before using the lotion.

Delight Dixon Says:

NOW you don't have to go to the mountains because the fresh, breezy fragrance of mountain heather has been incorporated into three new bath aids. Talcum, bath powder and cologne, the three essentials to nice bathing, carry this fresh, alert scent.

●

Hard water is definitely hard on the hands and plays havoc with their complexion and the niceness of the nails. But you can prevent all this by using a good water softener every time you put your hands in water. An inexpensive and good softener is made this way: Dissolve one pound of washing or sal soda in one quart of water. Keep this in a glass jar. Use about two tablespoonfuls of this solution for each gallon of moderately hard water.

●

Abusing the nails causes bruises and results in small white spots dotted over the body of the nails. The harsh use of metal manicuring implements, and striking or bumping the nails against hard objects, all add up to finger-nail bruises which may result in bumps and ridges. Handle your nails gently and avoid bruising them if you want to preserve their clear tone and smoothness.

●

Dodgers Maintain Three Point Lead Over St. Louis Cardinals In Dramatic Pennant Struggle

Each Team Wins Three Games Over the Weekend to Provide Torrid Race

YANKS FORGE AHEAD

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Drama being somewhat outside this department's scope, there will be no effort made here today to tell you in glowing phrases of the history-making National League pennant race now in progress.

The drama, instead, will be left in the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals while this will serve as a simple recitation of the facts.

The facts are these—last Friday night Brooklyn was in front by the knife-edge of three percentage points. Since then each team has played three games. Yet today those same three points are all that separate the Dodgers in first place from the Cardinals in second.

Yesterday there was a double victory for Brooklyn over the Braves whereupon the Cards, already having won the first game of their doubleheader from Pittsburgh, broke loose with three runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap to take that as well.

Two Different Means

The Dodgers, in making their record nine victories in their last 10 starts, used widely divergent means. In the first game, which almost broke out into open warfare because the Dodgers felt Errickson was trying to dust them off, the Brooklyns pounded three pitchers for 17 hits, including four doubles and a homer by Ducky Medwick, one of the dustees, for a 14-4 decision. The nightcap saw stout Frederick Fitzsimmons and his knuckle ball shut out the Braves 4-0 on six hits.

Close-to-the-vest pitching was the winning prescription for the Cards. A crowd of 26,513, one of the year's largest in St. Louis, saw Ernie White take the opener 3-2 for his 14th decision and then watched Mort Cooper, though touched for 10 safeties, bear down in the clutch to win his 10th of the year and third since the operation on his salary arm.

Put Damper on Pirates

Not only was this the first time the hopeful Pirates had lost two straight in the space of three weeks, but it dropped them 9 1-2 games off the pace, enough to put a temporary damper on their hopes of making this a three-team race.

The baseball tradition that it's bad luck to get presents held true for Chicago Cubs' Charley Root. The 42-year-old veteran got a station wagon from his fans, a $1,600 cheque from his club and even a baby pig. But when he settled down to work he got a trimming from Cincinnati Reds, whose Johnny Vander Meer was in seven-hit form.

New York Giants ran the last-place Phillies' losing streak to eight in a row by winning the first of their double bill 5-4. But then the Terrymen, riding a three-game victory string that was their longest since June, rode it to a fall as veteran Si Johnson turned them back in the afterpiece.

In the American League New York Yankees, though they didn't hit any homers, took two from Philadelphia Athletics, 11-2 and 4-1, and thereby climbed back into the stratosphere of a 14-game lead over Cleveland. The Indians, of course, helped things along bowing to Red Lyons and Thornton Lee of Chicago White Sox, who held them to six hits apiece in winning by 5-2 and 2-1, respectively.

Win Fifth in Row

Boston Red Sox were their slugging selves in trimming Washington Senators 7-6 but in the nightcap couldn't bunch their 10 hits off Venezuelan Alejandro Carrasquel who chalked up an 8-2 triumph his fifth in succession against no defeats.

Buck Newsom of Detroit Tigers, who hasn't won a game since July 15, didn't win one yesterday, either. St. Louis Browns got to him early for nine hits in four innings, got six more off Schoolboy Rowe, and won the game, 7-3.

In Saturday's games in the National League, Pittsburgh won a 5-4 decision over the Cards in the 13th inning. Elmer Riddle gained his 12th triumph of the year as Cincinnati downed Chicago 7-2. A homer with the bases loaded by P. Waner in 5th inning proved death blow to the Dodgers, as the Braves won 5-4. Hal Schumacher pitched an eight-hit 1-0 shut out for the Giants over Philadelphia Phillies.

DiMaggio Paces Leaders

In the American League, Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller hit their 27th and 28th homers, respectively, to pace the Yankees to a 8-3 triumph over the Athletics. Taft Wright's homer off Bob Feller in the 10th inning broke up a tie and gave Chicago White Sox a 7-5 victory over Cleveland. The Tigers won their third straight defeating the Browns 3-0 behind the six-hit hurling of left hander Hal Newhouser. Washington Senators knocked Lefty Grove out of the box and went on to win their first game of the season at Boston's Fenway Park over the Red Sox 8-6.

ORIOLE PLAYERS ARE SUSPENDED

Murray Howell and Roy Johnson Come to Blows in Their Hotel

Toronto, Aug. 11 (CP)—Officials of the Baltimore Baseball Club of the International League said Saturday that outfielders Roy Johnson and Murray Howell have been suspended without pay for remainder of the season following an early-morning fracas Saturday. Officials said the players came to blows following an argument as to which was the better player.

Johnson is in hospital here suffering from face lacerations, two blackened eyes and numerous body bruises. His condition tonight was reported as "satisfactory" and it is expected he will be released "in a day or two."

Howell left for Baltimore early Saturday night.

GRAY'S DEFEAT IN GOLF TOURNEY BLAMED ON FANS

Toronto Pro. Tightened Up in Last Round to Lose by Two Strokes

SNEAD IS WINNER

By JIM COLEMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 11.—(CP)—Bobby Gray, Jr., didn't win the Canadian Open Golf Championship at suburban Lambton Course on Saturday but the blame must rest with his partisan Toronto gallery.

Sammy Snead, the sweet swatter from Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., captured the 72-hole tournament with a six-under-par total of 274 but at the start of the final 18-hole round he had been tied with Gray.

Gray, handsome 29-year-old professional at Toronto Scarborough Course, is as game as they come but the vociferous and well-intentioned attentions of a tremendous gallery proved just a bit too much for him. He tightened up noticeably on the final round and took a 71—one over par—while Snead was scorching home with a 69.

A crowd of approximately 2,000 stormed after Gray all afternoon. It was obvious that the enthusiasm displayed by the gallery had an effect on the Toronto Pro's game.

Plays Superbly

Snead played superbly to take his fourth medal play victory of the season. Previously he had won the Bing Crosby open, the North and South and the St. Petersburg open.

He chatted gaily with members of his gallery of 1,500 Saturday. Four strokes behind Gray, when the final 36 holes started in the morning, he shot a sizzling 66 while Bobby was taking a par-70 on the third round, and then his final 69 was too hot for Gray.

Stocky Gene Sarazen, the Squire of Tuckahoe, N.Y., finished third with 277—one stroke behind Gray and three behind Snead. Jaunty Gene had an excellent chance to win the tournament but he blew on the 15th and 16th holes, taking a six and five, but despite these setbacks he birdied the final hole and wound up with a par-70.

Incidentally, no home-bred golfer has won the open in the last 27 years. Karl Keffner of Ottawa, last native son to capture the event, turned the trick in 1914.

New York, Aug. 11.—(AP)—The U.S.G.A. finally has decided that golfers know enough to come in out of the rain. . . .The Association just passed a rule that when tournament players think there's danger of being hit by lightning; can stop without waiting for a signal from the tournament committee.

Midwestern harness fans better get a look at Bill Gallon, the Hambletonian winner, while they have a chance. His owner let most of the colt's three-year-old engagements lapse when he didn't show much early speed, so from now on he'll have to race against the crack older horses or not at all. . .Will Lou Nova become Louis' successor as Champion? Well, he was once. He took the National A.A.U. title right after Joe held it.

Detroit should be a red-hot sports town this winter, due to the cash rolling in from the defence program. The football Lions already have a $40,000 advance sale and Jack Adams has been around predicting a whale of a hockey season.

HULL B AND B STILL LEADING INTERPROVINCIAL

Canadiens Defeat Leaders 2-1 to Drive Into Second Place

KINGSTON THIRD

(By The Canadian Press)

Hull B and B may have an unbeatable margin of four clear games in the interprovincial baseball league but that didn't phase Ottawa Royal Canadiens Sunday.

The Capital nine scored a 2-1 victory on the Leaders' Home Field, enough to boost them into second place over Kingston Ponies who had an idle week-end. Ponies have only one more game to play while the Ottawans have three.

In the other half of yesterday's doubleheader at Hull, the home-town Volants maintained their substantial lead over Smith's Falls Railroaders and Buckingham. They defeated Railroaders 2-1 in the opener.

The war effort interfered with the scheduled game between Buckingham and Smith's Fall Saturday. Four of Buckingham's regulars were working on a war contract and the game was postponed by telephone.

League President Gene Decosse announced after a conference with both teams that the Buckingham nine will meet the Railroaders next Saturday on the latter's home diamond and then go on to play Kingston later.

In the game between Royal Canadiens and B and B, all the runs were scored in the third inning. In the seventh Bill Jelly relieved Pitcher Andy Broder to choke a Hull rally.

With two out, Patsy Guzzo of Hull had doubled and stolen third and Bill Cowley was walked and then stole second. Jelly walked Bob Guertin, filling the bases and then threw out Reg Laframboise.

Jean-Paul Tremblay's hard smash in the final inning of the Volant-Railroader game, scoring Babe Blondin, gave Volants their winning run.

BUFFALO BISONS BOLSTER STAFF FOR FINAL DRIVE

Purchase Pitcher Floyd Giebell Recently Released by Detroit Tigers

TEAM STILL THIRD

(By the Associated Press)

Although Buffalo Bisons' pitching staff already is one of the soundest and strongest in the International League, Al Vincent is trying to make it stronger for the final drive to the pennant and by that move he may qualify as the season's smartest manager.

Vincent's latest move was the purchase of Lloyd Giebell, the boy who clinched the American League pennant for Detroit last year, from the Tigers. With Giebell helping out Virgil (Fire) Trucks, the league's strike-out king; Freddie Hutchinson, Hal White, Jim Trexler and Charley Fuchs, the Bisons are in good shape for all the doubleheaders they'll have to play before the season ends.

That Buffalo couldn't improve on its third place in the standings yesterday wasn't the fault of the Bison mound staff. In the opener Hutchinson merely shut out Baltimore Orioles 7-0 with seven hits. Lefty Jim Trexler followed up with a five-hit job and a 4-1 victory.

Teams Score Twin Wins

While all this was going on, Newark and Montreal both staggered through to double victories, keeping the Bears on top of the standing by five games with the Royals 1 1-2 up on the Bisons.

The league leaders battered Syracuse 8-6 and 2-1 with the aid of six unearned runs in the opener while Montreal had to go 10 innings to take the second game from Toronto, 7-6, after winning the opener, 5-4. In the other twin bill, Rochester beat Jersey City 4-3 when the Little Giants came back to win 8-7 in an extra inning.

In Saturday's games, Southpaw Roy Henshaw turned in a brilliant one-hit performance as Jersey City Little Giants shut out Buffalo 2-0 in a night game. Pushing over two runs in the ninth, Newark salvaged the final game of the Rochester series, won by the Wings, with a 6-4 victory. Syracuse and Montreal split a doubleheader, the Chiefs capturing the opener 5-8 on Tom Sunkel's three-hitter. The Royals won the nightcap 4-3 as Ed Head chalked up his 17th victory of the season. Toronto beat Baltimore in both ends of a double-header, 9-7 and 10-2.

WRESTLING FANS WILL WITNESS 3 GOOD BOUTS

James J. Braddock, Ex-Heavyweight Champion of World, Third Man in Ring

MASKED WOLF HERE

With James J. Braddock, former heavyweight champion of the world refereeing, tonight's wrestling program shapes up the most important evening for Belleville wrestling fans for a long, long time. Braddock is a first-ranking name and box office attraction in the sports world and his presence in Belleville adds importance and excitement to the splendid card of matches that have been lined up.

In the main bout the fans will see big blond Lee Henning of Iowa, a grappler, who has already made a nationally known name for himself. Although young yet, big Lee is rated near the top and with his two hundred and forty pounds of bone and muscle, the Iowa heavyweight should satisfy the fans' hope that he will dethrone his mysterious opponent, the "Masked Wolf." This strange and secretive wrestler, who has defied all efforts to identify him, has continued on his weird way with a remarkable record of success. After winning fourteen straight bouts in Maple Leaf Gardens in the past year, the "Wolf" is still undefeated and unmasked. Lee Henning has stated he will not only beat the Hooded Horror but has promised to unmask him as well. The rugged gent from Iowa is big enough and is an expert in the rough house going but the "Wolf" is now considered the most determined and the strongest wrestler in Canada.

The masked man does not hesitate to break a few rules in order to win, if he can get away with it. And that's where Mr. Braddock is expected to make his presence felt in no uncertain manner. "Jersey Jim" is a most capable official and although of a quiet gentlemanly nature, has a glint in his Irish eyes, which spells trouble for anyone who crosses him. The ex-champ carries "T.N.T." in either hand and has been known to use it on several of the "bad boys" of the mat game. In the semi-final on Monday's card the two hundred and fifty pound strong man, Al Dunlop, meets the new sensation, Whipper Billy Watson. Another good match is also being arranged.

Between Innings

The all-time high of the Cincinnati Reds in baseball's One-Run-Win records won't be even jostled on its perch this year in the National League's red-hot pennant campaign, judging by the way the games went the first half of the schedule.

En route to their pennant and world championships, the Reds of 1940 racked up 41 of their 100 victories by the thinnest possible margin, surpassing the existing record of 37, set by the world champion Chicago Cubs of 1907. This year the Reds won 13 of their first 77 played by one run, a rate which would leave them 15 shy of their own record at the season's close.

The same number of games were won and lost throughout the league as in last year's first half, of course, but this year's heavy winners are power clubs, instead of super-defence masters as were the Reds last summer. The Dodgers and Cardinals, when they win, frequently crowd runs across the plate in clusters, instead of running an unassailable barrier out of a one-run lead in the late innings.

Brooklyn had 16 one-run wins in their season's first half, St. Louis, 15; Cubs and Pirates, 11 each; Braves, 10; Giants, 9 and Phillies, 7.

The local softballers are in their elements these days with the city finals on between the Point Anne "Cementmen" and Corby's A.C. while in the lassies' loop the semi-finals, with four clubs participating are the feature attractions. Tonight Harold Bawden's Corby boys face a tremendous task in Point Anne, as no doubt Skipper Gaulin will toss "Ding" Luffman against Corby's, Luffman already having two decisions in his favour over the locals. The Cementmen are playing heads-up softball, particularly defensively and deserve their margin. However, the Corby's are liable to burst out in a batting spree and push the Ox Pointers around on their own diamond tonight. Tomorrow it's SWACO versus Deacons in the girls' semi-finals. The standing of the local softball league's playdowns reads:

City League (Finals)

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Point Anne	2	1	.667
Corby's A.C.	1	2	.333

Games this week: Tonight, Corby's at Point Anne; Wednesday, Point Anne at Corby's; Friday, Corby's at Point Anne.

Ladies' League, (Semi-Finals)

	Won	Lost	Points
Zellers	1	0	2
Vikings	0	1	0

Games this week: Tuesday, SWACO vs. Deacons; Wednesday, Zellers vs. Vikings; Friday, Deacons vs. SWACO.

All roads lead to the Hume Arena tonight where James J. Braddock, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, will be the third man in the ring when the Masked Wolf meets Lee Henning, the Iowa powerhouse grappler, in the main go of a three-bout card. True enough Braddock, the Cinderella man of the fight game, should be the chief attraction in a city the size of Belleville, but the fans do not want to lose track of the fact that the Masked Wolf has never been unmasked, be it in Madison Square Gardens or the Chicago Stadium. Henning and the "behooded horror" are both recognized among the first ten in the wrestling world and patrons of the grunt and groan business can rest assured they'll see two of the best men in the business plying their wares at the Hume Arena tonight.

Truth is, sometimes stranger than fiction, because it was exactly eleven years ago tonight that Jim Braddock lost a 10-round decision to Babe Hunt, the Ponca City boxer, in a Boston ring Braddock went on, however, and became the world's heavyweight champion in 1935 and lost his title to Joe Louis June 22nd, 1937. Braddock, who is in Belleville tonight, put up one of the most courageous stands ever recorded in the annals of boxing before he fell before the Louis onslaught, however.

Sammy Snead retained his Canadian open golf title on Saturday, but it was not before he waged the most difficult uphill fight in his colorful golfing career. Snead had to turn in some hot golf to beat Bobby Kerr, Jr., of Toronto, 274 to 276. The veteran, Gene Sarazen, was third and Gordie Brydson, the former N.H.L. puckster, was fourth. Snead was forced to the limit to win over Gray after the latter had shot a record-breaking sub-par 65 on Friday. Incidentally players like Bobby Gray, Gord Brydson, Billie Kerr and other Toronto pros. will likely come to Belleville on Aug. 24th when Bill Little is staging a war charity golf exhibition over the Bay of Quinte Country Club course, so make it a date.

SPORT SPICE — The Pirates stumbled badly over the week-end, losing two to the Cardinals yesterday, but the pesky Dodgers kept pace by trouncing the Braves in a dual bill. . . . And the Brooklyns and St. Louis lads continue to wage as torrid a battle in the National League as the hottest baseball fan could wish. The Yankees continue to dominate the American League and today are leading the junior loop by 14 games. . . . Bob Grove, Jr., is pitching winning ball in a New England baseball circuit. . . . See where Larry (the other lip) MacPhail, has purchased a farm in Maryland, in the famous horse - breeding country. Frank Doughty's Sunday Morning Class beat Paramounts 4-1 Saturday and hopped back into the lead of the Sunnyside loop. . . . Old Horse Wanders On Toronto Street

Toronto, Aug. 11 (CP)—Somebody has lost a horse here. Police found the animal wandering on St. Clair Ave., west., early today and until the owner turns up it will stay in a stable where it was taken.

The owner, however, might not make an appearance. It's not a good horse and it appears old.

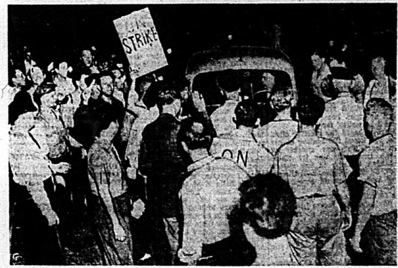
Lieut. R. Robillard and Lieut. H. Whitaker discuss the manoeuvring of their Bren Gun Carriers during a recent demonstration by 2nd Division, Canadian Army Overseas, troops 'somewhere in Britain.' The former comes from a Quebec, French-speaking unit, the latter from a central Ontario unit.



Pickets at the main gate of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. at Kearny, N.J., are shown stopping an auto about to enter the plant shortly after 6,000 men went on strike. The plant is engaged in defence work and two cruisers, six destroyers, three tankers and two cargo boats are on the ways. The strike was called by the executive board of local 16 of the Industrial Union of Shipbuilding and Marine Workers, who claimed that negotiations with the company officials had broken down.

Soviet authorities produce these pictures to prove that the Red Army is not on the receiving end of the war all the time. At TOP a big German mobile gun with caterpillar tractor blasted out of commission. BELOW, a number of wrecked German tanks. The Russian caption does not reveal in what sector of the long battle line all the wrecking took place.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

By JANE DIXON

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Duplicity

When Marilyn came out of the bath, Kathleen was scanning the morning paper. They shared it riding the subway to work.

"I've been slumming through Tom Peep's gossip column," she said. "There's a morsel in it you won't like. You may as well see it now and be prepared. Darn that sister of yours, anyhow. And just when we're going along so smoothly! Now I suppse you'll start worrying yourself into a lather again."

Marilyn took the paper. Here it was, the Keyhole Kolumn, and yes, at the very top . . . "What slightly faded lovely of the night clubs appeared at what hot spot last yawning and scared what battered playboy clean out of a side exit? . . . and what highly publicized Queen of Beauty is pouting today because she did not know her knight-errant had that kind of past? . . . Oh well, the Queen's throne has been rocking ever since she started using it for a stepladder . . ."

Marilyn said, "He means Clara, of course, and Herman Hess."

"I'd say that's a good guess," Kathleen agreed. "Sounds like trouble to me. Why don't you ring Al Martino? He'll know the inside story."

"Al's out of town. He's conducting another Metropole beauty contest. Do you think I should call Clara? She might need me, if she's in real trouble."

"What? And have her blast you fur butting into her business. If she's in real trouble she'll call you; you won't have to call her."

The telephone was ringing when Marilyn, returning that evening from a hard day at the office, let herself into the apartment in Tenth street.

" 'Lo, Lynn," the voice at the other end of the wire said. "How's the honest working girl?"

"Clara," Lynn replied, ignoring the sarcasm, "I'm so glad you called."

"Don't Clara me. My name is Clarice. I've chucked that Millville moniker along with pancakes for breakfast and heliotrope perfume. I have a message for you. Bruce and I are going out for a spin. He insists I need the fresh air. We may be a little late getting back. He says to tell you to meet us at the Penguin Club. It's on east Fifty-third, uptown side. Around half past seven."

Marilyn gripped the receiver. She must not let her brain spin. "I don't understand," she managed. "Bruce sending me a message by you? Bruce who?"

"Now really, Lynn, as if there could be more than one Bruce. If yu must act childish, the last name is Gordon. I'm here in Bruce's apartment. Nice set, isn't it? Soo bookish. We're having cocktails as soon as Bruce comes in. Sorry you can't join us."

A pregnant silence. Then, from Marilyn, "I don't believe— you. You're not in Bruce Gordon's apartment and you have no message from him to me."

"Oh no?" Clara's laugh taunted. "So I'm a liar, am I? Then suppose you call up Bruce's apartment. You know the number. And suppose you take a peek in at the Penguin tonight around half past seven or eight. I'm hanging up, but I'll be waitin' for you."

Marilyn heard the receiver click. Also, she heard the beating of her own heart. This was another of Clara's tricks. Or was it? There had been triumph in her sister's voice, an unholy glee, a challenge. Very well, she would accept the challenge. With trembling fingers she dialed the number that danced in figures of fire before her.

" 'Lo. Mr. Gordon's apartment." Clara's voice. Unmistakable.

"Clara,' Marilyn gasped. 'It's— it's you!"

"Why yes, dearie, who did you expect?' Venom in a sugar coating. "Call me here almost any afternoon at this time. Bruce won't mind your knowing about us, I'm sure. It's all in the family. See you later—sister."

When Kathleen Garvan came home Marilyn was sitting by the window staring out over the roof tops.

"Why the gloom?" Kathleen asked. "Aren't you stepping out with the big boss, the one and only Bruce Gordon tonight?"

"I'm not stepping," Marilyn said. Her eyes still were on the roof tops.

Kathleen spun her hat toward the table. "Why?" she wanted to know. "What's happened?"

"Clara phoned. She was in Bruce's apartment. She had a message for me. I'm invited to join them at the Penguin Club this evening for dinner."

"You mean your sister Clara and Bruce Gordon? Look, Lynn, come away from that window. I'll brew a dish of tea. You've been dreaming. Wake up! Stop talking in your sleep."

"It's no dream.' Marilyn came away from the window, began pacing the narrow room. "Clara called. She was in Bruce's apartment. She delivered his message."

"My aunt's whiskers! Clara was in her hotel or a handy telephone booth putting on one of her needling acts. Don't tell me you fell for it?"

"No. I didn't fall. I called Bruce's apartment. Clara answered."

"What? Are you sure it was Clara?"

"Yes. Clara."

"Well of all—Lynn, there's a fishy odor to this business. I have a feeling all's not as it seems."

"Wishful thinking, maybe."

"Wishful, my eye! We're waiting here until Bruce Gordon calls for you. If he doesn't call, we're doing a job of snooping. We're going to the Penguin for a looksee. It happens I've been there several times and I know the keyhole through which we can snoop. There's a little jog in the bar just as you come in. We can slide into the jog and have a bird's-eye view of the entire scene without being seen. What say, Lynn?"

Marilyn stopped pacing. She was calm now.

"I say 'yes'." She went to the bathroom, splashed cold water over her face and her throat. Deliberately, she applied powder, a touch of lipstick. Then she came back into the living-room and composed herself as best she could, to wait for Bruce Gordon.

At eight o'clock Kathleen Garvan said, "Tuck your hair under your hat, Lynn. We're off for the Penguin Club." She had expected an argument from Marilyn, a last-minute withdrawal, but none was forthcoming. Instead, Marilyn pulled her hat to a smart angle and her chin to a sharp one. "Let's go," she said, leading the way.

Less than an hour later Marilyn and Kathleen were back in their apartment.

"Honestly, Lynn," Kathleen was saying, "you could bowl me over with a pinfeather. What's it all about? That dizzy sister of yours and Bruce Gordon in the Penguin when he had a date with you. Say, here's a thought. They weren't eating. Just sitting. Clara was gulping from a glass. Gordon had a glass but he didn't touch it while we were there. Struck me he was waiting. Clara did all the talking. He looked plenty bothered. Think back, Lynn. Did he look like a man who was having a good time?"

"I didn't notice. I just knew they were there, together, as Clara said they would be. Clara wants Bruce. She told me so—that night after Al was hurt in the Blue Parrot. She told me he was the only man she'd ever seen she'd fallen in love with at first sight and that she would get him. Clara always gets what she wants."

"So Clara alays gets what she wants! Lynn, use your head. You know as well as I do that no one gets what he wants unless he earns it and battles for it. Don't tell me you're a quitter!"

"No, Kathie—but if we have to fight for love—the phone. Will you answer?"

"Yes, indeed. And if it is what I think it is, I'll ask all the questions too. Hello, Kathleen Garvan. Bruce Gordon? Yes, Mr. Gordon. Yes, Marilyn is in. You wish to speak with her? I'll ask. Sorry, Mr. Gordon, Miss Marsh has retired. You must speak with her? Well, really—hold the phone—Miss Marsh says will you please give me the message? WHAT? You're waiting for her at the Penguin? I thought you were to call for her here. What's that — her sister brought you her note? Yes—you did as she requested, took her sister with you to meet Marilyn at the Penguin? MISTER Gordon, you've been taken for a buggy-ride. Lynn wrote you no note. She waited here for you until—but skip that. Where are you now? Penguin, eh, still waiting. Sure. Come on over. But get rid of the excess baggage first. This is a quiet apartment. Lynn and I don't want to get thrown out for inciting to riot."

Kathleen hung up, turned to Lynn.

"I mentioned, darling," she said, "that I detected the odor of fish in this little stunt staged by your devoted sister. You caught the trend of my talk with Gordon? Well, Clara handed him a note purporting to be from you. It asked him to take Clara to meet you at the Penguin. Being a nice guy who doesn't look for bent pins on chair seats, he took it for granted the note was genuine and obeyed orders. Of all the—"

"Bruce is coming here?" Marilyn rushed for Kathleen and gave her an embrace that brought a squeak for help.

"He sure is." Kathleen recovered her squeezed-out breath. "Better powder your nose and comb back your hair and break out a nip of perfume. You aren't looking exactly your best, if you don't mind my saying so."

When the buzzer sounded Kathleen said, "I'm going into the next room and close the door tight. But remember, my friend, I'll be there, and if you shirk on this job of putting Clara in her place and making Bruce Gordon understand what you're up against, I'll fling wide the portal and take over the job myself."

"Kathie, you don't understand. Clara is my sister. Have you a sister?"

"No, thank heaven! She might be like Clara. You haven't a sister either. Not a real one. Just an accident of birth. I'm your sister you didn't know about until you came to New York. Buck up, Lynn. We're young. There's a long life ahead of us."

Marilyn opened the door.

"Bruce."

"Lynn!"

Silence.

Behind the closed door in the other room Kathleen said, "It takes better than a poison pen to lick love."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was looking all around the living room for my jumping snake, and pop said, Benny, if there's some article whose whereabouts keeps eluding you, why dont you ask your mother where it is? That's always been my procedure, and in the course of years I figure it has saved me hundreds of headakes and thousands of man-hours, he said.

But G wizzackers, pop, I mean holey smokes, I know it was in plane site right in this room, so why isn't it now? I said. It's a green snake full of springs in a little box, and when somebody opens the lid the snake jumps straight up in the air and it's more fun than a little, I said, and pop said, It may be fun for you, but do you ever give a thought to your poor victims jumping a yard in the air and returning to earth with their hair turning white?

Well jimminy, pop, they soon get over it, and then they try it on somebody elts and that makes them feel all a ways better, I said. Where the dickins is it? I said, and pop said, if you never find it your life will be richer instead of poorer. If there's one thing the world doesn't need at this discourraging period of its history, it's more practical jokes and more practical jokers. However, if the loss is going to upset your digestion, I'll get you another one, he said.

But G roomlem, pop, my own must be here somewhere, I said, and pop said, No doubt, but apparently something happened to its vital organs while I was doing a little experimenting with it, and I'm afraid it has lost its gusto and enthusiasm.

Aw gosh pop, you played with it too hard, I said, and he said, I can see that's how the incident would strike you.

And he gave me a dime for an-another one.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 11 — (AP)—Stocks refused to give ground to any noticeable extent in today's market but the majority were unable to work up real progressive inclinations. Fractional variations were rule.

Stocks up occasionally included General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, American Smelting, U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide and General Electric.

Lacking the climbing urge were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Western Union, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, Texas Corp., Southern Railway, Air Reduction and Eastman Kodak.

A 1-8 point loss in Canadian Pacific was the only change among Canadian Stocks. In the Bond Market Canada 4s were unquoted.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 11 —(CP)— The Toronto stock market was heavy in the morning session with index losses showing for all groups but the early afternoon brought a slight recovery. Trading was on a small scale, comparatively, and only 81,000 shares were traded in the first three hours.

O'Brien sold off to 1.24 and recovered to 1.37 where it was 3 cents net up for the day. Malartic Gold Fields, Mining Corporation, Dome and Upper Canada were a big heavy. Smelters, off more than a point, had the widest loss in the base metal section. Waite-Amulet, Sherritt and Pend Oreille had minor losses.

Utilities, Senior Oils and Miscellaneous Industrials leaned to the down side. Losses widened to points for Massey-Harris Pfd., Consumers Gas and Tip Top Tailors Pfd.

Home Oil, Anglo-Canadian and Royalite were narrowly lower Western Oils.

Grade "C" Eggs Advance One Cent

Toronto — Featured only by a 1 cent a dozen increase in the spot price of grade "C" eggs, the Toronto open produce market closed out a quiet week at otherwise unchanged prices Saturday. All classes of butter and cream held firm under a little livelier trading, while white cheese was not quoted.

Sparked by the advance of grade C's which are in good demand, the egg market held firm with the light volume of receipts moving satisfactorily. Grades A-large, A-medium and A-pullets closed at the prices they have held all during the latter part of the past week—35, 34 and 27 1-2 to 28 cents a dozen respectively in the country dealer section of trading, and 37 to 38, 36 1-2 to 37 and 31 cents in wholesale-to-retail action.

The butter market held steady with a firm undertone as receipts continued light and were clearing well. Trading was a little livelier due to increased inquiry. No. 1 creamery solids closed at 37 1-4 cents a pound, while first grade creamery prints cost the retail trade 38 3-4 cents.

RCAF May Reach One Third Or Half of All Empire Men in Air

Air Minister Power Says Air Supremacy Anywhere Enemy is Faced Is Necessary Prelude to Ultimate Victory

AIR CREW PRODUCTION

Ottawa, Aug 11.—(CP)—Air Minister Power, only recently returned from Britain, gives Canadians this fresh picture of the vital part the Royal Canadian Air Force is to play in winning the war:

"We may reach one-third of all the Empire men in the air. We may reach one-half. We are not proposing to limit ourselves".

And in this war, he said last night in an address broadcast over facilities of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, "air supremacy, not only local, but wherever the enemy may be encountered, is the essential prelude to ultimate victory".

More Planes and More Planes

It would take two things to attain that supremacy—aircraft production and air manpower. British factors were turning out uncounted numbers of aircraft and the American Army Air Corps with the Royal Air Force were seeing to it a steady stream of planes were being ferried to Britain.

"There will be no more bottlenecks in airplane production", Maj. Power said. "We must match mass production of aircraft with mass production of aircrew . . .

"This can, and will, be done through the instrumentality of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan."

The Minister said there were training schools in Britain, South Africa, New Zealand, Australia and Rhodesia, but a large part of the burden would fall on the [illegible] training plant and its associate British schools in Canada.

"Close as we in air force headquarters are to this plan, with which we have almost been living and eating and sleeping and cursing and praying for many months, we never realized its importance to Britain and to the whole world until we understood fully what is expected of it—what hopes are founded on it", he said.

'It Will Be'

"The Canadian people were told months ago that their association and partnership in the training plan would be their most important contribution to the common war effort".

He emphasized his next three words: "It will be".

The Royal Canadian Air Force through the air training plan —"as a full partner in the Empire Air effort with unlimited liability"—would be called upon to provide an ever-increasing proportion of the total Empire strength in the air.

"We may reach one-third of all the Empire men in the air. We may reach one-half. We are not proposing to limit ourselves.

"Within three or four weeks our plant, schools, airdromes —all will be complete; our instructors trained; our equipment provided.

"We have been producing for months, and hundreds, even thousands, of our pupils are overseas now, in finishing course, or taking part in actual combat as fighter pilots or as bomber navigators, pilots or gunners carrying the war into German-occupied lands and into Germany itself.

Ever Growing Strength of Air Crews

"But once relieved of the burden and responsibility of preliminary organization and construction, and able to concentrate on aircrew production, our efforts will be intensified, and the stream of aircrew flowing to Britain, and to all sections of the far-flung Empire battle line, will be steady, constant and continuous, limited only by the quantity of our intake".

Maj. Power said he was not starting a recruiting campaign. Since the war began the air force had been receiving more applications than could be handled with existing facilities.

But there had to be a steady intake of "some thousands every month" of all classes and categories. It had been decided to provide Canadian ground crews for Canadian squadrons in the United Kingdom so all categories of trained men would have an opportunity to go overseas.

'Nothing to Say About My Plans,' Hepburn States

Midland, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP) — Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, said last night he had no comment to make on reports he would depart for England, relinquishing his post as premier.

"I have absolutely nothing to say about my plans at the present time," Mr. Hepburn told reporters as he disembarked from the yacht Brigadier after a week's cruise to Sault Ste. Marie.

PICTON RESIDENT IS FOUND DEAD

Picton, Aug. 11. (Special)—Missing from his home since late Saturday night, Kemp Vance, aged 32, of Delhi, Prince Edward County, was found on Sunday morning hanging from a tree in the back yard of his home, apparently a victim of despondency as the result of continued poor health. Mr. Kemp's body was discovered by his wife as she started a search for her missing husband, who had failed to return home the night previous.

NINE DROWNED

Five Motor Accident Deaths

Mrs. Rudolphine Ely, 60, of Buffalo, N.Y., died of injuries received in an automobile accident on Queen Elizabeth Way near Grimsby. Flt.-Lieutenant Charles Ewens, of Bath, England, died in hospital Sunday, following an automobile accident Friday. J. Vincent Jordan, 19, of Niagara Falls, was killed Saturday when the car which he was driving went out of control.

Toronto's traffic fatalities were raised to 3 Saturday when George West, 43, of Toronto, was thrown from a car driven by Oliver Holley after it hit another vehicle. Drivers of both cars were charged with dangerous driving. Albert Withinshaw, 51, was killed when struck by a truck on the highway near Brantford. He died on his way to hospital.

Fire Victim

At Bobcaygeon elderly George Watt died of burns received when his clothing, which was soaked in kerosene, caught fire. He died shortly after neighbors had extinguished the flames. A 20-foot fall from a subway at Niagara Falls was fatal to Anthony Parisi, 42.

Two men were killed on railway right-of-ways. At Hawkesbury, Arthur Bourgeois, 56, asistant Canadian Pacific Railway section foreman, was killed when he was thrown from his speeder, while at Brockville, Arthur Clacus, 62, no fixed address, fell from a moving train and was killed.

13 Fatalities in Quebec Province

Montreal, Aug. 11 (CP) — Thirteen persons were killed in Quebec province in week-end accidents which included the capsizing of a tug in Quebec harbor, a head-on collision between a switch engine and a passenger train in Montreal and an automobile smash-up near Granby in which two young Ontario women perished.

Scattered drownings, including two in the Quebec tug accident, accounted for six of the fatalities as perfect summer weather drove thousands to the province's river and lake bathing spots.

Five persons lost their lives in highway mishaps, one man died and some fifty other persons required hospital treatment as a result of the railway collision, and the other victim, a middle-aged woman, died in the hallway of her Montreal home after a fracas.

Capsizing Causes Two Deaths

George Beaubien, 32 year old cook of Lauzon, and M. A. Tremblay, a sailor from Murray Bay, were pulled under the water and lost when the tug Busy Bee capsized and sank in Quebec harbor while assisting an incoming freighter. A rowboat picked up the tiny vessel's other crew members.

Incomplete reports indicated that all crew members jumped into the river when the tug overturned after the freighter took a sudden turn and yanked lines connecting the two vessels.

Train Hits Switch Engine

Victim of the train collision was Robert Maitland, 52, locomotive foreman in charge of the passenger train when it struck a switch engine in the Montreal Turcot yards of the Canadian National Railways. He died in hospital Saturday night twelve hours after the accident.

Of the 50 persons treated for injuries, 11 are still in hospital and the engineer of the passenger train —made up of three coaches of commuters—Adronic Forget, 48, is the only one reported to be in danger. The switch engine's tender was smashed but its crew was uninjured.

In the Granby fatality the dead were Hilda Murphy, 24, and Kathleen Bowland, both of Carleton Place, Ont. Three others were hurt in the accident which, police said, occurred when a car driven by John Griffith, 35, of Apple Hill, Ont., collided with another driven by Frank N. Kay, of Outremont, Que.

Mike Micztak, 48 year old laborer, is held by Montreal police as a material witness in the death of his 43-year-old wife, Micheline, who died in her home soon after returning from a restaurant where she told her 15-year-old daughter, Annie, that she had been kicked in the stomach in a fight at home and could not breathe.

Frances Langford Autographs Life-Size Portrait for R.C.A.F.

Movie-Radio Guide says:—Hollywood—Frances Langford, singing star of CBS' "American Cruise" programs each Friday, is autographing a life-size enlargement of one of her full-length portraits for the soldiers of the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed at Belleville, Ontario, Canada. The picture is being made up at the Hal Roach Studios where Miss Langford has just completed "All-American Co-ed."

6 Persons Driven Out by Blaze

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP) — Six persons ecaped from a burning house here early yesterday when Mrs. Mary McRae, another occupant of the house, awakened in time to give the alarm.

Mrs. McRae and her son John, who tried to fight the blaze, were the only persons injured. Both suffered burns about the back and arms. Faulty wiring is believed to have started the fire.

Spark Ignited Gasoline Fumes Probe Indicates

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP)—John S. Bucas, agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation here, said last night he was satisfied a spark ignited fumes from gasoline aboard the Montreal tanker Transiter, causing it to explode Friday night on the Rouge River.

The F. B. I. conducted an investigation to determine whether sabotage could have caused the explosion which set the ship and her cargo of 600,000 gallons of gasoline ablaze and cost two lives. Firemen poured water into the hulk of the vessel as it continued to burn last night.

Pays Minimum Fine For Careless Driving

Trenton, Aug. 11 — After sideswiping a large motor transport near the R.C.A.F. here, William Clarke, a Saskatchewan tourist, was arrested and charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident and also of careless driving. Rather than be detained from his motor trip Clarke paid the minimum fine and continued upon his journey.

Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch, who investigated and preferred the charges, stated that a motor car driven by the Saskatchewan tourist had sideswiped a large transport on Highway No. 2 one mile east of here and continued into Trenton without stopping. No persons sustained injuries, however, the officer added.

Fear for Safety Of Cabin Cruiser With 5 Passengers

Southampton, Ont., Aug. 11 —(CP)—Grave fears are entertained here for the safety of the 35-foot cabin cruiser "Dolly Dean" and the five persons known to have been aboard her when she left Southampton Sunday morning. They should have arrived at Stokes Bay at noon but were still unreported Monday.

Those on board were: Edwin T. Hamilton, owner, Stokes Bay, formerly of Cleveland; Jack Smith, Stokes Bay, said to be an expert navigator; Mrs. Kathleen Shem and her two children, Marian, 14, and Thomas, 15, all of Cleveland.

Mr. Hamilton has his summer home at Stokes Bay.

The lake was not rough when the cruiser left Southampton, and in due course should have arrived at Stokes Bay not later than noon as the distance is only 40 miles.

No time was lost in sending out boats in a search but there was no trace. Inquiries have been made at the many little harbors and inlets who could give any information or who could recall having seen her on the lake.

ANOTHER MEETING CALLED

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP) — Mayor Joseph Meinzinger said today he had called another special meeting to iron out difficulties between the management of Dumarts Ltd., and a union committee representing employees of the packing plant.

The employees, numbering about 300, were out on strike from July 30 until August 8. They were supposed to return to work this morning according to an agreement reached at a conference last Thursday between the management, union officials and a civic committee.

QUEEN THANKS

"It gives us strength to know that you have not been content to pass us by on the other side; to us in time of our tribulation you have surely shown that compassion which has been for 2,000 years the mark of the good neighbor . . .we are grateful. We shall not forget your sacrifice.

"The sympathy which inspires it springs not only from our common speech and traditions which we share with you, but even more our common ideals. To you tyranny is a hateful as it is to us; to you the things for which we will fight to the death are no less sacred."

"I look to the day", she said, "when we shall go forward hand in hand to build a better, kinder and a happier world for our children."

Alluding to the burdens and sufferings endured by women and children of Britain, the Queen said: "Hardship has only steeled our hearts and strengthened our resolution."

United States aid, she said, has heartened all the nation. "Unless you have seen(as I have seen, just how your gifts have been put to use you cannot know, perhaps, the solace which you have brought to the men and women of Britain . . ." Her Majesty said.

The Queen writes all her scripts herself and spent much time on this address last week, even giving two hours of a journey home from Hull on the Royal train to the composition. Persons who know her say she thinks nothing of passing hours on revision, searching for the right word or phrase.

She has received many compliments on the ease and naturalness of her speeches, and time and again rehearses lines until every last little inflection has been explored, every word and phrase mastered for the desired effect.

Unlike the King, whose addresses must receive Cabinet approval because of their constitutional importance, the Queen's speeches are seen by no one except two secretaries to whom she dictates the final draft a few hours before broadcasting.

Letter to The Editor

Belleville, Ont.,
August 9th., 1941.

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

I was greatly interested recently in reading letters to you regarding the condition of Victoria Park and the Cenotaph grounds.

Although not a citizen of Belleville my connection with your City dates back thirty years and my dozens of visits both for business and pleasure have brought Belleville very close to me.

To me Belleville has all the makings of a beautiful city but so far in my experience I have never seen any effort put forth by anyone to capitalize on your natural advantages. Whether or not you have a Park Board is, of course, unknown to me but the appearance of your city would lead me to believe that either there is none or else their hands are tied and if the latter is the case then in all fairness it should be known so that they would not be blamed unjustly for existing conditions.

What I have often been asked by friends who are only casual visitors to Belleville are questions like the following:

"Why are the natural advantages of Victoria Park not taken advantage of?"

"With such wonderful waterfront facilities why has Belleville no swimming and bathing pavilion?"

"Why are there no parks and playgrounds in Belleville?"

"Why are there no flowers in Victoria Park although there is a notice telling you not to pick them?"

"Why are the grounds at public buildings and school not kept presentable?"

"Why should the City permit owners of vacant lots let them grow wild and weedy?"

"Why can't Belleville be kept in as presentable condition as dozens of other Ontario cities of similar size or smaller?"

Well, Mr. Editor, I like Belleville because I like her people but I wish someone would help me answer some of these questions that are thrown at me whenever I utter a word of praise for Belleville.

Yours very truly.
A Belleville Booster,

CANNING CORN, FODDER STANDS ARE EXCELLENT

Early summer fears of a possible failure for the season's corn crop in the Bay of Quinte district were unfounded judging by the excellent stands of fodder and canning corn that are seen in the rural areas today. Failure to sprout after planting due to an abnormally dry spring retarded the growth of corn and was responsible for the fears of a crop failure.

Corn planted where there was moisture enough to start sprouting has however, now attained a growth greater than in the average year and has shown almost phenomenal growth during the past month, or since the drought was broken. Corn which failed to sprout until about the twelfth of July when this district was visited by its first real rainfall in months, has in one month's time attained a growth of two and three feet with hopes being entertained of it reaching maturity should fall frosts stay away until into September.

Results of threshing operations are turning out just about as was expected with the oat crop being far below the average yield. In general the oat crop is spotty, with some good fields and some very poor. In some cases the straw was so short as to make it impossible to reap with the binder, while in other cases, especially on lower land, the length of straw falls little behind the average. Cutting operations are practically completed in the Belleville area the season being almost two weeks earlier than in the average year.

Tells How Nazis Took Control In Italy

Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP) — Italians whom he met were "aghast" when they found another war was upon them, declared Saville R. Davis, assistant to the managing editor of the Christian Science Monitor, in an address over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night. He was speaking in the "We Have Been There" series.

Mr. Davis described the scene when Mussolini addressed thousands of Italians on the day the country entered the war against the Allies.

"At a dramatic moment," he said, "Mussolini strode onto the balcony and the crowd went mad. The crowd, I say, because I swiftly noticed that it wasn't the crowd at all. It was only the enthusiasts, and the Fascist zealots down front."

Mr. Davis continued that when he left Italy the Germans were the only people keeping their heads —Germans brought into every Italian Government office, economic, military and political advisers.

"As the Italians fell into confusion, the Germans simply tightened their lines and took over control," Mr. Davis said. "By the time I left they were in operating control of all the key centres of power in Italy."

Shore Bathing Astounds Nazi

Meals of Bacon, Eggs and Tomatoes Also Open Eyes of Prisoners

London (CP)—Two Nazi prisoners-of-war expressed astonishment when, from their detention quarters in a Southeast coast town they saw women and children bathing in a nearby beach. The Germans asked the British guards how it was possible at a spot so close to German-occupied France.

One British officer loaned the two beach clothes and took them for a swim. Driven about town later, they expressed greater astonishment at the lightness of bomb damage, explaining that they had been told the town had been almost knocked out.

Another surprise for them was a meal of eggs, bacon and tomatoes. They said they had been under the impression there was a food shortage in England and such meals were no longer available.

AREA BETWEEN

Moscow's civilian casualties mounted as waves of Nazi planes attacked overnight in the 16th raid on the Soviet capital. Incendiaries touched off fires in the ruins of dwellings smashed by high explosives.

The Russians reported that, like the night before, only a few of the raiders broke through the city's defences of anti-aircraft fire and night fighters. Five raiders were reported downed last night during the alarm which lasted four hours and 15 minutes, and 10 in the mass raid Saturday night.

A Russian communique Sunday reported fierce battles had developed in two sectors—near Solsti, 120 miles south of Leningrad and 60 miles deeper into Russia than the old Pskov battlefield, and near Uman, midway between the Black Sea port of Odessa and the Ukraine capital of Kiev.

Fighting continued against German thrusts in the Smolensk salient toward Moscow, near Kholm, 75 miles southeast of Solsti, and near Bel Tserkov, between Uman and Kiev, the communique said.

Can Cope with Blitzkrieg

Pravda, Communist party organ, commented during the week-end that the German armies "have not yet lost their power of advance," but Russian commentators declared the Red Army still could cope with all the blitzkrieg the Nazis have left.

Russian frontline forces were reported bolstered by growing forces of the Peoples' Army called to arms by Premier Joseph Stalin July 3.

The semi-monthly publication Bolshevik said yesterday that tens of thousands of other civilians in the Moscow area were being taught street fighting with grenades, rifles and bayonets.

The Russians were said to be fighting with every weapon at their command, even using alongside their modern mechanized forces the old armored trains of the Russian Civil War of 20 years ago.

Ambush Playing Part

One dispatch from the front said one of the trains—such as the then new Red Army used to fight off counter revolution after the rise of Lenin—was used to recapture a village from the Germans.

Ambush was also playing a strong part in defence tactics along the entire front, and in the northern sector a Finnish infantry charge was said to have been broken up and two Finnish battalions wiped out by an avalanche of stone loosed by Russian defenders of a rocky hillside.

The Soviet Bureau of Information said a Russian unit identified only as 'X' routed two battalions of the German 31st infantry regiment and a battalion of motorized infantry in an undisclosed sector.

Four hundred Germans were left dead on a battlefield after a Red Army counter-attack which set back a Nazi offensive in another sector.

SIBERIA LIKELY

They pointed out that Japan, with two divisions in Indo-China, hardly would be likely to challenge Britain to an actual test in Thailand.

Chinese sources expressed belief that pressure on Thailand would go just so far—short of war—and Japan would consolidate her southern flank, then turn northward.

Some of these quarters, especially Chinese, said they believed Japan may think it best to consolidate her hand throughout Asia where ever possible. This, they said, would point toward an attack on Siberia rather than creating further conditions for a Southern Pacific break with Britain if not with the United States.

Put Pressure on Government

There were reports that Mitsuru Toyama, head of Japan's famous Black Dragon society, and other influential secret society leaders again were putting presure on the government for a firmer national policy.

While opinion originally was that Japan would await a decisive defeat of the Russian army by the Germans, it now was believed that she has waited only to bring feverish preparations throughout Japan, Manchoukou and North China to completion.

Numerous measures in North China were taken to point to preparation to move large forces from here if necessary.

Virtual panic dominated Chinese coolie laborers as a result of wide conscription of labor in the past month. Numbers of them have been shipped to undisclosed destinations.

London, Aug. 11.—(CP)— The South Pacific—possible powder-keg for a new war front—was watched intently today in this Empire capital as the Australian Cabinet met in special session to consider the rapidly-developing situation.

(The cabinet of Thailand, under increasing Japanese pressure to swing into the Tokyo orbit, also met after week-end diplomatic meetings in which the United States Minister, Hugh C. Grant, was said to have taken an active part.

(The Thai radio carried a sharp warning last night against attempted aggression by any nation and declared the Thai people are ready to fight any move against their country.)

The London Daily Express reported that consultations—presumably touching on the Far East situation as well as on aid to Soviet Russia and on reported Nazi demands for a naval base at French Dakar—were under way between the British and United States governments.

Menzies' View

Reports from Australia that Prime Minister R. G. Menzies had cancelled a tour of South and West Australia and hurried back to Melbourne for a special cabinet meeting were taken as an indication that the situation in the Far East had taken a critical turn.

Mr. Menzies declared the situation "more full of danger than ever" and said the Cabinet must discuss "developments which brooked no delays".

"While we desire peace", he said, "we are not disposed to run away from the geographically-plain fact that Singapore is part of Australia's frontier;

"Australia is prepared to defend herself with her forces. . . ."

Japan May Stab Russia in Back

Some sources here predicted, however, that the danger point in the Far East actually was moving away from Australia—toward Siberia——and the Daily Express said it believed Japan was preparing to "stab Russia in the back".

Although Britain has sent strong reinforcements to her big Singapore base on the Malay Peninsula south of Thailand, some Australians in London were critical of what they termed Britain's policy of waiting for the United States to take the lead in the South Pacific.

Others, however, were inclined to agree that any counter action should be held up until Washington's attitude is clear.

Boarding Warship in Dead of Night St. John Escapes to Cairo

(Here is the concluding chapter of War Correspondent Robert St. John's odyssey—the story of his trip out of Yugoslavia and Greece. Wounded, with grimly-etched memories of the Balkan campaign, he turns homeward).

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

New York (AP)—Behind the cold fact that Britain evacuated a large percentage of her expeditionary army from Greece during the last days of April, with much less loss of life than anyone had expected, were hundreds of stories of magnificent bravedy and horrible heartbreaks.

There were, for example those 2,000 Palestinian Jewish soldiers who got as far as the tip of the Pelopennesus and then had to be left there because there was no safe way to get them off.

There were also thousands of men, brave Anzacs who had fought a slow-death rear guard action who in some cases just made it and in other cases got to the evacuation ports just too late.

Had to Leave White

But we were lucky. "We" at this stage of our Balkan adventure meant just three of us. Russell Hill, of the New York Herald Tribune; Terence Atherton, of the London Daily Mail, and myself. We had to leave Leigh White, of CBS, in the little hospital in Argos because the doctor there said his condition would not permit his being moved.

We got off in one of the last ships to leave Greece. Someone had tipped us off that a crowd of British soldiers were sailing that last night from a little port on Argos Bay, Mylos. It took us hours to find the blacked-out fishing village.

The roads were jammed with British lorries. Night-flying Nazi bombers and reconnaissance planes were overhead. They kept dropping blue-white flares so they could see what was going on. The big trucks were colliding in the darkness, and running off the road into ditches or over precipices. Off on the Mediterranean we could see spots of light where ships were burning after they had been bombed. It was a night of considerable confusion.

Finally Found Mylos

But finally we found Mylos. The dock was swarming with tall, silent figures in dark uniforms. We edged our way into the little knots of men who stood there peering out over the black water.

It didn't take long to learn that they were all British naval officers, the men who had engineered the evacuation which had been a glorious success from some points of view, but which in the percentage of loss of ships and men really was so much worse than Dunkerque.

But success or failure, the evacuation was about over. These men had finished their job. This was the last night. They were getting ready to leave themselves.

By listening carefully and piecing together fragments of conversation we made out that they had sent a radio message early in the day asking that a destroyer be sent for them. The deadline was midnight. They would wait on the dock until midnight. If the destroyer hadn't appeared by then, they would have to assume that the Royal Navy had found it impossible to meet the request. And that would mean all these men on the quay would have to reconcile themselves to capture the next day by the Germans.

Now it's 11.45. The naval officers lean forward a little farther. They peer more intently into the blackness. If the destroyer doesn't come in sight soon. . . .

Now it's 11.55. A young lieutenant says, "Look!" and points out to the right. We all see it about the same time. A pinhead of light. As we watch, it vanishes.

A young naval officer whisps a flashlight from his pocket and starts signalling. Dot . . . dash . . . dot . . .

Then he waits for an answer. None comes. Another officer sighs and says:

"Well, I guess it wasn't our destroyer after all!"

Then suddenly the pinhead of light again. Only this time it's a little larger, a little nearer. It blinks on, then off: On, then off. It spells out a message, slowly, cautiously. Obviously the men on the bridge are afraid these men on the dock may be the enemy trying to trick them.

But finally a motorboat comes chugging through the water. When we make out the forms of the men, we can see that each one has a gun of some kind in his hand ready for instant use in case an error has been made. They're a grim-looking bunch of British sailors, but they relax and put away their firearms when the officers on the dock identify themselves.

The motorboat bumps against the side of the dock. someone makes a rope fast. And then we hear the good news:

> The greatest destroyer in the British Navy has arrived. The Havock! The destroyer that has already taken part in every major naval engagement of the war without the loss of a single life!

The naval officers began to load their duffle bags and guns and other stuff into the launch. We approach them timidly. Can we go, too?

There is some debate. Several of the naval officers look us over with suspicion. They examine our passports and our other documents. There's no precedent for taking us. We aren't Britons. We aren't soldiers, or sailors, either. There isn't much room. But finally they nod their heads. They agree to waive regulations. We can go!

Under Way at Last

Now we're in the captain's lounge on the Havock. We're under way at last. The engines are churning. We're going full speed ahead. You can tell by the way the whole boat throbs and vibrates. We're on our way to Crete. We still have plenty of danger ahead of us, but we're steaming away from Yugoslavia and Greece. We're leaving the enemy behind.

All we have to fear now are night bombers, and submarines, and E-boats and mines. But they're nothing compared with what we've been facing and what we've been through. Or they're a change, anyway.

We slap each other on the back. It's a gay, happy gathering. The captain's steward offers us Scotch and soda. It warms us up inside. What we really need is food, but this is better than food, because we're too tired and too unaccustomed to food to put anything solid inside of us yet. We must have some sleep before we can think of eating.

"What a break!" we tell the naval officers and they answer:

"Yes, it was lucky the Havock came just when she did. In another five minutes we would have given up the wait. But now we're through with worry and danger . . . for awhile, anyway."

And then we notice two young army officers who raise their glasses in all the toasts, but for some strange reason seem to be entirely out of the picture. Entirely out of the spirit of the gathering.

Now it's four o'clock in the morning. The two young officers look at their watches and nod to each other. They put down their glasses, pick up their revolver belts and grin as they get ready for . . . what?

Then they go around the circle shaking hands. The naval officers seem to know what it's all about. They wish the two young officers luck.

"Where are you going and why?" Hill asks them.

They only smile and say:

"We're getting off here. We've got one more little job to do."

Getting off? Where? In the middle of the sea? And one more job? What can they mean?

On Suicide Consignment

But they are already halfway up the iron ladder that leads to the top deck. We watch their feet disappear through the hatch. And that was the last we ever saw of them.

One of the naval officers echoes our thoughts by saying:

"I guess none of us will ever see them again."

And then he lifts his glass and suggests a toast to "those two chaps." We drink without fully understanding.

Just then the throbbing dies away. For a minute or two the engines remain idle. Then they start up and we are on our way to Crete again. On our way without the two young army officers.

They had gotten off at the tip of Greece. They had gone back, we were finally told, to do a little job of sabotage. A suicide assignment, for there would be no other ship to take them to safety.

But we went on. On to Crete, then on to Alexandria and Cairo. And finally on to Cape Town and Trinidad and New York. . . .

Home from the wars, with fragments of machine-gun bullets in the leg and memories in the mind to serve as constant reminders that war is more than ever what Sherman thought it was so many years ago.

AT THE BELLE

"Billy The Kid"

All the action of the best-loved picture of them all—the Western—plus the beauties of the finest Technicolor production to reach the screen and an outstanding portrayal by Robert Taylor, make "Billy the Kid" one of the most remarkable bits of film entertainment viewed this year. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opened to an enthusiastic audience Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

Taylor's horsemanship and easy manner in the outdoors give credence to the stories of his riding exploits since boyhood days in Nebraska. He is playing the kind of role that he has been begging to do for years, and he shows it. Brian Donlevy, too, performs brilliantly in his role as Taylor's friend, who is ultimately forced to a showdown with him. It's easily his best work since "The Great McGinty".

Taylor, in the title role, enters the story with a record as a killer, and his first thrilling act is to free a guitarist and singer from jail. He considers the fellow good luck and from that point on takes him everywhere with him.

In making the jail-break, however, he has out-manoeuvred the sheriff, a tool of Dan Hickey, boss of one of the range gangs. Hickey immediately persuades Billy to join his outfit. After his first "job" starting a stampede of an English rancher's stock, Billy quits Hickey and swings over to the Englishman.

Donlevy, as foreman for the latter and Mary Howard, as Donlevy's fiancee, have much to do with the temporary reforming of Billy that follows. But when Hickey's men shoot Billy's guitarist and then kill his English boss, he goes wild in his demand for revenge.

Donlevy and the girl try to curb him, even having him thrown in jail, but Billy escapes and succeeds in "getting" all the Hickey gang concerned, ending up with Hickey himself. Donlevy, meanwhile, has been sworn in as a deputy to halt Billy's lawlessness. In a showdown between the two, Billy, slow on the draw for the first time in his life, is killed.

Highlights are many, but the stampede of 1,500 wild cattle is one of the masterpieces of the screen. The battle in the streets between the two cattle factions is another thriller, while Billy's chase of the Hickey men and his revenge is breath-taking. The final meeting of Taylor and Donlevy is packed with drama and suspense.

Miss Howard, Ian Hunter, Gene Lockhart, Lon Chaney, Jr., and Henry O'Neill give splendid performances. David Miller's direction is excellent and the outdoor photography in color is a constant treat to the eye.

Excellent Junior Features

The Belle latest world events, "Rookie Bear", a cute, cunning color cartoon and a Pete Smith specialty 'Memory Tricks' complete a splendid varied program of featurettes.

Robert Taylor and Mary Howard add romance to the technicolor spectacle and action thrils of "Billy the Kid," Taylor's first Western picture, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Women"

"The Women," all-star production, is now showing at the McCarthy theatre. With a cast of 135 actresses, headed by Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell, the drama proves to contain all of the elements of top adult entertainment with laughs and tears expertly blended by the hand if Director George Cukor.

"The Women" also marks the return to the society type of drama by Norma Shearer, who gives an excellent and sympathetic portrayal of the woman whose home is wrecked through the gossiping of her friends. Joan Crawford, seen for the first time in her career as a "heavy," is sincere and convincing in every scene and Rosalind Russell's portrayal of an arch-gossip adds another triumph to her list of screen successes (remember "This Thing Called Love.")

One of the finest supporting casts turned out by Hollywood is seen in support, with stellar honors going to Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Phyllis Povah, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Lucile Watson, Florence Nash, Muriel Hutchinson, Esther Dale, Ann Morriss, Ruth Hussey, Dennie Moore, Mary Cecil, Mary Beth Hughes, Virginia Grey, Marjorie Main, Cora Witherspoon and Hedda Hopper. Lt may be truthfully said that every one of the 135 women making up the cast add strength and importance to the production as a whole.

It is also interesting to note that the popular Clare Boothe, Broadway stage success, upon which the picture is based has lost no part of its effectiveness in its transfer to the screen.

Adding another hour of happy-go-lucky entertainment in addition to "The Women" the present McCarthy program included the new hit "The Richest Man in Town" and although it comes along unheralded and unsung. . . it is a "surprise" picture, rich in heart-warming humanness and humor, and true to life as it is really lived, that we feel we ought to tell you: Don't miss it. Truly "The Richest Man in Town" featuring a star cast including Frank Graven, Edgar Buchanan, Roger Pryor and Hollywood's new "find" lovely Eileen O'Hearn, is one of the most delightful "movies" of the year. The newest issue of "McCarthy-Fox" news events is also shown at all performances.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Flame of New Orleans"

With a variety of new elements showing themselves in its production, Universal's "The Flame of New Orleans," is now at the Capitol theatre. The picture comes as a fresh and diverting romantic comedy starring a new and highly amusing Marlene Dietrich.

It is the star's first venture into light comedy, and a most successful venture. Miss Dietrich's lightness has been hidden for several years under the bushel of heavy dramatic parts, and her emergence is a revelation.

It is also the first American picture for Director Rene Clair, famous for such continental successes as "Under the Roofs of Paris" and "The Ghost Goes West." In undertaking "The Flame of New Orleans" Clair adds another empire to his following, showing just as much intuitive familiarity with the tastes of American audiences as when he sailed from France to register an historic success with British picture-goers in "The Ghost Goes West."

Comedy is Clair's metier and in the current picture he proves that basic comedy is international. Last night's audience registered its delight time and again.

Clair's touch was also to be seen in his interpretation of the story. "The Flame of New Orleans" was written by Norman Krasna top Hollywood scenarist. Both in dialogue and situation the story unfolds with novel and arresting touches.

For Miss Dietrich within the range of comedy-drama it offers an actress' field day. She begins the picture by impersonating a sheltered gentlewoman of early Louisiana. Dietrich fans were howling at her quaint old-fashioned femininity and the thin fragile soprano affected for the role.

Later the Louisiana gentlewoman becomes a gaudy cafe girl. The situation involves a complete transformation from billowy feminine clothes to loud rags; from high-style coiffure to bangs and from a low-modulated voice to a string of raucous wisecracks. Miss Dietrich handles the assignment superbly.

The picture is further freshened by the debut of Bruce Cabot as a romantic leading man opposite Miss Dietrich. Cabot fans who liked his villainous roles of the past will be amazed at the quiet, boyish charm he discloses—with a mustache of all things.

The magnificent cast also includes Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, Frank Jenks, Eddie Quillan, Melville Cooper, Laura Hope Crews and Franklin Pangborn.

The same program includes a short musical comedy with Matty Malneck's orchestra, a travelogue, a Strange As It Seems short subject, and a colored cartoon, "Farm Frolics."

New Phase in Russia?

By HANSON W. BALDWIN

On the basis of both Russian and German communiques, it appears probable that the tremendous campaign in Russia is entering a new phase.

The Battle of the Stalin Fortified Zone, a series of gigantic but often disconnected struggles over a fluid front 2,000 miles long and at least 100 miles deep, has continued with but little interruption for almost a month.

Earlier this week the Russians admitted fighting in the direction of Kholm, in the north-central sector of the vast fighting line, and at Korosten and Byelaya Tserkov in the Kiev sector, place names new to the daily communiques and thus indicative of German advances. Yesterday, following earlier claims of advances at Smolensk and elsewhere, the Germans, using the same propagandistic technique peculiar to this campaign, issued a series of "victorious" communiques, summarizing the results, as they saw them, of recent operations, and reporting the destruction of vast Soviet forces and great quantities of equipment. On the basis of these communiques, D. N. B., the German news agency, asserted that Russia had now lost nearly 4,000,000 men and that the Russian field armies could be regarded as having fallen before the Nazi onslaught. To which S. A. Lozovsky, Foreign Vice Commissar and governmental spokesman, retorted that the "process of disintegration of the German Army has begun."

The truth probably lies, as usual, somewhere between these extremes. It is noteworthy that yesterday's official Nazi communiques contrary to previous ones at the end of the Battle of the Frontiers and after the first penetration of the Stalin zone, did not claim final and decisive results. Far from supporting D. N. B.'s claims, the German communique ended with the telling phrase—"the German forces now stand ready to continue with a new phase of operations . . ."

The Nazi communiques, while repeating previous and Russian-admitted territorial claims, added no new cities or strategic points to the list of those known to be under the swastika, and emphasized, instead, the losses said to have been inflicted on the Red Army. And, indeed, this factor—the factor of loss—is of far more importance in the course of this campaign than the factor of distance gained or territory conquered. For if the Red Army is annihilated — the fundamental German aim — then the conquest of territory will follow in due course. The omission, therefore, of any new claims to territorial gains is not, in itself, significant, but it does tend to show that Red Army resistance has not been broken.

The losses said to have been inflicted by the Germans upon the Russian armies, while they cannot be checked — for no one in this country knows what the frightful large-scale battles in Western Russia have cost both armies—can be analysed to some extent. Reichsfuehrer Hitler, whose own hand apparently penned some of yesterday's communiques, deviated in a surprising manner from past German statements to impress these claims upon the reader when he prefaced the communiques with the phrase, "sticking to the principle of unconditional truth." Yet astronomical figures such as those given will not impress the foreign reader with the "unconditional truth" of German claims, for the 13,000 tanks, the 9,000 planes said to have been captured or destroyed, may well number more than the total the Russians have actually used, according to available information in this country. Nor would it have been possible for the Germans — occupied in terrific fighting as they have been—physically to check any such tremendous quantities as these. Moreover, the Germans make no mention of their own losses, though their communiques have repeatedly stressed the severity of the fighting. These Nazi losses were estimated by some sources in London yesterday — though the estimates were only that — as 700,000 men and 6,000 tanks.

The balance sheet, therefore, seems to stack up about as follows:

1. Both armies have suffered considerable losses. Neither is yet finally beaten.

2. Because of the still Russian resistance, the inaccuracy of some of the previous German communiques and the German Army's failure to fulfil immediately some of the predictions made in those communiques, the Nazi High Command appears — from the tone of yesterday's communique — to be on the psychological defensive. The extraordinary communique was more important because of the reason for its issuance—"to calm the admitted spread of apprehension and rumors among the German people"—than for its contents.

3. The Germans apparently have penetrated the Stalin zone at a number of points, in north, centre and south. They would appear to have cleaned up some of the pockets of Russian resistance the Panzer divisions left behind them. Many of these pockets still remain, however, and Kiev, an important "anchor" in the Stalin zone, and many other strategic points in the fortified zone remain in Russian hands.

4. The Battle of the Stalin Zone appears to be moving gradually eastward—particularly in the Smolensk and Kholm sectors—to a new phase of struggle in which many of the battles may be fought behind the fortified zone itself. This new phase may become what Moscow described yesterday as a "deepening battle of movement."—N. Y. Times.

Filipino Army Gives U. S. Front on Japanese Flank

By THOMAS M. JOHNSON
NEA Service Military Writer

Washington. — Many an American has just heard with surprise that besides an army in the Philippines, his country has a Filipino army. In fact, the latter is considerably larger than the former. For every white American soldier in the islands there are nearly ten of the brown men whose fathers not long ago were fiercely fighting those who insisted on "civilizing 'em with a Krag."

Today, not with Krag but with Springfields and other standard American arms, the "little brown brother" is ready to stand beside his civilizer to defend the islands against invasion. The native army of the Philippines is trained to do it, needing only a little more shakedown, which it is about to get. Its soldiers are loyal, brave, largely ardent Christians, likely to fight fiercely against attacking Japanese.

• • •

They are so nearly 100 per cent. ready to do it because of two dreamers who are also very practical men, one American, one Filipino. Douglas MacArthur, lately the only American field marshal commanding the army of the Philippines, persuaded President Manuel Quezon that majority expert opinion was wrong, and the islands should be defended.

"You fix it," said Quezon, and six years ago MacArthur began making young Filipinos into soldiers cheaply and painlessly. For $10,000,000 a year he taught them little by little; first as ten-year-old schoolboys, working up to six months in the field at 21, then back yearly for two weeks. From a 16,000,000 population, 40,000 a year was selected for three divisions and extras.

Officers came from colleges and from a Filipino West Point complete to uniform with shako. There were also graduate officers' schools. They turned out pretty good troop leaders, very good flyers for an air force whose development is "proceeding according to plan" toward a goal of 250 planes.

Today an authoritative estimate of the result from the viewpoint of those who favored the step taken is: "Instead of an unarmed Philippine salient, the United States finds itself reinforced by the bristling front of an ideal flank position that renders further advance by Japan practically impossible until the position is either contained or destroyed. Sledom in history has there been so complete a strategical reversal with so little publicity. The United States has played a trump card which seems almost to have dropped from nowhere."

To criticisms that the Filipino army [illegible] half-trained and half ba[illegible] this is the answer:

"[illegible]is army will not be subject to blitzkrieg methods of attack, as it plans to meet the enemy at the beach, where mechanized armament cannot be utilized. Tanks cannot operate in the mud and swampy terrain of its rice paddies. The enemy's air effort will be limited largely to attack from carriers. Every moment of this army's training, every item of its equipment, is to solve just one problem. It is a specialized force with a specialized mission—the simplest of all military missions—a prepared defence."

The Philipino army is not trained as an expeditionary force.

The total man power is now over 100,000, would be 150,000 but for delays partly political. But now, with MacArthur a lieutenant-general, U.S.A., he is quickly weaving together not only the Filipino army he created, but all armed forces in the islands.

These may approach 200,000 — the exact total is a secret, of course—including enlarged Philippine scouts and constabulary, U.S. regulars and reserves that have been gradually increased to the highest point since insurrection days. Civilian defence measures are being pressed.

There has been shortage of equipment, especially munitions and planes which must come from the United States. But lately the mainland has sent more equipment, too. This applies especially to heavy long-range bombers which have now become the island's first offensive defence, for not only are Japan's cities made largely of paper and bamboo, but her approaching ships would be as vulnerable as Britain's at Crete.

But if they got through the screen of air attack, invaders would meet the little brown brother on the sea. The Filipino has become not only a soldier but sailor. He has a navy, less advanced than the army, but possessing fast motor torpedo-boats and mine-layers to sow death in the archipelago's many passages.

Right behind them is the Asiatic fleet, whose excellent submarines are counted on to delay any attackers until the now diminished Pacific fleet comes pounding the 5,000 miles from Hawaii. Until the fleet gets there, and perhaps afterward, a heavy responsibility for holding the islands against invasion falls upon the little brown brother who has turned soldier and sailor too, and may turn fighting man.

The British government has re-opened its drive against careless talk on the part of the troops, the dangers of talking loosely, particularly about troop embarkation dates.

When the body of John "Chink" Goodman, Philadelphia gangster, was hauled out of Skunk Sound, near Cape May, N.J., on July 20, the occasion didn't cause a ripple of interest. He was just another badman who got his comeuppance from his own kind in gangster fashion. Now there's a persistent report that among the $486 in paper money found in Badman Goodman's pants pocket were some Lindbergh ransom notes. More than $30,000 of the $50,000 paid over to the kidnapper of the Lindbergh baby never was accounted for. Goodman's body was wrapped in canvas and anchored with a 40-pound concrete block.

HEAVIEST DAY RAID OF WAR MADE OVER COLOGNE

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

RUSSIAN ARMY HARD-PRESSED ON TWO FLANKS

Nazis Stalemated On Central Road Leading to Moscow

Key Zones of Korosten and Uman on the South Front Still Held by Russians

BERLIN AGAIN BOMBED

Moscow, Aug. 12.— Hard-pressed on both flanks, the Red Army was reported today fighting fiercely against two Nazi nut-cracker movements around Leningrad in the north and Kiev in the Ukraine.

The Daily War Bulletin declared the Russians still held the Nazis stalemated on the Central Road to Moscow in the long-contested Smolensk salient.

"No major engagements took place on other directions and sectors of the front", the mid-day communique said.

The centres of fighting in the north were listed as Kakisalmi, on the Karelian Isthmus 75 miles north of Leningrad, and in the Soltsi sector 130 miles south of Russia's second-largest city.

Key zones in the south still were given by the Russians as Korosten, 80 miles northwest of Kiev, and Uman, midway between the Ukraine capital and the Black Sea port of Odessa.

Air Force Very Active

The communique credited the Red Air Force with hard blows at Nazi infantry and motorized forces along the entire front and at German air bases deep behind the lines.

The rout of a large German tank column in the Korosten area was reported in detail.

In one battle in the Korosten area a large German tank column was routed by Russian airplanes, tanks, artillerymen and infantrymen working together, the communique said. After the engagement wreckage of the German units was strewn along a road for eight miles, the Red army reported.

More than 50 per cent of the German tanks were declared to have been destroyed, including 15 heavy machines. Two anti-aircraft batteries were destroyed, the communique said.

The Soviet Bureau of Information's midnight communique dealt principally with the stepped-up air war and increasing guerilla operations behind the Nazi lines, but cast little new light on the situation along the front.

Fighting in the Smolensk salient toward Moscow went into its 28th day with the Nazi eastward push apparently checked firmly.

Moscow had its 17th air raid of the war last night, but the attack was described as one of the shortest and weakest the strongly-guarded capital has experienced.

Murmansk Raid Frustrated

The Russian war bulletin said 60 to 70 German and Finnish planes recently attempted an attack on the far northern port of Murmansk —raided 30 times before—but ran into such strong opposition from Russian fighter planes and anti-aircraft that they were beaten off with a loss of 16 planes to one Russian plane.

The Red air fleet reported offensives of its own ranging from the heart of Berlin to the supply bases and ports behind the German southern flank.

Germany Claims Troops Moving Down Both Flanks Of Bug River

BITTER FIGHTING

Berlin, Aug. 12 (AP)—Advance units of Germany's armored divisions in the Ukraine have reached the Black Sea coast at several points Nazi military sources claimed tonight.

The points along the Black Sea coast which the units were said to have reached were not divulged but earlier it was reported the Germans were driving to objectives east of Ochakov a small Black Sea port 40 miles east of Odessa, the big naval base.

Rail facilities in the whole area were reported demoralized as the German air force pounded at everything moving.

The High Command, stating that "operations on the eastern front continue favorably", said in its daily bulletin that the air force bombed military objectives in Moscow last night along with "several important railway junctions". Big fires and explosions crippled the Soviet railway facilities, the high command claimed.

D.N.B. asserted that six Soviet transport vessels had been sunk by German bombers off the coast of Odessa which is a great oil and grain port serving the rich Ukraine area.

The German forces in the van of the encircling movement were reported to be moving down both banks of the Bug river toward Nikolaev.

This encircling movement, reports from the front indicated, coincided with a threat aimed at Odessa from the west by Nazi and Rumanian forces claimed to be advancing across the Dniester from Bessarabia.

Odessa is roughly 35 or 40 miles east of the Dniester and 60 miles west of the mouth of the Bug.

While the Berlin press boasted that the outlook for further Nazi successes in the Ukraine was "extremely good," the Germans acknowledged Russian planes attacked the German capital during the night but claimed only two reached the "general region" of the city.

Portuguese assets here were estimated at about $10,000,000.

LORD WILLINGDON DIES IN LONDON AT AGE OF 74

Former Governor General of Canada Was First to Represent King and Not British Gov't

VICEROY OF INDIA

London, Aug. 12—(CP Cable)—The Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada, died here today. He was 74.

Lord Willingdon, the first Governor-General of Canada to represent the King and not the British Government, was in Ottawa from 1926 until 1931 when he was appointed Viceroy of India.

He was born Sept. 12, 1866 and was educated at Eton and Cambridge.

His first important diplomatic post was Governor of Bombay, where he was stationed from 1912 until 1919 when he was appointed Governor of Madras.

These early years in India gave him a valuable background for his term as Viceroy, particularly because his term was marked by the civil disobedience campaign of Mahatma Gandhi which he was credited with check-mating.

Possessed Unusual Gifts

In 1936, at the end of his five-year term as Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Willingdon was made Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports and Chancellor of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, two positions more honorable than onerous for a man of his unusual diplomatic and administrative experience. It was known, however, that the British Government frequently availed itself of Willingdon's advice unofficially in critical moments of empire or international stress.

Willingdon in 1931 took the title of Viscount Ratendone which passed on to his son and heir, Hon. Inigo Brassey Freeman - Thomas when the father received an earldom.

Lord Willingdon returned to Britain in 1936 and was made a Marquess. But he could not retire to a life of ease.

In 1938, with Lady Willingdon he went to South America on a cultural mission and in November, 1940, he went again, this time as leader of a trade mission.

Health Broke Down

In Feb. 1941, during the trip to South America, his health broke down and he was forced to return to Britain. Since then, his health has been poor and nearly two weeks ago he developed pneumonia from which he never recovered.

He is succeeded by his only surviving son, Viscount Ratendone, who was born in 1899.

Endeared Himself to Canadians

Ottawa, Aug. 12—(CP)—Regret at the death in London of the Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada, was expressed at the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King today.

Merry, Merry Winter in Sight For Ye Butchers of Olde England

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 12—(AP)—It's going to be a merry, merry winter for ye butchers of olde England, those thirstie despots of ye chopping blocke.

Ever since the rigors of rationing set in, the butchers (known here as meat purveyors) have been a group apart, men not catering but catered to for favors.

Discovering early in the war that the best way to get a choice joint was to present the butcher with a present, people poured favors on them to the extent that some butchers are cracking up under the strain.

With Food Minister Lord Woolton announcing that rationing is to continue, there are grave shakings of heads in many quarters, at Horsham in Sussex for one.

There is a butcher there who before the war was a model husband, coming home early in the evening and leading a quiet, almost repressed home life. With rationing came a revolution.

Someone discovered that he had a hidden taste for drink. The word spread. Seeking a choice roast for the week-end, a housewife presented the butcher with a bottle. Result, choice roast. It happened again and again.

The butcher didn't violate rationing, he just gave the best cuts to givers of the best presents. All was perfectly legal but hard on the butcher's constitution.

As housewives market early and husbands market late he got it coming and going. His shop often was the site of gay scenes with the cleaver - brandishing butcher in a merry mood, full of friendship, song and good will toward all.

"His wife can't understand the change," a housewife customer explained. "There must be butchers' wives all over England in the same fix."

The housewife's husband, going the bottle-bearers one better, takes the butcher home in his car.

"After he gets tired of that," said the householder, "I suppose we'll have him for a week-end guest. He certainly goes at a fast pace.

Premier Hepbun of Ontario Ready to Resin His Office To Go Oversea for Service

Would be Assistant to J. P. Bickell in Ministry of Aircraft Production in England

TO MEET CABINET

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn's four-month silence on reports he would go to England to engage in war work, has been broken.

The Ontario Prime Minister, who refused to comment on a report last April 19 that he was expected in London 'soon' and has ignored subsequent reports, said in an interview last night—the eve of his 45th birthday—that he was "awaiting word" of an offer to go to Britain. "When it comes, I'll go without delay", he said.

Disclosure of the Premier's intentions was made on arrival here where he was guest speaker at the convention banquet of the Ontario Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion.

He said he has offered to resign as Premier and leader of the Provincial Liberal Party. His plans were he said, to go to England as assistant to J. P. Bickell, who holds a high executive position in the Ministry of Aircraft production.

Will Discuss Matter With Cabinet

He had not taken the whole matter up with the Ontario Cabinet, but the Premier said he intended to discuss it with council today.

The offer to serve in a wartime capacity in Britain was made to Mr. Bickell who was in Canada several weeks ago. The offer was directed to Lord Beaverbrook, then Minister of Aircraft Production, through Mr. Bickell.

"I am prepared to resign my office and go as a private citizen, if Ottawa would like that better, or to name a successor agreeable to the Liberal party who would be Acting Premier. I am not particular how I go over".

It is believed in some circles that choice of a successor to the Premier, temporary or otherwise, narrows down to two members of his cabinet, Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary and Acting Premier in Mr. Hepburn's absence, and Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways.

Premier Hepburn's only comment when asked about a successor was that he "hasn't gone yet".

U.S. REGULATIONS PLANNED TO CURB EASY PAY PLAN

Instalment Credit to be Discouraged to Counteract Inflationary Tendency

CONSERVE MATERIALS

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—Easy payment plans felt the impact of defence requirements today as the government acted to curb the $10,000,000,000 instalment credit business in the United States.

The announced purpose of the curb was twofold:

To discourage consumers from buying many things containing materials that otherwise would be conserved for defence production needs; and

To counteract inflationary tendencies that arise when the demand for certain goods is greater than the supply.

President Roosevelt, in an executive order issued late yesterday, directed that the control system be set up to regulate the huge credit business now being transacted through the country's banks, stores and personal finance companies.

The order instructed the Federal Reserve System to formulate and administer the regulations under a First Great War statute which carries criminal penalties as high as ten years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, for violations.

No Indication of Rules

There was no immediate indication of what the rules would be, but Mr. Roosevelt specifically authorized such measures as requiring down-payments where they are not now required; requiring bigger down-payments than now necessary; requiring larger weekly or

WIDE MILITARY POWERS GIVEN ADMIRAL DARLAN

Vice-Premir in Control of All Mitary Power in Unoccupied France

PETAIN O BROADCAST

Vichy, Frare, Aug. 12. —(AP)— Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan was named Minister of National Defence tody in a reorganization of the Vich Cabinet which concentrated al military powers in his hands.

A decree ublished in a special edition of te official journal gave Darlan reater power than any person or coabination of persons in Vichy except Marshal Petain himself.

The clue t the concentration of powers was seen in statements when such a measure first was hinted that Darlan would thus have his hand freer to conduct negotiations wit Germany for collaboration.

The Germn-controlled Paris press has been insistent lately that collaboration nclude military as well as politica and economic matters, and has rged that such cooperation especally be extended to cover the defece of Dakar on the western coast f Africa and other strategic points in French Africa.

All members of the government were raised to ministerial rank by the new decre. Some of them previously had held the rank only of State Secretary.

JAPAN CONCERNED OVER U. S. GOODS REACHING RUSSIA

Cabinet Spokesman Says Japan Wishes United States Would Not Send Munitions to the Soviet

QUESTIONS FENDED

Tokyo, Aug. 12 (AP)—The militarist daily, Kokumin, said today that the United States and Great Britain had been warned that any further anti-Japanese pressure by them would bring about "nothing but the worst situation" and that Japan will go ahead with grim resolve toward establishment of her sphere in East Asia."

Kokumin in its editorial said that especial emphasis had been given the warning to the United States. (At the same time authoritative quarters in London declared "if Japan wants war in the Pacific there will be war, if she wants peace, there will be peace.")

Advises United States

The paper, professing that Japan's policy is being worked out along peaceful lines and that she has no aggressive designs urged that the United States approach questions of the Far East calmly.

Britain is putting forth "frantic efforts to cause friction between the United States and Japan" and is resorting to all sorts of moves to disturb the peace of the Pacific, said the paper.

Kokumin compared Britain's policy to the grasp of a drowning man for a straw and asserted she had been on the verge of defeat by Germany for two years.

In an evident reference to Thailand, the newspaper Yomiuri said "we are extremely sorry for any country joining the Anglo-American camp. If Anglo-Americans are only clamoring from a distance without serious intentions, countries which plunge into fire will only be sacrificed."

'Wood Gas' Used to Drive Motor Cars In Finland Due to Gas Shortage

Berlin, Aug. 12 (AP)—Silhouettes of a trip to Finland. . . .

The absence of men and the consequent preponderance of women on the farms impress on the visitor to southwestern Finland that the little nation again is fighting a bitter fight.

A plane which took a group of foreign newspapermen from Berlin to Finland was not permitted to take the usual route to Helsinki or Turku but was directed farther northward to Pori, one of the older Finnish cities on the Gulf of Bothnia.

There we alighted from the plane, air raid sirens were just advising the population that all was clear once again.

The 175-mile drive by automobile to Helsinki was like crossing through an American midwest agricultural section. But what cars! Finland, shut off from the world, must ration her gasoline carefully, with the result that even the mightiest American-made cars must carry at the rear an unsightly contraption looking like a crude boiler.

There are wood-burning furnaces converting their energy into what is known as "wood gas".

You go on a trip with lumber piled on the rear end of your car which you feed from time to time into the boiler-like contraption which is connected with the carburetor by a pipeline.

If you are out of lumber, you just stop at one of the many forests in which Finland abounds and cut yourself enough wood to enable your fliver to proceed.

As you pass farms, you see in the fields women gathering in a harvest which promises to be unusually good. However, one officer told me "next winter will be difficult because of the lack of food".

In little towns as well as big cities, you're struck by the number of women in bluish gray uniforms. They are Finland's "Lottas", members of a group of some 120,000 women of all ages who are taking men's jobs behind the scenes.

Vast Air Armada Swarms Over Nazi-Occupied France

Non-Stop Foray by R. A. F. Renews Large-Scale Offensive

NO OPPOSITION SEEN

London, Aug. 12 (CP)—The Royal Air Force bombed Cologne in an audacious daylight raid today and sent a great air armada out to attack the coast of German-occupied France on a non-stop foray which sharply renewed Britain's large-scale air offensive against the Nazis.

The raid on the ancient Rhineland metropolis was described by the Press Association as possibly the heaviest daylight attack yet made on Germany. The assault on the French coast was carried out in such force that observers on the English southwest coast gave up trying to count the number of planes roaring out over the Channel.

High-flying bombers and protecting fighter planes swept eastward in both "V" and diamond formations. Crowds gathered all afternoon to watch the spectacular offensive.

Third Daylight Attack on City

Blenheim bombers were reported to have carried out the bombing of Cologne, the third daylight attack on this city since the beginning of the war.

The city, which straddles the Rhine and contains many of the vital industries for which the Rhineland is famed and which are feeding the German war machine, has been raided approximately 100 times by night.

It is the metropolis of the Rhineland and the third largest city in Germany, having a normal population of about 750,000.

The British bombers had to fly over about 150 miles of hostile territory to reach Cologne, which lies about 40 miles inside the German frontier with The Netherlands.

The many-towered city is famous for its great Gothic Cathedral and for numerous other buildings dating to the 13th. Century.

The daylight raid on the French coast was one of the heaviest in weeks, a great armada of bombers striking out in formation for the attack.

Fly 5000 Feet Above Channel

Squadron after squadron of Royal Air Force machines swarmed through the sky at a height of 5000 feet above the Dover Strait. As they moved on toward their objectives the fleet was outlined sharply against masses of clouds.

Watchers on the English coast saw no signs of opposition. The big bombers flew toward the continent in formation and returned, still in formation, while new units were starting out for the attack.

The raids followed overnight blasting at northern France and The Netherlands by the R.A.F. and the bombing of targets in Germany by planes of both the R.A.F. and the Russian air force.

London, Aug. 12. — (CP)— The large airplane which crashed in Britain with a loss of twenty-two men, including eight from Canada, was of the "Transoceanic" type, it was announced today.

The plane crashed on a hillside Saturday just after leaving a British airport, it was disclosed.

Russia Proposes Self-Rule by Slavic Peoples

'Whole Slav World Unite for Earliest and Final Destruction of German Fascism'

Moscow, Aug. 12 —(AP)— Soviet Russia, in an effort to unite all Slavs against Germany, has come forward with a broad proposal of self-rule by Slavonic peoples scattered over the face of Europe and part of Asia.

"The hour has struck when the whole Slav world must unite for the earliest and final destruction of German Fascism," said a Soviet statement addressed to all Slavs.

The Soviet policy was enunciated at the Moscow meeting by Alexei Tolstoi, author and grandson of novelist Count Leo Tolstoi. He spoke as representative of Russia to Russians, Ukrainians, White Russians, Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, Serbs, Croats, Slovenes, Bulgarians, Macedonians, Carpathians and Montenegrins.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

HYDRO POLE BROKEN BY HIT-RUN DRIVER

City police answered a call to the intersection of West Bridge and Octavia Streets shortly after nine o'clock Monday night where they found a Hydro pole had been broken off after apparently being struck by a motor vehicle of some description. Nearby residents heard the crash, but before they could reach the scene the driver had driven off into the darkness without remaining' or reporting the accident.

AMICABLY SETTLED BETWEEN PARTIES

Considerable body and fender damage resulted during a two-car motor accident on Front St. early Monday evening. It was raining when Dr. R. Thompson, of Wellington, moved his motor car away from its parallel parking position and was in collision with a southbound car driven by Mrs. Grace Wilson of Los Angeles, Cal. The body of Mrs. Wilson's car and the fenders on Dr. Thompson's car showed considerable damage. The matter was amicably settled upon the arrival of the police officers.

POLICE REQUESTED TO HALT VEHICLE

In a long distance telephone call from Toronto, Belleville police were asked to intercept an American tourist, who is supposed to be proceeding easterly through Ontario. The message directed the local police to halt a motor car from Long Island, N.Y., in which were travelling Judge Court and Johnson, of that city. The vehicle carried licence plates number N-C-C. Judge Johnson is urgently wanted in his office on important business, the message stated.

TOMATOES FEATURE TUESDAY'S MARKET

Increased offerings of tomatoes featuring an otherwise slim market forced prices to a new low of 25c per six-quart basket on the market this morning. Prices for other lines of produce however held practically at former levels.

Fresh Grade "A" eggs sold at 35c per dozen, the same price as Saturdays' level. Corn on the was 30c per dozen ears while potatoes were 40c the peck. Huckleberries were not offered, the season apparently being over while a few boxes of red raspberries were held at 30c the box. Transparent and Duchess apples sold at 50c and 40c the peck respectively while vegetables were bunched in the usual five cent lots.

NEW TIMEPIECE ON FRONT STREET

Uptown pedestrians on Front St., will no longer have to strain their eyes in murky weather or in the darker hours of the evening to check the time on the town clock over the city had as a new timepiece now quotes the time in that district and will prove a great convenience.

Erected as a component part of a new electric neon sign at Nick's Lunch, popular uptown restaurant, a large electric clock hung directly over the sidewalk now makes time-telling a simple matter above Victoria Avenue.

WHEREABOUTS OF MAN WANTED BY POLICE

Kingston authorities requested the assistance of the Belleville police department in the possible location of Bert Holsgrove, of Kingston, and who left his home over the past weekend. Holsgrove, who was described as being 36 years of age, stands five foot, seven inches tall, and weighs about 127 pounds. He has light hair and wears glasses and is driving a 1940 model Dodge coach bearing Ontario licence plates number 35-N-68. Mr. Holsgrove is asked to communicate with either the Belleville or Kingston police, Acting Chief Constable Arthur Harman announced.

Bristol Aircraft Production to Start About September 1

Initial production at the Belleville plant of the Bristol Aircraft Products, Limited, in which special machinery is at present being installed, is expected to commence some time during the first part of September, it was stated by Mr. E. Wiskin, local representative of the company and manager of the proposed Belleville factory during an interview yesterday.

The nature of the work to be undertaken during the initial stage of production at the plant will be the finishing of semi-finished products shipped in from the parent company's plant in Virginia, U.S.A., it was disclosed by Mr. Wiskin. Local production of moulded plywood plastic in its initial stage of manufacture will be entirely dependent upon the progress which the company makes in importing essential moulding equipment, which due to its being utilized in an entirely new process of manufacture must be built specially for the purpose. Mr. Wiskin would not hazard a guess as to when this necessary equipment would be installed in the Belleville factory and until such time the company's activities in Canada would be of finishing moulded products shipped in from the United States, he said.

Installation of machinery for finishing the moulded plywood plastic material is at present taking place at the site of the old Tiger Tire and Rubber Company on Moira St., which the Bristol Company have leased for their Canadian plant. When installation of machinery is completed a class of approximately twenty-five students now taking a special woodworking course at the Belleville Collegiate under the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training system, is expected to receive employment at the new plant, this number to be increased when manufacturing in its entire process is commenced.

A. S. DUFFIELD IS HONORED AT ENGINEERS' HALL

C. N. R. Motive Power Employees Pay Tribute to Associate on His Promotion to be Locomotive Foreman at Cochrane, Ontario

A pleasant evening was spent at the Engineers' Hall, Pine Street, when a number of C.N.R. Motive Power Employees gathered to bid farewell to Mr. A. S. Duffield, who has been appointed Locomotive Foreman and has been transferred to Cochrane, Ontario.

During the evening bridge and euchre were played. Winners of prizes which consisted of War Saving Stamps were won by: Mr. P. E. Kerr, Mr. F. Follwell and Mr. C. Bonisteel.

Mr. Duffield entered the service of the Canadian National Railways as machinist apprentice on August 6th., 1924, at Sarnia when 17 years of age, was transferred to Stratford Shop on July 16, 1928, to complete his apprenticeship and transferred back to Sarnia as machinist in August 1929. Due to his special qualifications he was transferred to Stratford Roundhouse as Night Foreman in January 1935, and transferred to Belleville as Assistant Foreman, July 1936.

Mr. John Robinson spoke of the high esteem with which Mr. Duffield was held with his fellow employees at Belleville and called on Mr. Duffield to come to the platform where Mr. Bert Facer made the presentation of a Hamilton Standard watch which was suitably engraved as follows: "Presented to Mr. A. S. Duffield, from Shop Employees and Enginemen's Educational Club, C.N.R., Belleville, August 1941." Mr. Duffield taken by surprise suitably replied also expressing his thanks for the co-operation he had received while at Belleville.

The opportunity was also taken by Mr. A. H. Jones, Locomotive Foreman, to introduce Mr. G. L. Galloway of Windsor, who has been transferred to Belleville to succeed Mr. Duffield.

Sliced Bread Taboo in City

There was no sliced bread in Belleville today.

As the new Dominion Government regulations prohibiting the sale of sliced bread in Canada for the duration of the war went into effect on Monday, Belleville, along with other cities and towns throughout the Dominion, was without sliced bread.

In an effort to save paper the Federal Government has decreed that in the future no loaves may be wrapped in double-thickness paper.

At present there is no difference in the wrapping of unsliced bread, but when the bakers' present supply of bread wrappings are exhausted, all future paper sold for this purpose must be single paper with only one color permitted.

Special deliveries of bread and milk are also taboo and in the future when housewives forget to replenish the bread box or milk supply they will have to truck over to the corner grocery store and make the purchase afoot.

BISHOP BIDWELL DIES IN ENGLAND

Former Anglican Bishop of Ontario Had Been Living in England — He Was Assistant Bishop of Canterbury

Thetford, England, Aug. 12.—Rt. Rev. Edward J. Bidwell, Anglican Bishop of Ontario diocese from 1917 to 1925 when he resigned and went to live in England, died here on Monday. He has been ill for several years. Bishop Bidwell was 75 years of age.

Bishop Bidwell was an outstanding scholar. After his return to England he became rector of Sellindge, Kent, and late in June, 1935, he was appointed by Archbishop Lang to be assistant Bishop of Canterbury.

Until he became vicar of Sellindge, Kent, in 1930, and later rector, he had not held a living or served as a curate in England. He was Assistant Bishop of the Diocese of Canterbury from 1935 to 1940. Since 1936, he had been Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

Bishop Bidwell was born in England, and was a scholar of Wadham College, Oxford, where he obtained his B.A. in 1887 and his M.A. in 1894. He was ordained deacon in 1891 and a priest the following year in Worcester, England. He was headmaster of Leamington College until 1897, when he left to become headmaster of King's School, Peterbrough, for six years before coming to Canada. For six years he was headmaster of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Que., and was inducted dean and rector in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, in February, 1909. In 1917, after serving four years as Coadjutor Bishop of Ontario, he was elected Bishop of Ontario.

From 1911 to 1913 he was secretary to the Prayer-book revision committee of the General Synod of the Canadian Church. In 1917 he was secretary of the House of Bishops.

Bishop Bidwell was honored by Canadian universities. Bishop's College conferred on him the honorary D.C.L., and Trinity College, Toronto, and Queen's the honorary D.A., a degree which he received also from Oxford in 1919.

HUGH ROSE

(Murray Township)
(Contributed)

Hugh Rose, residence in the 9th., concession of Murray Township, Northumberland County, died in London, Ontario, on August 4th., after an illness of two years' duration. Born in Murray Township and in his thirty-third year, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rose; his father died some time ago. All his life was passed in the Township where he was born, except for a short absence, and he was engaged in farming. He was a young man of fine character and was very popular and highly esteemed in the community. In religion he was a faithful member of the Church of St. Alphonsus at Wooler.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. John Rose, Murray Township; one sister, Mrs. R. J. Lawrence, Kingston; two brothers, Mr. Harry Rose in the United States and Mr. Frank Rose, Murray Township.

The funeral took place from the residence of his mother on Friday, August 8th., to the Church of the St. Alphonsus at Wooler, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father F. L. Rishea.

Interment was in the Roman Catholic Cemetery at Wooler. The bearers were Messrs. John Wickens, Vincent Corrigan, Don. Terry, Eddie Miron, Harold Corbett and Hubert Corrigan.

The funeral was very largely attended. Relatives from a distance who were present were Mr. James Rose of Toronto, an uncle and Mr. William Rose and Mr. Joseph Rose, of Buffalo, N.Y., cousins of the deceased.

Duke Enjoys Chilly Waters Of Lake Beauvert

(By LORNE BRUCE)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Jasper, Alta., Aug. 12 —(CP)—With one notable exception the Duke of Kent is spending his two and a half days in this Rocky Mountain resort in much the same way as most visitors.

Most people spurn the icy waters of Lac Beauvert in favor of the heated swimming pool of Jasper Park Lodge.

But the Duke whose cabin is located on the lake's edge has expressed his liking for "the real thing," and twice yesterday waded out over the lake's rocky bottom for a vigorous plunge in the chilly waters.

His first dip was taken before breakfast. He took another plunge late in the afternoon after climbing half way up 8,000-foot Whistler Mountain.

"Thrilling Outing"

The Duke and his aide, Inspector James Evans of Scotland Yard, made the ascent on foot and the Duke was reported later as saying he had had "a thrilling outing."

At dinner last night, His Royal Highness received Charles Evans Hughes, retired Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and Suydam Cutting, New York big game hunter and explorer who last year organized the American Committee for Defence of British Homes.

Mrs. Cutting, and Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Wood of Toronto also were present while Mrs. Hughes was unable to accept the Duke's invitation. Mr. Wood, an industrialist, is occupying Outlook Cabin, occupied by the King and Queen during their 1939 Canadian tour.

No plans have been announced for the Duke's holiday today. He is scheduled to leave here tomorrow for Edmonton to continue his Dominion-wide inspection tour of units of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

EMPLOYEES RETURN

Hamilton, Aug. 12 (CP)—Five hundred employees of the local plants of The Canadian Cottons Ltd., returned to work today following a 13-day strike which began over a cost-of-living bonus dispute. The employees, members of The United Textile Workers of Canada, are seeking appointment of a Board of Conciliation.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Not heeding the warning of one of its own officials that the United States is prepared to meet action with action, the Japanese government opened a campaign today to halt the shipment of United States war materials to Russia via the Siberian port of Vladivostok.

Japanese spokesmen in Tokyo and Shanghai simultaneously issued statements deprecating Washington's intention of using the Pacific route to get aid to the Russian army fighting Hitler's divisions along the 2,000-mile front in European Russia.

In Tokyo, the official cabinet spokesman declared Japan is watching such shipments "with urgent concern" while the army spokesman in Shanghai claimed to see a possibility that equipment thus shipped might be used against Japan rather than Germany and that Vladivostok might become "America's first line of defence against Japan."

This apparently was the Japanese war party's answer to the sober warning voiced in Los Angeles yesterday by Kaname Wakasugi, No. 2 man in the Japanese embassy in Washington with the rank of minister, who declared that while the United States does not wish to precipitate further trouble with Japan it is "prepared and determined to meet the worst eventualities," answering action with action.

U. S. Sentiment Told

This sharp appraisal of current United States sentiment was made by the Japanese diplomat in a telephone interview with a Tokyo newspaper. It was an unprecedented step, since the diplomat is on his way back to the Japanese capital to give the government first-hand information on Washington's attitude. He thus let the authorities know well in advance what he thinks of Tokyo's present dangerous course.

Today's campaign against American shipments through Vladivostok probably is the result of intense pressure exerted by Germany ever since the Russian invasion began. Germany is naturally anxious to obtain Japanese co-operation in preventing Russia receiving American arms and doubtless has represented that Japan is obligated to play her part under the tripartite and anti-Comintern pacts.

Furthermore, there can be no doubt that Japan herself will move against Siberia in the event of a Soviet collapse in western Russia, and by carrying on a campaign against the Vladivostok shipments Tokio is able to build up a case against Russia to be invoked when the situation is considered ripe for action.

HOME GUARDS PROVE VALUE IN SHAM WAR

Enemy Attackers With Numerical Advantage Prove Superior; 70,000 Troops of Northern Command Take Part.

Somewhere in England, (CP) — Large-scale exercises in which 70,000 troops, including several thousand members of the Home Guard, have just taken part in the Northern Command yielded valuable lessons in what may happen if Britain is invaded.

Lt.-Gen. T. R. Eastwood, new G.O.C. of the command, designed the exercises to give the attackers a numerical advantage. Two whole divisions were detailed to represent the Germans who had made two landings in force, bringing a panzer brigade with them.

Only one division of defending soldiers was allocated to meet them in addition to the local Home Guards, air defence troops and other special units. All played the exact parts they will be called on to fulfill in an invasion.

Commenting at the end of the manoeuvres, Gen. Eastwood emphasized there was always the possibility of a sudden real attack. He added that the Home Guards—for whom he had a special word of praise—were being issued with more anti-tank weapons of various kinds.

"They will have an even better chance against the tanks if they come," he said.

The G.O.C. gave the British defenders an advantage in air power. They had bomber and fighter squadrons of the R.A.F. at their disposal, while the attackers had only a few fighter airplanes. But, just as may happen in the real thing, weather wiped out the advantage of superior air power. Local ground mists kept nearly all the defending machines out of the sky, and the numerical advantage of the invaders as well as the skill with which officers and men of the Royal Armored Corps handled the tanks of the panzer brigade enabled them to press home the attack with some success.

Held Up "Enemy"

Home Guards, in these difficult circumstances, proved how valuable they can be. Acting as holding and harassing units, they delayed the full force of the enemy's attack for more than two hours at one important point, while the regular troops were brought up.

Delivering their attack with the object of seizing important industrial areas in the north, the invaders pressed on and their tanks got behind the lines of the defenders. At one vital bridge-head the enemy tanks appeared 2 1-2 hours before the bridge could have been blown. But they ran out of gasoline and the umpires ruled the tanks suffered 85 per cent casualties from the defenders' anti-tank guns and other weapons.

Infantry showed that even today and in spite of the value of mechanized units, the "foot slogger" is still important. The attackers had not landed enough transports and men of famous British regiments had to make forced marches.

Gen. Eastwood said afterwards the attackers had undoubtedly proved superior. "It was almost another Dunkerque", he declared, "but wes were able to call this one off".

In an accident during the exercise an officer and four men were drowned when an assault boat in which they were making a night crossing of a river overturned.

British Civilian Takes War Calmly

Nervous Troubles Reported Fewer Than Among Troops in First Great War

London, (CP) —Incidence of nervous disorders in civilians in this war is lower than in front line troops in the First Great War, says the Lancet, medical journal.

In an editorial headed "Total War and the Individual", the Lancet says "faced by danger of death, maimings and material destruction of a kind new to humanity, we have agreeably suprised ourselves by accepting it calmly and with a low incidence of the kind of nervous trouble that was so manifest in all the armies engaged in the First German War".

There are individual examples, it continues, of nervous people who "found themselves" under the stress of war and have shown endurance and courage.

Emotional solidarity is brought about because everyone is in the front line. "Buckingham Palace and an East End tenement share the same fate and a spontaneous emotional solidarity is the result of a 'total' war against a people already united by the live-and-let-live sentiment that underlies democratic government in normal times".

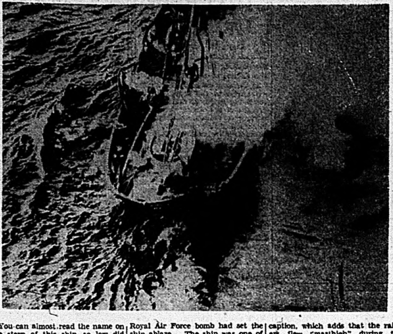
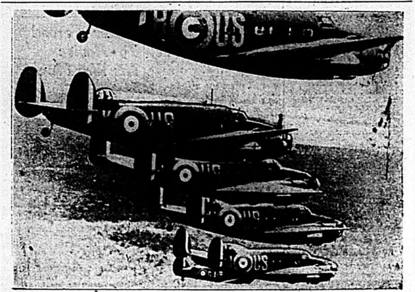
NAZI VICTIM OF R.A.F. RAID ON HELIGOLAND BIGHT



You can almost read the name on the stern of this ship, so low did the British plane fly to make the picture in Heligoland Bight after a Royal Air Force bomb had set the ship ablaze. The ship was one of the convoy of six attacked in the Bight, according to the British caption, which adds that the raiders flew "masthigh" during the attack.



The Australian Air Force has the situation well in hand in Malaya, according to most recent announcements on preparations for trouble in the Far East. Flying American-built Lockheed Hudsons and Australian-built Wirraways, a squadron of the R.A.A.F. is shown winging over Singapore. The great British base at the crossroads of the world has been enormously reinforced since Japan began making threatening gestures.

Controller's Statement On Delivery Reduction

Toronto, Aug. 12—Federal Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle's statement urging merchants and others to reduce delivery services to one delivery a day and purchasers to carry parcels whenever possible or make arrangements to aid in reduction of deliveries is as follows:

The time has come when Canadian citizens must forego many services such as the delivery of merchandise of any and all kinds and in all sizes and packages. Already the dairy operators have notified the public of the elimination entirely of special delivery of dairy products.

The larger departmental stores have requested the public not to ask for special deliveries and to refrain from asking for pick-up service. My point of appeal to the public is this: Please carry your parcels on every possible occasion. If you cannot carry them, then arrange to have them delivered on the next convenient delivery of the merchant. The reduction in the number of deliveries by merchants in all lines of business will be a tremendous help in conserving gasoline. You will not be much inconvenienced and you will be doing your part to help win the war.

I am asking, too, in this press release, merchants in all lines of business throughout Canada, to immediately organize to reduce delivery services to one per day. I trust that all merchants will cooperate and that no one will try to take advantage of the other, and that all will do so early in August and avoid the necessity of regulations in this matter.

I ask neighborhood merchants to organize so that trucks from different stores in the neighborhood in the same line of business will not be on the same street at the same time. This can be done through pooling deliveries with fairness to all and only slight inconvenience, if any.

I ask the co-operation of suppliers and customers to eliminate entirely bulk and wholesale deliveries on Saturdays.

I ask the publishing companies with fleets of trucks distributing their newspapers and others with light liveries to immediately reorganize their delivery service and cut it to the minimum (at least 50 per cent). I am sure this can be done with but slight inconvenience to the public.

I am sure the Canadian public, realizing the necessity of our being able to supply adequate quantities of gasoline and oil to our fighting forces, will cheerfully sacrifice conveniences and services which we have until now enjoyed so that the battle to defeat Hitlerism and to preserve democracy will be won.

'Flying Squadrons' Are Attached To Local Units

A new service, keeping abreast with the speeding up of Canada's mechanized army units was introduced into the ranks of the 2nd Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Battalion over the week end when a "flying squadron" of equipped men mounted on motorcycles made their initial appearance with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The new "flying squadron" first seen with the H. and P. E. on Sunday will also operate in conjunction with the Argyll Light Infantry, Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, who is recruiting the squadron, revealed today. Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble, in charge of the Argyll Light Infantry, is collaborating with Col. Donnan on the new mechanized companies for their units.

On Sunday six experienced drivers joined the new "flying squadron" units, all being local young men now in possession of their personally owned motorcycles. Those to report to Col. Donnan at the Hastings and Prince Edward Headquarters in Trenton were Gordon Davies, M. Burkholder, Clarence Cook, Robert Boyce, W. E. Tufts and Henry Wallbridge, all members of the old Quinte Motorcycle Club with headquarters in Belleville.

"We intend to enlist twenty experienced drivers and 20 spares, who also must be experienced motor-also must be experienced motorcycle drivers, who can exchange riding positions with the regular drivers. At present we are only enlisting men, who are already in possession of their own motorcycles, explained Lieut.-Col. Donnan after the initial appearance of the "flying squadron" with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment while on manoeuvres over the week end. Applicants into the "flying squadron" will be received at either the Belleville or Trenton Armouries.

MILLION MEN COULD BE CALLED SAYS COL. DREW

'Proper Selective System' for Manpower Would Not Reduce Industrial Efficiency

BRITISH PARTNERSHIP

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 12 — (CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario opposition leader, states that if Canada's manpower were mobilized under a "proper selective system," there could be 1,000,000 called to the colors without reducing the Dominion's industrial efficiency.

Addressing the Ontario Command, Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League contention, Col. Drew claimed that if Canada maintained armed forces on the same per capital basis as Great Britain, there would be more than 1,300,000 men in uniform. Col. Drew is a delegate to the convention.

Declaring that most of Canada's training today is "training suitable for the last war," Col. Drew stressed and need for intense training in modern warfare. The Dominion should be training parachute, airborne and armored troops. "It would not do us much good if we trained 2,000,000 men unless those men were trained for a type of fighting that would make them superior to the German armed forces either in Europe or in the defence of our own shores," he said.

Co-operation

One lesson of supreme importance learned from the first Great War was co-operation, he said. All Canadians, including men of the forces, must feel the same sense of responsibility and show the same spirit of co-operation. While holding that justice, fair play and decent wages are the right of every worker in industry, he stressed that in the event of disputes, they must be settled without stoppage of work on war supplies.

"It is nonsense to talk of all-out effort if small groups of men are free to decide that the supply of our military requirements will be stopped.

Political Co-operation Effort in U. K.

People of the British Isles are working out the greatest demonstration of practical co-operative effort the world has ever seen in a democratic country, he said.

"Under the inspired leadership of Winston Churchill democracy is really working in the British Isles in the waging of the war and in bringing the people together in one mighty team....no other democracy has yet been so successful in dealing with labor problems to the complete satisfaction of the whole nation."

True Fellowship Needed

He urged that "those who hope for the survival of democracy can do no better than to study what is happening in the British Isles and to apply the lessons to their own problems. We need that same spirit of true fellowship in Canada today...."

If democracy is to be preserved after the war, it will only be preserved by the conviction of the people that it is the best system of governing. "And if there is one place in the world where that conviction is growing day by day, it study every detail of their great experiment so that when this war is over we may join in a new and stronger British partnership in which the fellowship and co-operative spirit born in the midst of this struggle may be preserved and strengthened in the years to come."

Scot Said "No" And He Meant it

Given Month in Jail For Refusing To Make Return on Canadian Stocks.

Edinburgh, (CP)—This is the story of a stubborn Scot who said no and meant it even though it cost him a month in jail.

Murdo Mackenzie, 55, of Cawdor, Nairn, appeared in court for not making a return to the Bank of England of £1,900 ($8,550) in Canadian securities.

Mackenzie said he had told the treasury all about the securities.

H. D. Barry, the public prosecutor, agreed. But he added the trouble was that the immovable Scot refused to fill up the form or registry of the securities with the Bank of England. The law required completion of this form.

The prosecutor added Mackenzie had declared he had made all his money in Canada and was so loyal to Canada he would not transfer any securities from the Dominion.

They sent him summons to attend court. He said he wouldn't go. So he was arrested and brought from Cawdor to face the court.

Sir Kynaston Studd, the presiding magistrate, invited the recalcitrant Scot to make the return in court—and have himself a lot of trouble.

Said Mackenzie briefly: 'I will not."

He was told he could be fined £5,700 ($25,600) and sent to prison. Still he refused. He was told he was not asked to give up his money, only to sign a form listing his securities. Again he refused.

He was handed the form and given a last chance to sign it.

He refused, shouting defiance at the court and all other authority and at that he was sentenced to a month's imprisonment.

Navy Minister Seeks Technicians In Great Britain

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 12 (CP Cable) — Navy minister Angus Macdonald is seeking the release of a number of British technicians to aid the Canadian destroyer building program.

The visiting Canadian Minister told a press conference that "we propose building destroyers in Canada, but will need some assistance from this country in the matter of skilled supervisors."

He said he had explored the problem of obtaining them in correspondence with the Admiralty and now plans conversations. He has already met A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty for a general talk but has not broached the question of technicians.

Flanked by Rear-Admiral Percy Nelles, Chief of Naval Staff, and Capt. F. L. Houghton, Director of Plans, who accompanied their chief to Britain, the Minister received the press in the sitting room of his west end hotel suite.

Mr. Macdonald said that "since the beginning of the war our navy has been working closely with the British and we have come to London to see the First Lord and other officers and discuss co-operation between the two navies."

Canada's merchant shipbuilding program should result in 100 ships —about 1,000,000 tons—taking the water in 1942, he said.

Corvette construction is averaging about eight monthly and "we have reached the point where we will have enough very shortly."

The convoy which escorted the Canadian 3rd division had an equal number of Canadian and British destroyers when it left Canada, he said.

Questioned about Canadian naval action in the event of a flare-up in the Pacific, Mr. Macdonald said it is the navy's duty to defend Canada "wherever that duty may take it." if there is trouble in the Pacific, he added, "we will dispose our navy to the best advantage."

Modern Features In Latest Bible

New Edition of Scriptures Contains War Pictures, Headlines and Footnotes

London, (CP)—Pictures of marching troops, of airmen fighting in this war, and of modern military weapons, and machinery are among illustrations in a new edition of the Bible, published July 10.

Specially prepared for the man-in-the-street, the Bible contains the full text of the authorized version but the editor, John Stirling, printed it in paragraphs and added introductory remarks, headlines and footnotes of his own.

"I have called it 'the Bible for today', and it is really the result of a life's work", Stirling said. "Even as a boy, I believed that the Bible was the people's book and that there must be a way of approach to it that the common man could easily follow.

"The idea for the method I adopted first came to me during the last war when I was serving as a Methodist chaplain in Palestine. There I saw an English wayside flower growing in a cleft of the wall by the main entrance to Jerusalem, which brought the whole English landscape to my mind.

"Then I became impressed by a number of things which were common to both the Holy Land and my native homeland, and reading my Bible after that I found myself concentrating, not on things peculiar to Palestine, but on things common to every land and every age.

"The present war had to come into my edition because war is in the Bible picture, and I am anxious to get a message over for today. The British people stand for what is the Bible outlook, and Nazism is condemned by the Bible".

OLD LONDON THE SEAT OF ALLIED GOVERNMENTS

The Patriotic League of Alsace-Lorraine is established in London to work under the banner of General de Gaulle for the good name and redemption of France.

This is the sight which must sicken the Germans—to see nation after nation which Hitler has overrun, setting up governments in exile in Britain.

Germany has never had that experience. The only neighbors that came to her came in fear for they knew Germany would gobble them up as she used her war machine. No nation trusts the Hun.

Those who go to Germany go as enemies and so it will continue until Nazism and Hitlerism are flushed away.

How proud London should be and is to be the mother of liberty and the kindly foster mother for the return of liberty to her Allies.

The men that will go to Germany will be the foes of the Huns. These British and the Allies will march this time for good and will assure humanity that he who started this last war will never be permitted to start another war, nor any of his followers, Goering, Goebbel or Himmler.

DISTASTEFUL TO THE HUNS

The German communiques do not relish having to mention in their daily reports the visit of Russian aviators over their capital, Berlin. They assiduously report German attempts on Moscow, colored of course with the Nazi tinge of fabrication of the details but even yesterday Berlin told of planes flying from the northeast to Germany but the Germans do not say that they belonged to the Russians.

There is a good reason for this—Hitlerized folk in that country do not like air raids. Goering once told them a fairy tale—the capital could never be bombarded. Like fools they believed him and they know he was a poor forecaster.

What a credulous folk they were to believe that the British people whom they envy would not be able to send airmen over Berlin!

Now these Germans are "getting it" from the West and from the East, British and Russians in the main and of course also from Allied fliers, among them the Poles whom Hitler has tried to degrade. Poles, Czechs, Dutch, Belgians and Norwegians besides the British and Imperial airmen, they come to Berlin. It is a world of races of airmen who have one goal, to use the increasing allied power in the air to break to pieces German military objectives.

Berliners were those very folk who could without a qualm of conscience or a sign of sorrow hear of Goering's men dropping bombs on the homes of rich and poor in London, on the churches and shrines of British civilization in London, but when a German city is being attacked for its war targets what a difference to the Huns!

If Hitler's Berlin people have any doubts they should dismiss them now. Berlin is going to be a much-visited place from now until the end of the war. So will other cities in Germany. It may not be pleasant for the people of the German capital to have airmen coming from the East and West, but what will they do?

ENEMY LOSSES

The Reich which has always tried to infuse into the Germans the thought that they are a super-race, must be worried just now when the super-Germans have not been doing so well. The army it depends upon has lost much of the blitz it had as far as getting results for the Russians have shown to the world that Russia has been underestimated by the Germans. Hitler in his blindness made a grave error. Now after seven weeks of war he can look over his lessened army, cut down one million men by the work of the Russian defenders of their country. These Germans that are left and those who have been casualties in the blitzkrieg are the very Germans whom the Nazi leader so exalted.

Calm estimates by an AP writer put the total losses of the Germans at over a million men so far. No matter how great Hitler's armies, those casualties mean much in morale of army and people and in hospitalization of wounded, a big task.

THE BENDED KNEE

In estimating the difficulties of President Roosevelt in his attempt to guide a many-sided democracy, remarks the Vancouver Province, consider this item from the Chicago Tribune:—

"A photographic reproduction on page 5 of the picture section of this morning's Tribune tells a story, the importance of which can hardly be exaggerated. The photograph shows Crown Princess Juliana of The Netherlands bending the knee in greeting to Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt is obviously enjoying the experience. Evidently those in the White House take great satisfaction in having a deferential royalty around for hardly a week goes by without a visit from one or another of the crowned heads. This is one reason, and in our judgment a most important one, for the determination of the White House to put the United States in the war. The Roosevelts like to associate with royalty."

Reading such incredible nonsense in a newspaper which calls itself, in cold type, the greatest in the world, you understand better what the President is up against in preparing his nation to defend itself. Nothing is too rotten, and nothing too childish, to be used against him by his enemies. But they are getting short of arguments when they have to depend on a curtsey by Princess Juliana."

THE CALL

Not for the few today
Clear comes the call,
But near or far away
For one and all.

Rich, poor, the great, the low,
What road they fare,
Or to what church they go,
What form the prayer.

Nothing now matters more.
Dark lie the years before
Should we refuse.

"Land of the Free," the song
Sing as we go.
All, all one mighty throng
Keeping it so!

Bright flag of stripe and star;
Long may it wave!
Time now to prove we are

Broadcasting and Recording The Sounds of the Heart

As students we listened with the stethoscope to the sounds of the heart—the length of the beats, the strength of the beats, whether a murmur or murmurs were present and whether these murmurs came before or after each of the two beats, and where on the chest wall the murmurs were best heard. We also tapped the chest with our fingers and outlined on the chest the flat sound showing the position of the heart beneath, and where the hollow sound of the lungs began.

What should prove of great help to medical students who have to study each case in groups, thus tiring out the patient, is an apparatus invented by Dr. Arthur L. Smith, Lincoln, Nebraska. It is a phonographic method of recording and so preserving the sounds of the heart. Dr. Smith has had the instrument in constant use in his office for some time to enlarge heart sounds, diagnose various changes in the heart valves, disturbances of rhythm, and to recognize gallops, split and reduplicated heart sounds. Heart sounds, murmurs, and disturbances of rhythm have been recorded and used for comparison with the condition of the patient in various later periods. These records can be reproduced on any phonograph.

While this instrument will be of help to physicians and teachers, it should be particularly helpful to students "because the student can be supplied with heart records (with proper descriptions thereon) and in the privacy of his own room, without interference of teacher or patient, he can listen to the heart sounds until he is entirely familiar with them, not from any description of heart sounds, but from the evidence of his own ears.

"When the student becomes familiar with the recorded heart sounds and next with the heart sounds broadcast from the patient, he is really prepared to listen to the heart from which these sounds come".

This is certainly an improvement over former days when the students hurried their examination of the patient to prevent overtiring him, and took the teacher's word for what the sounds were like, rather than what he thought he heard himself.

This broadcasting machine can, during a surgical operation, keep the anaesthetist, surgeon and students aware of the exact condition of the heart.

SENATE STRAW BOSS

Carter Glass, 83-year-old senior senator from Virginia, was recently elected President pro tempore of the U.S. Senate to succeed the late Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi. He is the 73rd man to be elected to that office.

The chief function of the President pro tempore (usually shortened to "President pro tem.") is to preside over the senate when the vice-president of the United States is absent or when there is no vice president.

In actual practice the vice president, the president pro tem or an ordinary senator is presiding, he is addressed by the other senators as "Mr. President."

When the vice president of the United States dies, resigns or becomes president, the president pro tem of the senate does not become vice president, although he succeeds that officer as the regular instead of the temporary presiding officer of the senate.

The constitution and federal statutes make no provision for filling a vacancy in the vice presidency.

On August 16, 1856 an act was approved providing "that the president of the senate pro tempore, when there shall be no vice president or the vice president shall have become President of the United States, shall receive the compensation provided by law for the vice president."

When there is a vice president the president pro tem of the senate receives the same salary as any other senator.

The vice president may vote only in case of a tie, but the president pro tempore gives up none of his prerogatives as a senator and may vote on all questions submitted.

He may vote even when presiding and putting the question himself if he so chooses.

When the vice president and the president pro tem are both absent and they have not designated another to act as presiding officer, the senate must be called to order by its secretary.

Senator David R. Atchison of Missouri was elected president pro tem of the senate 17 different times.

During the sixty-second Congress senators served as president pro (1911 to 1913), six different tem.

Hitler Forced To Revise His War Plans

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Aug. 12. (AP)—Despite new Nazi inroads on the Leningrad front and in the Ukraine, there are increasing indications that Hitler has been compelled by the fury of Russian resistance to revise his whole war plan.

His hopes of smashing the Red Army before winter or of breaking Russia's will to continue the battle have waned. If observers in the United States and in London read the signs aright, he is now racing against time to grip the Ukraine solidly, to seize strategic ground in the north midway between the Leningrad and Moscow fronts, and then dig in for the winter.

That, at least, is the construction that can be put on both Berlin and London comments on the battle. It implies that the main German attack toward Moscow via Smolensk has come more or less to a halt. The Russian stand there, according to an eyewitness report from captured and devastated Smolensk, still is balking Nazi hopes of a quick and decisive victory. The rumble of guns eastward of Smolensk was audible to a writer for The Associated Press, first foreign war correspondent permitted to visit the city that was.

Ukraine New Objective

Berlin predicts that the whole great southern bend of the Dnieper south of Kiev to the Black Sea will soon be in Nazi hands. This prediction may or may not be premature. There can be little doubt, however, that the Germans' failure to break through toward Moscow on a wide front has forced a revision in Nazi war plans. The Ukraine, clear to the Dnieper line, has become the prime objective of the Nazis.

Even under the Stalin "scorched earth" policy the Ukraine offers probable subsistence for huge German armies without the enormous strain of transportation involved in winter hauling from Germany or the Balkans. London expresses fear that both Odessa and Nikolaev, eight miles northeast of the great Russian Black Sea port and at the mouth of the Bug River, are about to be cut off. That would mean that the Germans would have good sea transport facilities from Bulgarian and Rumanian ports to sustain the right flank of their line.

The London comment said progress had been made by two Nazi columns, one from the north and one from the west, pressing toward Odessa and Nikolaev. Presumably the force which last week reached Uman, south of Kiev and midway between that city and Odessa, is the column moving down from the north. There has been no intimation that another Nazi spearhead, at Bel Tserkov within fifty miles of Kiev, has made substantial new progress.

Preparing For Winter

The column striking eastward close to the Black Sea and reported to be threatening Nikolaev as well as Odessa, has not been previously mentioned. Presumably it crossed the Dniester close to the Black Sea coast and is striking toward Nikolaev beyond Odessa to avoid the innumerable deep waterways thrusting far inland at every stream mouth.

Another new Nazi stab is in the north. It is reported reaching Soltsi, west of Lake Ilmen and about 120 miles south of Leningrad. Soltsi appears to be an important rail junction. A narrow gauge line runs from there direct to Leningrad. The main rail system, including both a narrow gauge and a double track broad gauge route, skirts Lake Ilmen on the north, however, to reach the main Leningrad-Moscow connection about eighty miles northeast at Chadrovo, some sixty miles southeast of Leningrad.

The Soltsi advance is far more of a threat to Leningrad than the Nazi spearhead in the Kholm region on the Lovat River south of Lake Ilmen. Yet at Kholm the German air force would have high ground bases available to hammer at both Leningrad and Moscow through the winter. It could blast at the many important rail junctions even east of the Volga. That is a further indication that Hitler is preparing for a war winter in the east.

Climbing Mount Hayes

It is comforting to note that in a war-torn world daring souls still climb hitherto unscaled mountains, just for the fun of it and to prove that it can be done. Bradford Washburn's dispatch from Fairbanks narrating how, with four companions, he ascended Mount Hayes, the 13,740-foot virgin peak which tops all others in the Alaskan interior, carries us back to a happier day when such feats were Page One sensations uncontaminated by adjacent news of battle and slaughter, diplomatic duplicity and threats to our security. There are however, other virgin peaks still unsurmounted, so we can only hope that such a time will come again.

The accomplishment stirs the imagination even amid the present succession of dreadful happenings elsewhere. "A solid sea of great stormy clouds" rolled past and below the climbers clinging to the lonely peak that rose above the murk like an icy island in a fog. The temperature was 12 degrees, against 69 on the level they had left, and a gale from the northwest blew around them. Great frost feathers, knife-edged ice blocks and pinnacles beautiful beyond description surrounded them during the climb from the 12,000-foot shoulder of the mountain to the summit 1,700 feet above. On each side of the ridge were 7,000-foot cliffs.

Evidently the ascent was worth the three weeks of preparation it cost. The photographs Mr. Washburn is bringing back will thrill the stay-at-homes. But some of us regret that Mr. Washburn calls his defeat of Mount Hayes a "Blitzkrieg". When we go mountain-climbing by proxy we wish to forget all that is implied in that detestable term.—New York Times.

Striking Employees To Return Monday

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP) — Striking employees of Dumarts Ltd. who were slated to return to work yesterday but didn't, definitely will go back to their jobs next Monday, according to Mayor Joseph Meinzinger. The strike has been in progress since the start of the month.

Mayor Meinzinger made the announcement last night and said a hitch developed in the agreement reached last Thursday causing the strike to be prolonged. The hitch revolved around interpretation of the agreement and concerned the re-hiring of President Arnold Brunzlow and members of Dumarts Local of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

U.S. Defence Program A Crime Preventive

Denver, Aug. 12 (AP)—James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, believes the United States defence programme is a crime preventive. "There has been a considerable dropping off in crimes motivated by economic urges and craving for narcotics since expanding defence industries have resulted in increased employment," he said.

EXECUTIVE DIES

Calgary, Aug. 12 (CP)—Roy D. Morrison, 48, Canadian Packing House Executive, died of pneumonia here late last night. He was president of Dumarts Ltd., packers of Kitchener, Ont., and Vice-President of P. Burns and Company Ltd.

Mr. Morrison, a resident of Calgary since April, when he was appointed Vice - President of Burns and Company Ltd., had been in the packing business for 29 years.

Two Mighty Ships: 'Ark Royal' and 'Renown'

By ARTHUR D. DIVINE

Gibraltar Correspondent of the Sheffield Telegraph and Independent

The part played by the Ark Royal in the destruction of the Bismarck can have brought no greater joy anywhere than among the crews of the ships with which she has worked in the great task of holding the Western Mediterranean.

She has the reputation of a "lucky ship." For that the astonishing numbers of her "sinkings" is responsible, but she has not had outstanding luck in her own operations. Her achievements have come through hard work and desperate keeness, and time and again she has been cheated of due rewards through failures of weather, through the luck of the light, through the hard necessity of other responsibilities.

For that reason there is a poetic justice in the fact that her planes held the Bismarck. It was her fourth attempt against Atlantic raiders. It met with a major success.

She came first to public notice in this war, of course, by her "sinking" in the North Sea. Between every task she has undertaken, between every blow she has dealt the enemy, she has been "sunk" again. The more recent was just before the Bismarck affair, when she was sunk by "three torpedoes" from Italian planes.

• • •

Two of these "sinkings" I have seen myself, watching the Ark Royal, under a heaven starred with the monstrous planets of the bursting shells, vanish from sight behind the still more monstrous splashes of the bombs. And watching, I have seen her storm from behind them, her guns blazing, her bow alive and angry, her ensign splendid. After the Battle of Sardinia, even we in the destroyers thought her gone, and held our breath until she swept into sight again.

For nine months she has been a thorn in the flesh of Mussolini. Before that she did fine work against the German sea power, but even this damage is not a full measure of the achievement of the Ark Royal, and of the gallantry and the determination of the men who man her.

The Ark Royal was the first of our modern aircraft carriers. She was designed — experimentally — for three major purposes: Reconnaissance duties with the Fleet, against ship-borne aircraft, and "sweeping" for surface raiders or for submarines. All three duties she carried out with considerable success during the first phase of the war.

There were three things which she was never intended to do. The first was to operate in waters dominated by shore based aircraft; the second was to attack strongly defended shore positions; and the third was to defend the Fleet against short-range shore-based dive-bombers. All these three duties also she has carried out not merely with success, but with magnificence.

She was not built, as her later sisters have been built, with tremendously heavy protection against bombs, nor with modern bombers to attack shore bases.

Nor was she given fighters capable of dealing with fast, modern bombers.

The Western Mediterranean is a narrow sea. The Ark Royal has operated in its waters, sweep after sweep has been made almost within hailing distance of the Italian coast, and she has done these things, not because she had the qualitative superiority on which we pride ourselves, but because with the material at hand, the superb courage and endurance of our Fleet Air Arm pilots has caused miracles to be wrought.

• • •

Then there is the "Mighty Renown," as Mr. Churchill called her.

There is a singular fitness in the adjective. No one who has seen her smashing her way through a head-on gale in the Atlantic, or roaring into action with her guns uplifted in the salute of battle, will take one shade from Mr. Churchill's choice of words.

Her record, too, is mighty.

No big ship throughout the war has covered so much ground, been so continuously at sea, and found so much action.

The North Sea, the edge of the Arctic, both the Atlantics, the Indian Ocean have all seen the wide furrow of her wake. She has fuelled in Cape Town and in Rio de Janeiro, worked off Iceland and Greenland, and for nearly a year she has held—with Ark Royal—the Western Mediterranean against all that the Italian Navy has dared to do.

I watched that holding from the destroyers, watched her going into battle, watched her chasing the flying Italians, watched her off Genoa.

She began the war with a part in the long Fleet sweeps that were designed to prevent German raiders breaking out into the Atlantics. When the Graf Spee broke through she went, with Ark Royal, south on the long hunt that was to take her to the end of Africa. She was close to her, over against the South American coast when the Graf Spee was vanquished.

She went north again. Off the Lofoten islands, she fell in with Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, Germany's two modern battle cruisers. The weather was appalling, high seas, low visibility, all the brutality of the first Spring weather north of the Arctic Circle.

• • •

Scharnhorst's crew captured on a in the action, then both ships turned away, Renown held on to the pursuit until they escaped in the vile weather. A year later she was to learn from members of the Scharnhorst's cerw captured on a German prize in the Atlantic, how devastating the effects of her own fire had been on the Germans.

She was sent South to Gibraltar, and hoisted the flag of Vice-Admiral Somerville as flagship of the Western Mediterranean force.

It was out of convoy duties that the second Fleet action of the war developed off the southern coast of Sardinia. I watched that action from a point between Renown and the enemy, the sound of her shells passing almost above us made a roar like that of a tube train in an empty station, outmatching the whine of the Italian salvos as they fell in the sea about the cruisers, or lifted great fountains on our beam.

I watched, too, in the three air attacks that followed that action, the pattern of Renown's anti-aircraft shells against the sky. The Italians at least had a heavy respect for her batteries of twin 4.7's. I do not remember in any one of many attacks seeing Renown ever seriously threatened by an Italian bomb.

The bombardment of Genoa was in many ways Renown's greatest day. That dawn approach that perfect navigation, was matched and bettered by some of the best gunnery that this war has seen. Genoa's battered waterfront, Ansaldo's ruined works, bore witness to the mightiness of that grey ship slipping along the horizon in the dawn.

In between the Mediterranean operations Renown has made fresh dashes into the Atlantic. One of the most dramatic was one day when at the very hour of dinner she raced out of Gibraltar to the rescue of a convoy attacked in the dawn by the first of the Hipper class cruisers to come to the South.

It was Renown and Ark Royal that harried the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau into Brest, and air action that followed kept them there. Again it was the Gibraltar force that had the honor of stopping the Bismarck in her long career. Renown and Ark Royal were waiting, and the end was made certain.

Hit Battleship Pilot Decorated

Saskatchewan Youth Navigated Plane in Flight Off Norway

London,— (CP)— Flt.-Sgt. Raymond, the pilot who torpedoed a German pocket battleship off Norway June 12, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal. The battleship was last seen limping toward home at reduced speed.

The Beaufort plane, carrying a crew of five, including Sgt. A. H. A. Morris, 21-year-old Nokomis, Sask., navigator, dropped from a cloud and surprised the battleship, either the Luetzow or Admiral Scheer, and five destroyers.

"A destroyer was right in my way and I had to skid around its stern to get a suitable angle to drop the torpedo", the pilot said in describing the attack. "As the torpedo struck, the rear gunner and wireless operator shouted together 'you've hit it. There's a great column of water and smoke going up'."

Wrapping Paper Regulations Issued

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (CP)—Action taken by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board last week to ban multi-colored and double bread wrappers and sale of sliced bread, effective Monday, was supplemented today by an order restricting the extent of the imprinting and the weight and quality of the wrapping paper.

Henceforth, the board ordered, the highest quality paper permitted for bread wrappers is either unfilled white sulphite or a brown kraft of standard shade or shades. This paper is not to weigh more than 20 pounds, dry weight, 24 inches by 36 inches basis for the 480-sheet ream, and not more than 32 pounds on the same basis when waxed. The paper must not be treated in any way for opacity.

Printing on bread wrappers must be in a single color, in standard type design, and must not cover more than 25 per cent of the surface.

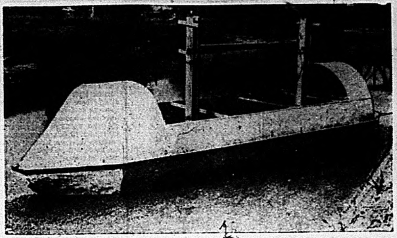
While these regulations are effective today, bakers are authorized to use stocks of wrappers on hand or those now in process of being printed. Stocks of filled white sulphite paper in possession of the bread wrapper manufacturers, or ready for delivery to these firms by paper manufacturers on orders placed prior to Aug. 8, may also be utilized.

Plates currently used for imprinting wrappers which do not involve printing in more than one color and the imprint of which does not exceed 25 per cent of the surface coverage are also permitted under the new order even though they may not be designed in standard type.

BAGGED FOUR LIONS

N'Dola, Rhodesia (CP)—The Royal Air Force isn't doing all the bagging. Motoring at night near the Congo border two business men were confronted by six lions and shot four of them.

THE "FREAK OF THE CREEK"



"Hitler is a dead dodo if a ship built like this works as well as the models," declared A. J. Haskins whose 22-ton concrete and steel "squid" floats like a ship, in Kansas city's Blue River. The "Squid" will be powered by two 250-horsepower Diesel engines which will pump water in at the front and expel it at the rear to give locomotion. Haskins expects 2,000-ton models to do 50 knots per hour and to prove invaluable as blockade runners.

We don't know if they have employed these tactics in the current war, but Red Army soldiers of a reconnaissance squad are shown here crossing a river during manoeuvres. Each man is equipped with a buoyant lifejacket and two small paddles, something like ping-pong paddles, to supply the motive power.

Moulded Plywood Products Can Be Used in Many Capacities

E. L. Udell of Bristol Aircraft Corporation is Speaker at Rotary Luncheon

NOT A PLASTIC

"The manufacturing of aeroplane fuselages is just one of the many uses for moulded plywood products", stated Mr. E. L. Udell, construction engineer for the Bristol Aircraft Corporation of Bristol, Virginia, as he briefly outlined the manufacturing process of moulded plywood plastics, during the regular weekly luncheon hour of The Belleville Rotary Club at the Quinte Hotel on Monday.

At present stationed in Belleville in connection with the opening of a branch factory of the parent plant in the city, Mr. Udell stated that the possibilities of this new manufacturing material were unlimited and outside of the government contrast, which the company has to build plastic fuselages, the product will have vast peace-time uses. "Moulded plywood products are definitely not just a war-time baby", he said, "and the building of boats, and bathtubs which has been successfully accomplished, furnishes an idea of the products unlimited possibilities.

Clearing up a misunderstanding which he said has existed locally, Mr. Udell stated the product which is to be manufactured in Belleville by the Bristol Aircraft Products Limited, was definitely not plywood and was not a plastic, but was a moulded plywood with a strength per pound weight far exceeding that of steel.

In the process of manufacture veneers of wood ranging in thickness from one-sixteenth of an inch to one-forty-fifth of an inch were coated by special plastic and with the grains of the wood running in opposite direction to provide transverse strength, were placed in moulds conforming to the shape of the manufactured product. Water superheated to 230 degrees temperature is then forced into the moulds with the high temperature and air pressure solidifying the material to the proper shape. A pressure of 75 pounds per square inch was then left on for a period of approximately one and a half hours after which the article was taken out and placed on production lines where the product received finishing operations.

Parent Company In Virginia

The parent company at Bristol, Virginia, were at present engaged in the manufacture of bomber noses for Avro Anson bombers from the new moulded plastic material it was disclosed. Owing to the difficulty of securing for the Belleville plant the special moulding equipment necessary for one of the initial operations in the manufacture of the new material, the first operations when the local factory goes into production will be the finishing of semi-finished parts, shipped in from the Virginian plant.

Also present at the luncheon was Mr. E. Wiskin, who will be the local representative of the Bristol Aircraft Products Limited and who will be the manager of the local plant. Other guests included several American Rotarians who were introduced by Mr. H. W. Ackerman. The Rotary welcome was cordially extended to the American visitors by the singing of 'Old Virginia', while a patriotic touch was added by Jack Deacon who in his silvery tenor voice favoured with "Rule Britannia".

Immediate Past President Percy McGuire was missed from the luncheon, he having enlisted with the R.C.A.F. in an administrative capacity. In the absence of President W. J. Morrison, Director Lloyd Hicks occupied the chair, while Leo Riggs acted as piano accompanist and "Sandy" Burrows as song-leader. Chas. Dolan expressed club appreciation to the guest speaker, and in recognition of the many American guests at the luncheon made special mention of the all-out aid which the United States is giving Britain and her Allies in the present war.

One of First Mounties of West, Sergt Forbes, Dies

Banff, Alta., Aug. 11 (CP)—One of the first mounties in the west, Staff Sergeant Isaac Jameson Forbes, 85, Regina, died in hospital here yesterday. Five days ago he suffered a stroke while on a vacation here.

Forbes was sent to headquarters of the northwest Mounted Police in MacLeod, Alta., in 1876. From this outpost, he was sent to Fort Walsh, then to Maple Creek, Saskatchewan and in 1897 to Regina. He was born in Woodstock, Ont.

German Losses in Russia Probably Exceed Million Men

Battle of Russia Likely to Stand Alone for Total Number of Casualties

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—Seeking to reconcile the conflicting casualty claims of the bloody Russo-German campaign, military authorities put forward these tentative conclusions:

1. In seven weeks of the announced attempt to annihilate the Red army, the German Wehrmacht has sustained losses probably exceeding 1,000,000 men in killed, wounded, prisoners and missing. The Russian losses were believed to be materially greater.

2. German losses thus far are several times greater than the aggregate casualties suffered by the Nazi forces in the previous 23 months of the present conflict. Berlin had acknowledged 218,440 men put out of action prior to the invasion of Russia—a figure which some military men believe too low.

3. Both Russians and German casualties probably have exceeded any losses either nation suffered within a like period of the 1914-18 world war.

4. In point of bloodshed, as well as the number of soldiers engaged continuously and the vast extent of the fighting front, the battle of Russia probably stands alone in history.

The estimate of a million or more German losses was represented as only a careful appraisal of probabilities based on the clashing Berlin and Moscow claims. There was an earlier independent report however that German casualties reached 1,000,000 in the first three weeks of fighting. The campaign is now in its eighth week.

Indications were that, for the time being, official Washington had little more accurate material available than the belligerents' own figures.

One-Wheel Landing Made by Pilot

Newark, N.J., Aug. 12.—(AP) — Test Pilot Carl B. Lansing circled Newark Airport for two hours yesterday with a partly-disabled Brewster fighter plane and, after exhausting the gasoline supply, made a successful one-wheel landing that left him unscratched and the ship only slightly damaged.

Lansing went aloft to put the plane, similar to those being shipped to Great Britain, through its paces for the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, which operates a large factory at the airport.

On the takeoff, the plane's landing gear was broken.

Crowds gathered at the airport when word of his plight became known. An ambulance and fire truck were summoned to stand by in case of a crash.

Another Brewster plane went up, and its pilot relayed instructions for landing to Lansing by means of two-way radio.

On landing, the plane rolled along on one wheel for several hundred feet and then ground-looped. Company officials said the damage was negligible.

Lansing emerged from the plane, unhurt.

Two-Ocean Navy Ready 2 Years Before Schedule

Washington, Aug. 12 AP)— The warship building speed-up, cutting construction time on new men-of-war an average of 12 1 -2 per cent for each vessel, will give the United States its two-ocean fleet two years earlier than originally scheduled, navy sources said.

Barring labor trouble or actual war, the fleet will be "substantially ready" by 1944 to fulfil its intended mission of defending the United States from simultaneous attacks in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, a navy spokesman said. The originally scheduled date was 1946-7.

Some of the 17 battleships authorised, and perhaps certain other large units will be uncompleted, but by 1944 it was estimated that the most powerful fleet the world has ever known will be in readiness for any possible hostile combination.

Double and sometimes triple-shift work in navy yards and private shipbuilding plants, authorization of overtime pay, and new worker-training programs have begun to show results in accelerated deliveries which began to reach a peak in June and July.

In those two months, the navy announced, a warship keel was laid every two days and a ship was launched almost every week. Thirty-eight keels were put down, including the big aircraft carrier cabot, five cruisers, 24 destroyers and eight submarines. In the same period eight warships were launched, including the battleship South Dakota, third of the six new 35,000-tonners to hit the water.

Disobeyed Orders Won George Medal

London, (CP)—Edward Redknapp of Clerkenwell, London, won a George Medal, because he "turned a blind eye" on his orders.

Member of a Holborn A.R.P. rescue squad, he was called one night to a building where people were trapped in a basement shelter. Most of the squad had penetrated to the basement when more bombs fell, killing several other rescue workers. Orders were given for the rest to retire.

But Redknapp knew there were 15 or 16 people still alive, struggling in an inrush of water in the basement. Already the water was four deep.

Collecting ten men he led them back and one by one the trapped people were released. All the time water was pouring in, threatening to bring tons of debris cown on top of them. Above the water flames roared among the wreckage.

Weddings

BURGESS—CARSON

The lawn of the home of the bride's mother overlooking Lake Ontario at Picton was the scene of a pretty garden wedding at three o'clock Saturday afternoon when Miss Edna Margaret Carson, registered nurse, daughter of Mrs. Carson and the late Mr. William Carson, of Picton, Ont., became the bride of Mr. Gerald Taylor Burgess, only son of the late Rev. G. T. and Mrs. Burgess of Ottawa Rev. C. P. Bowen of Prescott, officiated.

Miss Florence Carson, sister of the bride, played the piano softly during the ceremony and later, accompanied by Miss Mildred Carson, sang "At Dawning" and "O Perfect Love".

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Clarence Carson, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white printed organdy over sky blue taffeta, designed on Princess lines, the skirt extending in a graceful train and trimmed with tiny ruffles of the same material. She carried a Colonial bouquet of yellow roses, forget-me-nots and white sweet peas and wore a yellow rose in her hair.

Mrs. Carson, mother of the bride, was wearing a street-length frock of poudre blue sheer with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Following a reception the couple left on a motor trip through Western Ontario, the bride travelling in an aquamarine gabardine two-piece suit with matching calot and black gabardine accessories. Her corsage bouquet was of Talisman roses. They will reside on Mayfair avenue, Ottawa

Five-Minute Face Clean-Up

Bess Johnson, radio star, applies a mild astringent to remove cleansing oil.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT HAPPENS often enough that one has to make oneself a new face in a hurry. A car pulls up at the door, jolly voices sing out "come along; we're going to have fun." Maybe you've just dragged home from a shopping pilgrimage, dusty and tired. Well, you can't tag out again with a dirty face, can you? Here's a five-minute clean-up, make-up treatment that will put you to rights again.

Use an oil or a light cream that can be removed easily. Put dabs of it under the chin, on the chin, cheeks and forehead. Spread it over the facial area, do circles around the eyes. No heavy work; this is just a matter of distribution.

Use your cleansing tissues and give your phiz a thorough wiping up, working along the jaw line to the ears, from chin to temples. Those up sweping movements will impart freshness to the skin.

Pour some witch hazel or your favorite astringent over a pledget of cotton and slap it over the skin surface. It is difficult to remove all the oil and if any remains you are likely to shine.

You are ready now to start batting with the powder pad. Put on the fluff stuff lightly; do not slap it first on the nose. Powder under the chin, tap upward. Nose powdering is usually overdone. Pass the fingers lightly over the flesh to give a smooth surface. If you use compact rouge, apply it and use a tiny bit of powder again for blending. Highlight the eyelids with the rouge pad. Just a faint touch.

A quick brushing of eyebrows and lashes, a touch of coloring on the lips and all is finished. Bye bye! Have fun! Come home early!

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Flame of New Orleans"

"One of the best-balanced pictures Universal ever made" is the way studio executives describe "The Flame of New Orleans," now at the Capitol theatre.

A "best-balanced" picture might not mean too much to picturegoers as a phrase. It is, however, a telling factor in their enjoyment. It means that in this case Universal concentrated on selection of supporting players as well as stars.

Marlene Dietrich, of course, carries the principal glamour interest supported by Bruce Cabot, playing his first major romantic role. But also opposite Miss Dietrich is Roland Young master of light comedy, cast here in the role of a Creole socialite and acquitting himself brilliantly.

Role Is Important

For Miss Dietrich's maid a role that figures importantly in the picture the studio chose pretty mulatto Theresa Harris. She will be remembered by thousands for her comedy-romantic passages with "Rochester" in the Jack Benny pictures.

Such featured comedians as Andy Devine and Mischa Auer, both of whom are accustomed to leading roles, are cast in comedy character positions. Similarly featured are Laura Hope Crews, who has starred in many a character role such as "The Silver Cord," and Melville Cooper, most recently remembered for his superb enactment of the snobbish cousin in "Pride and Prejudice."

Popular Players

Such well-known character actors as Eddie Quillan, Frank Jenks, Anne Revere and Franklin Pangborn help to round out the "best-balanced" cast.

"The Flame of New Orleans" was directed for Universal by Rene Clair, celebrated continental film maker. The picture was produced under the guidance of Joe Pasternak.

The same program includes a colored cartoon, "Stranger Than Fiction," an interesting travelogue, and a short musical comedy with Matty Malneck's orchestra.

AT THE BELLE

"Billy the Kid"

All the natural beauty of the early west, breath-taking in its scenic wonder is at the Belle now closing in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's technicolor production of "Billy the Kid," with Robert Taylor starring in the title role.

Taylor is brilliant in his hard-riding, fast-shooting portrayal of the title role, while Brian Donlevy is a dominant figure as the ranch foreman who turns the tide of Billy's fate. Mary Howard is the girl in the story and Ian Hunter, Gene Lockhart and Lon Cheney, Jr., head an outstanding supporting cast.

The Belle News of the Day, a color fun cartoon and a Pete Smith specialty will also be exhibited.

"The Bride Came C.O.D."

In line with their policy of presenting the pick of screen entertainment, the Belle Theatre management announces that they have scheduled "The Bride Came C.O.D." starting tomorrow. James Cagney and Bette Davis are co-starred in the new Warner Bros. comedy, the romance between an aviator and an heiress, a frothy story sleekly modelled along streamlined laugh lines.

For Cagney and Miss Davis, "The Bride Came C.O.D.," marks their first co-starring effort, and according to all advance reports, the team sets a new record for smooth co-ordination in getting the most out of the clever comedy script.

Featured in the cast besides the two stars, are Stuart Erwin, Jack Carson, Eugene Pallette, George Tobias, Harry Davenport, William Frawley, Edward Brophy, Harry Holman, Herbert Anderson and many others.

"Penny to the Rescue," an excellent Pete Smith specialty in full beautiful technicolor and "Wings of Steel," a multiple-reel screen novelty precede the feature attraction.

GOVERNMENT PROPERTY

All lands acquired for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will remain Canadian government property after the war.

Robert Taylor, Mary Howard and Brian Donlevy—now appearing at the Belle in "Billy the Kid," the spectacular outdoor thriller, filmed in technicolor in the picturesque deserts and mountains of Arizona.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, August 13

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A MODERATELY successful and active day is read from the lunar and mutual configurations. While industry, sound ideas and steady development of them along routine lines should flourish, yet there may be some new, original and worthwhile flashes of an inventive or scientific turn, which may increase their importance and draw the attention of capital or public endorsement. Large corporations or influential groups may be found ready to support but this calls for discretion and precaution, as intrigue, treachery and insincerity menace. Jealousy and competition might incite to underhand manoeuvres from so-called friends.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly successful year through their own brilliant, creative and original ideas, supported by sound tactics, hard work and common sense. These should assure co-operation from certain interests with capital for development. At the same time public bodies, groups or secret organizations may be disposed to manifest jeolousy, rivalry and underhand methods. Keep alert to duplicity, betrayal and entangling alliances in both private and business affairs, and all should thrive and bring enduring rewards.

A child born on this day will have much originality, inventive powers and ambition, backed up by sound methods and traits of character. Its perseverance, industry and worth assure lasting success, although subject to betrayals.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S GOOD that the shops are still showing smart bathing suits. Nice for the young and slim is a bra and sarong type skirt in printed chints, rose and yellow on pale blue.

From where we stand it looks as thought the formal knitted sweater is going to be important again come autumn. Made with a deep sweetheart neckline is a pretty sweater in pale blue in a fine, sheer, silky wool yarn Scattered with rhinestone centred gilt nailheads.

Ideal for dressy afternoon wear and for informal after dark festivities later on is the suit of black silk faille. A new model has jewelled buttons cleverly posed, one at the base of the low neckline and two at the waist to form a triangle. Notched revers and black velvet piped flaps on the pockets.

Entrancing in its youthful appeal is a teen age dance frock in pale pink sheer lawn printed in blue bow-knots. The skirt has three ruffled tiers edged with deeper blue linen.

Extravagant is the word for the fur hats that designers have thought up for next season. A soaring heart-shaped brim of sheared beaver with a crown of knitted gold threaded yarn is made to wear with brown suit beaver trimmed.

Lots of new ideas for next winter's fur coats. Brown plum is the name of a peculiar purplish brown, the shade used to dye ermine for a smart afternoon coat made on tunic lines with front fullness gathered through the waistline. Brown crepe belt drawn through gilt metal slides.

CLUCKING HEN MOTHERS LITTER OF 7 PIGLETS

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 12 (AP)—One of Ira Weatherford's hens, denied accommodations for hatching chickens, is mothering a litter of seven piglets. The clucking Biddy spreads her wings and shoos the porkers from one spot to another. The unprotesting sow sleeps contentedly in the same pen, knowing her offspring will return at mealtime.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Afraid Her Home Will be Wrecked

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Fifteen years ago my husband and I were married. We have two darling girls and a boy, and have always been congenial. Recently someone told me that he has been lunching almost every day with a girl who works in the same office with him. She's seventeen years younger than he is. I'm so afraid my home will be broken up on account of this.

He knows I've heard about it, as I said I was going to see this girl at her home. But now I don't know what to do. Can you help me, please?

Unhappy

Many women have had this cross to bear, and have won out because they've kept their heads. I'm sorry you told your husband you had heard about it, because now he will have nothing to conceal from you.

It's a despicable thing for a young girl with youth and all of life before her to wreck a home where there are young children. Better not go to see her. Just try to keep your head and carry on as if everything were as it should be.

Philandering husbands have their lucid intervals, and realize that, with a siren on one side of the scales and young children in the other, they lose more than they gain, in the long run.

Is it His Pay Envelope She Likes?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What kind of a girl is this with whom I've fallen in love? As Saturday is my payday, it was natural we should make our dates on that day, because then I had money and could take her out. Before long, she started borrowing money from me. At first it was only a dollar or two, but now she borrows as much as ten dollars without paying it back.

I can't afford to give her this money, which I know she gives to her brother to help him out of scrapes; he drinks and has been in trouble several times. Am I responsible for him?

Al K.

It looks to me as if you have acquired a gold-digger. However, it's hard to tell sometimes, and this girl may have such demands at home that she feels she must come to you. I believe in talking things out. Why not ask her what all this borrowing means? If she's working you as a gold-mine, certainly you do not wish to continue the friendship.

Objects to Double-Dating

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I have been going out lately with other couples. He has his own car, and therefore is not really obliged to spend money, except for gas. He enjoys having another couple along, but I would like to say how we should spend our evenings once in a while. Don't you think I'm right?

Sue.

You haven't told me enough to give me an unbiased opinion. Why do you object to these other couples? Is it because you want the boy friend all to yourself, and you find yourself becoming a little jealous of other girls in the party? If you are not engaged, you can't reasonably object to the others.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Assisting a Woman With Her Coat Is a Man's Special Privilege

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should the man help the woman off and on with her coat in a restaurant, or should the waiter do this?

M.

I want to be most emphatic in my answer—a gentleman should himself help the lady to take off her coat and to put it on and should not leave this courteous attention to a waiter.

I am delighted to find that men feel the same way about it that women do. A short while ago my editor asked me to write a special story about manners in restaurants. When I asked him if there were any particular points that he wished emphasized, he said, "Yes, one Mrs. Beeckman. Promise me that you will tell the men not to leave to the waiter the charming courtesy of helping the lady take off and put on her coat".

Before the gentleman takes his seat at table, he stands just behind the chair of the lady, and helps her with her coat. A well-trained waiter will not make any attempt to help, for he understands that it is more a gesture of courtesy than of service. When the meal is finished, the lady should wait to give her host a chance to rise and come to the back of her chair, to hold it while she rises, and to help her with her coat.

Cocktail Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to have a cocktail party in the near future.

1.—Please tell me how to have the invitations engraved. My home is small and the most I can invite is about one hundred people.

2.—Could I state on the invitations that the hours are from "four to seven"?

3.—What shall I serve besides the drinks? I thought of having canapes and small sandwiches.

K.

1.—Your invitations should be informal. Instead of having engraved invitations, I suggest that you write your invitations on your visiting-cards, just as you would a tea invitation. If this is not convenient, I suggest that you buy some invitations especially designed for this type of party. "Informals" (the folded cards) are also appropriate for these invitations.

2.—It is customary to write the hours on these invitations. "Four to seven o'clock" or "Five to seven o'clock" are the hours.

3.—You should, definitely, have alternatives for the cocktails. This is expected of a thoughtful hostess these days. I suggest that you offer both hot and iced tea. Or, if you don't wish to do this, offer a non-alcoholic punch. Or have a large pitcher of ice-cold orange juice or a fruit-ade. Or tomato juice. Serve very small slim sandwiches, perhaps the majority bread-and-butter sandwiches, and perhaps some made of several kinds of breads—white, whole wheat, rye, pumpernickel. Simple canapes, too, if you wish. And such accessories as nuts, thin slivers of carrot, rosebud radishes, hearts of celery, even the so-fashionable small pieces of cauliflower. Serve a container of salt with these.

Medicine in the News

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M.D.

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Health Problems in Our Tropical Outposts

Now that it is possible American soldiers and sailors may be stationed for a time in air bases and Army posts in tropical countries, we are beginning to be more and more concerned with some of the diseases which are frequent in those countries. Most serious of all is malaria. Malaria was and still is the greatest killing disease in the world. Without measures to control malaria no nation can make progress. It is believed that the ancient civilizations of Greece and Rome fell because of that disease.

Since malaria depends on its spread on the mosquito and since the mosquito can develop in stagnant waters, the problem of malaria is tied up intimately with innumerable health problems. It must be remembered that the first great demonstration that malaria and yellow fever, two diseases carried by the mosquito, could be prevented in a tropical area was that made by General Gorgas and J. A. Le Prince in the Panama Canal area in 1904. Strangely, the control of malaria in Panama long preceded the control of the same condition in the United States itself. Indeed, it was not until 1910 that real control was undertaken in our own country.

Second most serious from the point of view of fatality and spread is yellow fever. Yellow fever was thought at first to be limited to the African continent and to South America. However, it spread to the United States.

Fortunately a highly effective vaccine against yellow fever has been discovered. Now United States sailors in the Navy are being inoculated against yellow fever and all soldiers in the Army sent to tropical areas will also be given the benefit of this vaccine.

One of the most important problems in tropical areas is nutrition. No doubt the Army troops will be well supplied with food under sanitary and hygienic conditions. The natives suffer because they must use irrigation to produce better crops and this produces stagnant pools in which mosquitos develop. Unfortunately, also, the natives in many areas still practice primitive forms of disposal of human refuse which serves as a means of disseminating cholera, dysentery, worm diseases and other serious infestations.

Fortunately our sanitary agencies, our public health service and the medical departments of the Army and Navy are fully aware of all of special health problems in the tropics. There is no reason to doubt that our soldiers and sailors will have the very best of scientific protection.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

2 a.m. Phone Call

Despite the threat of Clara, whose jealousy of her sister had become a real phobia and whose greed for attention and for pleasure might turn her into a front page sensation, Marilyn approached her work at Clarco this morning with a light heart and a firm determination. Bruce Gordon had not broken his appointment with her the night before, deliberately. Clara had been up to one of her tricks, bolder than most. She had gained admission to his apartment by telling his man that Bruce had asked her to wait there for him and to make herself at home in case he was delayed. Bruce had found her there, much to his astonishment, when he returned to his quarters to dress for dinner. Clara handed him the note that purported to be from Marilyn—actually she had written it herself—and she was so apologetic about her own intrusion into the party, so flattering in praise of her sister, that Bruce had not questioned her purpose.

He had gone with Clara to the Penquin expecting to meet Marilyn. Finally, as it grew late and she did not arrive, Bruce became suspicious. Clara insisted, "Lynn probably changed her mind, found something better to do." Finally Bruce excused himself and telephoned Lynn's apartment only to find the note was a hoax and Clara's part in it another of her schemes for besting her sister.

At first Clara had refused to leave the Penquin with him on the plea that he had brought her there and now had an idea he could break up her evening. She even threatened a scene. When she saw her threat was futile she agreed to go quietly if Bruce would drop her at the Blue Parrot. Here Clara indulged another of her tantrums. She refused to get out of the taxi. Bruce paid the driver and left her there, in front of the gay nighterie where she was booked to appear in the beauty line of the floor show. He went straight to find Marilyn and to explain what had happened.

"It can never happen again," he said, his gray eyes cold steel. "I'll be waiting for Clara the next time she starts practicing pranks, on you Lynn, or on me. And don't look so downcast. We're here and Clara is probably taking her bows in the Blue Parrot; all's well that ends well."

They parted on that note so when Marilyn received a memo at her desk in the Clarco offices the next morning, she attacked her assignment with a will. Within an hour, her copy was on its way to the first reading. She was making ready to go to lunch with Kathleen, when a boy stopped at her desk with another memo. Two of the three slogans she had sent along that morning had been accepted! She was to see Miss Cook immediately after the lunch hour.

"Two out of three!" Kathleen was jubilant when Marilyn told her the news. "Darling, that's hitting on all cylinders. One out of thirty is mighty good, but two out of three is tremendous! What on earth happened to you? Were you hit over the head by an inspiration?"

"No, I just felt—well—like doing things and going places. I can't tell you why—perhaps it is because I'm not so afraid of my own shadow, or of any shadow that crosses my path. When you go on doing your best in your work, being as kind and as helpful to others as you know how, I guess things can't go wrong for you. People may try to hurt you, but they only succeed in hurting themselves."

"Meaning your sister's contemptible trick to take over Bruce Gordon?"

"Yes. I'm afraid I'll have to give up trying to make sense out of Clara. As Al Martino says, she'll have to make sense for herself and make it the hard way. As long as she practiced her hatefulness on me, I was willing to take it and do what I could to turn it into the trust and the affection sisters should have for one another. But when Clara began striking at me through my friends, cheating them and lying to them, trying to trick them to her will, she made me realize that appeasement is no cure for downright treachery. I'm through following her about, begging her to behave decently. I owe the best of myself to my job, and I've been giving nothing but the husks and the leftovers. From now on Clarco, not Clara, comes first."

"I was wondering how long it would take you to catch up with yourself," Kathleen said with a sigh of relief. "Another few days of that hollow-eyed dazed business you were giving out and Cookie would have taken measures. She's had the binoculars on you plenty. I quaked every time I saw her turn them your way. She know you were harassed mentally and fagged physically, not a very good combination for rising young copy writers. That's why I'm sure the two slogans you used to ring Clarco's bell are honeys. Cookie was all set to give you the gate. Instead, she's giving you orchids. Sure you won't fall back into the doldrums again, come Clara and her cute capers."

"Not a fall," Marilyn promised. "Not even a stumble. Bruce made me see how wrong my tactics have been. I promised him I'd be less sentimental and more practical, for Clara's sake and my own."

"Oh, so you promised Bruce," Kathleen teased. "Then there is hope for you and for your job with Clarco. Look Lynn, this is a special day. It calls for a special treat. I'm treating to chicken patties at Caston's. And a hearts of lettuce salad with Rocquefort dressing. No use 'no-ing' me. I've had my heart—and my appetite—set on 'em for weeks and this is the finest excuse ever for going overboard. Let's hurry so we'll have plenty of time for the patties."

"Chicken patties by Caston's—they do sound yummy." The two girls broke into what amounted to a trot.

Miss Cook went so far as to unbend into a ghost of cordiality when Marilyn reported to her after lunch.

"You did nicely with your slogans this morning, Miss Marsh," she said, her eyes making a penetrating study of her subject. "We may find use for two of them. I was beginning to think we had made a mistake bringing you to Clarco. If you have had trouble adjusting yourself, if there have been outside distractions, put such things behind you. My patience is not everlasting, and it is time you show more than promise. You understand, don't you, Miss Marsh?"

Marilyn met the penetrating study with eyes frank and unafraid. "Yes, Miss Cook. I understand," she said. "You've been very kind, and very patient. I shall try to repay you by doing the best work of which I am capable, by allowing nothing to interfere with that work."

"Very well. The main office will want you to confer with the board about the slogans. They will get in touch with you later. You may return to your desk now, Miss Marsh."

The telephone was ringing as Lynn and Kathleen entered their apartment that evening, footweary and highhearted. They had walked home from the office.

"Catch it," Kathleen called to Lynn, making for the cubbyhole kitchenette. "I'm all tangled up in lamb chops and rye rolls."

Bruce Gordon's voice came over the wire: "Great going, Lynn. You turned in a pair of the best slogans we've had in weeks. We're using both of them in our next promotion project. How about coming out to dinner with me? We'll put on paper caps and ring bells."

"Thanks, Bruce." She wanted to say, "Yes, please, and let's hurry. Let's dance and sing, just you and I, until dawn." But what of her promise to Miss Cook? Rest, sleep, they were all but strangers to her. She said, "I love paper caps and I love ringing bells and I lo—you're a dear, but honestly I'm not up to anything except turning in and resting the clock around. Do you mind?"

"Of course I mind, but I'll let you off this once. Until tomorrow. Sweet dreams, sweet!"

• • •

Marilyn awakened with a start. The telephone was ringing insistently. She funmbled for the light beside her bed. The telephone kept up its clatter.

"What's the matter?" Kathleen asked thickly through the dark. "What time is it? Who's making that infernal noise?"

"The phone." Lynn still fumbled for the elusive light. "Kathie, it's three o'clock. Who would be ringing here at this hour?"

"Maybe it's a wrong number. Wouldn't that be just ducky?"

"Might be—Kathie, something's wrong at home—Mums or Dad, or Bill—Yes, this is Marilyn Marsh. What is it please?"

"Lo, Lynn, this is Clarice."

'Clarice? Clarice who?"

"Your sister Clarice. You remember me. We used to know each other back in Millville."

"Clara! Why are you calling me at three o'clock in the morning? Are you in trouble?"

"Trouble? Me? How funny! How perfickly mar'vlously funny! The Queen of Beauty's on the crest, m'dear, marv'lously on the crest. Lil' Queen Clarice, that's me. I woke you up to say you c'n have that stuffed shirt Gordon. I don' wan' 'im. He's a p-p-pain in th' n-neck."

"Clara! Clara! Listen, Clara—" Marilyn jiggled the hook. The connection had been cut.

"So sister Clara is loose again," Kathleen said, pushing back her mop of hair, which shone like copper in the half light. "Well, my dear, what are you going to do about it? Throw on your clothes dash out into the night and play rescue party?"

"No," Lynn said simply. "I'm going to sleep." She came back to her bed, crawled under the covers and turned out the light.

Kathleen fell back on her pillow. "Well I'll be a ventriloquist's dummy if Little Sister isn't getting some sense!" she exclaimed. She lay awake until she heard Marilyn't even breathing.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Lady Luck

Morning came but with it no mention by Marilyn of the ill-timed phone call. Worried by her roommate's tight-lipped silence, Kathleen ventured, "One or both of us must have had a nightmare during the wee sma' hours."

"Both of us," Marilyn said cryptically.

"Thanks. I thought maybe I was getting delusions. I seem to recall a loud jangling noise about three a.m. Sort of like a three-alarm fire."

"Clara called. She was in one of her frenzies. I'm sorry, Kathie. There's no reason why your sleep should be broken into this way. I can't stop her calling, but I can get a room by myself so I'll be the only one bothered."

"You will, over my prostrate body," Kathleen declared. "We took this apartment together to get a little quiet and comfort, and we're getting it, Clara or no Clara. The next time Clara rings up at all hours to spill her frenzies on you, I'll answer and she'll hear a line that'll curl her hair right off her head. What was she screaming about this time, if I'm not intruding?"

"About Bruce Gordon. It seems she doesn't think too highly of him. She wouldn't have him as a gift. She's turning him over to me."

"Well now, if that isn't bighearted of her—Big-hearted Clara! Couldn't she wait and turn him over this morning?"

"Apparently not. The urge to taunt me was too great. She seemed to be in high spirits, in quite a boastful mood. Something must have happened to make her that way."

"You were right the first time, darling. High spirits and plenty of them. I'll bet she was bubbling with spirits. As for something happening to put her in a beastful mood, nothing need happen to get her that way. She's a chronic case of inflated ego. I'd say worse, only she's your sister, so I'll pull my punches. Are you terribly upset?"

"No, not terribly. I've made up my mind not to be. I have work to do and I'm going to do it; a chance at success and I'll make the most of it. Naturally, being called up at three in the morning by a sister who doesn't know what she is doing is not exactly a steadying experience. But it happened, it's over, so I'll dismiss it and concentrate on what's ahead of me in the office. If Clara is determined to turn her good fortune into failure, there is all the more reason for my turning mine into success. We can't both let the Marshes down."

Kathie gave Marilyn one of her rare impulsive 'squirrel squeezes'.

"Stick to that resolution, darling, and you'll be Mrs. Big business in person," she rejoiced. "Here's your hat. We'll have to race to beat Clarco's time clock".

Another busy day at the office. A day tiring, but inspiring. Marilyn's slogans had really gone over. Now Marilyn and Kathie were back in the apartment again, dressing for dinner. Bruce Gordon had included Kathie in his invitation and was bringing Jim Martin for a foursome. The buzzer interrupted intensive primping. Marilyn opened the door to Al Martino.

"Greetings, Duchess!" Al clicked his heels and planted an exaggerated kiss on the back of Marilyn's hand. "How's the royal family?"

"Al, you rogue, why didn't you let us know you were coming? The fatted calf has been eating us out of house and home waiting for you. Now you're here, we'll kill the beast. When did you get in?"

"Today, noon. My favorite piece of the calf is the 'moo.' I got here as fast as my two legs and a chain of taxis would carry me. Sorry to be the bearer of tidings that may shock you, Duchess, but you've got to know sometime. So here goes. And look at it like this: the best news we've had since Millville came to the Big Town. Duchess, Blondie has taken a run-out powder on us. I got it from two of our Metropole scouts who've been trailing her. She put on a big act in the Blue Parrot last night—a jealous fit over some past sweetie of Herman Hess who she claimed was trying to charm him away from her. They tell me it was the battle of the century. She panicked Hermie. She scared him so he offered her a thousand dollars cash and a ticket to any place she'd go, the farther the better. Blondie accepted the challenge, the thousand and the one-way ticket. She's on her way to Hollywood, the airway".

• • •

Marilyn was waiting in the apartment with Kathie and Al for Bruce Gordon. She was going to Millville to break the news of Clara's Hollywood fright to Mums and Dad. Clara had not communicated with them, although a week had passed since her sordid exit from the Blue Parrot. Marilyn knew, because last night she had called her home, ostensibly to say hello and to tell Bill that if he didn't stop having birthdays he'd be a grown man before she caught up with him again. Bill was all enthusiasm about his birthday "boodle." The once shabby gray home, now a brave white, seemed peaceful enough. There was none of the clamor and maternal lamentations, which would have been going on apace had word of Clara's latest folly reached Mums Marsh.

It was Bruce who advised Marilyn to go to her parents in person, to reassure and comfort them.

"Try to make them feel that nothing out of the ordinary has happened," he said, and suddenly drew the startled but yielding Lynn into his arms. "Poor little soldier," he said, tenderness husking his voice. "It's a tough assignment. Wish I could take it for you".

"Thanks, Bruce." A tweed shoulder, the right tweed shoulder, could be a beautiful haven. "Your wishing makes it easier." She had the grace to blush, seeing Kathie's amazed smile.

"Don't mind me," Kathie said. "I'm just the old family friend with bad eyesight. Bruce is right, Lynn. This is a job that needs a lot of doing. It's up to you."

"But Miss Cook! She won't like my leaving without her permission, and I've been with Clarco such a short time. You know how she is about discipline. I do want to justify her trust in me, to prove the few good things I've done for Clarco weren't merely accidents—"

Bruce stroked the bright brown head so close to him.

"I'll take care of Cookie," he promised. "She has a heart under that grim mask she uses to scare people."

"If you're sure it will be all right," wistfully. "I would like to see young Bill."

Bruce was decisive. "I'm sure. And now I'll go see about your ticket. Plane would be best. Give you more time at home and the sooner you get there the sooner you'll be back. Ever fly, Lynn?"

"No, but I've always wanted to."

"Then that's settled. I'll be back soon with the ticket and a hamper of food from the corner delicatessen. You girls pack while I'm gone," then we'll put on a picnic."

In the midst of the scurry for the right clothes and the right place to stow them in the bag, Al Martino arrived with a fresh packet of news. "Hermie Hess up and married the faded flower he tossed away a long time ago for fresher blooms. Clara must have plumb scared him into it. He was afraid she'd come back and start picking on him again. So he got himself a set of wedding bans to keep her off. What goes on here?"

Marilyn told him of her proposed visit to Millville and the reason for it.

"It's Bruce's suggestion," she said. The name Bruce was music on her lips. "He's arranging leave for me at the office and he's gone to get my ticket."

Kathleen was in the bedroom finishing the packing.

"It's that way between Bruce and you, isn't it Duchess?" Al's hands were on Marilyn's shoulders, his dark eyes earnestly seeking answer in hers.

"It's that way with me, Al," she said. Tears trembled on her lashes but her answer was straight and strong.

"I know. I've known since that first night, the night I took a black-out in the Blue Parrot. It's okay, Duchess. Gordon is a right homore. Better guys they don't make. I'm all for him, just like I'm all for you. Me I'm a rolling stone. Stop me rolling and likely as not I'd crack up into a lot of little no-account pebbles. You're a grand gal, honey-chile, and a grand pal. This is your Uncle Al broadcasting, and he's keeping right on with the old friendship program until you give him the signal to sign off."

"Then he'll be broadcasting through his long white beard," Marilyn said and found tears were happy ones.

"If only we could have stopped Clara." A shadow fell aslant the happiness. "She's so helpless—"

"Hey, Duchess, hush that helpless blurb, will you?" Al was his old sophisticated self again. "If Blondie is helpless, I'm a babe in arms. She inched herself out of Millville into Big Town, didn't she? She stayed here and wangled herself a good spot in the Blue Parrot, hottest spot in town, didn't she? Then what? She nicked a Good Time Charlie for a platterful of fancy jewelry, enough champagne to float the Queen Mary and a 'grand' in cash, plus a nice luxury ride in an airplane to Hollywood. She's out there now telling the lads on the lots how beautiful she is, and my money says she'll find a sap or two who'll believe her. Don't underestimate Blondie's ability to look out for Blondie. All that wildness is just part of her technique. Underneath it she's figuring now soon she can take you and for how much. It's the take all-give nothing technique and Queenie from Millville is its classic performer."

• • •

The plane that was to carry Marilyn to Millville warmed up in the airport. Kathleen was there to see her off—by special permission of Cookie. Al, too, and Bruce. Such a serious Bruce, such a dear, tender, shining Bruce. A few minutes now, last farewells, and she would be winging into the sky, the city of dream that held so much of promise and of bitter disappointment below, behind her.

"Plane for Philadelphia, Pittsburgh—"That was her plane.

"Bruce, my ticket! You have it?"

"I hope so. It should be in this envelope."

Suppose Bruce had mislaid the ticket? She peered inside the envelope. "Bruce," she said excitedly, "there are two tickets—exactly alike."

"You didn't think I would trust the girl I love to the mercy of a pilot on her first flight, did you?" Besides, there's a question I must ask your father, if you'll let me. I want his consent for taking you on as a permanent partner in Clarco. Up the ramp, dear. We are ready to take off. 'Bye, Kathie. So long, Al."

Bruce followed Marilyn up the ramp and disappeared after her into the plane.

"Waddo you know!" Al Martino said, watching the flash of silver disappear in the blue sky. "The Prince of Good Fellows copped the Duchess. Let's go some place and toss of a libation to Luck."

SHANNONVILLE W. M. S.

The monthly meeting of W. M. S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Barlow on Thursday p.m., August 7th with 18 ladies present, including four visitors who were welcomed by the president, Mrs. H. Doxtator. Roll was called by the secretary, members responding by repeating a verse containing the word "prayer."

A letter of thanks from Mrs. W. D. Robertson, for card of sympathy and flowers in her bereavement was read by Mrs. Doxtator. Mrs. H. Shetler, group leader then took charge and led in the responsive reading of Psalm 72. After singing "God Save The King" Mrs. Shetler gave a reading on racial brotherhood and Mrs. Robertson gave a reading on Racial Friendship. Mrs. Shelter asked several questions, different members reading the answers which were very helpful and instructive. Mrs. Shetler offered a prayer for Christian brotherhood among the races. A temperance reading was given by Mrs. Archie Greatrix. After the closing hymn all repeated the Mizpah Benediction. Collection amounted to $1.75 and for flower fund 65 cents.

The hostess and her assistants served a delicious lunch and a social time was spent. The thanks of all present are due Mrs. Barlow for her kind hospitality.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

The monthly meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Clark Sprung on Wednesday, Aug. 6th with 33 members and visitors present.

The meeting opened with the Ode followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Communications were read and discussed. Plans were made for garden party. It was decided to donate 100 lbs. of sugar to Rednersville branch to assist in jam making for overseas. Several paid in to the country fund.

A feature of the afternoon was having the District Officers present. The District President, Mrs. Ross Bush gave an excellent address. Mrs. Harold Noxon spoke briefly and Mrs. Morton Weese told about the making of jam for overseas.

Mrs. Stanley Barber read a paper on Canada's new woman member of parliament, Mrs. Doris Neilson. Current events were given by Mrs. Ben Anderson. Collection taken amounted to $2.70.

The meeting closed by singing God Save The King.

The hostess, assisted by several ladies served delicious refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

You Don't Need Experience—

CERTO gives SURE RESULTS in Jam and Jelly Making

As Easy for the Beginner as for the Expert

Very Short Boil
It's surprisingly quick and easy to make Certo jams and jellies. For jam you need give only a one-minute to two-minute full, rolling boil . . . for jelly only a half-minute to a minute. It's so different from the old-fashioned, long-boil way!

Natural Taste—Fresh Colour
The short Certo boil does not affect the taste or darken the colour as long boiling does. The fresh taste and colour of the fruit itself remains unspoiled in your jam or jelly.

3 Out of 4 Jam and Jelly Champions use CERTO
Mrs. G. G. Proulx of Aylmer, Que.—Prize-winner at Aylmer Fair, writes: "I believe it was due to Certo that I won my first prize at the Fair. I find that Certo saves time and spares one a lot of trouble and worry."

More Jam or Jelly
In this short boil practically no juice has time to boil away as it does in long boiling. It all goes into your jam and jelly. You get up to one half more from an equal amount of fruit. That's a considerable saving!

Sure Results
A book of 72 tested recipes comes with every bottle of Certo. Just follow exactly the recipe for the particular fruit you are using and you'll have jam or jelly to be proud of every time.

Madoc

Madoc—The August meeting of St. Peter's Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. John McCaffrey with the president Mrs. McCaffery in the chair. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by the Bible reading, Psalm 115 by Miss Mackintosh and prayer by Mrs. Jenkins. The business part of the meeting was then taken and the roll call showed an attendance of twenty. An invitation from Stirling auxiliary to hear Miss Freda Matthews (Deaconess) was read. A hymn was sung.

Rev. W. T. Brown of Hamburg, N. Y., gave a very interesting talk. He spoke especially of the mission work among the Indians of the three reserves in his Presbytery with which he has to do. He said the gospel of Jesus Christ is needed especially and home and foreign mission work should not be slackened, as the only hope for the world is through the Christian church. Mrs. Finch expressed the thanks of the meeting to the Rev. Brown for his inspiring address. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and prayer by Rev. Mr. Brown.

A very pleasant social hour with lunch served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Franks, Mrs. C. McCaffrey and Mrs. F. Allan.

Two Cases Reported Of Spinal Meningitis

Mimico, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP) — Dr. Warren Snyder, medical health officer, said today that two persons have been stricken with spinal meningitis at a Mimico motor and tourist camp, during the past two weeks.

He said two Toronto persons persons contracted the disease, William Farquhar and Joan Martin, five. Dr. Snyder said "the water has been tested several times. It is definitely not the cause in these cases. Nor is the locality the cause. They seem to be just several of those sporadic cases which arise every now and then."

Ex-Champion of World Puts Masked Wolf in His Place in Main Wrestling Bout at Arena

James J. Braddock Makes Big Hit With Enthusiastic Wrestling Assembly

ALL BOUTS GOOD

JAMES J. BRADDOCK

The identity of the Masked Wolf is still secure, insofar as some 800 Belleville wrestling fans are concerned, but although the "behooded grappler," won over Lee Henning, the youthful Iowa wrestler, at the Hume Arena last night, the Masked Man made one bad mistake. He elected to exchange punches with the former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, James J. Braddock, who was the referee in the main bout of a three-bout card and learned it is bad practice for a wrestler to tangle, with a hard-hitting prize-fighter.

It was in the first round of the main bout that the Masked Wolf became rather pugnacious in his attacks upon Henning. Referee Braddock warned the "behooded horror" on three occasions to refrain from such practices until finally the Masked Wolf turned towards Braddock and advanced with clenched fists. Maybe Braddock had visions of Joe Louis, as the Masked Gent's face was hidden beneath a black mask. At any rate Braddock moved into boxing action as only a champion can. The former world champion feinted with a chopping left and hit the Masked One hard with a right cross that staggered the wrestler who, upon regaining his feet beat a hasty retreat outside of the ring and promised to be a good little boy (at 259 pounds) if Braddock would save his Sunday punches for another.

Some of the best wrestlers in the world appeared at the Hume Arena last night aside from the above - mentioned main - bouters. There was Rolland Kirchmeyer, the veteran of a thousand ring battles, who hails from Oklahoma City, Cy Williams, the Florida grappler, who introduced the "crocodile hold" and "Whipper Billie" Watson, who left these shores to win the European heavyweight wrestling championship in 1939.

Of course, in the main bout, the fans gave Jim Braddock, the former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, a tremendous ovation after the Masked Wolf, 259, and Lee Henning, 233, of Iowa, were introduced. The "Masked Gent" proved too powerful for the youthful, but willing Henning and tossed the Iowan around like the proverbial bean-bag at times. It was in the first round that the Masked Wolf challenged Braddock to a fistic encounter, but after feeling one of Braddock's short stinging jabs, decided his business was grappling with the lighter Henning rather than exchanging punches with Braddock. To win the first fall the Masked Wolf picked Henning up bodily and tossed him across his knee with a back-breaker, dropping the helpless Iowan to the floor to win with an easy press after 25 minutes of excitement.

Becomes Aggressor

Henning took a breather and returned to the ring to become an early aggressor and pleased the 800 patrons present by trying to unmask the "behooded one." Later Henning moved to the offensive and following a series of successful rolling headlocks seemed to have victory well within his grasp, when he fell backwards, after missing a hold and the identity of the Masked Wolf remained a mystery as the "masked one" fell upon the helpless Henning for a fall after 12 minutes in a best two-in-three fall bout.

In the semi-final the pugnacious Cy Williams, 237, of Florida, kicked his way to win over the veteran Rolland Kirchmeyer, 250, of Oklahoma. The old master, Kirchmeyer, still possessed plenty of agility and ring cunningness, but Williams dropped him with a kick to the groin and won with his favorite alligator hold after 14 minutes.

Dunlop Earns a Draw

In the preliminary Al Dunlop, of Toronto, and Whipper Billie Watson, European champion, wrestled to a 30-minute draw. This bout was productive of the most action of the evening, even Referee Cliff Faux being drawn into the fray, but as Dunlop became villainous, Watson showed his superior ring ability. The final bell saved Dunlop, who was exhausted.

The announcer of the evening was Phil Lawson, representing the promoters, the Queensbury A.C., Cliff Faux, of Belleville, refereed the first two bouts, while James J. Braddock, former boxing champion of the world, was the third man in the ring for the main affair.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By the Associated Press)

Harry Gumbert, Cardinals — Pitched hitless ball, walking none and fanning four in 4 2-3 innings to save victory over Cubs.

Jack Wilson, Red Sox—Shut out Yankees with four-hit hurling.

Kirby Higbe, Dodgers—Pitched seven-hit ball and drove in four runs himself with double and three singles against Giants.

Benny Warren, Phillies — Made three hits, including two-run homer, to lead attack on Braves.

JERSEY GIANTS BEATEN BY CHIEFS

Syracuse Scores Three Runs in the Ninth to Win Contest 5-4

(By the Associated Press)

There have been times this season when Jersey City Giants looked something like the team that won the International League pennant two years ago and finished third last season. At other times, they have looked more like a slightly modernized version of the old Jersey City Club that could always be found in last place.

The Jerseys' 5-4 defeat last night by Syracuse Chiefs, a club that's even more erratic, if possible, was a fair sample of how the Little Giants work. They hammered Les Hinckle for a dozen blows but never could get more than one run an inning. Rube Fischer, making his first start in a month, gave only four hits in 8 2-3 innings, but the club blew up in the ninth to give the Chiefs three runs and the ball game.

Fischer, who handed out nine walks, loaded the bases with two out in the ninth Bobby Coombs was rushed to the rescue and the first man who faced him, Eddie Longacre, rapped out a single to drive in the tying and winning runs.

Only one other game was listed last night, Rochester at Buffalo, and that was rained out.

Connie Mack After Two Good Hurlers

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 — (AP)— Connie Mack, who laid out some $200,000 for players during the winter of 1939-40, is again ready to take the rubber off his bankroll in an effort to make the Athletics a pennant contender.

"The old gentleman" wants, primarily, a couple of good pitchers who can be depended upon.

"Everybody knows we need pitching," he asserted yesterday as the A's took the day off after dropping three straight to the Yanks.

"Otherwise, I think we have a pretty fair team right now. But I'm going to do something about the pitching. If we can get a better team, the fans will have it."

Connie needn't worry about where the money is coming from. The A's already have played to nearly 500,000 at Shibe Park and from all indications this will be their best year in the front office since they won the pennant in 1931 They draw more than 73,000 paid admissions alone during the Yankee series the past week-end.

National League Race Provides The Only Excitement in Majors; Dodgers, Cardinals Win Games

Only .003 Percentage Points Separate Two Teams in Red Hot Race

YANKS SHUTOUT

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A couple of years ago people were poking fun at the National League as a big minor league but it knocked out the rival American League in two all-star games and the World Series in 1940 and this summer has been giving the fans the only run for their money available under the big top.

The battle going on between Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals for the pennant in the senior circuit is as exciting as the "perils of Pauline" with the buzz saw getting closer at the end of every daily settlement.

The Dodgers bashed down hard on New York Giants yesterday, 15-7, and St. Louis Cardinals conquered Chicago Cubs 7-5 to continue their neck-and-neck race with the Dodgers still in front by the slender margin of .003.

Kirby Higbe pitched and batted the Dodgers to their triumph, and his own 16th of the season. He checked the Giants on seven hits and kept them scoreless until long after the issue was decided.

The Dodgers took charge in the first inning with seven runs, three of them on Ducky Medwick's 15th home run and two on a single by Higbe with the bases loaded.

The Cardinals likewise nailed down their victory early, taking a 6-1 lead in the first four frames, but it took a magnificent relief pitching performace by Harry Gumbert to save it for them. In the fifth Lon Warneke was pelted for successive home runs by Pil Cavaretta, Stan Hack and Bill Nicholson. Gumbert hurried to the scene and pitched no-hit ball for 4 2-3 innings to stop Chicago cold.

Earns First Victory

In the only other National League game Phillies whipped Boston Braves 6-3 for Boom Boom Beck's first victory of the year. The tailenders collected 15 hits and bunched four runs in the second inning.

The listless New York Yankees, so far in front of the American League that few people pay any attention to them, were shut out 8-0 by Boston Red Sox as Jack Wilson pitched four-hit ball for his first complete game of the season. Sparked by Manager Joe Cronin's three-run homer, the Red Sox splurged for six runs in the fourth inning.

Boston made 14 hits. Dominic DiMaggio supplied three, including a homer, and was hit twice by pitched balls. The first time it was on the back and the second time on the head. He was not seriously hurt.

The wave of "beanings" during the week-end brought on a fight as part of the doubleheader between St. Louis Browns and the White Sox at Chicago. In the first game Elden Auker smacked Joe Kuhel on the shoulder with a pitch. One word led to another and then to fisticuffs. Players of both teams rushed out and Alan Strange of the Browns joined in the sparring. All three were banished after order was restored.

White Sox went on to win the first game 14-9. Browns captured the nightcap 10-3.

In all the two teams rolled up the impressive total of 56 hits during the doubleheader.

New York, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins Hockey Club may be sold before the end of this month. . . . Neil Boardman, a music prof. at the U. of South Dakota, brought three pacers 2,000 miles to race at Roosevelt Raceway. . . . From down beats to hoof beats, eh? . . . The Eddie Blunt-Bill Poland fight at Washington, Aug. 27, is the longest scheduled heavyweight fight in two decades. . . . It's scheduled for 25 rounds, and the worst part is it might even last that long.

San Antonio baseball writers, who were a bit disgruntled that their club didn't get more help from the St. Looey Browns, have learned why. . . . when Carthage, Mo., the Browns' other farm, wired: "We need two pitchers, two infielders, two outfielders," back came another wire: "So do we".

Dick Wakefield ($45,000, remember?) is satisfied with the Piedmont League as a place to start, but he doesn't like those long bus rides. . . . Out at Madison, Wis., the other day Golfer Clarence Garoville put his tee shot on the sixth hole six inches from the pin; rolled his seventh hole drive within five inches and then aced the eighth. . . The other American League clubs can't keep hating the Yankees. In a week's road tour, the Yanks drew 123,000 customers and had three sellout crowds . . . . Mike Jacobs will ask $30 for ringside seats for Louis-Nova. . . . That's the highest price since the Baer-Louis affair, which wasn't worth it either.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

"Joe Louis is definitely on the down grade, but Lou Nova won't beat him next month. Billie Conn had Louis beat but got careless, the next time out Conn will take the colored champion with ease," predicted former champion James J. Braddock while talking with the boys in the dressing room at the Hume Arena before last night's main bout.

It was six years ago that Braddock, then 30 years of age, vaulted from a dock walloper to world's heavyweight boxing champion by beating Max Baer. "When I fought the negro he was, in my opinion, the greatest fighter I'd ever seen. He could feint you into throwing a punch, step inside of it and as you are off balance, Louis struck. That's the way he tagged me," admitted the former champion.

Braddock feels Bill Conn is another Gene Tunney and will beat Louis in their next meeting. Braddock seems to be a right good fellow, nothing put on. In other words he's a regular fellow.

Braddock was the centre of attraction last night, especially when he stepped up to the threatening Masked Wolf in the main bout and after feinting with his left, let fly a short right jab, that staggered the "behooded gent" and although the Masked Wolf had outwardly suggested a fistic encounter with the former heavyweight boxing champ, he discovered wrestling and not boxing, was his better forte and beat a wise but hasty retreat. Braddock was a great favourite with the kids who swarmed about him at every appearance seeking autographs and handshakes. Jim Braddock did not disappoint the youngsters, who today will tell you he's the greatest guy they ever met. Such are champions. The New Jersey Irishman, whose rise to heavyweight champion of the world, is equal to any rags to riches fiction story, is not one who forgot he was once just a labourer. Boxing was good to Jim Braddock and he hasn't forgotten it.

Promoter Frank Tunney sent a galaxy of wrestling stars to Belleville, aside from the feature attraction of Jim Braddock and the main bouters of the undefeated Masked Wolf (259 pound of strongman) and Lee Henning, the likeable Iowa football player. Then there was Rolland Kirchmyeer, the lanky grappler from Oklahoma, whose agility has preceded him to all corners of the earth, but who was the victim of some unorthdox attacks at the hands of Cy Williams, the Florida grappler, who introduced the alligator hold into the wrestling world. Then there was Whipper Billie Watson, the Britisher, who won the European heavyweight wrestling title two years ago and who put up with some uncalled for ring tactics at the hands of the villainous Al Dunlop, but did not suffer too much pain in a draw. As for the main bout the Masked one carried too much avoirdupois for the youthful, but willing Henning. Phil Lawson, of the Queensbury A.C. made a capable announcer and added to the show.

Old man Jupiter Pluvius did the softball boys wrong last night and forced the Corby A.C. at Point Anne City Softball play-off to be postponed until tonight. Maybe the rain might help the Corbys as last night's tussle will be played at Ox Point tonight, with the two squads returning to Coleman Flats on Wednesday. Skipper Bawden has Connie Harris and Johnnie Bawden all groomed for these two games within 24 hours, while Bubby Gaulin has "Ding" Luffman, who has two decisions over Corbys, and Doug Barnhardt who let the locals down with four hits even if he was forced to be on the losing end of the score. With the series standing at two games to one in favour of Point Anne, the next two tussles mean much, especially if Corbys should happen to eke out a win and knot the series tonight. While this is going on the SWACO and Deacons gals pry off their end of the semi-finals in the gals' loop at the Armouries this evening.

Do you remember when Chuck Campbell, Canada's color-bearer at the Berlin Olympics, swept into the sculling semi-finals five years ago today when he defeated the prerace favorite, Cecil Pearce of Australia, Chuck placed fourth in the final.

The race track at the Exhibition Park is being harrowed and groomed in preparation for the harness races to be held in conjunction with the Belleville Fair early next month. The Fair directors have been assured of a large entry of classed harness horses to come to the Belleville Fair directly from the C.N.E. at Toronto.

The Phillies have come up with two of the standout rookies in the National league in Nick Etten, first baseman, and Tommy Hughes, pitcher. They are both out of Baltimore. The Phillies actually paid $10,000 for each and should do much better when they are ready to sell them.

Regardless as to Jim Braddock's opinions, challenger Lou Nova says he'll employ a new ring tactic against Joe Louis. "Every other challenger has employed some screwy idea to beat Louis. Well, for me, there's only one way to beat the champion and that is by offensive fighting only. I'm going to walk right into Louis and beat him to the punch," Nova told the Press boys yesterday after he had shaved off a month's growth of beard. Braddock told your newsboy last night Nova wouldn't beat Louis because he was too willing to "take punches."

SPORT SPICE — Remember Bronko Nagurski, the former wrestling champion and grid star? . . . Well Bronko is farming a 700-acre farm in Minnesota now. . . . St. Louis and Brooklyn won yesterday to maintain their torrid race for the National League pennant, while the Yankees lost to the Red Sox, but are not worrying too much over losing the odd game here and there, as they only have slightly over 40 games to go. . . . The Red Sox are just two games behind the second placed Cleveland Indians. . . . Vallie Eaves, who wasn't good enough to play with the tail-end Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League, was sold to the Chicago Cubs by Milwaukee yesterday. . . . Just like getting kicked upstairs. . . . Bill Little tells us Bobby Gray, who placed second in the Canadian open, will be one of the professional golfers to appear at the Country Club here in a war charity golf fixture next month. . . . Chuck Barnett catches on in a hurry, saw several of his Zeller gals working out at the Collegiate grounds last night and they were all wearing gloves. . . First thing you know—

VICHY DECISION IS AWAITED

U.S. Relations Contingent on it Says Washington Dispatch

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—The United States made its future diplomatic relations with Vichy government contingent on the decisions taken today at the meeting of Marshal Petain's cabinet.

Vichy, Aug. 11 (AP) — The newspaper Paris Midi said today that Gen. Maxime Weygand, North African pro-consul, had been summoned to Vichy because the Petain government wanted to be ready to "ward off any event" which might follow action it is preparing.

Little Benny's Note Book

2 pairs of ma's white gloves were at the cleaners and I went to get them, and I brought them home in tissue paper and ma wasn't in her room and I put them on the edge of her dressing table and I noticed the package seemed kind of light compared to what it was, and I looked inside and there was only 3 gloves in it instead of 4, making me think G wizzickers holey smokes good night.

And I hurry up went out again and walked all a way back to the cleaners without finding any color glove, especially white, and when I got home again ma was in her room taking things out of one draw and putting them in another, me saying, Hello, ma.

How do you do, ma said.

Sounding as if she hadn't missed anything yet, and I said, Dont you pity the poor people with only one hand?

Such a question, I pity all afflicted people, I'm sure, ma said, and I said, What do you suppose they do with their other glove?

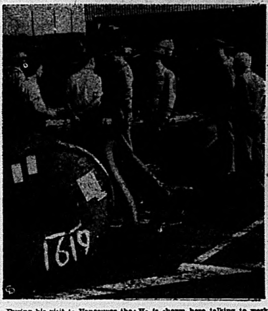
Now really, Benny, I mean really, that's enough on that unnecessary topic, ma said, and I said, But jimminy, ma, I mean gosh it would be a good idea for everybody to leave one glove off every once in a while just to make them stop and think and appreciate their blessings?

I cant think of anything more silly and far fetched, especially with all the soot and grime in this town for land sakes, ma said. And that reminds me, how can you be so careless? I found one of my newly cleaned gloves reposing calmly on the floor, she said, and I said, G, ma, did you? Hurrah, ma, I mean I bet you that's the last time I do thats nutty, I said.

Dont bet too much, such a boy, ma said.

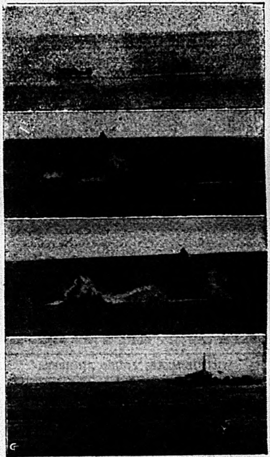
Meaning me, and I quick went out again feeling lucky.

DUKE INSPECTS VANCOUVER SHIPYARDS



During his visit to Vancouver the Duke of Kent visited shipbuilding yards as well as air training centres. He is shown here talking to workmen at one of the big ship yards.

THE END OF A FASCIST PLANE



When a British convoy was attacked by Italian aircraft in the Mediterranean recently, this enemy plane didn't return to its base. Trying to make the crash landing as painless as possible, the pilot skims the surface of the water for a moment and then hits, only to bounce before meeting the water again head-on. The Italian planes made five attacks on the convoy, which got through safely with the exception of the destroyer Fearless. Struck by an enemy torpedo, the Fearless had to be abandoned and was sunk by gunfire from the British ships.

Together at last—James Cagney and Bette Davis are the exciting star combination in "The Bride Came C.O.D.," new comedy hit coming next to the Belle Theatre.

EMPIRE'S POPULATION

The British Empire which covers slightly less than one-quarter of the earth's land area has an estimated population of 500,670,000.

ONLY ONE PER CENT

Indians and Eskimos in Canada amount to only about one per cent of the population.

Thunderbolt, the first falcon to join the U.S. Army Signal Corps, is held by Lieutenant Thomas MacClure, descendant of a long line of Scottish falconers. Lieutenant MacCluce has been assigned to experiment with the army's new "Falcon Squadron." Thunderbolt and other falcons will be trained by him to fight for Uncle Sam. Parachute troops and enemy carrier pigeons will be their special prey. The fierce falcons who dive at 300 miles an hour, will have knives strapped to their chests so they can rip parachutes of descending "chute" troopers, causing them to collapse. Birds for the squadron will be Peregrine falcons, native to most of the U.S.

The gals sure love a sailor, even when the sailor is another gal. That's why they cluster about Miss Jane Drummond as she leaves Buckingnam Palace after being decorated by the King with the medal of the British Empire. Miss Drummond is a second engineer (believed to be the only lady one) in the British mercantile marine.

WILLKIE MEETS YOUNG ADMIRERS

Wendell Willkie, committee member of the United China relief, is shown with some of the Chinese children who met him on his arrival in San Diego by air and thanked him for his co-operation in the $5,000,000 drive to provide food and clothing for Chinese war orphans and refugees.

INFECTION FOLLOWS SERIOUS STONE BRUISE

When an infection set in following an injury at his home last week, 36-year-old Earl Tummon, of Holloway, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from inflammation in the veins of his leg over the week-end. Tummon sustained an injury last week when struck by a stone while at work. Although the skin was broken and a heavy laceration inflicted, Mr. Tummon attended the wound with first-tid only. The inflammation followed and after being treated at his home by Dr. Demorest of Stirling, the injured man was removed to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. G. S. Cronk is in attendance.

DESERONTO YOUTH HURT IN ACCIDENT

As the result of a motor accident near his Deseronto home, 19-year-old Norman Corby sustained leg and arm lacerations that necessitated his being brought to the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday. Dr. R. Green attended the injured lad, who had been knocked down by a passing motor car in Deseronto. The injuries were later reported to be of a minor nature.

RAILWAYS' RECORD

Japan Cannot Send 'Diplomatic Bag' From Cairo

London, Aug. 12. — (CP Cable)— Japan no longer is permitted to send a "diplomatic bag" periodically from Cairo, it was learned today, because it has been reported to contain important information on the Middle East for the Axis.

The Japanese consul at Port Said was arrested some time ago for taking photographs after a raid on the Suez Canal zone.

Knots Bedsheets To Make Rope To Escape Fire

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP) — Knotting two bedsheets together after finding escape by stairway impossible, Charles E. Godfrey slid down twenty feet from a sunroom window as flames swept the basement of his funeral parlors on Danforth Ave., early today. He was the only occupant of the house at the time.

Damage was estimated at $1,600 to the building and $500 to the contents.

LINDSAY AIRMAN MISSING

Lindsay, Ont., Aug. 12 — (CP)— Sgt. Observer Henry Gerald Peel, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, is missing in air operations overseas, his parents here were advised today. He joined the R.C.A.F. in 1940.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 12—(CP)—Mining and industrial stocks weakened in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange and the Western Oils held unchanged. Trading proceeded at a quiet tempo and turnover in the first three hours was 104,000 shares.

The early afternoon brought an improved tone and some of the losses were made up. O'Brien moved higher to $1.46 for a net gain of 11 cents and gains were boarded by Wright - Hargreaves, Sylvanite and Lake Shore. Preston, Kerr-Addison and East Malartic were down.

Steep Rock had an afternoon rally at $1.65 and minor fractions were added by Noranda and Nickel.

Changes were narrow in the Industrials. Dominion Foundries weakened 1-2 to 18 1-2 and C.P.R. and Imperial Oil dropped minimum fractions.

Home Oil firmed 2 cents to $2.32 and other Turner Valley issues held unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 12 (AP)—Stocks made occasional dabs at recovery in today's market but few made much of an impression. Losses of fractions to a point or so were well distributed.

Among finance company issues hit by the instalment ruling were Beneficial Industrial Loan, Commercial Investment Trust, Commercial Credit and Household Finance, some of which conceded 2 points or so, at new 1941 lows. Most steels, motors, rails, oils and coppers drifted indifferently.

Resistance was shown by Santa Fe, U. S. Rubber, Texas Corp., Sears Roebuck and Western Union.

Canadian stocks were generally lower. International Nickel and Walkers each lost 1-8 of a point and Distillers Seagram 1-2. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

PLEADS GUILTY TO THEFT OF PURSE

London, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Pte. J. K. Kuehner, 19, of Highland Light Infantry, Galt, Ont., and stationed at Wolseley Barracks here, pleaded guilty in court today to theft of a purse containing $17 from Miss Bella Gowan, Fort Francis, Ont. He was remanded to Aug. 21 for sentence.

A similar charge against Pte. M. D. Ialenti, 20, of the same unit, was withdrawn when he pleaded not guilty.

Miss Gowan told the court she picked up the two hitch-hiking soldiers at Woodstock, Ont., yesterday and drove them to Ingersoll.

After they left the car, her purse was missing. Provincial Police arrested the soldiers last night and recovered $10 of the stolen money.

Picton Airmen Drift 30 Hours On Lake Ontario

Picton, Ont., Aug. 12 —(CP)—Two Royal Air Force men stationed here, LAC. Dennis Hodgkiss and Alex Christie, drifted for 30 hours on Lake Ontario in a disabled 20-foot sailboat before being rescued at Point Petre Sunday night in an exhausted condition.

The boat was disabled Saturday night and mountainous seas drove them 20 miles out into the lake with a change of wind Sunday pushing them back almost to their starting point.

They reached shore safely just before dark Sunday night when Howard Lowery, lighthouse keeper at Point Petre, and his wife saw the boat approaching the point. Lowery and his wife waded out into the water and pulled the boat ashore.

The two airmen, suffering from cold and hunger, were in the last stages of exhaustion and had to be dragged from the craft.

They were clad only in bathing suits and while adrift they held a rubber sheet over themselves to protect them from the cold and waves.

Six times Saturday night they signalled approaching lake boats in Morse with a flashlight but their signals were ignored. Earlier in the evening their signs of distress to persons on Salmon Point brought only a wave of a hand in response, they said.

Mollison Volunteers For Dangerous Mission

London, Aug. 12 (CP)—The Ministry of Aircraft Production announced that James Mollison, British trans-Atlantic flier, has piloted 35-passenger Cunliffe-Owen "flying wing" planes to French Equatorial Africa for the use of Free French troops.

The Ministry said Mollison volunteered for the 4,000-mile journey in unarmed craft "along an extremely dangerous route always well within range of enemy patrols."

The "flying wing" plane was designed on lines developed in the United States years ago and finished just before the outbreak of the war. Originally it was intended only for civil use.

It has a wide mid-section for accommodation of passengers between the two motors and has the appearance in flight of being "all wing."

VAST AIR ARMADA

German planes were reported in the vicinity of south Wales and western England this afternoon, presumably on reconnaissance.

U.S. Built Planes Raid Dromes

The Air Ministry said that in overnight attacks on occupied France and The Netherlands, United States-built Havoc planes bombed buildings and runways of Nazi airdromes. Fires were set by the exploding bombs.

Points in industrial Germany attacked overnight by R.A.F. were Krefeld, Munchengladbach and Reydt.

Docks at Rotterdam in The Netherlands also were blasted with high explosives.

The Air Ministry said that no planes are missing from the night operations.

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted today that Russian planes thrust at Berlin overnight but claimed that only two planes reached the capital. Air raid sirens sent citizens scurrying to shelters and the sound of distant gunfire was heard in the heart of the city. It was the fourth Red air raid on the capital.

Pershing Statue At Versailler Tumbles in Storm

Versailles, German - Occupied France, Aug. 11—(Delayed) — (AP)—The statue of Gen. John J. Pershing in Lafayette Park tumbled from its pedestal during a violent summer storm today and was smashed into hundreds of pieces.

A statue of Lafayette, facing Pershing on the other side of the highway, remained standing.

The two figures, forming one of the best known American memorials in France, commemorate the formation of the Lafayette escadrille during the First Great War.

2 Large Air Bases Planned in Maine By United States

Washington Aug. 12—(AP)—The United States army plans to spend $5,498,000 for two large air bases at Presque Isle and Houlton, Me., to serve as ferrying points for the delivery of bombers and other planes to Great Britain, it was announced today.

AWARDED C.W.L. SCHOLARSHIP

Ottawa, Aug. 12.— (CP)— Helen Gaspard of Winnipeg, graduate of Saint Mary's Academy at Winnipeg and the University of Manitoba, has been awarded the Catholic Women's League of Canada Scholarship for post-graduate work in Social Service, League headquarters announced today.

Miss Gaspard will continue her studies at the University of Toronto and St. Michael's College, specializing afterwards in the Psychology of Juvenile Delinquency.

PREMIER MENZIES MAY VISIT LONDON IN NEAR FUTURE

Opposition Leader Curtin Says Safety of Country is at Stake

TO CALL PARLIAMENT

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 12 — (CP)—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies announced after a cabinet meeting today that the ministers had requested him to go to London as soon as possible in connection with the Far Eastern crisis.

The Prime Minister added there were difficulties in the way but that they "might not be insuperable."

The Commonwealth parliament meanwhile was summoned to meet Aug. 20 to consider the situation. Today's cabinet session was the second in as many days.

Opposition leader J. H. Curtin, who with army heads sat in on yesterday's nine-hour cabinet meeting, said today war is moving closer to Australia and "the time has come when Australia asks loyal and devoted service from her sons."

Mr. Menzies said the meetings had to do with "the security of the Empire and the things it stands for...."

Australia's war council, which has representatives of all parties, was scheduled to meet Thursday.

Details of yesterday's meeting were not disclosed. Mr. Menzies would not say exactly why he called the cabinet, but Mr. Curtin said:

"I put it as plainly as I can to every Australian that the safety of this country is at stake."

FORESEE SHAKEUP IN TURK CABINET

No Change is Likely in Turkish Foreign Policy

Ankara, Aug. 12 (AP)—A shakeup in the Turkish cabinet to satisfy demands for more dynamic leadership, emanating from within the all-powerful people's party, was envisioned today by political quarters but neutral observers expressed doubt any alteration in Turkey's foreign policy would result.

Persistent rumors indicated Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu might be elevated to Premier t to replace Refik Saydam who was said to have offered his resignation.

Tevik Rustu now Turkish Ambassador in London, was regarded as likely to become Foreign Minister if Saracoglu should move up.

Despite the part Saracoglu played in negotiating Turkey's recent friendship pact with Germany, British diplomatic circles appeared confident he would fulfil his country's treaty with Britain should he head the government.

Neutral sources expressed belief that regardless of any changes in the offing Turkey would hew to her announced policy of defending her soil against aggression from any quarter.

Princess Alice Hon. Commandant Of the C. W. A. A. F.

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (CP)—Princess Alice has consented to become honorary air commandant of the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force, the Royal Canadian Air Force announced today.

This follows the royal precedent in the British Isles when Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester became honorary air commandant of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force of the Royal Air Force after which the C.W.A.A.F. is patterned.

The honorary air commandant will wear the broad stripes of rank and the gold-braided cap of an air commodore.

During the First Great War, the Princess was chairman of the War Pensions Committee.

SAY INDO-CHINA BANS EXPORTS EXCEPT TO JAPAN

Shanghai, Aug. 13 —(Wednesday)—(AP)— A dispatch by Domei, Japanese news agency, from Hanoi said today that the French Indo-China government has prohibited the export of all merchandise except that going to Japan.

Wallace Beery and Chester Morris in a scene from the timely and thrilling U-boat drama, "Thunder Afloat," which is opening this week at the McCarthy Theatre.

Picton Collegiate Has New Principal

Picton, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP)—Russell Perkin of New Liskeard has been engaged as Principal of Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute, it was announced by Carson Hubbs, Chairman of the Board.

Mr. Perkin has been teaching at New Liskeard for the past 10 years and for the last five years has been Vice-Principal.

Mr. Perkin succeeds J. E. Andoff, who resigned to accept a commission in the R.C.A.F. He will receive the rank of Flying Officer and will be stationed at Trenton.

URGENT APPEAL MADE FOR RECRUITS

Toronto Aug. 12—(CP)—Issuing an urgent plea for recruits for all branches of the Canadian (Active) Army, officials at headquarters of Military District No. 2 said today that recruiting in Toronto and elsewhere in M.D. 2 has shown a "decided drop" and that the August quota of 1,192 men may not be reached.

WIDE MILITARY

Gen. Charles Huntziger, War.

Joseph Barthelemy, Justice.

Pierre Pucheu, Interior. (Formerly the Secretary of that Department.)

Yves Bouthillier, National Economy and Finance.

Pierre Caziot, Agriculture.

Henry Moysset, Minister of State (formerly a Secretary of State.)

Lucien Romier, Minister of State.

In addition, two State Secretaries were named. One is M. Charbin, president of the Lyon Chamber of Commerce, appointed Secretary of State of Food Supply, a post formerly held by Caziot.

The second, Paul Marion, fills an entirely new post as Secretary General of Information and Propaganda.

LEGIONNAIRES

"Let us have the courage to say the things that need to be said, as Canadian and British subjects."

Air Minister Power disclosed that the Ontario Government had offered Federal authorities the Ontario Boys' School at Bowmanville, about 50 miles east of Toronto and it had been accepted. The site will be taken over shortly by the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Major Power said.

Must Have Air Supremacy

"We must obtain air superiority and supremacy before we can hope to vanquish the enemy," the Air Minister continued. Canada's trained-pilot personnel will equal in number one division of infantry before the end of the year, he said.

"Young people are flocking to us in numbers which makes it difficult for us to handle them. As weeks and months roll by more and more men will go to aid those already in the air . . in this air training plan we are partners with no limited liability."

LORD WILLINGDON

It was planned to send a message of sympathy on behalf of the Canadian people immediately.

Lord Willingdon succeeded Lord Byng of Vimy as Governor-General of Canada in October, 1926 and endeared himself to the Canadian people during his tenure of office which ended in 1931 when he was named Viceroy of India.

He travelled the length and breadth of Canada, showing genuine interest in the welfare of Canadians as he visited most of their cities and towns.

U.S. REGULATIONS

monthly instalments and reducing the length of time such payments may run.

The President held that the regulations are necessary to curtail the present use of instalment credit for purchase of "consumers' durable goods."

Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, said this meant "automobiles, washing machines, refrigerators, ironers, vacuum cleaners and many other goods."

These, he pointed out, require the same materials as the production of defence supplies.

Will Not Affect Cash Purchases

The new control system, it was emphasized, would not affect those who can afford to pay cash but would extend generally to merchandise and small loan businesses now representing the use of some $10,000,000,000 in credit.

The only announced exception was credit for the purchase or construction of new homes. Loans of this type will not be subject to regulations, Eccles said, but loans to finance repairs on existing houses may be regulated. Some other types of credits may be exempted.

NAZIS

The Russians said fires were started in central Berlin Sunday night, they reported their planes wrecked a big railway bridge across the Danube at the Rumanian town of Cerna-Voda, on the oil shipment line from Constanta toward Germany and bombed shipping at Constanta.

Guerilla Bands Active

Guerilla activities were said to be taking an increasingly-heavy toll of German troops and supplies throughout the entire Soviet territory into which the Nazis have moved. Russian dispatches said these operations by large and small bands of organized irregulars were augmented by swift forays through the German lines by Russian cavalry, particularly in the Ukraine, and in some cases by small tank detachments

The Soviet Bureau of Information reported a bumper harvest of wheat and rye being taken in by a great worker army throughout the Southern Ukraine and the Crimean republic back of the Russian fighting line.

GERMANY CLAIMS

Unofficial claims on progress of Nazi troops driving into the Ukraine were supported by a map released to the controlled press by the High Command—the first so issued since the Russian war started June 22.

Shaded areas—rather than hard and fast lines—were used to indicate the extent of the German drives, including the reported advance along both west and east banks of the Bug.

The map also disclosed a great salient between the Ukraine and the Smolensk sector to the north untouched by German troops. From Mogilev, southwest of Smolensk, the advance positions claimed for the Nazi armed forces describe a great semi-circle swing to the west around the Pripet Marshes and sweeping back to the east below Kiev.

How far the Germans are from Kiev itself was not clear, but news dispatches claimed, they were advancing along "well-paved, broad highways leading straight to the city."

All major arteries behind the Russian lines in the southern Ukraine were claimed by the Nazis to be jammed with retreating Soviet troops on which the German air force was said to be raining explosives. Rail traffic was described as badly disrupted.

The Germans acknowledged the Russians were fighting stubbornly in the Ukraine, but claimed their losses were extremely heavy.

DNB, Nazi propaganda and news agency, reported that a "Blue Division" of Spanish volunteers had been formally inducted into the German army, taking a solemn oath to follow Hitler to death. The troops have been issued German uniforms and equipment, the news agency said.

Bermuda Governor Offers Resignation

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 12 (CP Cable)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Denis Bernard, governor of Bermuda, yesterday announced his resignation in a message to the Legislative Assembly.

". . . His Majesty's government have decided to advise His Majesty that in the present circumstances it is preferable that the governor of Bermuda should be a civilian," the message said.

"In order to facilitate this change the governor has placed his resignation in the hands of His Majesty, who has accepted it."

The message concluded with a request that "immediate consideration" be given to the question of the salary of the governor's successor.

Sir Denis arrived here in October, 1939, succeeding Sir R. J. T. Hildyard who resigned because he could not get permission to use an automobile. No motor vehicles were permitted in the colony until their use became necessary for construction of United States leased bases here.

The resignation will be considered at a secret session on a later date, the House decided. W. J. H. Trott, a member of the executive council, proposed a bill to provide for the salary of a civilian governor, but a majority of the members insisted on a secret meeting to discuss the matter and the measure was left over.

JAPAN CONCERNED

At the same time Koh Ishii, cabinet information bureau spokesman, expressed concern over United States shipments of war materials to Vladivostok, Soviet Russia's far Eastern port.

Ishii's remarks plainly indicated that despite all sacrifice indications of preoccupation with questions to the south, there are grave doubts in Japan regarding the Russian situation.

Here the Japanese concern was that the United States might convert Vladivostok into a "first line" of defence against Japan by shipping supplies which might never reach the Russians fighting Hitler in the west.

Reliable diplomatic circles believed the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, in a visit to Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda yesterday had plainly discussed the "serious situation" which might arise through any change in Thailand's status and might also have discussed the Russian situation.

Sir Robert's conversation lasted an hour and a half and it was considered certain he had presented personally the message of Foreign Secretary Eden who last week warned that Britain is vitally concerned over the safety of Singapore.

Although United States Ambassador Joseph Grew has not seen Toyoda since State Secretary Cordell Hull voiced a warning in line with Mr. Eden's there was little doubt that during a recent visit he also put emphasis on subjects similar to those involved in Sir Robert Craigie's conservations.

Ishii's statement on United States shipments of war materials to Vladivostok came during his press conference. He said:

"Japan wishes that the United States would not send munitions. Japan desires peace in the Pacific and so Japan is watching such shipments with urgent concern."

An American correspondent asked whether it would make any difference to Japan whether war supplies for the Soviet were carried in United States or Russian freighters, and Ishii replied: "There is no difference."

In response to a question whether there was any indication that Japanese ship sailings to America would be resumed, the spokesman said: "I cannot say."

He disclosed, however, that the steamship Asama Maru, which had been en route to San Francisco with an undetermined number of Americans and big silk cargo aboard, had turned back toward Japan.

Would Observe Principle

Concerning the possibility of relaxation of the freezing of United States assets in Japan, Ishii said merely that his government would "observe the principle of reciprocity."

Ishii fended off questions as to movement of Japanese forces into Indo-China by saying he could not discuss military matters, but added: "I understand it is completed."

With reference to foreign reports that Japan has demanded military concessions from Thailand, one correspondent called Ishii's attention to a Domei news agency dispatch from Bangkok quoting an official Thai announcement as saying:

"Although rumors are circulated that a certain power of late has demanded construction of military bases, these are quite unfounded, because no such demand has been presented by any country to Thailand."

The spokesman's comment was:

"I cannot say whether this is true or not, but I think it is."

Based On Three Considerations

Shanghai Aug. 12 (AP)—Lt.-Col. Akiyama, Japanese army spokesman, said today his government is deeply concerned over the possibility Vladivostok might become "America's first line of defence against Japan."

Commenting on reports of the shipment of United States war supplies to Soviet Russia via Vladivostok Akiyama said this concern was based on three considerations:

1. That such supplies might not actually be sent to European Russia for use against the Germans, especially as the trans-Siberian railroad is "practically closed."

2. That the supplies might eventually be sent to Chungking, provisional Chinese capital, which the United States "already considers her first line of defence and is assisting with credits, arms and munitions."

3. "With the United States following a virtual policy of encirclement of Japan, it is only natural that Japan is concerned that American arms and munitions might reach the Soviet Siberian forces."

Akiyama said that so far the Japanese placed little credence in reports current here that fighter planes had been flown from Alaska to Siberia.

"However," he added, "it is impossible to ascertain when Vladivostok may become the first line of defence of the United States against Japan."

The spokesman said he saw no indication that the Russians planned any attack upon Japan and expressed "fervent hope that none will take place." On Japan's part, he said, current military preparations in Manchoukuo are "purely defensive."

Major Action Improbable

At present, he said, the Manchoukuo border is quiet and there appears little probability of any major action.

Turning to the war in China, Akiyama declared the Japanese army is determined to bring this conflict to a successful conclusion, either through annihilation of the Chungking regime or by incorporating it with the Japanese sponsored administration of Wang Ching-Wei at Nanking.

He asserted a solution is coming closer "because the quality of Chinese front-line troops is low and the leaders at Chungking, except for Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek and his wife, are definitely losing the will to resist."

Co-operation of Chiang with the Nanking regime is improbable but not impossible, Akiyama added.

To Take Time in China

"The Japanese have no venomous hatred toward him which could not subside until his death" the spokesman declared.

Asked when Japan expected the four-year-old war with China to end Akiyama said: "Japan is in no particular hurry. She does not want to speed up natural processes. Since Japan's air is reconstruction and not destruction Japan will take her time."

He described Japanese aerial bombings of Chungking as a process of military operations and declared they were not carried out "in the cause of destruction."

"If Japan desired to destroy," he said, "she could have resorted to scientific warfare and caused 30 times the present destruction."

May Sever All Relations

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP) — Senator Walter George said today that "it definitely is in the range of possibility" that the United States might "sever all commercial relations with Japan".

George, ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters that such relations might be terminated "if Japan takes any further definite steps in the Southern Pacific or if she should move against Russia in Siberia".

The Georgia Democrat expressed doubt Japan would refrain from any further aggressive steps but added he had no information as to what additional Japanese moves might be under consideration.

Senator Gerald Nye (Rep.-North Dakota), critic of Administration Foreign policy, declared that "Americans have a natural antipathy to the Japanese and it wouldn't take nearly as much flag waving to get us involved there as it would to involve us across the Atlantic".

"I am hopeful", Nye continued, "that they (the Administration) will not try to get us into war all over the world by the back-door route. That's what it would amount to if we became involved with Japan".

Nye expressed belief the U.S. government "has been appeasing and oiling Japan" in the past because administration leaders "wanted to use all our available materials for helping Britain".

Belleville Soldier Hurt at Spencerville

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP) — Gunner Walter Bellis of Belleville, Ontario, member of an artillery unit stationed at Petawawa Camp, Ontario, suffered injuries about the back and shoulders early yesterday when a car in which he was a passenger upset near Spencerville.

Two other soldiers in the car were uninjured. Gunner Bellis was brought to the hospital here.

SPARK IGNITES FIRE ON ROOF

Ignited from a spark out of a chimney, fire threatened the home of Thos. Hyland, Coleman Street, early this afternoon. Upon the arrival of the fire department flames were seen emerging from a small section on the roof. The booster pump provided sufficient water to extinguish the blaze without any considerable damage, except to the small portion of roofing that was burned.

LEGLESS AIRMAN REPORTED MISSING

Led All-Canadian Squadron of R.A.F. Through Battle of Britain — Awarded D.F.C. and Bar

London, Aug. 12 (CP)—Wing-Cmdr. Douglas Bader, the 30-year-old legless English airman who led the so-called all-Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force through the battle of Britain a year ago, was reported missing today.

Bader was personally credited with shooting down 15 planes. Last month he was awarded the Bar to his Distinguished Service Order.

He lost both legs in a flying accident while serving with the R.A.F. in 1931. After proving he could fly with artificial limbs he managed to re-enter the service after the start of the war and carried out many daring feats.

Shot Down 14 Nazis One Night

In one night during the height of the Battle of Britain last September his squadron was credited with bringing down 14 Nazi planes.

Subsequently he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Order for the exploit in which not a single bullet found its mark in any of his Hurricanes.

Bader was a native of London. His mother, Mrs. E. W. Hobbs of Sprotborough, near Doncaster, on being notified he was missing, had the announcement made to the villagers.

Before he lost his legs Bader was one of Britain's greatest stunt fliers. Although ten years older than most R.A.F. fighter pilots, he led the Canadian squadron through the Battle of Britain with unusual success.

While a year ago a high proportion of the personnel of Bader's squadron was Canadian, it later dwindled and now is largely British. In the meantime several other all-Canadian formations have been organized.

Several Close Calls

The authorities had serious misgivings about Bader's artificial legs when the war began but it is said he "argued his way into service."

He had several close calls. About a year ago his engine failed as he was taking off and he had a mild crash in which his metal legs were badly bent. They were straightened out and in half an hour he was in the air again.

Another time over the North Sea a damaged German bomber jettisoned its load just when his plane was close underneath. He swerved away just in time.

D.S.O. and Bar, D.F.C. and Bar

In addition to the D.S.O. and Bar, Bader won the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar—an accomplishment achieved by only one other man in the service, Squadron Leader A. G. Malan of South Africa.

Another of the R.A.F.'s most honored pilots was reported missing today. He is acting Flt. Lt. E. S. Lock, 32 year old holder of the D.S.O. and D.F.C. and Bar, all awarded by the King at the same time.

Lock was called 'Sawn-Off Lockie' because he was so short. He was credited with shooting down thirty German planes, nine of them in one week last September.

His plane was shot down in flames over Britain and he spent three months in hospital with severe leg wounds, a broken arm and burns. He underwent fifteen operations, left the hospital to be decorated at Buckingham Palace, and then returned to the hospital for a sixteenth.

NOONTIME ASSAULT ON CHUNGKING

Chungking, China, Aug. 12—(AP)—Japanese planes followed up two morning raids on this battered Chinese capital today with a noontime assault which kept residents in underground shelters for an hour and 35 minutes.

Observers calculated the city has been under alarm 43 hours and 25 minutes since July 9, when a series of heavy air attacks began.

The longest single alert was recorded yesterday when the city was under alarm for 9 1-2 consecutive hours.

NEWS OF THE .-N..NNN wNNI

Toronto Aug. 12—Slightly better demand boosted prices on grades A pullet and B eggs in trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while other grades held steady. Creamery butter solids prices were increased 1-4 cent a pound, though action in this section was rather dull.

With the egg market firm under continued light receipts and slightly improved demand, spot prices on grades A pullet and B advanced 1-2 cent each, closing at 28 and 27 1-2 cents a dozen, respectively. Having advanced slightly in the country dealer section during the latter part of the past week, Grade C gained 2 cents a dozen in wholesale-to-retail trade.

Trading on the butter market was quiet and draggy, creating an unsettled undertone. Odd sales of No. 1 creamery solids were reported made at both the old price of 37 1-4 cents a pound and the newly-advanced quotation of 37 1-2c.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture last night revealed that the production of both creamery butter and factory cheese in this province for the month of July showed a decrease from the output in July of 1940. Creamery butter production amounted to 9,763,300 pounds, as compared with 10,922,038 pounds for July of last year, representing a decrease of 10.6 per cent, while 16,116,119 pounds of Cheddar cheese were produced last month as compared with 16,746,586 pounds for the same month a year ago.

CABIN CRUISER PASSENGERS SAFE

Crippled Boat Once Swept Away From Rescuers as Tow Line Breaks

Southampton, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Five persons who left here aboard "Dolly Dean," a 25-foot cabin cruiser, bound for Stokes Bay, Ont., Sunday morning, were picked up on a small island in Lake Huron last night following extensive search over the storm-tossed lake since the party went unreported Sunday evening. The boat was crippled by a broken crankshaft in the motor shortly after it put out Sunday.

Those aboard the craft were: Capt. Edwin T. Hamilton, former Cleveland, Ohio, author who now lives at Stokes Bay; Mrs. Kathleen Shem and her two children, Marian, 14 and Thomas, 15, of Cleveland and Jack Smith, seaman of Stokes Bay.

They were rescued by Kenny McLay of Stokes Bay, owner of the rescue boat and Bob Reid and Kenneth Murray.

Party Found Huddled on Island

The cruiser was spotted Monday afternoon tossing on the lake. McLay drew near and tossed a tow line but the tow line broke and the disabled craft was swept away before rescuers could take the party aboard.

McLay returned with a new line and found the cruiser. Later he spied the party huddled on the shore of an island, their clothing soaked and wearing life belts.

Capt. Hamilton explained that the wind and waves continued to thresh the cruiser after the rescue party left for a new line. It was blown toward a tiny island and the party elected to jump into the water when it approached the shore line rather than risk staying with a craft that might smash up against the shore.

SEPARATOR BURNS IN BARN FIRE

Barn and Season's Crop Owned by Mitchell Trudeau, Near Tweed, Destroyed

Tweed, Aug. 12 (Special)—A fire caused by sparks from the blower of a separator during threshing operations completely destroyed a large frame barn on the farm of Mitchell Trudeau a short distance north of Tweed. The flames spread so rapidly after they were first observed that it was impossible to save any of the contents of the barn which was filled with the season's crop of hay and grain.

The separator belonging to Fred Sedore was also destroyed as the men were unable to remove it from the barn owing to the intense heat. Several small buildings were also burned together with a number of farm implements stored in the machine shed and a large pile of wood. It was only by the most strenuous efforts that the house was prevented from catching fire. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

DRIVER ABSOLVED OF RESPONSIBILITY

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP)—A coroner's jury at nearby Richmond Hill last night absolved Flt. Lt. George H. R. Phillips of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Camp Borden of any responsibility in the death of Alphonse J. M. Raymond, dispatch rider of the First Canadian Armored Brigade, who was killed July 24, following a collision between his motorcycle and a car driven by Phillips.

Phillips was formerly District Forester of the Ontario Forestry Branch at Sault Ste. Marie.

Says Hitler Proposes to Give Canada to U.S. in New Peace Drive

London, Aug. 12 (CP Cable)—Daily Mirror said today that Hitler has proposed to give Canada to the United States in a new propaganda peace drive he has just launched.

The newspaper said the proposals were delivered to American isolationists in the form of a personal message from the Fuehrer. The Hitler proposals, The Mirror added, were based on the assumption he will control all of Europe and the British Empire.

The proposals, according to The Mirror:

Absorption of Canada by the United States.

The United States to regard the Caribbean Sea as an exclusive American zone of interest.

Strict delimitation of zones of interest to be agreed upon in South America.

Europe to mediate between the United States and Japan and to delimit their interests in the Far East.

An arms limitation pact between Europe and the United States.

Probe Report Fish by Thousands Killed Near Rockland

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP)—Investigations are proceeding by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, D. J. Taylor, deputy minister, said today, into reports that thousands of fish are being killed in the Ottawa River near Rockland. A biologist of the department is now on the scene making the investigation, he said.

Reports have been received that the fish have been killed by refuse deposited in the river from a pulp mill.

Steal Safe, Cheque And $400 in Cash

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP) — Safecrackers last night broke into the Toronto Military Hospital and stole a small safe containing $400 in cash and a number of pay cheques. The money included hospital funds, regimental funds, soldiers' pay and amounts left in the safe by patients.

The safe, weighing about 200 pounds, was lifted through a ground floor window and hospital attendants believe it was taken away on a truck.

Cheese Production For County in July Down 19,833 lbs.

"Cheese production in Hastings County for July was down 19,833 lbs. as compared to July of last year," stated H. L. Fair, agricultural representative. "Extremely dry weather early in July would be one of the big contributing factors in this decline in cheese production. Recent rains have greatly improved the pastures and most cheese factories report that at the present time they are receiving considerably more milk than at the same time last year," said Mr. Fair.

Hastings County has produced 379,406 lbs. more cheese this year than in the same seven months of last year. Most of this increase was made on the exceptionally fine May pastures. May production was 300,000 lbs. higher than in May, 1940.

The total production in Ontario is down 660,447 lbs. under last year. Great Britain needs all the cheese that we can produce, every effort should be made to produce as much as possible.

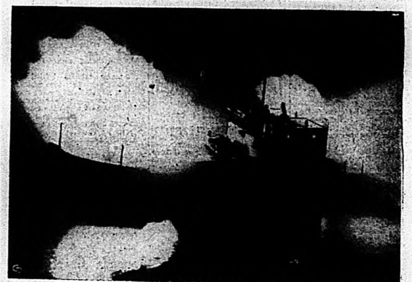
CANADIAN TANKER EXPLOSION SAID ACCIDENTAL



Explosion heard several miles away set ablaze the 180-foot Canadian tanker Transiter with 15,000 barrels of gasoline aboard on the River Rouge. The blast led to an investigation by the federal bureau of investigation to determine if there was evidence of sabotage. Investigators expressed themselves as satisfied that a spark accidentally caused the explosion which claimed two lives.

THREE ROTARIANS ATTEND CONVENTION

Houston, Tex., Aug. 12—(AP)—An extortion charge was filed against a 64-year-old man who, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said, threatened to blow up Southern Pacific railroad property if he wasn't paid $25,000. Officers said they arrested Richard Edward Hudson of Austin Saturday as he arrived at the spot where J. T. Munroe, Southern Pacific passenger traffic manager, had left a dummy package.

1,300 Portable Hangars Ordered by U. S. Air Corps

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 12—(AP)—The United States Air Corps never knows where it may need a hangar. So, Universal Building Products Company today began work on an $804,000 order for 1,300 portable hangars. The structures will be made of tubular steel, covered with canvas and mounted on wheels. It will take less than 30 minutes to assemble one of the units.

Churchill Praises Men of Merchant Navy

London, Aug. 12—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill paid tribute to men of the merchant navy as "worthy successors in a tradition of steadfast courage and high adventure." German Division Wiped Out During Battle for Station

High Command Silent on the Sectors of Fighting Along Whole Front

MOSCOW HAD AIR RAID

Moscow, Aug. 13 —(AP)— The Soviet command drew a blanket of silence today over operations of the vast German-Russian battlefield, reporting in its second consecutive communique only that "nothing of importance" was taking place there.

All designation of sectors was dropped.

Other Russian war reports dealt with isolated actions. One German division was reported smashed and another beaten back on an unspecified part of the front.

Possibly the most important incident announced by the Soviet command was the destruction of the Danube River railway bridge and pipeline at Cerna-Voda connecting Bucharest with all Black Sea ports of Rumania.

Large Bridge Blasted

The communique, describing this bridge as one of the largest in Europe, said it was blown into the river by waves of Soviet dive bombers. Two anti-aircraft batteries defending the structure were blasted out, the communique said.

The oil pipe line feeding the Black Sea coast from the Rumanian oil fields also was declared knocked out.

"The right bank of the Danube and Rumanian ports are now cut off from the rest of Rumania for a long period," said the communique.

The Russians said the 68th. German infantry division was virtually wiped out during a long battle for control of a railway station.

A German SS (black-uniformed Elite Guards) division, supported by two regiments of a "Viking" division and tanks and artillery, was routed from the station, the Soviet war bulletin reported, and the 68th. was smashed when it tried to retake the position.

Fate of Plane Was Unknown For 24 Hours

London, Aug. 12 — (CP Cable)— A dog carrying in his mouth part of an airplane led to the discovery of the trans-oceanic plane in which fifteen British and Canadian officers and seven American pilots lost their lives Sunday, it was disclosed last night.

The fate of the plane was unknown for 24 hours although the wreckage lay within two miles of a village and the villagers had heard the noise of the engines.

On Monday a farmer saw his dog with a bit of the plane in his mouth. He searched and found the wreckage at the bottom of a deep hollow. The debris covered a wide area and the bodies were scattered some partly hidden in the undergrowth.

Some of the Canadian victims were ferry pilots about to recross the Atlantic after bringing United States bombers to Britain.

Nazi Spokesman Claims Black Sea Port Under Heavy Pressure on 3 Sides

BERLIN RAIDED

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP)—Under a canopy of bombing and machine-gunning planes such as paces the German army when it is driving for a decision, Nazi troops were reported smashing the final Russian defence in the western Ukraine today.

Hitler's headquarters claimed Soviet forces were retreating toward Black Sea harbors after their entrapment, presumably between the Bug and Dniester Rivers in the Odessa region.

The high command claimed great losses were inflicted upon units detailed to make a rearguard stand covering the retreat.

Germany boldly predicted that the Soviet commander, Marshal Semeon Budyenny, would be compelled not only to surrender Odessa, but also all that part of the Ukraine which lies west of the Dnieper bend.

This includes, roughly, half the coal, wheat, oil and metal-producing region, including the important wheat storage and shipbuilding centre of Nikolaev.

Throughout yesterday, DNB said, Soviet troop concentrations and traffic facilities "along the entire east front" were pounded from the air.

While the Nazis foresaw successes on the eastern front, they acknowledged that air raiders, striking at Berlin for a third successive night, had dropped bombs on the capital, causing casualties.

(In London it was said the raiders were British bombers.)

Flares dropped by the raiders cast an eerie light over the city and the sound of their motors was audible in the streets, above the bark of anti-aircraft fire as thousands of citizens ran to shelters.

Unofficial accounts of operations in the Ukraine claimed German troops had swept down the Bug River valley east of Odessa.

These sources contended a considerable force of Russians were trapped in the Odessa-Ochakov area along the Black Sea coast.

Having reached the Black Sea coast, military commentators boasted, the Nazis now are in position not only to sweep to the east but to push inland along the Dnieper.

Vichy Rebroadcasts Petain's Speech to St. Pierre and Miquelon

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—The Vichy radio today rebroadcast Marshal Petain's speech of yesterday to the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's listening post here reported hearing three rebroadcasts of the speech in one hour over the Vichy radio.

The Vichy station also said that Franz Von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, had returned to Berlin.

"NEW BILL OF RIGHTS IN U. S. INDUSTRY" URGED

New York, Aug. 13 (AP) — The National Association of Manufacturers called today for "a new bill of rights for American industry, workmen and management," to prevent the continuation of strikes in defence industries.

The statement said nearly 4,400,000 man-days of defence work were lost in the first seven months of 1941, worth an estimated $29,480,000 in defence construction.

PETAIN COMMITS FRANCE TO AXIS COLLABORATION

Declares France Must Overcome Heritage of Distrust

WARNS OF OPPONENTS

Vichy, Aug. 13 (AP)—The Petain government, committed to full cooperation with Hitlerism, entrenched itself today behind a series of decrees designed to throttle its foes at home.

In a broadcast last night, Marshal Petain declared the Vichy government must overcome all opponents of the so-called new orders by "smashing their undertakings" and "decimating their leaders."

That new order envisons "broad perspectives that can open up a reconciled continent to activity," the Marshal claimed.

"That is the goal toward which we are heading," but to achieve it France must overcome a heritage of distrust which thus far has prevented the offer of collaboration extended by Hitler last October from "bearing all its fruit," Petain added.

Opponents of "New Order Are Legion"

He acknowledged that opponents of the new order—which he described as including Free Masonry, political parties thirsting for a comeback and self-seekers—were legion.

"France cannot wait," the Marshal declared. "A nation like ours, forged in the crucible of races and passions . . . needs certainties, space and discipline."

Petain announced he had designated Vice-Premier Jean Darlan — generally regarded as chief proponent of collaboration with Germany —as Minister of National Defence, with full control over land, sea and air forces.

Admiral Darlan, also Minister of Foreign Affairs and Naval Minister, thus becomes the most powerful figure in Vichy France.

All Political Parties Suspended

Seconding the appointment, Petain announced these measures:

1. Suspension of all political parties or "groups of political origin" and a ban on any public or private meetings by such organizations.

2. Immediate disciplinary action against state officials guilty of false declarations regarding membership in secret societies has been ordered.

3. Ousting of a series of public officials whose names appeared on a newly-published list of holders of high Masonic degrees.

4. Virtual elimination of members of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies by suspension of their pay.

5. Doubling "the means of police action, whose discipline and loyalty should guarantee public order."

6. Appointment of a "group of commissars of public power," who will "have the mission of ferreting out or destroying obstacles which abuse the rules of administrative routine."

High Tribunal

7. Creation of a high tribunal to try and punish those "responsible for our disaster," with instructions to report to Petain by Oct. 15. (This presumably would halt further postponement of the trials of former Premiers Daladier and Reynaud and other high pre-armistice officials.)

Concerning foreign policies, Petain said his government often had been misjudged by the American press, but he said the United States has no reason to "fear a decline of French ideals."

Piapot, Sask., Aug. 13 — (CP)— Nine persons were injured early yesterday when a Greyhound motor bus carrying 31 persons overturned near this southwestern Saskatchewan town.

Say Petain's Plan is Designed To Force on French Policy They Detest

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—Authoritative circles said today that Marshal Petain's new policy underlines "the determination of the Vichy government to align itself more closely" with Germany and Italy.

These circles said Petin's plan is "designed for the purpose of subjugating the French people and forcing upon them a policy which they detest."

The French people's own tendency these quarters said, is "to turn with growing hope towards Britain and her Allies and to desire ardently a British victory."

Petain Admits Grave Unrest In France as He Orders Nation To 'String Along' With Axis

By the Canadian Press

France, with a sword at her throat for more than a year, has been ordered bluntly by Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain to help Germany to try to revamp the world.

The old marshal's decision apparently is a final attempt to save what is left of a tattered, hungry and looted nation by singing along with Germany's political ambitions if not her military plans.

It also no doubt is a decision born of a belief that Germany is going to win the war now that the Nazis have overrun most of Europe and have torn chunks out of Soviet Russia—especially in the Ukraine "breadbasket."

Petain Threatened Opposition

Petain has threatened ruthless treatment of any French opposition encountered.

Should Britain or the United States make a feint at French Africa, the implication is that France would become a full military partner of the Reich in defending those colonies. France already is a "mutual defence" partner of Japan in French Indo-China.

Ever since that fateful Sunday, June 16, 1940, when Paul Reynaud's retreating cabinet resigned at Bordeaux and Petain became premier, the 85-year-old "hero of Verdun" has tried vainly to get Germany's consent to do these things:

What Petain Sought

1. Relax the restrictions on the demarcation line separating occupied and unoccupied France. Strict German control of that border strangled France's food shipments but caused no hardship to Germany. It has been one of the many Nazi levers controlling Vichy policies.

2. Relax xthe armistice terms whereby France staggered under the heavy cost of the German army of occupation.

3. Allow between 1,00,000 and 2,000,000 French war prisoners to return home from German concentration camps.

Apparently Petain did not foresee continued British resistance when he asked for armistice terms.

Petain gained an armistice June 22 with Germany and on June 24 with Italy.

Petain had considered Vichy only a temporary capital in the belief that the Germans would allow his government to return to Paris. He still has hopes of moving.

BRITISH, RUSSIA PLEDGES ASSURE TURKISH PEOPLE

Will Assist Turkey if She Should be Attacked by Another European Power

SWINGS TO ALLIES

London, Aug. 13 (CP) — Announcement by Britain and Russia that they are ready to assist Turkey should she be attacked by another European power has strengthened her neutrality and has demonstrated the spirit of co-operation between Moscow and London, informed sources said today.

(Tass reported from Moscow that the Russian and British ambassadors in Ankara assured the Turkish government August 10 that Russia has "no aggressive intentions or claims" on the Dardanelles and that Russia and Britain are "prepared scrupulously to respect the territorial integrity of the Turkish republic."

(A Russian statement to the Turks was quoted as saying, too, that "fully comprehending the desire of the Turkish government not to be involved in war, the Soviet government, like the British government, would nevertheless be ready to render Turkey every assistance and support in case the latter becomes the object of attack on the part of any European power."

Believe Turkey Swings to Britain and Allies

Many political observers here believe Turkey has swung toward the Allies since they took over the Levant states and forced the pro-Nazi government of Rashid Al Al Gailani to flee Iraq. In addition, it is reported Britain is shipping arms to Turkey by way of Basra.

Iran is expected by these observers to swing behind Britain and Russia now that both courtries have pledged to fight any German attempt to march through Turkey.

WHY HE TRAVELS MORE BY TRAIN

Toronto, Aug. 13 —(CP)— The newly appointed president of Trans-Canada Air Ways revealed today that he travels more by train than air in carrying out T.C.A. business.

H. J. Symington said in an interview that "I never fly to take anybody's seat." He added that with the heavy passenger traffic on the T.C.A. he travels more often by train in order not to replace a regular plane passenger.

3 KILLED IN AIR RAID OVER N. E. COAST TOWN

London, Aug. 13 —(CP)— Three persons were killed and seven injured today in a German daylight raid on a residential area of a town on the northeast coast.

TRADE MISSION TO SOUTH AMERICA LEAVES THURSDAY

Possibilities of Expansion of Trade With Southern Nations Seen

VISIT 7 COUNTRIES

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—Canada's delayed trade mission to South America starts tomorrow when Trade Minister MacKinnon and four officials leave on a 10-week tour which will take them into eight countries.

The party will explore possibilities of expanding Canadian trade with Latin America in order to help both this country and the southern nations to overcome some of the handicaps imposed upon them by war which has reduced the flow of trade between the western hemisphere and Europe.

Mr. MacKinnon started a similar but less extensive tour late last year but had to cut it short when he became ill.

The itinerary calls for visits to Ecuador, Peru, Chile, Argentine, Brazil, Trinidad and Puerto Rico. The party is scheduled to sail from New York on Friday and is due back at that port Oct. 28.

Exports to S. America

Exports from Canada to Latin American countries, including Mexico, made an appreciable gain in 1940 and it is indicated that when final figures for 1941 are compiled still further gains will be shown. In 1939 exports totalled $20,760,000 and in 1940 $26,869,000.

Imports to this country from the same sources increased faster than exports. Where formally Canada had a favorable balance of trade with Latin America the balance was the other way in 1940 with imports from those countries totalling $33,752,000.

Many South American markets, particularly those in Germany, Spain, Italy and France, have been lost or curtailed by blockade and lack of shipping. These conditions may afford an opportunity for Canada to develop an exchange of commodities north and south to replace to some extent the exchange which once moved east and west.

Currency problems and tariff rates affect the trade picture and Mr. MacKinnon and his associates will discuss these matters with the appropriate officials in the countries visited.

One factor militating against Canadian trade with Latin America is Canada's basic need of United States currency. Wherever possible Canadian exports must be sold for United States dollars in order to maintain the exchange position and permit continued purchase of war materials from the United States.

STORAGE TANKS AT CROTONE, ITALY, MASS OF FLAMES

Royal Air Force Attacks Military Buildings at Cariati

DIRECT BOMB HITS

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 13 —(AP)— Storage tanks and containers at a chemical plant at Crotone on the heel of the Italian boot were left a mass of flames from direct bomb hits and military buildings at Cariati, 30 miles to the north, were demolished in a raid Monday night, the Royal Air Force announced today.

Wallace Convenes Economic Defence Bd.

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—The United States Vice-President, Henry A. Wallace, convened the newly-created Economic Defence Board for its initial session today as fresh international complications threatened to arise from the unsettled situation in the Orient and Vichy's acceptance of full collaboration with Germany.

Wallace asked seven Cabinet members to meet with him today in the Vice Presidential offices.

There were indications recent French and Japanese developments would command first attention.

Calling of the initial session at a time when President Roosevelt was away from the capital caused wide speculation.

No News for 3rd Day From Yacht Potomac

Washington, Aug. 13—(AP)—The silence from the yacht Potomac, on which President Roosevelt is making a vacation cruise, extended well beyond its third day yesterday.

Navy Press officers said the usual Press message sent by radio from the Potomac had not been received at the expected hour, about 4 p.m. E.D.T. Nothing has been heard from the presidential party since Saturday morning, and in the intervening period, rumors, still completely unconfirmed, continued to circulate of a meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Clement Attlee Broadcasts Thursday

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and Deputy Leader of the Government, will broadcast an announcement officially described as "important" on all BBC stations at 3 p.m. Thursday, (10 a.m. E.D.T.).

(Nature of the announcement was not disclosed but there has been much speculation that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins of the United States have met or are meeting secretly.)

U.S. Reported Negotiating for Airbase Rights in Brazil to Offset Dakar Threat

Washington Aug. 13. — (AP) — Pursuing a broad strategy designed to safeguard the hemisphere, the United States today was reported negotiating for airbase rights in Brazil to offset any German threat to Dakar, French West Africa.

Informed Congressional sources declared the State Department has initiated discussions with Brazil, urging her to resume control of an Italian-operated airport on an island off Natal, seaport on the hump of the South American continent.

From Natal, it is 1,620 miles northeast across the narrowest part of the South Atlantic to Dakar, referred to frequently as a potential Axis jump-off point for operations against the Western Hemisphere.

Members of Congress concerned with military legislation expressed misgivings over the announcement from Vichy that Admiral Jean Darlan would be given supreme control of French military matters. This newest evidence of Vichy-Berlin collaboration, they declared, probably meant Hitler would be accorded the right to use Dakar.

These legislators saw little likelihood that the United States would make any direct move to block Nazi occupation of the African base, but they foresaw swift moves by the U.S. in the Western Hemisphere to offset such a threat, should it materialize. They said the most practical safeguard would be assured American access to prepared bases in Brazil.

This might mean, they said, that the United States would have to advance funds and equipment for such bases although it might make no effort to place troops there until the threat of a Nazi move toward the Western Hemisphere became more definite.

Nine Other Nazi Industrial and Port Cities Blasted

Cologne Power Stations Attacked and Left Afire—Hundreds of Bomber Take Part

FLY AT TWO LEVELS

London, Aug. 13 —(CP)— In a wide foray which ranged from Norway to France, the Royal Air Force attacked Berlin heavily during the night and unloaded explosives and incendiary bombs on a dozen other German cities.

In the German capital, "large fires which were started were increasing their hold when our aircraft left," a communique said.

The British bombers had as their main targets in addition to Berlin the industrial cities of Magdeburg, Hanover and Essen, the Krupp Armaments Works at Essen being the main objective. Much damage was done, the Air Ministry said.

The attack was made in spite of bad weather.

Nightcap to Heaviest Raid

The German cities of Stettin, Kiel, Bremen, Osnabruck, Duisburg and Cologne also were attacked in this nightcap to daylight raids yesterday which were the heaviest of the war.

Outside the Reich the R.A.F. struck at shipping harbors and airdromes in German-occupied Norway and pounded airdromes in the occupied Netherlands and docks at Le Havre in France.

Thirteen bombers were lost in the night operations.

The Nazis retaliated today with the first daylight raid on Britain in a long time, bombing a northeast coast town and killing three persons and injuring seven. It was indicated the victims were civilians.

Meanwhile, although unofficial reports last night said Nazi planes flew in waves over the Midlands, a communique today said enemy activity over the British Isles last night was on a small scale. A communique said bombs fell at a number of points in the Midlands and east England but that damage was small and casualties were few.

'Keep Enemy From Getting Within Striking Distance' of India

Bombay, Aug. 13—(CP) — Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, in his first broadcast as Commander-in-Chief in India, said today: "Our future efforts must continue to prevent the enemy, wherever possible, from getting within striking distance of this country."

(The broadcast did not specifically mention Iran, Afghanistan or Burma, generally considered the outer bastions to the defence of India from the east or west.)

To "correct any wrong impression," Gen. Wavell said the highest proportion of losses in the Middle East campaigns so far have been British, both in total figures and in proportion to their strength, compared with Indian or Australian.

SENTENCED TO THREE YEARS IN PRISON

Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 13—(CP) —Kingsley Mann of R.R. 4, Guelph, was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary yesterday following conviction on a charge of armed robbery.

The charge was laid as the result of a holdup in which Harold Brian, Oakville taxi driver, was robbed of his car, $100 in cash, $30 in cheques, a wrist watch and a diamond ring.

Pilot Drives Bomber Into Quarry to Escape Anti-Aircraft Fire

London, Aug. 13—(CP)—A weary pilot told last night how he dived his Blenheim bomber below ground —into a stone quarry—to escape German anti-aircraft fire in the hedge-hopping raid on power plants near Cologne yesterday.

Coming out of the quarry he bent a propeller on a telegraph post, caught the tip of a wing in a tree, grazed a church steeple and finally reached home to make a belly landing with a disabled undercarriage.

Even going over the low countries he flew his bomber so low he could see what people on the streets were doing, he said.

"I could tell exactly when I crossed into Germany from Holland", he related "In Holland everybody in the fields and streets of the towns waved and seemed to be cheering but in Germany some ran like mad and some fell on their faces in ditches".

43rd Anniversary Of Capture of Manila Observed Quietly

Manila, Aug. 13 —(AP)— A Manila nearly as tense as on Aug. 13, 1898, when 8,500 United States soldiers captured the city after an all-day battle against the Spaniards today quietly observed the 43rd anniversary of its occupancy by United States forces.

A greatly augmented Asiatic fleet is now at anchor where 43 years ago Admiral Dewey's squadron awaited the outcome of the fighting ashore and talk of war is heard on all sides.

All are convinced war is coming.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CHILLY TEMPERATURE FELT IN THIS CITY

District residents coming home from a late show or others who were on the streets at a late hour "shivered" as they felt the contrast of comparatively chilly temperature last evening, although the official temperature was recorded as being 45 degrees, thirteen points above freezing.

While in some quarters it was felt that there might have been frost in some sections of the country, at noon no reports of frost in the northern townships had been received. Warmer weather is predicted for the next few days and a hope is expressed that at least the month of August will be past before the return of cool temperatures.

MAJORITY OF O.S.D. STUDENTS TO STUDY IN THIS CITY

Two-thirds of the student body of the Ontario School for the Deaf, including all the junior pupils, will be accommodated in Belleville when the school term opens on October 15th, Superintendent W. J. Morrison announced today.

Since the original buildings of the school were taken over as a training centre for the Royal Canadian Air Force, arrangements have been underway by school authorities to make it possible for classes to continue in Belleville. The business office of the school is now located at 197 Charles Street.

The school has rented the rectory and the parish house of St. Thomas Church. The parish house will be used for classes. Other arrangements are being completed so that nearly two hundred of the usual three hundred students enrolled will continue their education in the city.

TOMATO CANNING SEASON OPENS

In Belleville canners have not commenced canning tomatoes as yet, but truck loads of tomatoes have been delivered to the Canada Packers on Albion St., for the manufacture of tomato juice only. "We will commence canning tomatoes late next week," factory officials revealed today.

In Prince Edward County, however, under a bright sunshine and warm weather, tomatoes have ripened rapidly during the past fortnight and canning was commenced on a small scale yesterday.

What is considered the greater problem with Prince Edward County farmers is the lack of farm help to harvest the average crop of ripened tomatoes, that now laden the vines, farmers of the district lamented.

PARTRIDGE HUNTING IN TWO PERIODS

Open dates for partridge hunting in the Province of Ontario as announced by district Game Warden Herb McCabe this morning are from October 4th to the 14th and from November 3rd to the 12th, the dates in both periods being inclusive.

The above dates for partridge hunting will be in effect in all parts of the province with the exception of the counties of Essex and Kent while hunters will also be barred from shooting in regulated game preserve areas and in Crown game preservs.

WEST HILL NINE DEFEAT EAST HILL IN PLAYGROUND LOOP

The West Hill nine turned the tables on their East Hill rivals in the Belleville Playground Softball loop yesterday winning 8 to 2 in a well played game that saw the pitchers dominate the batters for a change.

Bunton, hurling for the league leaders, was touched for ten hits and eight runs, while Adams, on the mound for the winning West Belleville nine, allowed but five hits and two runs.

R. Bush, O. Yorke and B. Sword paced the winners' attack.

The line-ups:

West Hill—Bush c, Yorke 2b, R. Rosatti 1b, Mills lf, D Rosatti cf, Sword ss, Kissler 3b, Adams p, and Clarke rf.

East Hill—Bunton p, Rollins, Hunter, Wilson, Forster, Moher, Power, Hewson and Wardaugh.

Score by innings:

East Hill	100 010 0—2 runs
West Hill	010 012 4—8 runs

BELLEVILLE MAN HELD FOR FORGERY

Samuel Kornbloom, Belleville, was arrested here yesterday on a charge of forgery and today remanded in custody until Friday. Acting Chief Constable Arthur Harman revealed today that Kornbloom is alleged to have issued a forged cheque, for the sum of $18.78, at the Belleville General Hospital, where he was arrested by P.C. Taylor.

Otherwise activities in Belleville police circles have been quiet and serene this week. City police apprehended two soldiers of the C.A.S.P., who were reported absent without leave from their respective units. They were turned over, to military escorts late this afternoon.

ADMIRAL EVANS TO VISIT BATAWA

Head of British Admiralty Technical Commission in Canada to Inspect Plant

In conjunction with the immediate proposed construction of approximately 100 dwelling houses to be erected at Batawa under Wartime Housing Limited building program, the Frankford plant of the Bata Shoe Company will be visited on Monday by Vice Admiral A. E. Evans, head of the British Admiralty, Technical Commission in Canada, and his staff.

During the course of his visit to the Frankford factory Vice Admiral Evans will inspect the various types of armament produced at the company's machine shop, while it is expected he will also make a tour of inspection of the shoe factory proper.

Work in both factories will stop for a brief period during the visit with workers to take part in a welcome program which will be built around the "V" for Victory campaign now sweeping the Allied countries.

The high point of interest in the Vice Admiral's visit to Batawa will be his officiating in the laying of the cornerstone signifying the commencement of the construction work to build the 100 dwellings which, when completed, will be tenanted by factory workers.

The survey of the ground where the buildings are to be erected has been completed and the site marked out in suitable streets and driveways. The new addition to Batawa will be named Admiralty Square in recognition of Vice Admiral Evans

Increased Sales Of Bread Knives Seen in City

Although somewhat out of practice due to many years of inactivity in the art of cutting bread, Belleville housewives accepted the Federal Governmental decree that terminated the sale of sliced bread this week in their stride. Local hardware and cutlery stores reported marked increased sales of bread knives.

"Not only have we seen a brisk sale in bread knives, as the housewives of the community hastened to provide utensils for the cutting of bread, but we've sold out all our stock of bread boards as well," remarked one saleslady as a check was made in the downtown area relative to the purchase of bread knives following the Wartime Price and Trades Board banning of sliced bread.

"The general trend of opinion coming from the housewife, as she purchased a new bread knife, seemed to be in favour of the regulation during wartime," remarked another salesman as The Ontario-Intelligencer enquiring reporter visited several downtown stores selling cutlery today. Of course the greatest wartime savings will be in paper.

Derby Winner On Way to Akron

High in hopes of winning the All-American Soap Box Derby championship at Akron, Ohio, on Sunday next, Douglas Bone, of this city and winner of the All-Canadian Soap Box Derby sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville and under the auspices of The Ontario-Intelligencer, left with his parents for the Ohio City and "Derby Downs" early today. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bone, Coleman Street, accompanied their son in quest of the greatest amateur sporting event honours in the world.

Young Bone bested 58 entries in the 1941 Kinsmen Soap Box Derby to win the right to compete for the World Soap Box title at Akron. Last year Donald McGowan of Stirling was the Canadian entry and in 1939 Ernest Young of this city raced in the big event.

On Friday Johnny Fisher and Bert Farra will leave for Akron as official representatives of the Belleville Kinsmen Club. Arrangements were completed with Mr. Bone to provide a bulletin service to The Ontario-Intelligencer of the result of the big event on Sunday. The bulletin will be posted in front of this newspaper office early Sunday evening, giving the results and how young Bone, the Canadian entry, finished.

NO AUTHORITY TO ACT SAYS PREMIER HEPBURN

Toronto, Aug. 13 —(CP)— The Ontario government has no authority to act in a threatened strike of miners at Kirkland Lake, Premier Hepburn said today. The mining industry has been declared an essential war industry and "our officials are completely out of it unless Ottawa asks us to act."

(The Kirkland Lake Mine and Mill Workers Union has announced it will conduct a strike vote among employees of 12 gold-producing mines Friday. The union seeks recognition and wage and hour adjustments.)

SUSPENDS 8-HOUR DAY LAW

Washington, Aug. 13 —(AP)— President Roosevelt has suspended the eight-hour day law as applied to mechanics and laborers employed by the United States War Department on Public Works necessary to national defence.

Kiwanis Club Paid Visit by Lieut. Governor

Dr. Sidney Horne, superintendent of Orillia hospital for mental cases, and lieutenant-governor for the district, paid is official visit to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel. The club is right in the middle of their preparation for the Kiwanis Street Karnival but that did not deter the members from extending a royal welcome to the distinguished visitor and Dr. Horne left a message with the Kiwanians, that will spur them on to greater efforts in the future. Jim Barclay, back from holidays, presided with Jack Marsh as song leader, Eddie Shapiro as sergeant-at-arms and Leo B. Riggs presiding at the piano. It was the Kiwanis birthday of Ormonde Butler, who was most ably introduced by Sidney Howell, and Wilfrid LaPorte won the prize donated by the popular member.

Reports Submitted

A number of reports were submitted by the various chairmen in connection with the Karnival and a real pep talk was delivered by Jack McVeigh, general chairman of the Karnival. Jack was very earnest when he told the members that more drive would have to be put in the sale of tickets on the car to be given away or else the receipts would not be satisfactory. He urged the members to take more interest in this sale because the success of the club in the community depended a great deal on the success of the Karnival. Frank Domenico promised fine entertainment at the games, while Bill Lynch reported the booths ready and everything in ship shape. A number of members who have a high standing with regards to the sale of tickets on the car explained to other members their method of sale and from now till the close of the competition sales are expected to much higher.

Club Highly Praised

The speaker of the day was introduced by Ormonde Butler and Dr. Horne admitted, that he was well acquainted in this district, having had for a number of years been a school chum of Dr. Sam Cronk, and co-worker with Dr. Jim Forrester. "After visiting a number of clubs in the district I can truthfully say that Belleville club is the most active in district four and probably the same holds true for the whole district", said the speaker in praising the Belleville Club. He approved of the Kiwanis sign of "Safety for Children", placed at the outskirts of the city believing that the child was the most important work club could be engaged in. He told the club that members have a duty, not an opportunity for service in this great conflict by giving leadership to the community in all things that vitally affect the district inregard to youth. "After working with returned soldiers for eight years after the last war", said Dr. Horne, "I believe that we sometimes shirked our duty and was willing to let "George do it". We lived a life of sentimentalism and pacifism but now we have got to go out and show the youth of this country, who incidentally are doing a grand job, that they have a stake in this country." The speaker praised the work of the club with respect to their various objectives and hoped that many would attend the distict convention in Montreal in September.

The thanks of the club was expressed by Cliff Baragar.

The Marquess of Willingdon, former governor-general of Canada, died in London at the age of 71.

Definite Shortage Of Cord Wood Is Predicted

The prediction that there will be a very definite shortage of cord wood this coming winter was made by one of the city's most prominent wood dealers this morning, he asserting that it was now almost impossible to secure cordwood of any description in the country at the present time.

Body hardwood from city wood yards is now selling at $11 per cord, an increase of approximately $2 a cord over the same time last year, and dealers agree that there is a strong possibility that prices may increase still more. A cord of hardwood cut into stove lengths sells at $1[illegible], while softwood is held at $10 and soft slabwood at $9 per cord.

The scarcity of skilled woodcutters in the northern parts of the county is held responsible for the present wood shortage, as the cream of the woodsmen are now wearing the uniform of the army, while many have enlisted with the Forestry Units, Pioneer Units and the Engineers.

Wages Increased

Under normal conditions a woodcutter is paid approximately $1.50 a cord for cutting hardwood, but today, owners of timber limits are advertising for men to cut wood at from $2.50 to $2.75 per cord. This is a fifty cent increase in price from last winter as $2 to $2.25 per cord was the prevailing wage at that time.

One dealer expressed the opinion this morning that there had been very little wood cut in the north country last winter or during the spring, and this in turn will affect the amount that will be available to city dealers. This merchant stated he would have only about two-thirds of his regular supply.

Whether the predicted shortage of cord wood will result in fuel users switching over to coal is not known but undoubtedly this will be the case if wood cannot be secured. From a comparative standpoint of fuel values, experts in the Department of Lands and Forests claim that a cord of first-class beech, hard maple or ironwood has 80 per cent the fuel value of a ton of coal. On the basis of price a cord of wood costing $12 would thus have the same value as a ton of coal costing $15. At present coal delivered at the residence costs $15.50 per ton.

Obituary

LATE WILLIAM G. McMILLAN

The funeral of William G. McMillan, late residence Sudbury, Ontario, and former manager of the Canadian Department Store in Belleville, took place here on Tuesday, August 12, from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street. The regular funeral service was conducted Monday evening, in St. Andrew's United Church, Sudbury, and the body rested at the Pinkston Funeral Home upon arrival here until 2.30 o'clock when it was conveyed to the Belleville Cemetery where interment took place. The service at the graveside was conducted by Dr. Archibald Young, who is in charge of the Tabernacle United Church during the month of August. The last rites of the Masonic Order were also conducted at the graveside by Wor. Master Charles E. Brown of Moira Lodge No. 11, assisted by Wor. Bro. John W. Cook, Past Master and Secretary of the same lodge.

The bearers were Mr. I. G. Hefkey, Mr. A. L. Francis, Mr. E. P. Bernstein, Mr. F. H. Deacon, Mr. F. Court Miller and Mr. J. H. Legate.

Many old friends were in attendance.

LATE FREDERICK P. GEORGE
(Syracuse)

Frederick Penniston George, a retired advertising and business man, died Saturday, August second, at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs Fred W. Bishop, 123 Bellaire, Pl., Syracuse, New York.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1865 Mr. George spent his youth in Elmira, where he learned the drygoods business while employed by Dey Brothers & Co., at that city. Later, he entered business for himself there. In Elmira, Mr. George, a flutist, organized and conducted an orchestra, which was an outstanding organization of its kind, playing at leading weddings and balls.

Mr. George moved to Syracuse in 1897 and established the first drygoods and notions store on the south side at S. Salina and E. Colvin Streets.

In later years, he was engaged in the specialty advertising business, arranging special pages for newspapers in the Eastern United States and in Canada. In this connection he visited Belleville on many occasions being associated with The Daily Ontario.

Mr. George retired from business ten years ago and, for the last five, had been in failing health.

He was a member of the Tabernacle Baptist church of Syracuse.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Grace George; two daughters, Mrs. Bishop and Mrs. Earl Slocum; three grandchildren, Pvt. Fred Bishop of the 104th field artillery, now stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala.; Miss Jean Bishop and Miss Helen Bishop, Syracuse, and one sister, Mrs. Aseneth Hastings of Philadelphia, Pa.

Funeral services were conducted at the Schumacher Memorial Home, 366 W. Onondaga Street, Syracuse. Burial was in Onondaga Valley Cemetery.

LATE CLIFFORD FRANKLIN HARRY

Clifford Franklin Harry died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harry, 3rd concession of Sidney, on Sunday, August 10, in his 21st year. Funeral was held at the family residence on Tuesday afternoon.

Death came after an illness of over five years. During his illness he was very keenly interested in community activities, particularly Johnstown Sunday School and Young People's Club, being an active member before being confined by his mother, the former Margaret by his mothr, the former Margaret Aletha Westfall, 19 years ago. Interment was made in White's Cemetery, Bayside.

Rev. McKee, of Grace Church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Geo. Campbell of Colbourne and former pastor of Johnstown Circuit. Left to mourn are Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Harry, three step-brothers and one step-sister, also grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Westfall of Bayside. The pallbearers were Alec Vandervoort, Frank Dickens, Victor Peck, Cecil Jeffrey, Maitland Harder, Vernon Harry.

LATE FRANCIS LAUDER WOOD
(Ameliasburg)

The funeral of Francis Lauder Wood took place from his residence in Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, on Tuesday afternoon, August 12th, to the Ameliasburg United Church where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox. During the service a vocal solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" was rendered by Mrs. John Lock, and Mrs. Milton Wood sang as a solo, "Lord, I Am Coming Home."

Interment was in Albury Cemetery and the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox.

The late Mr. Wood was a member of Lake Lodge No. 215 A.F. & A.M., Ameliasburg, and the last rites of the Order were conducted at the graveside by the Wor. Master of the lodge, Eugene Hubbs.

The bearers were members of the Masonic Order and were as follows: Messrs. William Morton, Charles Babcock, Harry Redner, James Barber, John Weese and Grant Sprague.

The funeral was largely attended and there were many beautiful floral tributes.

Germans Charged With Committing Violent Atrocities

Moscow, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Russia charged yesterday the Germans were committing "unheard of atrocities and violations" on Russian soldiers and civilians and warned that Soviet forces would retaliate with "both eyes for one eye, a whole mouth for one tooth".

The charge was made to foreign correspondents by S. A. Losovsky, Foreign Affairs Vice-Commissar and Official Soviet spokesman.

Lozovsky issued a twelve-page pamphlet of incidents, and a four-page list of hospitals and sanitary trains the Russians asserted were attacked in violation of the Geneva convention.

"Countless facts proved by eye-witnesses and those who themselves have been subjected to torture paint a grim picture of unheard of atrocities and violations to which the German Fascists have subjected wounded and captured Red Army men and the peaceful population of occupied territories", the pamphlet declared.

Will Soviets Destroy Port Of Odessa?

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Aug. 13 — (AP)—A grim test of Russia's will to carry out the Stalin "scorched earth" decree seems to be at hand at Odessa, great Black Sea port.

Berlin says that Nazi panzer units have reached the Black Sea coast, presumably east of Odessa along the west bank of the Bug River. This would indicate that the port is being gripped in a closing trap. The Germans also report that the Russian Army is attempting to evacuate Odessa by sea, with German planes scoring on heavily laden troop transports.

The obvious Russian answer to this peril is to leave Odessa to the foe as Smolensk was left, a burned and empty shell. There seems to be ample time still for that.

The speed with which the German units travelled from the north down the Bug indicates that they are only a light, fast-moving force and that they are themselves subject to encirclement. A heavier Nazi-Rumanian column is reported to have crossed the Dniester and to have thrust eastward behind Odessa toward Nikolaev, but its present whereabouts has not been indicated. If these two forces effect a junction northeast of Odessa the city is doomed.

500,000 Troops in Peril

Loss of Odessa would be less of a blow to the Russians, however, than would the indicated trapping of Russia armies west of the Bug. The German break-through southward down both banks of the Bug behind them gravely menaces all Russian forces in an area 200 miles or more long and almost 100 wide. This area constituted the southern flank of the Russian frontier defense line along the Dniester. There may be a half a million Soviet troops still in that trap and they, not Odessa, are the real German objective.

Odessa itself was captured by the Germans and retaken by the Russians during the first Great War. Its fall would not represent a decisive victory for Hitler's legions if Russian armies defending the Black Sea flank made good their escape.

Even with the Bug River defense line of Odessa outflanked, the line of the Dnieper behind it offers opportunity for a new Russian stand. The numerous mouths of the Dnieper and its marshy delta lands form a powerful water barrier to any German advance overland into Southeastern Ukraine or the Crimean Peninsula.

May Turn Sea Flank

German commentators indicate that the Nazis advancing southward down the Bug have probably reached the Black Sea at Ochakov. That town lies on the north shore of Lake Dnieprovsk at the point where the lake enters the Black Sea via the Odessa Gulf. It is a possible Nazi bridgehead for a swift advance into the great triangle of the Ukraine lying south and east of the Dnieper. It would not only open a direct but narrow and difficult land route to the Crimea, but turn the sea flank of the Dnieper defense line upon which the Russians unquestionably are preparing to stand.

It is to be assumed, however, that it is Soviet armies in the Dniester trap with which German strategy is primarily concerned. They are only potentially encircled unless the Nazis establish a solid line along the Bug behind them.

It is always possible that the Russians may escape eastward between Nazi advance units and the motorized infantry being rushed up to support them. And lacking destruction of Soviet forces in the Dniester-Bug trap, the fall of Odessa would mean little in a military sense. Hitler's forces still would be hundreds of miles short of the front reached by the Germans in 1918. At that time their line ran from the Baltic, north of Narva, to Rostov, at the head of the Sea of Azov, covering all White Russia and the Ukraine.

PNEUMONIA YIELDS

One of the most amazing developments of this time has been the success with which pneumonia has been treated through the use of sulfonamide compounds.

An example of the progress is shown in the report of Dr. Willard C. Rappelye, Commissioner of Hospitals, New York City, showing that in 1933 the city's mortality rate for pneumonia was 29.3 per thousand against 9.7 in 1940 for those who were so treated. "This is news of the most cheering character for doctors and for millions who once faced death when one of the thirty-odd varieties of virulent pneumococci had invaded their systems," remarks the New York Times. These figures agree with those by other health authorities elsewhere.

The Times goes on to say:

"It would be a mistake to conclude that pneumonia is conquered forever, that it is no longer necessary to determine to what particular type of pneumonia bacillus a sufferer has succumbed and then to administer the corresponding serum. For some unknown reason 9 per cent of those who receive sulfothiazole, one of the more effective sulfonamide compounds, must also be treated with serum. Still, it is something that the many types of pneumonia usually yield to a single drug, especially outside of New York where serum stations are rare. The sulfonamide compounds are still so new that when more knowledge of their effects is accumulated Dr. Rappelye's record will be improved and pneumonia, already stripped of its old terror, will be as amenable to treatment as a case of passing indigestion."

WHY NAZISM IS DOOMED

The world has seen close at hand the tragic results of the evil course when men like Hitler out of total depravity, bitterness, envy and ambition organize for the purpose of making war on innocent neighbors and peace-living states, yet confidence and hope, bolstered by fortitude and resolution, will crush the demon of brute force.

Despite the blitzkrieg, a Hitler invention by which he hoped to chain the world to Berlin, nations know that evil will not have the victory. Their standpoint is that Hitler and his evil policies will pass in the nature and constitution of things, because men will fight for the right and because right, justice and liberty inspire men's souls to resist evil. Democracy is the road and the guide to the future.

It is the realization that the nobler things must triumph and that they are worth fighting for that means in the long run the defeat of such an enemy as Hitler, girded though he is with treachery, deceit, violence and brutality. It is the spirit of optimism and faith in the right that gave the Royal Air Force last summer its opportunity to triumph over great odds in the air and to frustrate the plans of the Huns.

It is a spiritual force which assures in the long run the victory. Men and women will do their utmost, guided by the knowledge of what are the vital forces of life.

Fascism has shown itself a force of destruction which also destroys itself. It has been no inspiration to Italy; rather it has dwarfed and strangled Italy's life and led Italy into German bondage, ordered about by the Fuehrer as he will, because Mussolini put himself in the Nazi's grasp.

A fine demonstration of this faith in liberty to preserve itself and modern civilization and to bring further progress is in the deeds of the people of overrun lands, who are relentless in their determination that their faith in the better way which is democracy will help to down the gross materialism of the Huns.

It is good for us to think no grace or blessing truly ours till we are aware God has blessed some one else with it through us.—Phillips Brooks.

He hath a tear for pity, and a hand open as day for melting charity.—Shakespeare.

He who goes no farther than bare justice stops at the beginning of virtue.—Blair.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

HITLER'S BROKEN PLEDGES

February 20, 1936

Hitler: "With one single country alone we have refused to enter into relations. We see in Bolshevism now more than ever before the incarnation of the forces of human destruction."

(To the Reichstag.)

August 23, 1939

Germany signed a treaty of peace and friendship with the U.S.S.R., rendering meaningless the German promises in connection with the Anti-Comintern Pact of November, 1936, and mocking the dupes who raised the Nazis to power on an anti-Communist battle cry.

To German Women

September 8, 1934

Hitler (at a party conference): "We National Socialists do not consider it right that the woman should intrude into the world of the man."

April 25, 1940

Hitler (when he needed more labor for his war machine): "Women can not only fully replace men, but are better able to stand the strain of continual production."

(Volkischer Beobachter.)

July 4, 1940

"So great is woman's skill that the myth of the superiority of man can no longer be maintained."

(Munchener Neuest Nachrichten).

To His Own Working People

May 1, 1933

Hitler (in his May Day speech): "You will see how untrue and unjust is the statement that the Revolution is directed against the German workers."

May 2, 1933

The Headquarters of the German Trade Unions were seized, their leaders arrested, their funds confiscated, their newspapers suppressed.

(F. Schuman: "Hitler and the Nazi Dictatorship," Page 231.)

December 10, 1940

Hitler (to munition workers in Berlin, when he needed workers): "In this State of ours the people come first and the rest are the means to serve the purpose...... it is without doubt the people who decide our existence. The people decide in this country the principles of its leadership."

(But for his long-term program it is a different horse entirely): "The selection of the new Fuehrer class is my struggle for power. The great revolutionary significance of our long and dogged struggle is that in it will be born a new master class chosen to guide the fortunes not only of the German people, but of the world ......There will be a great hierarchy of party members. And there will be the great mass of the anonymous, the serving collective, eternally disfranchised."

(Hitler Speaks," Page 50).

Hitler (in Mein Kampf): "The Nazi objective for Germany must be a peace founded by the victorious sword of a people of overlords, which puts the world into the service of a higher culture. There must be no decision by majority. One man decides."

The Rhineland

January 30, 1934

Hitler: "The German Government is prepared to accept not only the letter but the spirit of Locarno."

May 21, 1935

Hitler: "The German Government will uphold and fulfill all obligations arising out of the Locarno Treaty."

March 7, 1936

German troops marched into the Rhineland and re-fortified it in contravention of the Locarno Treaty.

Austria

January 30, 1934

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "The assertion that the German Reich intends to violate the Austrian State is absurd and cannot be substantiated."

(Documents on International Affairs, 1935, Vol. 1, Page 171).

UNDERSTANDING FRIEND

I wonder how and why it is
That some so gentle are,
That when our hopes have gone amiss
To them we'd travel far?

Why to the few, the very few,
Has the Creator given
The sweet, brave power so much to do
For us when sorrow driven?

For always unto one we fly
When grievous hurt appears,
Who waits with patience while we cry
And understands our tears.

Always that gentle soul we seek
Who pities us in pain,
And knows what words of hope to speak
Till we can smile again.

Neurology, Psychiatry, Psychoanalysis

In my student days we studied diseases of the nervous system just as we studied diseases of the heart, lungs, stomach and kidneys. Changes in the structure of the organ caused the disease. In heart disease there were valves that leaked, in stomach, lungs, kidneys there were changes in the lining or other parts of these organs which caused the symptoms.

Thus, in diseases of the nervous system there were changes in the structure of the brain substance and in parts of the spinal cord which is simply a mass of nerves extending from brain to supply all parts of the body. This is Neurology.

What we did not study to any great extent was why patients behaved foolishly or in a manner different from the majority of individuals. This is now called Psychiatry, a science that has since become, and rightly is, a subject of deep study by medical students. Today, physicians determine or not an individual is sane, not because of any change in the "structure" of the brain or nervous system but by the manner in which he behaves at home, at his work, or in his general behavior in the community in which he lives. The determination as to whether a man was sane or insane in former days was as much the work of lawyers as of physicians. To-day it is the opinion of physicians that is considered by judges and juries when such cases arise.

Still another branch of medicine that has to do with the nervous system is Psychoanalysis, which was in its infancy in the form of mesmerism and hypnotism in my student days. Psychoanalysis has to do with the workings of the "unconscious" mind, investigating feelings buried so deep that the individual does not know that they affect his everyday life.

It can thus be seen how these three sciences having to do with the nervous system—neurology, psychiatry, and psychoanalysis—have widened our vision of diseases of the nervous system.

I am passing on these three names of nerve specialists—neurologists, psychiatrists and psychoanalysists—after reading an article 'Interrelation of Neurology, Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis' by Dr. Roy R. Grinker, Chicago, in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Speech in Plymouth

Plymouth, England, August 13.—(By Wireless) — It seems a shame to interrupt your dancing here in the open air above the sea, for the twilight is passing and soon the blackout will come and we must all disperse. It seems better that you dance, as you do evening after evening, than that you listen to speeches.

When I have gone away and think back on this day I will think of the city where, when it was levelled to the ground, the people—young and old—came out upon this lovely home overlooking the harbor and each ray at dusk listened to music and danced together.

When I had walked where the streets once were and stood where homes once were and had seen the tangled, rusted heaps of steel where factories and shops once were—when I saw St. Andrew's violated walls, I asked whether anything still stood untouched in Plymouth. I was brought here to see the Mayflower Steps and the Mayflower Monument, which destruction did not touch.

From these steps 300 years ago a band of Pilgrims set out for the New World. You have commemorated their going with a modest monument and bronze inscription. And over there across the ocean is another Plymouth with another inscription upon a Rock. That inscription says something like this: This Rock marks the first landing place of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower. In hunger and cold, battling Indians and the wilderness and burying their dead in common graves lest the Indians should know how many had perished, they here laid the foundations of a state in which through countless ages men should have liberty and freedom in their worship of God.

The Rock admonishes all who pass to remember the Pilgrims and not rest "until liberty is established throughout the earth".

Now you, too, have battled savagery and in the wilderness of rock and rubble that your city has become, you, too, have buried uncounted dead. But you, too, are building out of ashes a world in which through countless ages men shall have liberty.

Between the Mayflower Steps and Plymouth Rock there was once a sea that only the adventurous dared cross. Today a channel spanned by planes in a few hours separates the Steps from the Rock, and behind the Rock lies a continent, and the Pilgrim band has grown into 130,000,000 people who live in liberty.

The wilderness did not stifle the Pilgrims, and the grass that grew over their graves did not blot out their memory. In the generations that passed men came to join them from all the nations of Europe as today men from all nations of Europe come to join you.

Daily French fishermen, jealous for liberty, slide into your ports under German guns to join the fighting forces of a land of free boats that come to England and carry not only guns and food, but Dutchmen, Poles, Norwegians and Czechs who are the Pilgrim Fathers of today. They come to fight from here for states in which through countless ages men shall know liberty.

I, too, come as a pilgrim returning to the Steps from the Rock. I come to say that ships and planes are not the only bridge between here and there. The strongest bridge is invisible. It is built of hopes blasted and reborn, of dreams forgotten, and the returning of bodies buried, but remembered—of heroes for whom the bell always tolls.

Drake's St. Andrews is blasted, but its bell still rings. It rang in the victors of the Armada and will ring in the victors again—for those who fight with the whole world of free men on their side will come at last in triumph.

Then we must build together from the Steps and from the Rock the world that is always unfinished—a world in which there is work for all of us and a church for all of us, and freedom for all of us. We must build a new Plymouth here above the sea, a city of churches, factories and shops and homes as a monument to the Steps and the Rock—to the dream of the countless ages, to the cry for liberty that has been heard and that has been granted.

NOTES ON THE PIANO

American factories are turning out pianos at the tune of 110,000 a year.

It is estimated that there are pianos in some 6,000,000 homes in the United States.

First the phonograph and then the radio caused the sales of pianos to slump, but in recent years, particularly since the production of miniature instruments to fit into the modern scheme of things, piano sales have increased considerably.

Between nine and ten million persons in America are able to sit down to play the piano without being laughed at.

A modern piano is composed of about 4,000 separate moveable and stationary parts.

The ancient cithara, harp and dulcimer as well as the later clavichord, harpsichord and spinet all played a part in the evolution of the piano.

The first piano in the modern sense of the term is believed to have been built in 1709 by Bartolomeo Christofori, of Florence, Italy.

In the Metropolitan Museum in New York City there is a piano made by Christofori in 1720, and this is probably the oldest true piano in existence.

Christofori called his new keyboard stringed musical instrument a "gravicembalo col piano e forte," because, unlike the harpsichord, the tone could be increased or diminished.

Later the instrument was called a "pianoforte," which in process of time was shortened to piano.

"Piano" in Italian means soft, while "forte" means loud.

Spinet, the name of an earlier harpsichord-like instrument, was often applied to the piano.

Under the name spinet the Boston Gazette of September 18, 1769, described a piano made in that city by John Harris.

The first piano heard in England was demonstrated at Covent Garden, London, in 1767.

In America "pianist" is generally pronounced "pi-an-ist," with the second syllable accented, while in Britain it is generally pronounced "pee-a-nist," with the accent on the first syllable.

Chopin, Mozart, and many other great composers have written extensively for the piano.

Among the pianists who have won international reputations are Liszt, Rubinstein, Paderewski and Bauer.

Mozart used a piano with the colors of the keys reversed. This piano, with the usual black keys white and the usual white ones black, is preserved at Salzburg, Germany.

Gasoline Taken From Priest's Car

Bancroft, Aug. 13—Early Thursday morning the housekeeper at the residence of the Rev. J. L. Kennedy, parish priest of Bancroft, was awakened by a disturbance outside which seemed quite close. On investigating she saw a few men outside with a team of horses attached to a car. This was about two-thirty a.m. They seemed to be quite jubilant and finally they unhitched the team from the car and drove the car away.

The following day Father Kennedy jumped in his car to come down street but the car refused to start. He summoned the aid of a mechanic and after several hours' careful checking they found the gas tank to be completely emptied. The mechanic had asked if there was plenty of gasoline and was assured that there was as twelve gallons had just been put into the car the previous evening. However the early morning prowlers had helped themselves to the priest's gasoline as he had left his garage doors ajar, making things quite handy. This is the first evidence of stealing of gasoline in this district since service stations have been closed during night hours.

Goods Recovered

Boys playing around the hardware store of Mr. C. W. Mullett last week evidently carried off some of the merchant's sporting goods and after being apprehended by County Constable G. P. Wells the goods were recovered by the officer and returned to Mr. Mullett. The merchandise recovered consisted of several hunting knives and sheaths.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Rutledge and Donnie, of Toronto, are spending their holidays with relatives in Bancroft and Monteagle Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mitchell spent Wednesday and Thursday in Peterboro visiting at the home of the former's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Knox.

Miss Lillian Cairns, an employee of the local Red Cross Hospital, is away on a month's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Thompson and family left Thursday for Renfrew where Mr. Thompson will take over his new assignment, that of accountant in the Bank of Nova Scotia. Mr. Thompson prior to his new appointment was an employee of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Bancroft for the past two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Maxwell returned home from Toronto the latter part of the week, having spent a few days in the city with relatives.

Mr. Jim Joynt, of Mimico, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Joynt, of Bancroft.

Miss Dorothy Hagerman is in Cooper holidaying with relatives.

Mrs. E. Hagerman and Mrs. Clarence Marston are away on a motor trip to the northern part of Ontario where the latter's husband is employed with the Curran and Briggs Construction Company.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Balls of Ottawa were visiting this week at the home of the latter's brother, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Clarke, of Bancroft.

Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Gordier and Ruth left for a motor trip in Southern Ontario to the latter's home on a short holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Kavanagh, of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Aitkinson, of Trenton, returned home Sunday after spending a week's vacation at W. L. Martin's cottage on Lake Baptiste.

Mr. Gerald Kavanagh, who has been spending a vacation with his family at Baptiste Lake, along with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Kavanagh, returned to his work in Toronto, leaving his family for a longer vacation.

Mrs. J. Follis, of Bancroft motored to Madoc on Thursday and on her return she was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. T. Nicol.

The Bancroft Girls' Softball team motored to Coe Hill on Wednesday for an engagement with the Coe Hills girls on their Field Day and were defeated by a score of 11 to 8 in a 5-inning game.

The Fort Stewart boys who journeyed to Coe Hill on Wednesday for a baseball tilt were defeated by Coe Hill by a 5-6 score. Fort Stewart girls played Coe Hill girls and the latter were the winners over the Bancroft team and they also were defeated so the Field Day in Coe Hill seemed to be a lucky omen for their teams.

Rev. and Mrs. Hope Swayne and family of Merrickville arrived in Bancroft Tuesday and are spending the month of August at their cottage at Trout Lake.

Miss Gwen Dewar of Kemptville returned home Thursday, having spent a lengthy holiday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fuller of Bancroft. On her return she was accompanied by Miss Patricia Fuller who will spend a week visiting with Miss Dewar.

Donald, youngest son of Mrs. Myrtle Stewart, received a painful injury while playing in the sawmill yard of W. A. Davy when he sustained a fractured ankle on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Blatherwick and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hunter and family of Kitchener and Rockwood respectively, who are camping at the former's cottage, Whitefish Lake, Algonquin Park, motored to Bancroft Saturday and spent the week-end with their son Reginald, at their cottage on Trout Lake, returning on Tuesday.

Mr. Alec Scott, who has been an employee of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Bancroft, in the capacity of teller, has now filled the vacancy created by Mr. Thompson's move to Renfrew.

Lt. Clifford Broad, of Brockville, spent the week-end at his home in Bancroft.

Russian Position In Ukraine Seen As Very Grave

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—The British army regards Russia's position in the Ukraine as very grave, it was disclosed today.

The situation of the Russians around Odessa especially was said to be serious. The German army has a chance, it was declared, to cut off the Soviet forces and force their evacuation by sea.

An officer in the War Office specializing in Russian information asserted in a detailed analysis of the campaign that the Germans had had a "very large measure of success" to date and pointed out that they had overrun an area already as large as Germany before Hitler.

The officer added, however, that if Russia could maintain troops in the field with adequate supplies they would be able to fight indefinitely. The German problem, he said, would be one of fending off "complete exhaustion of troops who had suffered heavy casualties."

Picture of Campaign

This is the picture of the campaign as seen by this British spokesman:

All along the front there have been prodigious losses in killed, wounded and missing for both sides. The German claims of Russian losses in aircraft and tanks, however, were termed "greatly exaggerated."

The Germans have been seeking a battle of annihilation, but "it is not yet clear who has been annihilated in many of the large-scale battles."

Murmansk Sector: The German advance on Murmansk on this Arctic front has been halted, either because the Nazis were held by the Russians or because the Germans found the terrain so unsuitable for offence that they are awaiting until pressure further south causes the Russians to fall back.

Finnish Sector

Finnish Sector: German troops advancing down the northeast shore of Lake Ladoga have been halted in the last few days. There is continuous fighting here and the Germans have reached a point 50 miles from the important Murmansk-Leningrad railway.

Estonian Sector: The Germans have made some progress in Estonia in the last three days, threatening the important Soviet naval base at Tallinn. With the fighting around Kholm, east of Estonia, the Germans are believed aiming at isolating Leningrad, defences of which are described as "too strong" to be taken.

Smolensk Sector: Considerable fighting reported in areas north and south of the Pripet marshes. A mounting German effort south of the marshes may develop into a strong push toward Kiev.

Ukraine Sector: Russian position has deteriorated rapidly and the German drive has progressed a long way.

PROBLEMS ARISE FROM PETAIN ACT

Status of French Minister and Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon May be Discussed by Cabinet

Ottawa, Aug. 13—(CP) — When Cabinet council meets today it may have on the agenda consideration of the status of Rene Ristelhueber, French Minister to Canada, in view of the closer collaboration proclaimed between Vichy and Berlin.

Yesterday, while the Cabinet was discussing interpretation of order-in-council P.C. 7440, which defines the cost of living bonus, with railway and standard railway union representatives, Marshal Philippe Petain proclaimed his intention of forcing France to share fully with Germany in a European reorganization.

The Vichy leader asserted the reorganization would change the map of the world.

As a result, an informed source said last night, the Canadian Cabinet likely will consider today the position in which Mr. Ristelhueber, who came here just before the French capitulation in 1940, finds himself.

Status of French Island

It was considered possible that the discussion might also include the status now of the French-owned islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon between Gaspe and Newfoundland in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Since the surrender of France there have been a number of suggestions that some action should be taken to protect this continent further from possible enemy use of the islands—perhaps through occupation of the rocky outposts by Canadian troops.

The government has been kept informed of the situation on the islands, but no military action has been taken.

The islands come within the scope of deliberations of the Canada-United States Joint Permanent Defence Board and that body undoubtedly has taken them into consideration while planning for the defence of the Atlantic area.

Mr. Ristelhueber, since the capitulation of his country, has been living quietly in the capital, carrying on his official duties.

Cost of Living Problems

At its meeting yesterday, the Cabinet was asked to decide how adjustment of the cost of living from time to time should be made. The railway delegates and those representing the eighteen standard railway unions agreed to be bound by the Cabinet's interpretation of the order, and the decision also will be applicable to all other cases in which the bonus is paid.

Large sums of money would be involved in the event the cost of living rises sharply. The railway unions contended the order-in-council calls for a $1.25-a-week bonus when the Dominion Bureau of Statistics cost of living index advances five per cent above the level of August, 1939, and a further bonus every time a further five-per-cent increase takes place.

On the other hand, the railway representatives submitted that the first bonus of $1.25 a week should be paid as the unions suggested, but that bonus increases should not be made until the cost of living rises five per cent from the index figure at the time of the last adjustment.

On the basis of the railways' contention, the rate of adjustment in the bonus would grow slower and slower as time passed, since it would be effective not when the index was at 105, 110, 115 or 120 but at 105, 110.25, 115.76 and 121.55. Latest available index, that for July 2, was 11 per cent over August.

FRENCH AND U.S. RELATIONS REACH CRITICAL STATE

Elevation of Darlan to Supreme Command of Armed Forces Causes Grave Concern

U.S. INTERESTS

(By LLOYD LEHBRAS)
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—The United States and France — traditional friends since the American Revolution—reached a critical pass in their relations today, as fears were expressed in official quarters that Vichy's new program of collaboration with Germany held threats to American interests and territories.

State Secretary Cordell Hull withheld formal comment on the new policy set forth by Marshal Petain, chief of the French state, in an address yesterday pledging adherence to the Nazi "new order."

The secretary intimated, however that grave concern was inspired here by the elevation of Admiral Darlan, pro-Axis vice-premier, to supreme command of France's armed forces.

Hull long ago accused Darlan of being partner to a collaboration "scheme" whose object was to "deliver France politically, economically, socially and militarily to Hitler" and make France a co-belligerent in "Hitler's desperate effort to conquer Great Britain and secure control of the high seas."

Vital Questions Raised

Vital questions of the moment were whether the French fleet would co-operate with Nazi aims, whether French help would be sought against Britain, and whether Nazi penetration of French colonies might be expected—either in Africa or the Western Hemisphere.

Another unknown factor of considerable importance was the reaction of Gen. Maxime Weygand, pro-consul for North Africa, to the new collaboration. Weygand several times has publicly declared he would defend the independence and integrity of the French colonies against any aggressor.

The United States has co-operated with Weygand by sending supplies to the French North African colonies, cut off from their normal supply sources by the war. Moreover, Weygand and Darlan have not always seen eye to eye.

Senators Outspoken

If the State Department was reticent about yesterday's developments. Senators and Representatives were outspoken with recommendations for vigorous counteraction.

They urged that the United States, with the other American Republics, assumed the protection of Martinique and other French colonies in the Western Hemisphere just as soon as it was evident they might be used as stepping stones for Nazi infiltration.

They also advocated breaking off diplomatic relations with Vichy and according recognition to the Free French committee of General Chas. De Gaulle.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girls Warned Men They Make Their "Slaves" Will Revolt

Love of power is a strong instinct in humans, but unless you happen to be a dictator or someone like that it's just as well to curb this totalitarian gift.

Some girls with imperious instincts can never let well enough alone. When one has made a man her slave, she wants to exhibit him in figurative chains to relatives and friends even as the Caesars displayed the monarchs of subjugated countries.

Often these men are so much in love as to be willing to put up with almost anything, but the proverb reminds us that even a worm will turn. So it might be as well for girls with dictatorial tendencies to stop, look and listen, lest the worm, whom you secretly cherish tenderly, may crawl away to someone more appreciative.

If you're a girl of this type, consider well the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"There really isn't any help for my case. It can only be filed for future reference, if I ever happen to meet another man like G. L. He was everything a girl could desire, a college man, well started in his own profession, of good family, and with a certain deference to women that came from his good social background.

"We became engaged. As a 'desirable' he was head and shoulders above any other man in our particular group, and I knew all the girls envied me.

"But I have a nasty streak, Miss Fairfax; ever since I was a little kid I wanted to be superior, to flaunt any possession I had, even if it were a bigger doll or a nicer sash than the other little girls I played with had.

"So I fell into the way of teasing and prodding G. L. before my friends. I'd send him on impossible errands. I'd make him do things at which he'd wince but when he did them I had a certain satisfied egoism.

"He returned to his home. We had talked tentatively about being married in October, and I had gotten a few things together—linen, china given me by a doting aunt, and some old family silver I had persuaded mother to share with me. Then came the unbelievable shock. I got a letter from G. L., written from his home town, in which he said that while he still cared for me very deeply, he knew we could never be happy. That there were certain temperamental differences each of us had which could never be adjusted.

"He said he hoped I'd keep his ring, as it would be very painful for him to receive it. And he knew I would meet someone who would make me happier than he ever could. I was frantic. I wrote to him immediately, crawled, said I knew I'd been brutal, that I'd exploited him before my friends, but that I really didn't mean it.

"There was one more letter in which he used the most delicate language. But when I had waded through his well-bred subleties, I came to the conclusion he regarded me as a bully, and he begged me not to write again. He has been transferred, and when I wrote that I must see him before he left, I got a wire from his mother saying he had already departed. I don't know what to do, it would be impossible for me to go there as it would be to go to Mars. My pride keeps me from writing, as he begged me not to write again. "I suppose my case is hopeless.

Unhappy."

Countless girls, intoxicated I suppose by their own power to charm, have acted like this one who realizes too late her mistake

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

An Appropriate Way to Show Your Gratitude to Hostess

Most of us enjoy making generous bows of hospitality to other persons. But in some circumstances, we hesitate to make them, fearing our inclination may be more generous than appropriate.

Such a circumstance is when we are visiting, for either a short or a long visit. Our hostess and host have been the personification of hospitality. We have been so much on the receiving end that we long to make some gesture on the giving end. But, we wonder, will this be proper? Will there by any possibility that our hostess and host will misinterpret our suggestion that, for one occasion during our visit, we change our status from guest to hostess or host?

Have no misgivings about the propriety of inviting your hostess, or your hostess and host, to be your guest or guests during your visit. It's a proper thing to do, and it's a delightful step for you to make. And they'll take your invitation in exactly the spirit you give it.

However, this kind of invitation demands definiteness. Don't put it up to them what kind of party you will give. Make up your own mind what form of hospitality you wish to offer them, and present your invitation definitely as well as gracefully. That is, be explicit about the fact that you are to be the hostess (or host), and then be as explicit as you can be (for this may perhaps depend on the convenience of your host) about the time, place, and the number of guests to be included in your hospitality. This puts everybody at ease, a fact particularly desirable in this kind of invitation.

If your visit is in the country, keep your eyes open, as you drive or walk about, for a delightful wayside inn or tearoom, to which perhaps to invite your hostess, or your hostess and the children, for lunch or tea, or your hostess and host to dinner, or the family for Sunday lunch or tea or mid-day dinner.

If you are familiar with the surroundings of the place where you are visiting, or if you are an adventurous soul, you will no doubt find a way to order the lunch or dinner ahead of time, and perhaps to pay the check before the party.

Or let's say that you are visiting a hostess who lives in the city, or that your hostess lives in the country or suburbs and that you and she are planning to go to the city to shop. Then there will be many kinds of happy plans that you can make. Your suggestion may be lunch, either with your hostess alone, or with one or two of her friends whom you have met and especially like or who have given parties for you, or in other ways offered you charming hospitality. Or the party may be lunch followed by a matinee or movie, or a movie followed by a dish of tea. Or it may be possible for you to invite the host to join you and the hostess for lunch or dinner.

In any event, let me urge you again to make your invitation definite. Maybe something like this, "Anne, when we go to town on Tuesday, I'd love to give a party for you and Bill. Would you let me give an informal little dinner party at that nice restaurant that is such a favorite of yours? If you agree, I'd like to ask Mr. and Mrs. Allan and Mr. and Mrs. Graham to join us. We could perhaps have an early dinner after we've finished shopping, and take that ten o'clock train back here.

Cranston Family Picnic Held at Oak Lake

The Cranston family picnic was held on Monday, August fourth, at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sandercock at the Trent River. The weather was ideal and a pleasant time was spent in swimming and bathing, after which there was a program of sports in which nearly all participated. There were prizes for young and old as each tried their skill at different games. During the sports, ice cream was served several times which was greatly enjoyed.

Each child who entered the contest was given a balloon by Mrs. Warren Reid the oldest member of the family. Prizes were given to those coming from a hundred miles or more and were won by Mr. and Mrs. George Cranston and Jack, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. John Cranston, Ottawa, and Pte. Hubert Mitchell, North Bay. Prizes for the youngest present was awarded Douglas Mitchell and the oldest member of the family, Mrs. Warren Reid.

Tables were spread with all the good things that make up a picnic. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Andrew Cranston and after a brief address a minute's silence was observed in memory of Thomas Cranston who had passed away this year.

The officers for the coming year were elected:

President—Mr. Andrew Cranston.
Secretary—Mrs. Elmer Sandercock.
Sports Committee—Milton Snider. Elmer Sandercock.

There being a sum of money left from the expenses, it was decided by vote to send it to the Telegram War Victims' Fund. It was decided to hold the reunion next year on the Civic Holiday at the same place.

Fashion Flashes

IT ISN'T ALL black this year. Frocks in dark navy and dark brown satin are being featured by smart stores throughout the country.

TREAT YOURSELF to a new hat. Big flaring brims characterize many of the newest models. One hat, in black velvet, has a pinked edge to its flaring, heart-shaped brim.

A BIT OF NONSENSE in the fashion world appears now and then such as the hat trimmed with silver fox paws, each paw sporting bright red claws.

A GOOD FIND is the frock that is fashioned on sports lines and yet has neat dressy touches. Such a model is in aqua blue crepe woolen with rabbit's hair woven through. Stitched, pleated skirt, intricate seaming on the bodice which has a clip that fastens the collar two ways. Copper links for the belt.

PRETTY and doing a swell job are the new foundation garments designed for autumn clothes. A grand new high-waisted girdle of elastic net has a front panel in butterfly design. The markings aren't only decorative, but give the extra control where needed.

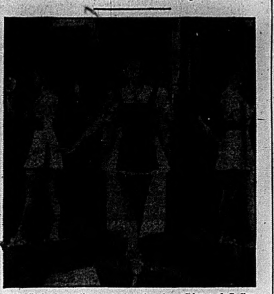
Bad Posture is a Beauty Sin



Judy Garland practices correct posture by walking a chalk line while watching herself in the mirror.

By HELEN FOLLETT

LET MADAME who would sport the chic silhouette give herself a posture test. She has but to stand against the wall—heels, buttocks, shoulders, head touching, head and chin on the level—then walk forward. The chest will be lifted, the abodmen flat, arms will fall naturally and gracefully. Does she always carry that pose? It is not likely. Poor posture is the besetting beauty sin of the modern woman. She does not walk in splendor. She is more likely to lope or scuttle along to get where she is going.

When the body is carried properly and with spirit the collar bones sink away into obscurity. With shoulders thrown forward, they pop into the public eye.

The set of the head is important. If the chin drops, there is an ugly line at the back of the neck where it joins the back. If the head is thrown back, one has the bossy, domineering look which does not invite admiration. Keep your head on the level.

When walking use a light step and don't let the knees buckle. Even some youngsters have that bad habit, which is caused by slouchy movements. Keep the legs more or less rigid. Point toes straight ahead. No hip swinging; that's terrible. It is a silly affectation assumed by some of the vain ones among us.

While we are on the subject of walking we wish to remind the members of the beauty clientele that it is an excellent form of exercise. Refreshing to the mind and the body. Considering that the average woman leaps into the family bus if she has an errand only a few blocks away, we wonder that the sisters don't lose the use of their legs.

Walking is good for the fat and the thin because it has a normalising effect. So pull on your seven league boots and push off.

New Findings About Voice Changes Occurring in Adults

Old people develop a husky voice. The reason probably is a change which takes place in the muscles of the body in old age, causing them to relax. However, studies of the voice of very old people compared with studies of the muscles made previously did not seem to prove that the changes in the muscles were sufficient to bring about the change in the voice. Now investigators Bach, Lederer and Dimolt of the Cook County Hospital and the University of Illinois School of Medicine have made a more detailed study of the voice box or larynx in persons exceedingly advanced years who had died. They found that the blood supply to the tissues in older people becomes much less and that for that reason there are serious changes in the muscles and also changes in the nerves. Similar changes were found in the muscles of a young man who had long suffered with severe anemia.

When Voice is Lost

Sometimes the voice suddenly disappears and the doctors are unable to find any change in the muscles or in the nerves that is responsible. This is believed in most instances to be a mental phenomenon. It is important, however, that the doctors be able to determine which instances are wholly mental and which represent actual changes in the form of paralysis of the nerves or tissues involved in producing the voice. One instance was reported of a woman, 35 years of age, who always lost her voice when she was exposed to cold or got her feet wet. In each instance her voice was restored by passing a tube into the throat and spraying the vocal cords, although even this treatment must have been psychologic since there was nothing found that could have produced the disturbances.

Sometimes a singer or a speaker will lose the voice following a cold or sore throat, the loss of voice being associated with fear of damage to the voice which will interfere with making a livelihood.

Medical Problems in Flying

In a report on the medical problems associated with aviation, Dr. John R. Poppen says that the machines are stronger than men. The current problem is not how to get more out of the machine but how to get more out of the men. Increased speed has placed a greater premium on the careful selection of personnel.

A danger to live has been the discovery of the possibility of an aeroembolism, which means the plugging of a blood vessel by an air bubble. Among the human problems in aviation which now give most concern are adaptability to dark, because the increasing operations carried on at night; the development of suitable cold-resisting clothing and of heating for the cockpit; the development of anti-glare glasses and visors, and the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning to the aviator because of the use of the cockpit that is fully enclosed.

Army's Mentally Unfit

Between 1923 and 1941 our federal government paid out almost one billion dollars for compensation and for the care of mental and nervous cases among war veterans. Out of 91 facilities provided by the government for veterans, 28 are for mental cases.

These figures emphasize the importance of modern attempts to prevent entrance into military service of men mentally defective or of the type likely to break down under military strains. Psychiatrists recommend that all recruits and selectees should be drafted for a probational period of three to six months so that neurotics, psychotics and psychopathic men can be eliminated before they are actually and regularly enrolled in the service.

MELROSE W.M.S.

The ladies of the Melrose W.M.S. held their monthly meeting at the Shannonville parsonage, on Wednesday August 6, with an attendance of twelve and four visitors. The President Mrs. John MacFarlane occupied the chair, and the meeting opened with the theme for the year "Living the Christian Life", and theme for August, "Demonstrating the way of Christ in Social Welfare" followed by Call to Worship led by the President. Hymn 510 was sung and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

Mrs. S. Anderson read the Bible lesson.

It was decided to hold a garden party in the near future.

Mrs. Charles MacFarlane took up the Social Welfare program with Hymn 271 of which the first two verses were read by Mrs. Chas. MacFarlane and the third verse was sung.

Mrs. Roy Badgley read from the August Leaflet the story "Our Canadian Home" by (Mrs. R. W.) Hazel Scott. Study Book on India was given by Mrs. Chas. MacFarlane, the History Life of Dr. Juan Massey.

Mrs. E. Badgley sang a solo. Mrs. F. Bennett gave a reading on "Thankfulness". Hymn 669 was sung. Collection was taken and amounted to $4.21.

The meeting closed with benediction. A social half hour was spent the hostess, Mrs. Gannon, served a delicious lunch. A hearty vote of thanks both for the delicious lunch and for the opening of the parsonage home, was moved by Mrs. John MacFarlane and seconded by Mrs. E. Pascoe.

CHAPTER ONE

Mrs. Platt's Secretary.

The sound of shrill young voices came floating gaily up to the elegant Platt library. They sounded against the redwood paneling, against the book-lined shelves reaching to the ceiling, unmistakably filling the big sombre room with something which had not been there before.

Dona Nickelson heard the voices all too poignantly as she sat at Mrs. Frederick Gerington Platt's exquisitely carved desk by an open window. She cradled her chin in her hands, sighed, her eyes riveted on the lively scene on the drive below where a dozen sport-costumed members of Unadilla's debutante set were milling about with as many boyish companions. With saucy gibes and happy laughter, they were now arranging themselves in high-powered cars, preparatory to a day's skiing at Mt. Arrowhead.

Presently, the cars got away with a deafening roar and honking, plainly expressing their drivers' high spirits that must be released or explode as surely as overinflated balloons.

"Nothing but a good time on their minds," thought Dona, a trifle rebelliously. "Here I am — nearly nineteen—younger than most of them—and I feel a hundred."

As the last car slid out beneath the lacy pepper trees to the broad winding boulevard, Dona sighed again and determinedly attacked the day's routine which her position in this socially important household demanded. She picked up a pen and tried to concentrate upon the addressing of two hundred invitations to temperamental Roberta Platt's important coming-out party, scheduled to take place two days after Christmas.

Dona had long since decided that Roberta, or Bob as she was called, had nearly everything worthwhile. Bob's wealthy widowed mother indulged her slightest wish and several million dollars in her own name gave her brilliant social contacts. Bob had beauty, poise, finishing school education; she'd known little but fun and flattery and luxury in her whole twenty years.

Impatiently now, Dona pinned an unruly curl into the tight blond knot at the nape of her neck. As if in protest to this desecration of so precious an asset, brilliant sunshine suddenly skirted over the green lawn carpet out front, lightly touched scarlet poinsettia, blue plumbago and pink geranium, impishly laying its long bright finger-tip on the scowling Dona. Her head was now a golden crown above her fair skin and delicate patrician features, making her as lovely as any Romney beauty ever hung on gallery wall.

Wholly unconscious of this, Dona jumped up, let down the venetian blind to blot out the annoying glare, and was again Mrs. Platt's efficient, self-effacing secretary of three months experience.

She now tried to ignore the thread of discontent which more and more lately had been tormenting her. She reassured herself that she was thankful to have this fine position with its excellent salary. She told herself how lucky she'd been to get it so soon after losing Aunt Lucy. It was lucky, too, that she had finished high school. Even if Aunt Lucy had lived to go on with her dressmaking, college for her niece would have been out of the question. Yes, Aunt Lucy had been a grand person. It was too bad she never had been repaid for bringing up the homeless three-year-old child she had taken to her heart after Dona's parents died.

But now that she was entirely on her own, Dona knew she could not afford to let self-pity creep into her working hours. It was only at times like this, when her head ached a little, and she was brought face to face with the glamorous doings of Bob Platt's set, that discontent nearly overpowered her good sense.

"Anyhow, I wouldn't know my way around," she told herself severely, while painstakingly sealing an envelope addressed to Miss Willa Jeffers, heiress to a great oil fortune. "It certainly takes a bankroll to run around with that crowd. Bob's boy-friends wouldn't understand me. Why, the only boys I've ever dated think high-school dances and neighborhood movies are tops. The price of a Bob Platt corsage would leave them speechless!"

The desk telephone rang sharply and Dona picked up the receiver.

She said automatically, "Mrs. Platt's secretary speaking."

"This is Tugwell Nash of the 'Star.' Anything new on the social horizon?"

The keenly aggressive voice suggested a young man who generally got what he went after. Dona was surprised because Miss Teller, the "Star's" society reporter, usually called up for news. This might be one of Bob's smart-aleck friends trying to be funny.

So she said cautiously, "Oh—er—Miss Teller called recently. I.."

"Don't blame you for being suspicious. This society stuff is pretty raw for a cub sports reporter isn't it? Miss Teller's on vacation—I'm pinch-hitting for her."

"Really? Well, in that case, Mr. Nash, you'd like to know about Miss Roberta Platt's coming-out party."

"Naturally. When and where does it come off?"

There was a pleasantly arresting confidence-inspiring quality about Tugwell Nash's telephone personality. Dona's voice sounded less formal when she told him, "It's to be in the Trillmore ballroom, December twenty-seven."

"Thanks. And the decorations, clothes to be worn by the principals?"

Dona smiled into the mouthpiece.

"Mrs. Platt's discussing plans with decorators—and I'm not sure about the gowns Mrs. Platt and her daughter will wear. If you'll call later—"

"Okay. Thanks a million. I'll be seeing you."

Dona, still smiling, dropped the receiver into its cradle. This Tugwell Nash evidently shoved himself into the right places through sheer perseverance. She visualized him as not too good-looking. Probably he had an artistic bent or Miss Teller wouldn't have given him the difficult assignment of writing about women's clothes.

Dona picked up her pen again, thinking that she must diplomatically pin Bob Platt down to a clear statement about her coming-out gown. Bob was apt to change her mind at the last minute, of course, and refuse to wear the lovely fragile creation being made for her by a smart modiste. She might on impulse snatch up something common she saw in a shop window and wear it against all pleas of her long-suffering mother. Bob was impossible sometimes.

Dona decided not to allow the description of the wrong gown to embarrass young Mr. Nash who doubtless was struggling to make a name for himself in the newspaper world. Yet why should she bother about him? He was only a voice, although she acknowledged reluctantly, a quite nice voice.

It was a few days later when the owner of this voice presented himself at the Platt residence and in a matter-of-fact way asked for an interview with Mrs. Platt.

Any other stranger would have been refused admittance but Connell, experienced butler of the house, had had orders from Mrs. Platt concerning the press. Always, the press was to be treated courteously. Even the socially powerful Mrs. Platt couldn't afford to offend reporters who continually headed their columns with her name.

Connell appeared at the library door and announced, "Beg pardon, Miss Nickelson—a Mr. Nash from the 'Star' is in the reception room. He asked for Mrs. Platt—but I thought you—" Connell coughed significantly.

"Thank you, Connell. I'm sure Mrs. Platt is too busy to see him. Please say I'll be right down."

But just to make certain her surmise was correct, Dona hurried into Mrs. Platt's peach and gold boudoir.

Mrs. Platt was sitting before her dressing-table mirror and Jettie, her maid, was retouching her mistress's short hennaed hair.

A reporter in the house now annoyed Grace Platt exactly as Dona had supposed it would.

"Gracious—that man here on this busy morning!" she exclaimed fretfully at Dona's announcement. Impatiently, she drew her cream silk negligee closer about her plump, medium height body. "Dona, you'll have to take him on. He'll want to write up Bob's party—you know more about it than I do. Be careful, Jettie! You're smearing that stuff all over my ear!"

"Sorry, madame," came resignedly from Jettie, trim in crisp white apron over her black uniform.

"You're wearing gold brocade and green orchids, Mrs. Platt," put in Dona helpfully.

"Yes—but don't forget the diamond and sapphire butterfly in my hair—and Bob's ruby bracelet—a family heirloom, you know. Hurry along, Dona. We can't keep the reporter waiting."

"But—Miss Roberta's gown—"

"Oh, tell him anything — anything you think will satisfy him. Or perhaps you'd better mention what I hope she'll wear—the coral-shaded chiffon."

"Yes, Mrs. Platt," murmured Dona and hastily fled from the room.

With a head full of confused ideas, she ran breathlessly down the great broad staircase.

She paused briefly outside the reception room, straightened the white lace collar on her severely plain navy crepe dress, a strange anticipation racing through her. She tried to assure herself that she was acting perfectly silly. Getting so fluttery over meeting a telephone voice—in person—was childish. Mr. Nash was merely doing his job by coming here; he would accept her as part of the Platt scenery and nothing more.

She took a deep breath, flung her head high and quickly entered the reception room.

The back of a tall dark young man with his well set up shoulders was turned toward her. He was standing before the full-length, gilt-framed portrait of Frederick Gerington Platt, former master of this house.

The young man heeled abruptly around.

"Funny-looking geezer, wasn't he? I'll bet that long drooping hair on his upper lip made him go for a moustache cup. Imagine him in this arty mansion!"

The speaker's full crimson lips parted over the whitest, most perfect teeth that Dona had ever seen. His alert brown eyes twinkled as his contagious laughter rang out.

Dona laughed with him; laughed she told herself tremulously, with the handsomest man she had ever met. This fact was so astounding, it left her speechless.

Then suddenly he sobered, became all business.

"I'm Tugwell Nash — Tug for short, Miss—er—"

"Nickelson," she supplied, and dropped into the nearest chair. "I'm Mrs. Platt's secretary."

"Fine. I talked with you over the phone."

"Yes."

He took the opposite chair and quickly produced notebook and pencil from the pocket of his brown sport coat.

"You doing the honors for her ladyship—or does she make the grand entrance later?" he asked, looking slightly amused.

"Mrs. Platt's too busy to see you. I can give you any—any necessary information," replied Dona stiffly.

"Swell. I'll need your help, all right. Let's see—the glamorous, popular, beautiful heiress to the Platt millions is about to go on the marriage block. Who's the highest bidder? Social Register Tom Castor gets the biggest break, I hear."

Dona clutched her lower lip in sharp little teeth to keep from saying what she shouldn't—to a reporter. She was well aware that Mrs. Platt was determined to get the eligible Mr. Castor for a son-in-law, but this wasn't for publication.

Mr. Nash's brown eyes were resting speculatively on Dona.

"Why cover up your best points?" he asked her, most unexpectedly. "It's a terrific waste. You'd be pretty if your hair wasn't plastered flat back. Your eyes aren't half bad, you know—and you don't need much make-up. But why not a little—for the love of mike?"

Dona flushed to the roots of her haid. She was visibly provoked. She knew her nose must be shining like varnish because she'd forgotten to powder it.

"Nice of you to be so frank, Mr. Nash. But you came here to get something about the Platt family, didn't you?" she reminded him curtly.

He sighed and shook his head as if he were infinitely sorry for her. He said finally, "Thanks for the reminder. I was merely trying to tell you—"

"The ball decorations are being done by Bidwell and Bidwell," put in Dona quickly.

"Lavish, no end—holiday stuff." He began writing in his notebook. "Evergreens, red berries, mistletoe?"

"You can call Bidwell's for that information, Mr. Nash—it's entirely in their hands."

Her voice was brittle but he did not appear to notice.

"Much obliged — I will. Now about dresses. You'll have to help, Miss Nickelson. Calico's all velvet to me. This woman's job was wished on me, you know."

He ran a hand through his crisp black hair and scowled. Against her best judgment, he was gaining her sympathy.

So she minutely described the gowns and jewels to be worn by Mrs. Platt and her daughter. She gave him a list of the receiving line, society leaders, the number of guests; she mentioned the famous orchestra that had been hired and the people who were giving dinners before the ball.

She managed to keep her voice level against the quick beating of her heart, but it was one of the most difficult things she'd ever done. This man's mere presence dangerously stirred her and she couldn't account for it. It provoked her. After the way he'd criticized her, he should be snubbed. He should know that she wouldn't last long on this job if she spent her time primping. Mrs. Platt hired her to work, not to strut before mirrors.

Then before she could quite make up her mind what to do about him, Tugwell Nash was leaving. She found herself standing, her hand firmly clasped in his.

"Thank you, Miss Nickelson — hope we run into each other again sometime," he clipped out. He gave her hand a quick pressure, dropped it and was out of the house before she had fairly recovered her breath.

"We-ell!" she gasped and sank weakly to a divan.

She felt completely baffled. What had she actually told Tug Nash about the Platt's? Had she said too much or too little? The man had swept her entirely off her feet. This was silly, because he'd been so impersonal about everything. He'd treated her more like a parent than a man who couldn't be much over twenty-five.

Soon, in her dressing room with its frilly orchid curtains and green satin slipper chairs, she was giving herself careful scrutiny. She was perched before her orchid-skirted dressing table, seriously studying hen wide-set blue eyes, her turned up nose that she'd always regretted.

She loosened a strand of light blond hair and it immediately curled coquettishly over one ear, making this side of her face childishly appealing, while the other side was that of Mrs. Platt's dependable secretary with no furbelows or nonsense about her.

For a long serious moment, Dona studied these two reflections. Then somewhat regretfully, she pinned back the little golden curl. It would never do. She couldn't afford to take chances. Mrs. Platt needed a dependable-looking secretary who would aid in making Roberta Platt shine so brilliantly that she'd marry into an even greater social background than she already had. Mrs. Platt was bending everything to this end.

But a gentle smile played around Dona's face now as she returned to the library desk. She was inclined to be lenient concerning Tug Nash. Perhaps he had meant to be helpful instead of brutally frank. But what did it matter? She'd probably never see him again.

The day of the ball, all was confusion in the great house of Platt, where a nervous mother and daughter were exhausting the patience of servants with an irritating succession of unreasonable demands. For a week Dona had been carefully sorting acceptances and the few regrets, so that hotel chefs could prepare for the midnight supper and Miss Roberta Platt's exclusive dinner before the ball. Dona had been deluged by telephone calls, had run hectic errands all over town for the excited Mrs. Platt, and endured her testy disposition to the exhaustion point.

Then the unexpected happened.

Dona had settled in her sitting room for an evening with a book when the slight, dark-haired Bob, in a chiffon negligee, came in exclaiming excitedly, "What a mess! Tom Castor's friend, George De Lane, the famous writer, flew in this afternoon. Every girl in town is dated for dinner. You'll have to do the honors, Dona. Mother says it's the only solution. You can wear one of my dresses—we're about the same size. Jettie can do your hair—if she has time."

"Why—I'd—I'd love it, of course!" exclaimed Dona.

"Grand!" sang out Bob, her dark eyes filled with relief as she flounced out of the room.

Anticipation raced wildly through Dona now. She was going to see first hand one of the biggest social events in the history of Unadilla!. The dinner preceding it would be dreadfully difficult, but she'd get through it somehow. For one whole night she was going to escape from her shell of reserve—be a social butterfly! What a break! What a perfectly thrilling, unheard of break!

Pop was smoking to himself with a sattisfied expression and ma said, Willyum there's a little job I want you to do for me, it wont take you very long.

Dont you think I deserve a well earned rest? pop said, A rest from what for land sakes?

From household chores, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum you haven't fixed anything around the house for weeks and ages.

People with such short memories must be very happy, pop said. For instants, just to cite one of many examples dont you remember a certain loose and squeeky shutter that is now practically silent, thanks to my expert ministration? he said, and ma said, You mean thanks to my reminding you and pestering you about it till nothing but the lowest sense of shame drove you to fix it.

When I think back, there seems no limit to the odd jobs I've done around here, pop said. I feel like an old fire horse that ought to be put out in the pasture to graze as a reward for his years of faithful service. I feel like a devoted old slave that should be given his freedom to bask in the sun outside the cabin door. Do you recall those leeking kitchin faucets? he said, and ma said, I certainly do, and I recall who fixed them. The plummer, she said.

Who telephoned the plummer? pop said, and ma said, You did, in cowardly self defence, and pop said, Do you recall a certain bureau draw that stick in its tracks till I planed it so it slid like velvet?

Well what a memory, we dont even possess that bureau any more, ma said, and pop said, What did you want me to do?

O never mind, if that's the kind of a humor you're in I'm not even going to waist my breath suggesting it, ma said.

Wich she didn't.

MAIZE FOR RICE

Pretoria, (CP) — Increased war-time use of maize (Indian corn) in South Africa is replacing rice to some extent and imports of the latter decreased from 175,000,000 pounds in 1939 to 123,000,000 in 1940.

Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 on the open road.
Don't strain your engine; change gears.
Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.
Tune up motor, timing, etc.
Keep spark plugs and valves clean.
Check cooling system; overheating wastes gasoline.
Maintain tires at right pressure.
Lubricate efficiently; worn engines waste gasoline.
Drive in groups to and from work, using cars alternate days.
Boat owners, too, can help by reducing speed.

Your regular service station man will gladly explain these and other ways of saving gasoline. Consult him.

Here's the easiest way of all to save gasoline so badly needed for our Navy, Army and Air Force. Drive to work in fours instead of singly, taking turns and so using only ONE car instead of four. Point Anne 'Cementmen' Only One Game Away From Winning City Softball Championship

Team Scores Third Win Over Corbys 9-4 Getting Seven Runs in First Inning

CORBYS OUTHIT

Only one more to win.

That's how the Point Anne "Cementmen" stand in the City League finals with Corbys A.C. after winning 9 to 4 at the Cement Village last night to make the series for the Bank of Commerce Trophy and the City Softball League final championship series stand at three games for Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen and one for Corbys in a best-in-seven series.

The Cementmen drove Connie Harris from the mound in the initial frame when they scored seven runs on three hits, two walks and a brace of errors. Johnnie Bawden ascended the mound for the losers with one out and halted the rally. Bawden came through with some fine relief hurling, but his teammates failed to get the necessary hits off "Ding" Luffman, who chalked up his third consecutive win over the Corbys in as many starts in the City League finals.

Corbys Opened Strong

Corbys opened strong as Henn doubled, Kiser drove a hard triple to right and Ronsky singled to score two runs. The Cementmen's big inning followed in the bottom half of the initial frame, when they scored seven big runs, enough to coast into victory on Luffman's fine pitching feat. With one out Loft walked, Whitehead singled, Sero strolled and Green was safe on an error. Mike Whalen rapped out a double, Hutchings singled and Doug Bennett followed suit to score seven runs and see Harris replaced by Johnnie Bawden, who halted the rally by retiring the next two batters. Corbys got another in the fifth on hits by Hamilton and Pointer and their last run came as the result of pinch-hitter Harold Bawden's double, Jim Barriage's single and Henn's second double. Corbys left three stranded in the last inning as Luffman and his teammates rose to the occasion. Loft's single and Whitehead's double gave Point Anne another run in the sixth, while Genereaux and Loft singled to add an eight inning counter.

Pointers Outhit Corbys

Corbys counted three extra base hits, Kiser's triple and Henn's two doubles, while Whitehead and Mike Whalen hit doubles for the homesters. Every member of Bubby Gaulin's charges hit safely, except Sero and Luffman, and made their hits count into runs. Each nine scored exactly two runs after a rather hectic first inning start, when the bulk of the scoring resulted. After the first inning the game developed into a fine pitchers' duel between Luffman and John Bawden, but the difference in the first inning scoring gave the Cementmen enough to win. Corbys left seven stranded to Point Anne's four, but the box score tells the tale.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Pinch-hitting for Freddie Brietz, Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 13—(AP) — Joe DiMaggio was seen at a Long Island spot the other night playing the machine that shoots balls at a batter—and hitting aught for 15.

Curious but correct:

Leon Hamilton, Secretary of the Jacksonville Sally League Club, had to advertise in the Augusta papers for the club's bus and driver, which turned up missing during a series there. . . . He got 200 answers before the cops located the bus. . . . Two Minnesota linemen, Don Nolander and Bernie Nelson, are working this summer as linemen—for a telephone company. . . Asa Howling, the Oklahoma amateur heavyweight, was turned down by the Air Corps because of ear trouble . . . no wonder.

Minnesota's 1941 football team will play its home games on a converted cow pasture. . . . Several thousand yards of sod were transferred from a pasture to the playing field at Memorial Stadium during the summer.

Good hit, no field:

Zeke Bonura doesn't have to worry about his fielding lapses any more. . . . No matter how bad they are the army won't give him his unconditional release.

Lawn Bowling

Toronto, Aug. 13—(CP)—Play in the Provincial Lawn Bowling Tournament advanced to the finals of the Eaton Gold Trophy and the Henry Trophy events today, leaving two Western Ontario rinks to meet in the Eaton event and a Toronto and suburban rink to play off for the Henry Trophy. The doubles competition for the new Townsend-Clark Trophy and the Birks-Ellis Ryrie Trophy start today.

The other three events—the Ontario Trophy, the Toronto Cup and the Consolation—are down to the quarter-finals and play in these events will be completed today.

In the Eaton Trophy semi-finals a Windsor rink, skipped by J. T. Kay, nosed out the London Thistles under P. D. McCallum, 16-14, while Charles Haskett's Elmwoods from London defeated the Hamilton Argyles skipped by A. Moffatt, 16-9. These rinks meet today in the finals.

In the Henry Trophy event Stan Chapman's Weston rink meet the Toronto St. Matthews, skipped by W. Hogarth, in the finals. Yesterday Weston defeated J. A. Burgess, Toronto Kodak, 17-10, and St. Matthews defeated H. G. Randell's Lawrence Park rink 15-6 in the semi-finals.

VETERANS HELP NEWARK BEARS STAY ON TOP

Leo Nonenkamp Delivers Blow That Wins Second Game of Twin Bill

ROYALS GAIN

(By the Associated Press)

Newark Bears are justly proud of the young baseball players they develop for New York Yankees, but they also point with pride to the "bargain" veterans that George Weiss has picked up to help them along from time to time. The list includes such fellows as Pete Appleton, Steve Sundra, Johnny McCarthy, Jim Gleeson, Bob Seeds and, this year, Leo Nonenkamp.

Leo has been up in the majors with Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Red Sox without making his mark. This spring Manager Johnny Neun wasn't quite certain whether to keep him. Recently, while the Bears have been staggering along with four regulars missing through illness and injuries, Nonenkamp has had a chance to prove his value. He's done it with better than .300 batting.

It was Nonenkamp who enabled the International League leaders to earn an even break with Baltimore Orioles last night, winning the second game 4-2 after the Bears submitted to an 8-6 battering in the opener. He tripled after two were out in the seventh to drive in the winning run and then scored to cap a three-run rally.

In the first game three Newark errors contributed to Hank Borowy's downfall and let the Orioles gain their second victory in 20 games.

The second-place Montreal Royals picked up a half-game in the race by winning a single from Toronto, 7-4, and Buffalo's third-place Bisons also split a twin bill, dropping an extra-inning opener to Rochester 5-3, then winning 5-4. Syracuse Chiefs won the only unanimous decision, beating Jersey City twice 7-6 and 6-5.

Star Hockey Player Killed in Accident

Ottawa, Aug. 13. —(CP)—Jules Cholette, 28-year-old star wingman with Hull Volants of the Quebec Senior Hockey League and member in 1936-37 of the World Champion Sudbury Frood Miners, died in hospital here last night from injuries suffered in an auto accident last Saturday.

He was to have been married yesterday to Leontine Bouvier of Bourger, Ont., and it was while returning from her home to Hull and a reception planned in his honor by Volant teammates that his car went out of control when he misjudged a curve.

He died without regaining consciousness and before doctors learned just what internal injuries he had suffered.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Frank Crespi, Cardinals — Made four hits and singled two runs home in eight inning to win see-saw game from Cubs.

Pete Appleton, White Sox, and Bob Muncrief, Browns — Each pitched seven scoreless innings in relief in 14-inning battle to a tie.

Al Benton, Tigers, and Al Milnar, Indians —Former shutout Cleveland on four hits in first game and latter retaliated with five-hit performance to win second game.

SWACO LASSIES SCORE 32-16 WIN OVER DEACONS

Winners Tally Fourteen Runs in Third Frame to Put Contest on Ice

ERRORS PLENTIFUL

With a one-sided 32 to 16 score Ken Watt's SWACO girls took their first semi-final play-off in the City Ladies' Softball League over the Deacon gals at the Armouries last night. After the winners scored 14 runs in the third inning it was no contest from there in, despite the fact the Deacons rallied to score nine in the sixth of an abbreviated seven inning game, called on account of darkness.

Deacons opened strongly to score five runs in the top half of the initial inning on two hits and a quartette of errors, but the SWACO gals retaliated in their half of the initial frame after Danny Stead, their ace hurler, had struck out the side against Deacons. The "eastenders" scored seven runs in the bottom half of the initial frame on eight hits, including Rene Coldens' circuit blow. The SWACOS score in every inning, except the second, getting fourteen in the third and nine in the sixth.

Filled With Errors

The game was filled with errors, as the players on both squads played their most erratic ball of the year. The SWACOS had a total of 30 hits off the deliveries of Flossie McMurter, 14 of which were of the extra base nature. Rene Colden, Dot Ronsky, Peg Rowbotham and "Mad" Kelleher each had round-trippers for the winners, while 'Toots' Sharpe hit for the circuit for the Deacons, who counted 14 hits, of which four were for extra bases. Tonight at the Armouries Zellers and Vikings battle in their second playoff struggle, Zellers winning the first of a best-in-five series by a 14 to 8 count.

The line-ups—Deacons—Ridley 2b, Samain ss, Muir cf, J. Corneal and Sharpe rf, Dolder 3b, Weeks 1b, Hansen lf, McMurter p and Woodhouse c. SWACO—Colden 3b, Stead p, Rowbotham 1b; N. Corneal rf; Langman c; Kelleher cf; Ronsky lf; Richardson ss and Fralick 2b.

Pirates Have Benefit of Long Home Stand in September To Help Them Gain on Leaders, Put in a Bid for the Flag

By WALTER L. JOHNS
(Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 13 — Can the Pirates do it? Can they continue their remarkable climb and go on to their first pennant in 14 years?

Those are the hottest baseball questions of the moment as the bounding Buccaneers of the Smoky City keep up the pell-mell rise which has lifted them from last place in May to a position now but eight games back of the pacemakers.

Not even considered in the pre-season pennant calculation, Frankie Frisch's club has nailed 18 of the last 21 games played and hasn't lost a series in the last 14!

Naturally, at this rate, the Pirates could accelerate to within a pot-shot of the leaders, and, in rival series, move into the No. 1 slot. At the same time, the Cardinals and the Dodgers have to be sidetracked, for eight games, and outside of the Pirates none of the other clubs have shown they can do it.

Bucs' Home Schedule

Coincident with the Bucs' dash up the ladder, the pennant-splurge of the Boston Braves of 1914 is revived. The Braves, the record shows, were in last place only July 19 and not only zipped by the other clubs, but topped the second-place team at the finish by 10 1-2 games!

One thing extremely favorable to the Pirates in their bid for league suprmacy is the schedule. The Bucs' home calendar in September is the best in years. No less than 21 games are scheduled for Forbes' Field where the fighting Frischmen should be at their best.

But to whittle down the lead of the Cards and the Brooks, the Pittsburghers must take big slices before going into the home stretch for only five games, two with the Dodgers and three with the Cards, are booked with the leaders during the final stand at the Bucs' home field.

If the Bucs can sweep the series with the Cards in a home stand against the St. Louis club beginning Aug. 15, the final weeks of the National League race will be a humdinger. But the Bucs have a "must" assignment then, or their chances are lost.

Then, too, the Pittsburghers will have to baffle the Brooks in a three-game series in Flatbush following the Cardinal competition.

Many Factors for Rise

The Cards have a big home schedule for the last month, meeting every club. This should be an advantage for the Redbirds. But the Dodgers have only seven games at home during the stretch drive and their lead must be maintained while on the road.

The Pittsburgh club, lacking individual stars, home run hitters and a pitching staff that was diagnosed as weak, has come through with flying colors by sheer fighting spirit. Of course, the breaks, hitting in the pinches and effective pitching must be considered for the Bucs have had to score runs to win like any other club.

The return of Arky Vaughn to short after riding the bench; the hitting of Elbie Fletcher, Vaughn and Stuart Martin, all now above the .300 class, the fine catching of Veteran Al Lopez, Debs Garms' pinch-hitting streak, the sensational win record of Lynn Heinzerling since he became a bridegroom and the steady pitching of Ace Truett (Rip) Sewell may be mentioned as playing a part in the rampage of the Bucs.

Cards Capture National League Lead on the Eve of Departure On Crucial 19-Game Tour

St. Louis Wins From Cubs While Giants Take Two From Dodgers

FELLER LOSES AGAIN

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
Associated Press Sport Writer

The sizzling St. Louis Cardinals are back on top of the topsy-turvy National League today.

They won their fourth straight contest and spurted to a game and a half margin over Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday just before rolling out of St. Louis on probably the toughest touring itinerary of any big league club this year—a 19-day trip that will take them all over the league before they get back home on Labor Day.

The Dodgers were dumped 8-5 and 2-0 in a doubleheader by New York Giants, while the Redbirds battled to an 8-7 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

A carnival crowd of 39,145 Brooklyn fans, second largest ever to squeeze into the 34,000 capacity Ebbets Field, turned out with the expectation of seeing the Dodgers massacre the Giants again. They had won eight straight from New York and the terrible Terrymen had been pretty terrible recently.

Instead they saw the Giants blast Whitlow Wyatt off the mound with only one out in the first inning of the first game, stride on to victory with Master Melvin Ott hitting two three-run homers, his 20th. and 21st. of the year, and then capture the nightcap on the magnificent three-hit pitching of Cliff Melton.

The affair at St. Louis was a see-saw struggle with each team using four pitchers and the Cubs outhitting the Cards 16-15. Johnny Mize hit a three-run circuit blow that broke a tie in the third innings and looked as if it ought to decide the game, but the outcome eventually hinged on Frank (Creepy) Crespi's fourth hit of the day, a single scoring two runs in the 8th. inning.

The Phillies nosed out Boston Braves 2-1 in 13 innings in the only other National League engagement. A double by Catcher Tommy Livingston in the 13th. knocked in the winning run.

In the American League perhaps the most noteworthy item was Bob Feller absorbing his ninth defeat. Detroit Tigers downed him 2-0 in the first game of a doubleheader to stretch Cleveland's losing streak to six games, but the Indians battled back to win the second session 4-1.

Indians Unable to Hit

Feller's defeat, his sixth out of the last seven decisions, was caused by the inability of his weak-hitting team-mates to do anything with big Al Benton, who allowed only 4 hits. Feller gave eight.

New York Yankees broke up a pitching duel between Dick Newsome and Spud Chandler with four runs in the eighth inning to beat Boston Red Sox 4-0.

St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Soxr struggled 14 innings to a 6-6 tie before darkness intervened. The Browns built up a 6-0 lead off Bill Dietrich and then lost it in the fifth and sixth frames.

Washington whipped Philadelphia 9-3 with Buddy Lewis driving in five runs on two homers.

Between Innings

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Unless a miracle happens and the city softball finals between Corby's and Point Anne go the limit of seven games, the Intermediate "A" playdowns in the O.A.S.A. will open in Belleville on Aug. 18th, but regardless the latest possible opening date is Aug. 20th, Harry Rollins, 1st Vice-President of the O.A.S.A. announced today. On Aug. 18th the winner of the Trenton League is scheduled to play here, with the return game slated for Trenton on Aug. 20th. Arrangements for a possible third game will be made before the opening of the series. In the Intermdiate "C" series of the Provincial softball playdowns, Point Anne may meet the Rawdon Township League "all-stars" on Aug. 19th. "Red" Townsend's Esquire Juniors will be drawn against either Peterboro' or Oshawa some time the latter part of this month, but Convener Rollins wants to steer clear of Saturday dates for the juniors, who for years have had week-end dates forced upon them when it was not exactly necessary, so says Skipper Townsend.

Scoring seven runs in the initial frame, Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen took a strangle hold on the City Sofball League finals with Corby's A.C. by winning 9 to 4 at Ox Point last night, so it's win or it's all over for Harold Bawden's gang at Coleman Flats tonight. The Cementmen shelled Connie Harris from the Corby mound with a seven-run attack in the first, following which the patrons were treated to a swell pitchers' battle between Johnnie Bawden and "Ding" Luffman, as each team scored two runs after a hectic initial frame was over. Luffman has beaten Corby's three consecutive times in the league finals, while in the other game, won by Harold Bawden's charges, Doug Barnhardt lost after pitching a four-hitter. If the Cementmen continue to play the brand of softball they've dished up of late, they'll not only win the city title, but should take the Intermediate "C" championship of the O.A.S.A. quite handily.

Do you remember when James J. Jeffries, sparring partner for James Corbett in 1897, retained the world's heavyweight boxing title at New York 38 years ago tomorrow with a 10-round decision over Corbett? He lost the title to Jack Johnson, first Negro titleholder, in 1910 after nearly five years' idleness.

As the result of last Thursday's memorial baseball game in Peterboro, some of the old sponsoring standbys like Hugh Campbell, Jim Dorris and Vern Dawson of Peterboro and "Pud" Lane and Jack Highfield of Oshawa, struck upon a novel idea. "Why not amalgamate Oshawa's and Peterboro's playing strength and try to get a bye in the senior Ontario Baseball Association provincial playdowns," suggested Hugh Campbell. An application was forwarded to the O.B.A. through the proper channels and the Oshawa-Peterboro' brainchild of a "combined team" will be heard at a meeting of the O.B.A. being held in Hamilton Thursday.

Jim Braddock told this one on himself while engaged in a fanning bee between bouts at the Hume Arena on Monday night: "I was in Toronto over the week-end and thought I'd attend the earliest Mass possible. I went into church shortly after midnight and was surprised to find the church practically filled. However, I found a vacant seat in one of the rear pews and sat down. A few moments later the person alongside of me gasped with surprise and believe it or not it was a cousin of mine who lives in Toronto and who I haven't seen since before I boxed Baer and won the title. So you see, it's not such a big world after all." admitted Braddock.

Your newsboy later learned Braddock's relative, who resides in Toronto, didn't even know Cousin Jim was in Canada. Incidentally after Monday night's show here, Braddock, Al Dunlop and Phil Lawson journeyed to Tweed, where they got in some fishing early Tuesday morning.

Local sport fans will welcome the appointment of Wing Commander D. A. (Dave) Harding, A.F.C., Commanding Officer of the new No. 5 Initial Training School of the R.C.A.F. at the old Ontario School for the Deaf premises. The school provides initial training for pilots and observers. Dave Harding is well known to the sports world of Canada, football being his first love and hockey second. He starred with more than one of Queen's University grid teams, when Queen's were making grid history. He also played in Toronto and Ottawa and two years ago organized an intermediate hockey team at the R.C.A.F. base in Trenton and added to his ability to organize men by playing with and directing the boys on the ice.

It wasn't much of a contest when the SWACO gals beat the Deacons 32 to 16, errors playing too great a part on both sides. Both pitchers deserved a better fate than the score book revealed, as their team-mates literally booted the ball to every conceivable corner of the Armouries. Incidentally if Danny Stead hadn't struck out three in the first inning, Deacons might have been batting yet. Gloves are rapidly creeping into the local girls' league and by the time tonight's Zeller at Viking game rolls around no doubt all infielders will be equipped with the hand protection that makes defensive play in the girls' game more certain and tends to lessen the error column.

SPORT SPICE — The Dodgers realize now the Giants are still in the National League. . . . The Terrymen whipped the Brooklyns twice yesterday while the Cardinals were beating the Cubs, so today the Mound City nine are back on top of the senior loop standing. . . . But the Cards are headed for a 19-game road trip, the result of which means much to Billie Southworth and company. . . . Connie Mack is in the market for a couple of good reliable moundsmen for his 1942 Athletics, the surprise team of 1941. . . . Star Reid, the well - known Kingston baseball sponser, is seeking an entry for his Limestone Juniors in the O.B.A. playdowns. . . . Beau Hughey is leading the Sunnyside League in batting with a cool .462 thumping average. . . . Kay Genereaux is .333. . . . Carl Hubbell chalked up his tenth win of the season as the Giants beat the Dodgers 8-5 in the first game yesterday. . . . Cool blow the breezes, these invigorating mornings.

AT THE BELLE

"The Bride Came C.O.D."

The path of true love, never smooth according to well-authenticated legend, led James Cagney along three rugged routes this season, and today he is a weary man, ready to rest himself in the cool, quiet evenings of his New England farm.

He started his vacation as soon as he disposed of a romance with Bette Davis, the bride in his newest Warner Bros. picture, "The Bride Came C.O.D." which is now at the Belle theatre.

"You are," said Miss Davis, just before kissing him, "a cheap and vile and deceitful liar."

"That's the kind of thing Cagney has had to put up with this year.

His tenderest scene in "City For Conquest" was achieved only after 60 rounds of prize-fighting a day for five days before the camera.

Immediately after that, Cagney started in pursuit of Rita Hayworth in "The Strawberry Blonde." He lost her entirely. He got Olivia de Havilland which seems like a fair trade but only after a tedious series of black eyes and five years in the pen.

In his first attempt at love-making in "The Bride Came C.O.D.", takes place in an abandoned gold mine, deep in the earth. Rotted timbers support sagging boulders. A cave-in has blocked their exit. A small fire, burning fiercely, fills the tunnel with smoke. They are convinced that they are there to die. In this setting, romance blossoms.

Bette calls Jimmie a deceitful liar but she shows she doesn't mean it by lifting her head to be kissed.

"It was like the fusing of two white-hot-metals into one alloy," according to the authors of the script.

A minute later they were fighting again.

A vacation is what James Cagney needs far from the allure of Ann Sheridan, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth and Bette Davis. Let him who would make love to these ladies beforewarned—a man takes an awful beating before he gets anywhere with them.

An excellent program of Junior features are being exhibited on the same program, including a Pete Smith specialty in technicolor, "Penny to the Rescue," and a timely technicolor film, "Wings of Steel" revealing twenty minutes of excellent entertainment.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Double Date"

Depicting a merry mix-up of romantic escapades, Universal's "Double Date," gay, modern comedy, comes next to the screen of the Capitol theatre.

Edmund Lowe, Una Merkel, Peggy Moran and Rand Brooks head the featured cast of comedy favorites which includes Tommy Kelly, Eddy Waller, Hattie Noel, William Ruhl and others.

Relating the laugh-provoking efforts of a pert, determined young schoolgirl and a swaggering schoolboy-sophisticate to guide their errant adult relatives away from the pitfalls of love, the film is said to be keyed in sparkling dialogue. It was directed by Glenn Tryon, former comedy star of stage and screen.

Lowe essays what is described as one of the most intriguingly humorous roles of his brilliant career.

Miss Moran and Brooks, who plays the son, team up to make life miserable for their respective relatives.

"Queen of Yukon"

One of the most realistic screen fights ever staged is seen in Monogram's "Queen of the Yukon" the second feature with Irene Rich and Charles Bickford in the leading roles.

It is just as important to rehearse a fight scene as it is a heavy dramatic scene. In this instance, Dave O'Brien and Melvin Lang spent four hours battling back and forth before the scene was made.

Fortunately, producer Paul Malvern used to be one of the outstanding stunt men in motion pictures before joining the executive film ranks. He tutored the duo patiently, showing them short cuts on how to really give and take blows.

However, when the battle began, both Lang and O'Brien forgot the kindly advice and put too much enthusiasm in their work with the result the company doctor had to apply bandages and liniment to the suffering two.

"Queen of the Yukon" is a thrilling story of the great northwest.

The Universal news and 6th chapter of the thrilling serial "Mysterious Dr. Satan" close the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Thunder Afloat"

Lovable Wallace Beery will be seen next at the McCarthy theatre in "Thunder Afloat" the timely, thrilling U-boat drama, which also features Chester Morris, Virginia Grey and a host of popular screen personalities. On the same program as the second feature Jack Holt in "Fugitive From a Prison Camp" promises to be a thrill-a-minute, real Holt action hit. The new serial Buck Jones in "The White Eagle" will also be shown, the first chapter of this outdoor action hit is entitled "Flaming Tepees" do not miss it.

"The Women"

Hollywood's supreme comedy, "The Women" starring Joan Crawford Norma Shearer and Rosalind Russell in addition to a splendid second feature "The Richest Man in Town" also latest "Fox News" events(is now closing at the McCarthy theatre. This program is whole heartily recommended to you.

Newark, N.J.: Freddie Archer, 135, Newark, outpointed Tommy Spiegal, 135, Uniontown, Pa. (10).

IT'S THE TIME for brown when autumn comes, since brown is nature's favorite autumn shade. A nice daytime dress is in three shades of brown wool in a lightweight weave. The skirt is dark brown, the dolman-sleeved bodice is in beige, while the broad midriff section, which is laced with dark brown velvet ribbon, is in deep amber.

Una Merkel, (L) with Rand Brooks, Peggy Moran and Edmund Lowe, principals in Universal's swift-paced romantic comedy "Double Date," starting next at the Capitol with the added attraction Jack London's "Queen of the Yukon," featuring Charles Bickford and Irene Rich.

THAT'S MY POP!

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The stock market remained in the grip of August lethargy today.

Gains were limited to fractions and near the fourth hour the list also held a considerable number of minus signs.

Stocks on a higher footing included U.S. Steel, Western Union, Sears Roebuck, Harvester, Air Reduction, Union Carbide, Southern Railway and Great Northern preferred.

Lacking buoyancy were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Good Year and Kennecott.

Canadian stocks were unchanged. In the Bond market Canada 4s lost 1-4 of a point.

The Vichy government's decision to "collaborate" with Hitler, deepening the International clouds, further government price controls and fears that the forthcoming restrictions on instalment buying would cut into profits in a wide segment of the business structure were among the elements making for caution.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 13 (CP)—The gold and industrial stocks on the Toronto exchange registered minor index losses by noon and the base metal and western oil issues held steady. Trading expanded to show turnover of 165,000 shares for the first three hours.

O'Brien traded heavily in an advance to 1.59 before settling around 1.52 for a net gain of a cent. Chesterville and Pioneer were stronger and Wright-Hargreaves, Upper Canada and Paymaster were weaker. Steep Rock was fairly active on a slight advance and other base metals were unchanged.

Imperial Oil, Fanny Farmer, Bell Telephone and Goodyear Tire were soft spots in the industrial list. In the junior oils, Home held steady at 2.30 and Davies was off 1-8 to 15.

Egg Prices Up Butter Steady

Toronto — Exceptionally good inquiry for grade B eggs, which advanced 1 cent a dozen in wholesale-to-retail action, and grade C eggs, which moved up 1-2 to 1 cent in spot prices and 1 cent in retail prices, featured trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter prices held steady on a quiet market.

A firm trend was maintained on the egg market, as demand proved capable of moving receipts satisfactorily. While both B and C occupied stronger positions, other held steady. Grades "A-large," A-medium and A pullets closed at 35, 34 and 28 cents a dozen respectively in the country dealer section.

Offerings continued light on the butter market, and, with no pressure to sell, buying was spotty. A few sales of first grade creamery solids were reported at 37 1-4 cents a pound.

The Ontario Creamery Association last night revealed that the production of creamery butter in this Province for the week ending Aug. 2 was down 5.67 per cent from the same week last year. The output for the week was 949,718 pounds, compared with 984,930 pounds a year ago.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Aug. 13 (CP).—Produce market prices here yesterday as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

Eggs: Graded shipments selling at A-large, 35½; A-medium, 34 1-2; pullets, 28½; B-grade, 28; C-grade, 23½-24. Receipts, 3,170 cases.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 13 —(CP)— Prices were steady on good quality killers in trade on the livestock markets here up to mid-session today. Veal calves, lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. The holdover from yesterday was 900 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 400, calves 200, hogs 690, sheep and lambs 280.

Medium to good weighty steers sold at $8.50-$9, butcher steers and heifers $7.50-$8.85, a few light steers at $9, boners and plain butchers $5.50-$7, butcher cows $5-$7, bulls $5.50-$7, fed calves $9-$10.75, stocker trade slow $5.50-$7.75.

Choice veal calves sold at $12-$12.50 with common selling downward to $7.50. Grass calves sold at $6-$7.

Lambs sold at $12 for good ewes and wethers and at $10-$11 for bucks.

Sheep sold at $3-$6.

Hogs closed previously at $14.40-$14.60 dressedweight at yards or plants.

Montreal, Aug. 13 —(CP)— The Dominion Department of Agriculture reported today that all classes of livestock remained unchanged on the Montreal livestock market.

Receipts: Cattle 38, calves 33, hogs 95.

The cattle offerings brought $5-$7 for common quality steers, and $4.75-$7 for butcher cows. Canners and cutters ranged from $3.50-$4.50 and common bulls $4.50-$5.50 with average at $5.

Veal calves ranged from $8.50-$12. Good veals sold for $11-$12. Late yesterday two choice veals brought in $12.50. Drinkers made $6.50-$8 and grassers $5- $6.50 averaging at $6.

Hogs were sold on rail grade basis at $14.75 for B-1 dressed, $11.25 for B-1 alive off trucks delivered. Grade A drew $1 premium with discounts on off grades. Sows brought $7.50-$8.50 for liveweight and around $10.50 dressed.

Good ewes and wethers made $11.25-$11.50. Sheep ranged from $3.50-$6.

HAS NO PLANS FOR 'GAS' RATION

Munitions Minister C. D. Howe Sees No Immediate Necessity

Ottawa, Aug. 13.—(CP)—Munitions Minister Howe yesterday described the response of Canadian motorists to the Government's appeal for voluntary reduction in gasoline consumption as "reasonably satisfactory".

In an interview the Minister said there are no plans for rationing gasoline and he sees no immediate necessity for it.

"We started this thing, however, and we will go as far as we have to, but I have no indication and I think Mr. Cottrelle (Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle of Toronto) has none that rationing is an immediate necessity", he said.

However, gasoline stocks had been going down steadily and it remained to be seen whether the reduction in consumption by motorists would meet the situation, particularly when the effect of withdrawing tankers for service overseas became felt.

The Minister said his information was that the average reduction in retail sales of gasoline is between 10 and 15 per cent. This represented a considerably larger reduction in the use of gasoline for pleasure motoring as many commercial vehicles—trucks, busses and taxicabs—purchased gasoline from the same stations as private motorists.

The Minister said it was difficult to get an accurate check on the effect of voluntary reduction in gasoline use and the compulsory shortening of hours of sale. Refinery figures are of no value as they include sales for military and other service vehicles, he said.

Asked if rationing cards have been printed, Mr. Howe said he didn't know, but it was possible. If they were printed it indicated nothing more than getting ready for the worst.

"We might print the cards and hope we would not have to use them", he said.

ITALIAN COMMUNIQUE

Rome, Aug. 13. — (AP)— The Italian High Command claimed today sinking of the British steamship Macon and the oil tanker Horn Shell, totalling 17,372 tons by an Italian submarine in the Atlantic.

(The Horn Shell sinking on July 27 was reported August 6, when 12 exhausted survivors reached the Cape Verde Islands aboard the Portuguese freighter Africa Occidental.

(The Macon, 5,135 tons, whose sinking has not been confirmed, formerly was the American freighter Delight built in 1912 at Tacom, Wash., and sold recently to Britain. She also sailed under the Panamanian flag as the Point Ancha, trading between U.S. gulf ports and the Pacific Coast.)

Berlin, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The German high command claimed today that German planes sank three British merchant ships, 19,000 tons in all, in day and night attacks off the Faroe Islands and the east Coast of Scotland.

(Confirmation of these claims is not available.)

One-Vote Margin Extends Service For 18 Months

Washington, Aug. 13—(AP)—By the margin of a single vote a tumultuous House of Representatives gave its approval last night to an 18-months extension of one-year service for the United States army's rank and file. The House resounded with cheers, boos and catcalls as the vote was taken.

The legislation was approved by a record vote of 203 to 202.

Thus the House joined the Senate in approving the War Department's insistent requests that Congress authorise selective service recruits, national guardsmen and reserve army components to be kept in training for a total of 30 months instead of 12, and that it remove the 900,000 maximum on the number of draftees that may be in service at one time.

Final Congressional action by the week-end on a compromise between the almost identical Senate and House bills was expected on all sides—but the unusually close House vote raised questions on procedure.

The normal course would send the measures to conference with each chamber being required to vote on the compromise version. That would mean that the administration would have to run the risk of being defeated in the House.

Senator Barkley's Views

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, expressed hope the Senate might accept the minor House changes in its original bill, thereby permitting it to go to the President without any further House consideration. He said he would discuss the matter with Senate Military Affairs committeemen before reaching a decision.

Both bills declare that since "the nation interest is imperilled," the President shall have power to extend the training periods; that in "hardship cases" men may be discharged from service when their release is not incompatible with the national defence, and that a $10 monthly bonus be paid service men in addition to their regular salary after they have served their first year.

Dozens of recently-inducted men were scattered through the packed galleries during the day-long House debate. Scores of women called members off the floor when the amendment stage was reached and besought them to vote this way or that.

A breakdown of the voting showed that 21 Republicans joined 182 Democrats in approving the legislation while 65 Democrats, 133 Republicans and four minor party members opposed it.

Food Sometimes Causes Poor Showing Of Race Horses

Indianapolis, Aug. 13—(AP)—If your horse is left at the post or fades in the stretch, chances are the trouble can be traced straight to the feed box.

Dr. Cassius Way, 20 years a New York horse show veterinarian, dropped this race track tip today in a paper to be read at the seventy-eighth annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Lack of the right amounts of vitamin D and calcium in the feed bag may give a horse that rundown condition that causes him to run last.

Dr. Way reported examinations in a five-year period of the blood serum of 116 horses showed they had too little calcium and phosphorus in proportion to sugar, the calcium deficiency being 16 per cent from normal.

"Most of these horses were in training," he said, "and showed evidence of fatigue, low vitality and skeletal diseases, which are conditions inimical to good performance."

He said that when the right balance of sugar, calcium and phosphorous was restored the horses' performance improved.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A purge of undercover Free French leaders in France in order to stifle the admittedly widespread opposition to the Vichy regime may be one of the first consequences of Marshal Petain's pledge of full collaboration with Germany.

For months the real power in the Petain government, Admiral Jean Darlan, has been building up a sort of French Gestapo, calling on former friends in the French navy to take key posts in the police system. Now Darlan has been accorded almost a dictator's powers, and is likely first to use them on those of his countrymen who do not share his liking for Nazism.

Frank Avowal of Unpopularity

A surprising feature of Petain's speech was his frank avowal of the unpopularity of his regime. He admitted its authority is everywhere questioned and its orders carried out indifferently. To remedy this he announced creation of "a group of commissars of public power" who in Gestapo fashion will, in Petain's words "have the mission of ferreting out and destroying obstacles" to the regime.

Through Petain's speech can be discerned a recognition of the futility of a collaborationist policy which has practically no popular support. He speaks of "disquiet overtaking minds, doubt gaining control of spirits," with a "real uneasiness" inflicting the whole nation. He complains that to Darlan public opinion has not been "favorable or fair."

What the new turn in events will mean in terms of the French navy and the French colonies can be determined only by events. Full power has been placed in Darlan's hands, and the admiral's political future is bound up irrevocably with a German victory. When Germany is defeated, Darlan will automatically fall from power.

The German-controlled Paris press has been clamoring for German participation in the defence of Dakar, which is pictured as threatened by the United States, and for other co-operative measures such as allowing Germany use of French warships still in serviceable condition.

Darlan

Darlan is ambitious and crafty, and knows Hitler's love for him is limited strictly to the extent of his usefulness to Nazism. So long as he holds in his power the things Hitler covets, his power has a measure of security; once he gives up Dakar and the French navy his importance to Hitler will vanish.

Accordingly Darlan is likely to make concessions only when pressure becomes irresistible, and then one at a time. He will seek to attune his policies to those of Germany, but first of all to consolidate his own authority.

19 Survivors of Nazi Freighter Arrive at Lisbon, 26 Others on British Ship

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 13 (AP) — Nineteen survivors of the 5,522-ton German freighter Frankfurt arrived here today with stories of how their blockade-running ship was sunk in mid-Atlantic by a British 10,000-ton cruiser.

The freighter, previously reported intercepted by the British admiralty, was sunk by shellfire, the survivors said, and 26 of the crew, including the captain, were taken aboard the cruiser.

The 19 previously had refused to go aboard the Panamanian steamship Norden last Sunday because of fears of internment. The Norden took aboard one wounded man and wirelessed the position of the rest who were picked up by Portuguese destroyer Vouga.

$5,700 DISAPPEARS FROM POLICE SAFE

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 13 — (AP)—Disappearance of $5,700 from the police department safe is still a mystery after two weeks of sleuthing. So red-faced officers have dug in their own pockets to offer a $500 reward.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

On Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Albert Reid in Shannonville, the following ladies held a quilting bee for the St. John's Mission, Mrs. Logan, Mrs. Leverton, Mrs. E. Kent, Mrs. Dowdell and Mrs. Cole. Mrs. V. White presented them with a donation of a quilt top. They wound up with a pot luck dinner.

NAZI CHARGES

Berlin, Aug. 13 —(AP)— German spokesmen, charged today that certain American groups which for a long time have cast covetous eyes on Martinique," may seize upon Marshal Petain's speech as an excuse to "satisfy their lust" for that West Indian island.

NINE OTHER NAZI

that raiders dropped explosives on the capital and said an unspecified number of persons were killed and injured. It was the third successive night that more than 4,000,000 Berlin residents rushed to air raid shelters because of raids by either British or Russian planes.

Acknowledge Bombing of Berlin

(The Nazis also acknowledged that the R.A.F. bombed several places in western, central and northern Germany.)

This is the way authoritative circles and the Air Ministry pictured yesterday's raids in which hundreds of planes took part.

Bombers roared toward Germany in parade dress, flying at two levels and returned in the same fashion.

Upper-level planes, of the huge four-motor fortress type, went over at an estimated 35,000-feet altitude.

Far beneath them, Blenheim bombers, estimated to number 80, were escorted as far as Antwerp by long-range fighters.

The Blenheims then fanned out and during the day unloaded their explosives on Cologne, Emden, De Kooy, St. Omar and Bethune.

The bombers made the air above Antwerp their rendezvous with fighters for the return trip to Britain.

Defence Tactics Go Awry

Defence tactics of the Nazi air force went awry in some places because the double-level attack confused interceptor pilots and the multiplicity of assault came as a surprise.

Some Blenheims hedge-hopped toward objectives. This manoeuvre made big-gun anti-aircraft fire useless but the planes ran the menace of machine-gun fire from ground emplacements.

Apparently German fighter patrols failed to consider 35,000 feet a threatening altitude and fortress bombers carried out their assignments with no interference and headed for home before Nazi fighters climbed to that height.

20 British Planes Lost

A dozen Blenheims and eight fighters were lost during the day and three Nazi planes were shot down.

More bombers followed up the huge daylight offensive with an attack last night on shipyards at Le Trait in Occupied France. A Nazi fighter was destroyed and a direct hit made on an enemy ship in a slipway.

Included in the swarms of British aircraft used in the daylight raids were the new twin-motored Whirlwinds. It was the first indication given by the Air Ministry that the British-built Whirlwinds were in service.

In attacking Cologne, the R.A.F. pierced 150 miles of Nazi defence area and blasted two power stations. Tons of bombs were dropped at "point-blank" range and the stations were left in flames.

Mass Formations Used

Mass formations of Blenheims and United States-made fortresses made the Cologne raids. The flying fortresses also attacked Emden and an airdrome at De Kooy.

Cologne had previously been twice attacked in daylight and approximately one hundred night raids have centred on that Rhineland industrial district.

It was disclosed that the raids, from the standpoint of planes engaged, depth of penetration and number and scope of targets, were the greatest ever made in daylight. Weather conditions were favorable and observers predicted even larger raids in the near future.

A power station near Bethune and railway communications near St. Omer were targets on the French coast. Bombers and fighters sped to the objectives in great numbers.

The raids followed Monday night bombings of airdromes in Northern France and the Netherlands by American-built Havocs and the Western German industrial centres of Krefeld, Maunchegladback and Reydt.

Nazis Make Daylight Raid

A northeast coast town, England, Aug. 13.—(AP) — Several German daylight raiders, a small fraction of the force that was swarming over Britain at this time last year, bombed three points on the English northeast coast today.

Three persons were killed and seven injured in this first daylight attack on Britain in some time. Several homes were wrecked.

The casualties all were in one town.

GERMAN DIVISION

Omit Mention

Both the midnight and mid-day communiques today omitted all mention of key sectors where battles previously had been reported.

The first of the war bulletins said: "During Aug. 12 nothing of importance occurred on the front." The second said in almost the same words "During the night of Aug. 12 nothing of importance took place on our front."

The mid-day war bulletin added that three waves of German planes attempted to raid Leningrad Monday but were beaten back by anti-aircraft fire and three were downed. All military transport and the oil pipe line between Bucharest and the Black Sea port of Constanta were stopped, the Russians said, when Soviet bombers destroyed a large bridge over the Danube River at Cerna-Voda.

"All railway communications between the important industrial centres of Rumania and the Black Sea coast passed over this bridge," a communique said. Destruction of the pipe line meant oil stores for Constanta would not be replenished, it was added.

(German accounts claimed the Russian ports of Odessa and Ochakov had been cut off by Nazi thrusts to the Black Sea and indicated the Germans held an eastward salient south of Kiev to the Dnieper River.)

Some Russians took the view that the Red Army's report indicated the German drives had been stalemated, reducing the third big offensive of the war to minor actions.

These observers said the first German push came to a pause when the invaders stopped to gather force after their swift opening thrust across the western border provinces. The second offensive, they said, bogged down after carrying the Germans to the Pskov, Smolensk and Zhitomir areas.

Moscow had an air-raid alarm lasting an hour and 35 minutes last night but the Russians said not a German plane reached the capital. Anti-aircraft fire was heard to the west.

PETAIN ADMITS

Darlan's Deep Enmity

Reasons for Darlan's deep hatred of Britain are obscure but he has lost no opportunity to brand Britain with responsibility for the war and has proclaimed publicly that France's only hope for the future is in collaboration with Germany.

This man who has such vast military and police powers in France undoubtedly used his influence on Petain. The success of Nazi arms, however, also has been instrumental in Petain's decision.

Darlan bitterly charged Britain was trying to starve France by seizing French African ship cargoes. London said these shipments were reaching Germany.

Weygand

For a time many in Britain and the United States thought Gen. Maxime Wegand, commander of French African armies, was a potential military friend. Weygand often proclaimed that nobody, Nazis or otherwise, would get a foothold in that territory.

On this assumption the United States gained Britain's consent to send oil and supplies to French Africa. Today there is less reason to believe that Weygand would desert to the Free French Forces under Gen. Charles De Gaulle should the Vichy regime ask German troops to enter North Africa.

The French people themselves have had the greatest admiration for Petain. They believed that the old soldier would be able to safeguard their future if anybody could. What the masses think of his momentous announcement of collaboration is not known.

Great Unrest in France

But the marshal himself admitted there is great unrest in France when he threatened to "decimate" opposition leaders.

Thousands in France listen to British broadcasts for their news. The Vichy and Paris press are doctored and they know it.

What little news has come through from France, however, tells of frequent trials in which both girls and boys have been convicted of trying to escape to join the Free French.

The Free French

Free French headquarters are in French Equatorial Africa and more than 1,000,000 square miles of territory have come under the De Gaulle banner. More than 40,000 Frenchmen, many of them using aliases to protect their folks at home, are serving alongside Britain.

Travellers from France say the Free French and Britain are the hope of the masses of France.

Wallace Beery and Chester Merr is in a scene from the timely and thrilling U-boat drama, "Thunder Afloat," which will be shown this weekend at the McCarthy in addition to Jack Holt in "Fugitive from a Prison Camp."

OTTAWA BANK ROBBED OF $700

One Man, Wearing a Mask, Brandished Revolver Before Robbery

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—Masked bandits today held up the branch of The Banque Canadienne Nationale in suburban Eastview and escaped with between $600 and $700.

One man, wearing a mask, brandished a revolver.

Police said he was aided by one accomplice and possibly a second.

Four employees were in the bank at the time. They were tied up by one of the holdup men while the other covered them with a revolver

In the bank at the corner of the Montreal Road and Victoria Street, at the time of the robbery were J. H. Tousignant, manager; G. H. Lafreniere, ledger keeper; Sylvio Taillefer, junior clerk, and Miss P. Angers, stenographer; along with ten year old Kenneth Jackson, who was told by one bandit: "keep your head down, son, you won't get hurt."

Just before the holdup was staged two other employees of the bank had left for the main branch with $3,180 and the result was the robbers made off only with the small change.

Ordered "Hands Up"

The revolver-brandishing bandit entered the bank and confronted the employees with the command: "Hands up! Everybody lies down and shut your eyes."

A moment later, police said they were informed, a second man entered the bank and the two bandits rushed behind the counter and together tied the hands of the employees behind their backs with heavy string.

Young Jackson was ordered to lie down and he was left untied.

Bank officials told police one of the holdup men wore a blue handkerchief with white spots which covered almost his whole face.

Tousignant was ordered to open the safe and did so because, he said, "apparently they meant business."

Brought Own String

Police said the bandits also armed themselves with the teller's gun which was lying on one of the desks. They expressed the belief a third man was stationed outside the bank in an automobile in which the robbers made their getaway.

The bandits brought their own string with them to tie up the employees.

Miss Angers told police the bandits were "good natured" and polite. They asked her if the string about her wrists was too tight.

Taillefer said he was able to work his hands free without much difficulty. So was Miss Angers and the two of them released their fellow employees who telephoned police.

By this time there was no sign of the bandits in the bank area.

Agreement Reached Appears in Jeopardy

Kitchener, Ont., Aug 13—(CP)—Agreement reached between the management of Dumarts Limited and the Packinghouse Workers organizing committee, representing employees, appeared in jeopardy today.

"The solution seems as far away as ever" stated Mayor Joseph Meinzinger, 'and I regret it very much".

The Mayor reported that another meeting was held late yesterday after he had been told by Manager Ray Furlong that Arnold Bronzelow, president of Local 139 of the P.W.O.C., "does not fit into the picture".

According to Mayor Meinzinger, the management also wanted an election among employees in sixty days instead of ninety days as agreed to at previous meetings. The management finally offered to rehire Bronzelow if the Union would agree to an election in sixty days.

Arthur Williams, labor organizer, acting for Fred Dowling of the P.W.O.C., agreed to this solution but refused the management's request that the agreement be signed immediately.

ADVISORY STEEL BOARD NAMED

Will Advise Steel Controller and Through Him Munitions Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—Formation of a Wartime Steel Advisory Committee to advise Steel Controller H. D. Scully ad Munitions Minister Howe on methods of protecting Canadian steel requirements for war industry was announced today by Mr. Howe.

He said it was obvious a "radical readjustment" of the supply situation from Canadian sources was necessary to prevent "serious dislocation" of the war effort.

"The purpose of this committee," said the announcement, "is to advise the Steel Controller, and through him the Minister, of Ways and Means to protect the steel requirements of Canada's munitions industry, and to apportion any steel that may be surplus to munitions requirements among domestic users as fairly as possible."

The committee serves without remuneration and is composed of the Vice-Presidents of four principal Canadian steel producing companies and the President of one of the leading steel distributors.

Mr. Howe said Canada has increased her steel production considerably and now manufactures about two-thirds of the Dominion's requirements.

"Despite this enlarged capacity, which represents more than a 65-per-cent increase over the 1935-1938 average, Canada must rely on substantial quantities of steel from sources outside this country," he said.

"The importing of steel from outside Canada is becoming increasingly difficult and must in future be confined almost wholly to war requirements.

Vice Premier Jean Darlan Will Broadcast

Vichy, France, Aug. 13—(AP)—Vice-Premier Jean Darlan, newly awarded vast powers over military and other phases of French life, decided today to make a minute and a half radio announcement tomorrow. Informed sources said it would be "of extreme importance."

The brief address was scheduled as the authoritarian French government, committed to close collaboration with Hitlerism, entrenched itself behind a series of decrees designed to throttle the foes at home of its foreign and domestic policies.

In the occupied zone, the German-inspired Paris Press gave the government reorganization and yesterday's speech by Chief of State Petain most of their front pages, a "play" which often indicates approval. Comment was notably lacking, however.

Meanwhile, Pierre Pucheu, elevated to Minister of Interior, called on French police commissioners for intensified activity to "combat bad French prejudices against the police."

The message was first scheduled for today but later it was delayed in order to permit rebroadcasting of the speech which Marshal Petain made to the nation last night.

REMOVED FROM OFFICE

Cairo, Aug. 13 —(AP)— Fifty-five French government officials who had served in Syria and Lebanon under the Vichy regime have been removed from office.

The move was seen here as an indication of the determination of Free French authorities to purge the local administration of all pro-Vichy elements now that the Levant is under British and Free French control.

MOTOR VEHICLE FOUND ABANDONED

After being reported abandoned on Foster Avenue since last Saturday a Chevrolet coupe bearing Ontario licence plates number W-4912 was removed by police to a garage today. City police notified the Department of Highways of the licence number in an effort to locate the ownership of the vehicle.

Kent Leaves For Edmonton To Inspect Units

By LORNCE BRUCE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Jasper, Alta., Aug. 13 — (CP)—Ending almost three days of strenuous holiday in this Rocky Mountain resort, the Duke of Kent will leave here today by special train for Edmonton to continue his inspection tour of establishments of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Travelling over Canadian National Railways lines, he is scheduled to arrive in Edmonton at 3 p.m., MST., (6 p.m., EDT.) for an inspection of some of the training units there and then travel over night to Medicine Hat.

Duke's Activities

His Royal Highness arrived here Sunday from the Pacific Coast and since that time has spent most of his time riding, mountain climbing, hiking and swimming.

Yesterday, the Duke started the day with a plunge into icy Lac Beauvert on whose shores his cabin is located.

Then, accompanied by Inspector James Evans of Scotland Yard, he started up 8,000-foot Signal Mountain. The pair spent about seven hours on the mountain's heavily-wooded slopes before returning to Jasper Park Lodge late in the afternoon.

Time for Canter

There was still time for a short canter before dinner, so His Royal Highness rode to the end of the golf course accompanied by Wing Cmdr. Sir Louis Greig of the Royal Air Force. He returned in time for another plunge in the lake.

After dining in the lodge with five members of his party, the Duke retired to his cabin for an informal evening, planning to rise early for breakfast in his private railway car before leaving for Edmonton.

Three Million To Be Registered For War Industry

By HAROLD FAIR

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—Growing concern over Britain's reservoir of man power to operate rapidly expanding war industries has forced Labor Ministry plans for registering 3,000,000 men and women between now and December for essential work.

The Ministry announced plans to register men from 44 to 46 and women from 25 to 31 but warned that due to the "wholly inadequate" net result of the registration of the 41, 42 and 43-year-old men the registration limit might reach or pass 50.

"The state in manpower requirements has been received where the country can no longer afford that men should be doing jobs that can be done by women nor can their services be spared for work that is not essential to the war effort or to civil life," the Ministry declared.

Men over military age are required to replace others called up for military service and to meet demands of industry, especially for engineering, aircraft and other vital munitions factories. Women are needed for industry and the auxiliary services.

All persons must register but only those not on essential work are interviewed at the labor exchanges. Of the 595,000 men registered in the 41, 42 and 43-year-olds, about 100,000 so far were selected for interview and 40,000 were found engaged on work of national importance or for a number of reasons not available for transfer. According to the latest figures only 11,500 were placed on the national work register or transferred.

Shell-Making Plant in N. S. Now Tied Up

Trenton, N.S., Aug. 13—(CP)—Striking workers at the Trenton Steel Company's plant here were still idle today despite a plea from Silby Barrett, Canadian Regional Director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, that they return to work. The walkout, involving about 1,000 of the 1,500 employed at the plant in the manufacture of naval shells, occurred yesterday.

Barrett informed union officers at Trenton the strike was a "violation of the policies of the S.W.O.C. and violation of contract." He suggested the men return to work and "take up their case in line with the contract...."

Failing an agreement, he advised that the case of the men be handed to an umpire.

Cause of the strike was not indicated by the S.W.O.C. leader, the management of the plant or union officials. However, it was known negotiations for a cost-of-living bonus had been under way.

Occurring just five days after the first shells manufactured at the plant were shipped, the strike began in the nut and bolt department.

RECEIVED BY KING

London, Aug. 13 (CP Cable)—Canadian Navy Minister Angus MacDonald was received in audience by the King today.

Premier Hepburn May Change Plans

Toronto, Aug. 13 (CP)—Conjecture concerning Premier Hepburn's contemplated shift to England to aid in the British war effort broke out anew today with the question of the moment being the whereabouts of J. P. Bickell.

The Premier offered to assist Mr. Bickell in his work in the Ministry of Aircraft Production and the Ontario mining magnate was to have transmitted the offer to Lord Beaverbrook. Mr. Bickell assisted the Canadian-born British Cabinet Minister in his superb job of stepping up airplane production in England during the past year.

Mr. Hepburn confirmed earlier reports of his plans—reports that have been revived from time to time during the past four months—when he gave an interview in St. Catharines Monday.

He announced at the same time his willingness to go to England immediately if called upon.

Bickell Completes Work

It was learned in London yesterday, however, that Mr. Bickell had completed his work there and returned to Canada. Efforts to locate him last night for comment on the matter were fruitless.

Mr. Hepburn held a Cabinet Council yesterday for the purpose of discussing his proposed departure and said later: "I may not be going to England at all.... I may stay here."

He said he was "taken completely by surprise" to learn Mr. Bickell's task in England had been finished, and added:

"I knew he was returning about the middle of August, but this is a new development. I had no idea he was here for good."

SOVIET REDICULES GERMAN CLAIMS

Says Black Sea Ports Will be Smoking Ruins if Taken by Nazis

London, Aug. 13 (CP)—If the Germans enter the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolaev they will find a "smoking ruins of demolished factories and empty streets," Soviet quarters in London said today.

They predicted that Marshal Semeon Budyenny's troops "will extract an awful cost in blood" as a toll for any German gateway to the Black Sea.

Thousands of Russian tanks, an unshaken infantry and tens of thousands of hard-riding Cossack horsemen will hurl "ceaseless counter-attacks" at Field Marshal Gerd Von Rundstedt's advancing Germans, the Russians said.

The Russians agreed with British military quarters that the situation in the Ukraine was grave but they said it was far from hopeless. They ridiculed German claims of having encircled the Soviet forces in the Odessa and Nikolaev sectors.

Today in a modern streamlined plant in Montreal some 800 men and women are working at war tempo to speed construction of an important part of Canada's small-ship program. Speedy 30-foot motor torpedo boats, 70-foot rescue vessels and massive R.C.A.F. marine target boats take shape under the guidance of expert shipbuilders and already several have slipped unostentatiously into the water to submit successfully to trials. CHURCHILL, ROOSEVELT MEET

AIM TO DESTROY NAZISM, ASSURE SECURITY

NAZI OFFENSIVE BEING SMASHED SAYS PRAVDA

Joint Declaration of Aims At Momentous Conference Includes Post War World

Britain and U. S. Seek no Aggrandizement or Territory Change

RIGHTS OF NATIONS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP).—Out of secret ocean meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt today came a formal declaration of war aims which went beyond the destruction of Hitlerism.

News of the history-making meeting was realized at the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King today.

It put an end to more than a week of speculation over the whereabouts of the two world-famed figures, the one leader of a nation at war and the other leader of a nation nominally at peace but giving all possible aid to the other.

Munitions For Foes of Aggressors.

Problems of supplying munitions of war to the forces of the nations fighting aggression and of the United States were examined at the conference and Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply is on his way to Washington for further detailed discussions including matters relating to supply for Russia.

The eight-point declaration on war aims called for "final destruction of the Nazi tyrant" but made no mention of the situation in the Far East.

It held out to the warring nations, including Germany, assurance of fair treatment after hostilities end as it called for "a peace which will afford all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries."

Mr. King, commenting on the meeting and the joint declaration, said it indicated "complete understanding and co-operation in the prosecution of the war and complete agreement in the eventual objects of a peace of victory but not of vengeance."

The two leaders declared Britain and the United States sought no aggrandisement, would respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government they wished and would endeavor to further enjoyment by all states of equal access to the trade and raw materials of the world.

BRITAIN

THE EIGHT POINTS

(By the Canadian Press)

The eight points on which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt said they based their hopes "for a better future for the world" are, in brief:—

1. No aggrandizement.
2. No territorial changes imposed by force.
3. Restoration of sovereign rights to those who have been deprived of them by force.
4. Equal enjoyment by all nations of world trade and raw materials needed for prosperity.
5. Improved labor standards, economic advancement and social security for all.
6. A peace assuring safety and tranquility the world over.
7. Freedom of the seas to all.
8. Abandonment by all nations of the use of force and disarmament of aggressive nations pending the establishment of general security.

Roosevelt-Churchill Declaration Text

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP)—Text of the statement issued from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King today on the meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and the joint British-American declaration follows:

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announces that the Prime Minister of Great Britain and the President of the United States have agreed to a joint declaration to be issued on Thursday, the 14th of August, with respect to their recent meeting at sea. The following is the text of the statement which is being released simultaneously in the United Kingdom and in the United States:

Leaders Meet at Sea

The President of the United States and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, have met at sea. They have been accompanied by officials of their governments including high ranking officers of their military, naval and air services. The whole problem of supply of munitions of war, as provided by the Lease-Lend Act, for the armed forces of the United States and for those of countries engaged in resisting aggression has been further examined.

Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister of Supply of the British Government, has joined in these conferences. He is going to proceed to Washington to discuss further details with the officials of the United States Government. These conferences will also cover the supply problem of the Soviet Union.

Several Conferences Held

The President and the Prime Minister have had several conferences. They have considered the dangers to the world civilization arising from the policy of military domination by conquest upon which the Hitlerite Government of Germany and other governments associated therewith have embarked, and have made clear, steps which their countries are respectively taking for their safety in facing these dangers.

They have agreed upon the following joint declaration:

The President of the United States and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, being met together, deem it right to make known that cer-

ATTLEE BROADCASTS

(By HAROLD FAIR)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 14 (CP. Cable) — Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt met with the full knowledge of the Dominions but the historic eight-point declaration was described today as a United Kingdom-United States agreement.

There was no Dominion participation in the conference but a copy of the statement was sent to each Dominion capital immediately after it was prepared.

It is regarded as possible that the Dominions and Allies will be asked to associate themselves with the policy outlined.

The full story of the meeting obviously is not told in the statement. An authoritative source said the two leaders dealt with many other matters.

A more human story will be provided when the Ministry of Information releases the eye-witness accounts of three British journalists. Pictures were taken by four cameramen who were present.

Possible Broadcast Soon by Churchill.

An early broadcast by Prime Minister Churchill was regarded as a possibility. Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the British people of the conference and its result.

It is doubtful whether parliament will be called back into session but the historic event will be one of the first items of discussion when parliament resumes its sittings after the summer recess.

The authoritative source, commenting on the final point of the statement regarding the disarming of aggressors, said:

Warehouse facilities also are being extended.

R. A. F. AT IT AGAIN

Southeast English Coast Town, Aug. 14 (CP)—Large British planes flying at a great height behind a ceiling of broken clouds roared across the Channel this afternoon to attack targets on the German-occupied regions of the continent.

Observers said the drone of accompanying Fighter planes was audible for several minutes. The weather over the Dover Strait was clear.

WEATHER TURNS RAINY

Berlin, Aug. 14 (AP)—The weather again has turned rainy in the Ukraine and German sources said this may mean a slowdown of action on that front.

Washington, Aug. 14—(AP)—As far as Washington knew today, President Roosevelt was still at sea. The joint declaration of policy by the President and Prime Minister Churchill was radioed to the White House, for release here, from a point unknown to the public.

'Winston', 'Franklin' to Each Other Since Telephone Talks Last January

(By The Canadian Press)

Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt had been "Winston" and "Franklin" to each other since January.

This close relationship was established in Transatlantic telephone conversations shortly after the first trip to London of Harry Hopkins on a month's visit as the President's personal representative.

On February 9, the night before Mr. Hopkins left England, Mr. Churchill made his appeal to the United States to "give us the tools and we will finish the job".

The appeal was renewed in a speech to the House of Commons on April 9, when he asked for "gigantic building of merchant ships" in the United States.

Before the end of the same month he hailed the 'tremendous decision' of the United States to patrol the Western Atlantic and declared:

"The eventual and total defeat of Hitler and Mussolini is certain in view of the respective and declared resolves of the British and American democracies."

Mr. Churchill has been on the go since he took office May 5, 1940, and warned the empire that he had "nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat".

With a cigar gripped between his teeth and a John Bull hat stuck jauntily on his head, Mr. Churchill has made hundreds of trips through wartime Britain. He has gone to army posts, airplane factories, beach defence works and naval bases throughout the kingdom—his cocky walk and growling, defiant voice a demonstration to cheering crowds that Britain is still in the fight.

Between trips Mr. Churchill works 12 to 14 hours a day, keeping ten secretaries busy.

For the last fortnight Mr. Churchill has dropped from sight, but not out of the news— since he made it known that he would not participate in last week's closing war progress debate in the House of Commons. Clement Attlee, on Aug. 6, served as his Deputy in the Commons. That was when the rumors began to fly that the Prime Minister was meeting President Roosevelt.

GIANT FLYING RAF FORTRESSES SPREADING FEAR

Contributing Towards Signs of Revolt in Germany, Axis-Occupied Europe

RAF KEPT AT HOME

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— Bad weather over the continent last night prevented the Royal Air Force from carrying out its usual overnight forays against Germany and Nazi-occupied territority. The German air force at the same time failed to make any raids on Britain.

The lull came after British planes blasted at Germany and Nazi-occupied countries in the greatest 24-hour assault of the war. Hundreds of bombers and fighters took part and Canadians made up many of the crews.

Dispatches reaching London said that the latest R.A.F. weapon, the giant flying fortresses which drop bombs with accuracy from the stratosphere, is spreading fear and contributing towards signs of revolt in Germany and Axis-occupied Europe.

Contributing to the undermining of morale is the fact that the fortresses are known to be from the vast industrial resources of the United States.

One source said that "the Germans cannot see the fortresses, but they can see the damage they do".

"This silent, invisible weapon terrifies not only civilians in Germany, but garrisons in the occupied nations", the source added.

It was disclosed that the giant bombers fly so high that fighter planes have difficulty reaching them. As the fighters climb, their speed slackens and by the time they reach the levee of the fortress, it is perhaps 15 miles away.

Tuesday night, fortress planes and Blenheim bombers smashed at Berlin for two hours, starting many great fires, and also bombed targets in several other German and Nazi-held cities. A great fire, one-half mile in length, was started at the big Krupp Arm works at Essen.

A steady rain kept British planes in their hangars during daylight yesterday.

JAPANESE VICE PREMIER IS HIT BY AN ASSASSIN

Kiichiro Hiranuma, 75, Struck in Chest and Jaw by Two Bullets After a Ruse

ASSAILANT HELD

(By MAX HILL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Tokyo, Aug. 14 —(AP)—By Telephone to New York —(AP)— Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, 75-year-old vice premier and minister without portfolio in the Japanese cabinet was struck in the chest and jaw today by pistol bullets fired by a 33-year-old assassin. Hiranuma's condition was reported as serious.

Hiranuma has been regarded as a mainstay of the cabinet of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and definitely a moderating influence.

Observers said, therefore, that the fact that such an attack should occur was not considered a good sign in a time of tense international relations.

There was no immediate report, however, on the motive of the Baron's assailant.

The attacker, identified as Naohiko Nishiyama, called at Hiranuma's home before 8 a.m. today and gained access under the pretext he wished the vice premier's autograph on a roll of parchment. Nishiyama hails from Okayama Prefecture, the same as Hiranuma does.

He pulled a pistol from the roll and fired three shots in all, authorities reported. The first missed but the other struck Hiranuma in the jaw and chest.

Despite his age and wounds, the vice premier pursued the attacker from the house and caught him at the gate where, with the aid of the gatekeeper, Nishiyama was held until further help arrived.

Baron Hiranuma was premier from Jan. 5 to Aug. 28, 1939. He resigned after Russia and Germany signed their non-aggression pact, an action shortly followed by the outbreak of war.

In years past Hiranuma had been considered a radical but in recent months, when he has become second in influence only to the Premier, he has been regarded merely as a great nationalist.

One of Japan's senior statesmen, his views carry great weight in a country where age is traditionally respected.

French Police Officer Given Wide Powers

Vichy, Aug. 14 —(AP)— Pierre Pucheu, new cabinet minister in charge of French police, has bounded from pre-war obscurity to power equalled by only a few other men in Vichy France.

The 42-year-old minister of the interior, who as head of the police, National Surete and mobile guards, becomes the chief collaborator of Vice-Premier Jean Darlan, represents the young business men's group which with the army and navy are running the Vichy government.

Pucheu is an old hand at collaboration with Germany. As foreign relations head of the powerful French steel cartel he began dealing with German industrialists in 1923.

JAPANESE BOMB CHUNGKING

Chungking, China, Aug. 14 (AP) —Two waves of Japanese planes roared over Chungking for the seventh successive day today.

In the first onslaught, 63 planes pounded the city for 34 minutes with tons of explosives. There were only 23 planes in the second wave but their attack, though brief, was destructive.

11 Nazi Divisions Thirteen Reg'ts Tank Corps Routed

Soviets State Situation Along Whole Front Again Becomes Stable and Quiet

NAZI LOSSES HEAVY

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 14—(AP) — The Russian army reported today that the German 39th Tank Corps, 11 other divisions and 13 regiments have been routed on the western and southwestern sectors of the front and that the situation again had become stable and quiet.

The army newspaper, Red Star, estimated that 21 other German divisions had suffered more than 50 per cent losses.

The list, it added, does not include "many divisions destroyed in the northern and northwestern Bessarabian directions."

The Red Army's report followed upon one by Pravda, the Communist party organ, which recapitulated German losses since early in the campaign and said the German offensive was being smashed.

Roads Strewn With Dead

The newspaper went on to detail German units which, it said, "have felt the full strength of Soviet arms" and have left "the old Napoleonic road strewn with the corpses of tens of thousands of German soldiers."

Germany's best divisions either have been destroyed or "are losing blood," Pravda declared, and "the German army is throwing into battle new reserves after taking smashed divisions to the rear, reforming them and sending them back to the fighting fronts."

FIRST SHIPMENT OF AVIATION GAS GOES TO RUSSIA

Tanker Will Fly the United States Flag on Its Trip to Russia

OTHERS TO FOLLOW

Washington, Aug. 14 (AP)—Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold Ickes announced today the first shipment of aviation gasoline to Russia aboard an American tanker would leave Los Angeles today for Vladivostok, flying the United States flag.

"Other tankers will leave shortly," he said.

Mr. Ickes reported at his press conference, also, that deliveries of gasoline in the eastern United States were up eight per cent last week despite the night time "blackout" of filling stations and he said "more rigid steps" may be expected immediately to curtail gasoline consumption on the Atlantic seaboard where a shortage has been forecast.

Although declining to discuss what "rigid steps" might mean, petroleum sources have considered the possibility that the next action might be a rationing of supplies to service stations.

Mr. Ickes revealed that he had sent a representative, Edwin Pauley, to London "to study the oil situation in all its stages and the British rationing program in all its phases."

Germany Claims Odessa Circled by Rumanian Forces in the Southern Ukraine

AIR FORCE ACTIVE

Berlin, Aug. 14 —(AP)— The Nazi High Command claimed today that Odessa, Russian port on the Black Sea, had been encircled by Rumanian forces in collaboration with the drive of German, Italian and Hungarian troops in the southern Ukraine. Nikolaev, near Odessa, also was reported ringed.

Germans and Hungarians claimed to be holding Nikolaev in a vice while west of the Bug River, the communique said, a large part of the Red army faced destruction.

The special Nazi communique contained the first official mention of active participation by Italian troops against the Russians. It said that they, with German and Hungarian detachments, were "irresistibly advancing south between the Dniester and the Dnieper (rivers.)"

The German High Command claimed the Russian defence in the Ukraine was completely breaking down.

The regular German communique issued earlier said that Red army forces allegedly trapped in southern Ukraine by the advance to the Black Sea were preparing to attempt escape by sea and that the Nazi air force was pounding their transports anchored along the coast.

Reached the Sea

German and Rumanian forces have reached the sea between the Soviet port of Odessa and The Bug Estuary in a "continuous, relentless pursuit in the Ukraine," the war bulletin from Hitler's headquarters claimed.

PERSON NOT PRESENT WHEN NAME CALLED

When the name of Milton Salz, 84 Chatham St., was called for the weekly selection for Foto Nite at the Capitol Theatre last night, there was no response as Mr. Salz was not present. Manager Thomas Mascaro then announced the offering for next week's Foto Nite selection would be increased to $215.00.

SHORT CIRCUIT CAUSES BRIGADE RUN

A short circuit setting fire to the electric wiring of a service truck owned by Howe and Hagerman, Pinnacle St., at the corner of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets resulted in a short run by the Belleville Fire Department truck to extinguish the flames shortly after nine o'clock this morning. Aside from the wiring of the vehicle being burned, however, no serious damage to the truck was caused, it was stated.

On Wednesday just at the noon hour the brigade was called to 84 West Moira Street to extinguish a chimney blaze. The trouble was quickly remedied with the aid of chemicals, with no damage being reported.

CORN AND ROOT CROPS PROGRESS

Weekly crop reports for Hastings and Prince Edward Counties as compiled from reports by local agricultural representatives state corn and root crops are now making rapid growth, with pastures being good and the milk flow holding up well.

In Prince Edward County corn and tomatoes have done exceptionally well during the past week, while pastures have greened up considerably during the past ten days. Threshing was general during the week and as was expected, yields generally disappointing.

FURNACES LIGHTED DURING COOL SPELL

Possibly establishing a record in local households insofar as the requirement of heat in the home during mid-August is concerned, two or three instances where furnaces were lighted during the recent chilly dip in temperature have been reported.

Although a rise in temperature is now promised by the weatherman, the thermometers did decline to 45 degrees and was autumn's first warning that summer is definitely on the wane. Blankets featured in downtown store windows and the appearance of fall clothes on display acquired a timeliness that was utterly lacking, for local interest, only a few days ago.

Former Resident Hurt at Hamilton

Falling from a 30-foot scaffold at Dundas, Ont., yesterday, Ivan Hill, formerly of Belleville, sustained a fractured skull and is in a serious condition in the Hamilton General Hospital. The news of Mr. Hill's accident was forwarded to the Belleville Police Department by Hamilton police, who were endeavouring to ascertain Hill's next of kin.

"Hill had a registration card on his person at the time of the accident, which identified him as having lived on Berchimer Street, in Belleville at the time of the National Registration. The Belleville Police checked with the address and found that Hill had been employed by Bert Zebedee at that time, but had left to reside with his mother at Burlington last spring," stated Acting Chief Arthur Harman today.

The whereabouts of the injured man's relatives at Burlington were immediately forwarded to Hamilton by the local police.

Disney's Menagerie To Do Its Bit to Solidify Americas

Washington, Aug. 14—(AP)—A strange menagerie of ministers without portfolio is going to South America to do its bit toward solidifying the Americas. There'll be Donald Duck, Mickey Mouse, the reluctant Dragon, and hosts of other Walt Disney characters. The co-ordinator of inter-American affairs hopes they shall produce more friendly terms than ever because of the internationally understandable antics of the Disney creations.

Obituary

CLIFFORD FRANKLIN HARRY

Clifford Franklin Harry died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harry, 3rd Concession of Sidney, on Sunday, August 10th, in his 21st year. Funeral was held at the family residence on Tuesday afternoon.

Death came after an illness of over five years. During his illness he was very keenly interested in community activities, particularly Johnstown Sunday School and Young People's Club, being an active member before being confined to his home. He was predeceased by his mother, the former Margaret Aletha Westfall, 19 years ago. Interment was made in White's Cemetery, Bayside.

Rev. McKee of Grace Church officiated, assisted by Rev. Geo. Campbell of Colbourne, and former pastor of Johnstown Circuit. Left to mourn are Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Harry, three step-brothers and one step-sister, also grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Westfall of Bayside. The pallbearers were Alec Vandervoort, Frank Dickens, Victor Peck, Cecil Jeffrey, Maitland Harder, Vernon Harry.

LATE MRS. MORLEY P. MEYERS

The funeral of Mrs. Morley P. Meyers, late residence 26 Bridge Street West, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church St., on Wednesday afternoon, August 13th. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. L. C. Burr of Mountain View. The bearers were Messrs. Arthur Calnan, Wellington Howell, Arthur Latta, Harry Morgan, Keith Blakely and A. C. Campbell.

LATE GEORGE HENRY SHERRY

(Thomasburg)

Wednesday afternoon August 13, the funeral of George Henry Sherry took place from his residence in Thomasburg, to the United Church in that village where service was conducted by the Rev. A. S. Doggett. During the service Mrs. A. S. Doggett sang a solo in keeping with the occasion.

Interment was in Thomasburg Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Edward Carter, W. Holbert, A. Bateman, T. Coulson, H. Mouck and G. Jones.

POLICE COURT

When Charles Plumb, alias Palmer, of Trenton, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's County Police Court, charged with reckless driving, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., first enquired whether or not the accused man had counsel. Upon learning such was not the case, Mr. Donnan immediately moved for a further adjournment in the case.

"This is a serious matter. A fatal accident resulted on August 2nd and the charge arose out of the accident. He is also charged with the theft of a car in Toronto and I strongly recommend the accused man procure the services of a lawyer," explained Crown Attorney Donnan. His Worship concurred and the case was enlarged one week.

"But I have no funds to retain a lawyer. Can't the court appoint one?" asked Palmer.

"The court has no money for one either, but the police will see you obtain counsel, I can assure you," replied Mr. Donnan.

Given Suspended Sentence

Bob Bourne and Tom Andrews of Toronto pleaded guilty to taking part in an affray at Stirling and were given a suspended sentence after pleading guilty. Costs amounting to $20.85 were paid. "Four men were involved in a fight and the other two were given suspended sentences upon the payment of the costs, last week by Magistrate Lloyd, Your Worship," explained Mr. Donnan.

"There is no difference, so the same disposition can be made of these cases," ordered Magistrate Butler.

Paid Stiff Fines

William Clarke, a Saskatchewan tourist, paid stiff fines prior to court on charges of failing to remain at the scene of an accident and careless driving. Clarke was apprehended by Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch following a hit-and-run episode early last Sunday. He agreed to pay $25.00 and costs on both counts rather than remain for court today. A total of $55.00 was given into the court coffers today.

Had Poor Brakes

Geofrey Sanford, of the R.A.F. Training School at Picton, pleaded guilty to failing to produce an operator's licence and was fined one dollar and costs. On a charge of operating a motor car without adequate brakes, Sanford was assessed the minimum fine of ten and costs.

Permitted Liberty

Fred Deline, Trenton, appeared on a charge of vagrancy and was permitted his liberty until called when it was learned he was gainfully employed. "This might have been a case of trespassing," warned Mr. Donnan. Deline was represented in court by A. B. Collins, K.C., local barrister.

19 Cases Heard

Several cases of minor breaches of the Liquor Control Act and two domestic cases concluded the court. A total of nineteen cases were disposed of, Motorcycle Patrolman Hatch entering nine, three of which were enlarged. Chief Hayes of Tweed entered a juvenile case, Chief E. Beatty of Deseronto and Chief Eggleton of Stirling also had cases heard.

SALVAGE DRIVE BEGINS SATURDAY IN BELLEVILLE

Truck Will be on Market Square — Citizens Asked to Bring Salvage and Place it in Truck

WHAT IS WANTED

Here's how every Canadian housewife can assist in the war effort of the Empire—save all waste articles and materials that have become useless in the home and give these articles to the Women's Canadian Club War Service Committee for the National Salvage Campaign that opens in Belleville on Saturday Aug. 16th.

All types of salvage including bones, rags, old clothing, all kinds and descriptions of metal, old newspapers, cardboard of all weight, magazines and practically every article of salvage in the home, except glass and egg shells, are being sought to help Canada's war effort in this National Salvage Campaign.

Nothing is too small and nothing too large for the committee to handle, so scour your home from the cellar to the attic, where old clothes, metals and other useless articles that have been lying around unused for years may help swell Canada's National Salvage Campaign.

Truck On Market Square

In Belleville the campaign will open at the Market Square on Saturday. A large truck will be parked in a convenient position where citizens may personally deposit their salvage and thereby help Canada's war effort. Remember, nothing is too small, nor too large in the matter of salvage for the committee to handle, so don't be of the opinion that "my little bit won't count", as it is the small efforts that accumulate to assure the larger results.

While the women are clearing the salvage from the house, the men of the home can scour the garage and workshops where old worn out tools auto parts that have been discarded and other bits of metal can be picked up to swell the Salvage Campaign in Belleville that opens on Saturday. For further information telephone the campaign headquarters by calling 2287, 118 or 1311 where minute details of the campaign are available.

Waste is Worth Money

The salvage of waste is vital, the time to assist is NOW. The Belleville branch of the Women's Canadian Club will have its salvage truck on the Market Square every Saturday for several weeks commencing Aug. 16th., when Canadians of the community can do their bit for the soldiers who are giving their lives so we in Canada may live in security.

Your small effort will be multiplied if the two million homes in Canada contribute a like amount, so it necessarily follows that every contribution, be it a corn flake box, soap box or bit of metal is essential to swell the goods that will ultimately go to "smash Hitler."

Separate Salvage

In order to assist the local Salvage Campaign Committee in their work, however, citizens are requested to separate their contributions of salvage. Keep the bones separate in a box, bundle all rags and old clothing together, keep your scrap metals in another separate pile while the cardboard and old papers are more easily handled when tied into a parcel.

This appeal is made to every householder in Belleville and no contribution is to small. All salvage goes towards the manufacture of munitions, so vital in the battle to beat Hitler, the construction of aeroplanes or a soldier's blanket—those are just the things your waste material provides, so—GO TO IT—DO YOUR BIT BY HELPING THE WOMEN'S CLUB NATIONAL SALVAGE CAMPAIGN.

Picton Mayor Offers Cash Prizes For Biggest Fish

Perhaps Picton's chief magistrate, Mayor N. McKibbon, has the right idea about the tourist business as is indicated by his efforts to make Prince Edward County and its environs one of the most popular tourist resorts in this part of the province.

Not satisfied with permitting the Chamber of Commerce and the county officials to do all the advertising regarding the county's attractions as a tourist playground, Mayor McKibbon has struck upon the novel idea of awarding cash prizes for the biggest fish caught in Prince Edward County waters by a non-resident of the county, whether Canadian, American or Britisher.

A prize of ten dollars is being offered for the biggest maskinonge, $5 for the biggest bass and another $5 for the biggest pike. The above prizes to be given by Mayor McKibbon are in addition to the Ontario Government offer of $100 for the biggest fish caught on non-resident angling licence, during the legal season of 1941. Fish entered in competition for prizes offered by the Mayor will likewise be entered in the Ontario Fishing Contest.

Local newspapers are playing up the idea and are out to boost the county's popularity as a fishing resort.

Well, it's an idea.

Garage Operators, Friends Enjoy Basket Picnic

Fun and frivolity reigned supreme at the Sandbanks on Wednesday when the Hastings and Prince Edward branch of the Garage Operators held their annual basket picnic. Upwards of 300 attended as the garagemen and service station operators entertained their families and friends, games and sports being enjoyed throughout the afternoon, while dancing in the pavilion concluded a perfect holiday program. Secretary Orliff Lloyd was in charge of the sporting events as clerk.

In the early afternoon the service station attendants' team, captained by "Toots" Holway, defeated the garage operators, headed by Howard Aselstine, at softball by a rather one-sided score of 26 to 6.

The results of the sporting events were as follows:

Men's Events

Shot Put—Wilbur Johnson, President Ken Vivian, Jim Elliott.

Wheelbarrow race — Herb Morris and Billie Holway, Gord Craike and J. Garrett, C. Jeffrey and Toots Holway.

Fatman's race — Herb Morris, C. Jeffrey, W. Elliott.

Three-legged race — H. Morris and Tom Lynch, R. Wood and C. Gilroy, D. Burley and M. Anderson.

The tug of war between the garage operators and the service station attendants was won by the former team.

The results of the ladies' events were:

Egg and spoon race — Barbara Garrett, Helen Vivian, Jean Rae Trudeau.

Shoe race — Thelia Spafford, Helen Vivian, Betty McCauley.

Three-legged race — Doris and Jean Grills, Betty Holway and Jean Trudeau, Barbara Garrett and Cecilia Trudeau.

Married women's race — Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Jeffrey, Mrs. McDonald.

The result of the drawings that concluded the picnic were:

Coffee percolator, donated by Big A and won by Bob Brown of Picton.

Ash tray set, donated by Keyes Supply, won by Clayton Gilroy of Tweed.

Soda siphon, donated by Perfect Circle Pistons, won by Charles Hunt of Picton.

War Savings Stamps, donated by President Ken Vivian, won by James Prout of Picton.

War Savings Stamps, donated by J. B. Boyce, Belleville, won by Earl Honey of Milltown.

Military District No. 3 Leads Way in Enlistments For Active Service

Military District No. 3 again leads the way in enlistments for active service of men now doing their period of compulsory military service, it has been announced at District Headquarters. All the men at the Cornwall basic training centre who reported for their period of compulsory training on July 31st have enlisted for active service.

The Cornwall training centre was the first camp in Canada to report 100 per cent. active service enlistment from the group of trainees about six weeks ago. Now the second group has volunteered as a body for active service with the Canadian army.

Following appeals during the past two or three days, it was revealed by Lt.-Col. Rudolphe Lorose, E.D., Officer Commanding the Cornwall camp, that the entire group of compulsory trainees reporting on July 31, had enlisted. The group comprised 83 men. All of the 1,000 officers and men at the Cornwall camp are now "active service."

THE LATE LORD WILLINGDON

The Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor General of Canada who died this week in England, was a man of great diplomatic gifts and served the Empire in a notable manner. He served in India as Governor of Bombay and played no small part in the war effort of India in the first world war. In 1926 he came to Canada and for five years he gave bountiful evidence of his brilliant fitness for public life. He was the first Governor General to serve Canada under the new Statute of Westminster. At the end of his term he went back to India as viceroy, succeeding Lord Halifax, where he served India and the Empire well in that critical time.

Born for statecraft and gifted with the finest qualities of mind and heart, he has left to the world the impression of a man, who was ever solicitous to do his noblest service in the posts which he occupied.

Canada has been particularly fortunate in the Governors General, whose influence has left its mark upon the Dominion of Canada. The grace and charm and ability of the late Marquess of Willingdon will long be remembered. Canada mourns the loss of this statesman.

IN THE WORLD OF 1852

From another world, as it were, comes the story of the original Little Eva, who has died at the age of 94. At the Troy Museum, on September 27, 1852, the dramatization of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the story of Harriet Beecher Stowe, was first presented and Little Eva was played by a four-year-old girl, Cordelia Howard, daughter of the manager. Mrs. Cordelia Howard MacDonald who died in Cambridge, Mass., on Sunday was that Little Eva.

Change has taken place in the nearly 90 years since Little Eva first trod the boards in a play that was to be one of the great lights on the march of freedom of the colored race.

The show ran for a hundred nights in Troy and Little Eva made a hit from the first night. In a theatre in New York it ran for a hundred nights. For eighty-nine years it has been played and it still runs.

What source of inspiration has it not been ever since to millions of people! The story was of its own age and timely beyond measure but it had the quality of enduring because it dealt with the motives and sorrows of a race. Down generations it still will march for no age seems too far removed from its appeal.

The Little Eva of the day left the stage eight years later and for eighty-two years lived a live of normalty and avoided fame as far as she could. For decades she was besieged to return to the stage. "I have never had a desire to return to the theatre except as a member of the audience," she said.

The father of the little actress was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and went to the United States when he was eighteen years of age. It was he who saw the possibilities of the part of Little Eva immediately on the publication of the story and therefore he asked his cousin to write it in play form. The dramatic emphasis was placed on Little Eva. Both Cordelia Howard's parents played in the drama. Howard who was lessee of the Museum at Troy, presented the play for eight years in the United States and retired with a fortune to Cambridge. During those eight years Cordelia Howard continued the role of Little Eva and retired with her family from the stage on their removal to Troy.

How different were the surroundings of the little child actress nearly ninety years ago from those of child actresses today or young screen stars. Yet Mrs. MacDonald had given the stage something it has not forgotten for nearly a century.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

BRIGHT RUSSIANS

When I was editing a paper in Tampico, Mexico, in 1922, a tall, slender, blond man in the early 20's came to ask me where he could get a job. His English was perfect and he said he could speak or write seven languages perfectly. I knew an oil company executive who needed a secretary who was a linguist so I asked the man if he could speak Spanish. "No," he said, "but I can learn to speak and write it in two weeks." At luncheon that day I saw the oil man and told him of the newcomer—the man had just come in on a ship. "I'll bet he's a Russian," said the oil man. "The Russians and Scandinavians have the greatest gift for languages that I ever heard of."

He was correct. The man was a Russian. He got the job and in two weeks he could speak and write Spanish. I had lived in Mexico more than two years and couldn't do either respectably. I wonder if any of the Russians ever think that we Americans are dumb?

—Lee Shippey, in Los Angeles Times.

V V V V

And we remember in the dying days of the last Great War being a lone escort to a half-dozen husky Russkies whom we convoyed from an "Eastern Canadian Port" to the comparative peace of the then Hamilton Sanitorium.

Six six-footers, big hulking chaps who had a tubercular condition. They looked upon their "two-star wonder" boss with looks akin to awe. Perhaps they were inwardly laughing at us, because our presence when we marched down James street in Hamilton, a runty little bloke marching ahead of six burly sons of the Steppes who followed in single file, drew quiet smiles from the folks of the Ambitious City. They were meek chaps, as harmless as a kitten. And one, a lance-jack was the only member of the Siberian sextette who could speak English the way we understood it. The train was late, some fifty-five minutes or so. We managed to convey to the corporal that he and his gang could "buzz off" for three quarters of an hour. But apparently he misunderstood. When we returned to the station the six Russkies stood exactly where we had left them. They smiled great big smiles of welcome when we arrived with the tickets.

But imagine our chagrin when we neared the San, one of the big palookas, in the best of English this side of Bond Street, asked us how we had enjoyed the trip. He also asked us how we liked the snack we had in a restaurant and the name of the blonde waitress to whom we chatted for several minutes. The big huskies had followed us all over the city to see that "you no get lost."

ODE ON AN ALUMINUM URN

(Al Graham in N.Y. Sun)

Farewell, O faithful Coffee Pot!
Full many a cup of piping hot
Delicious brew thou gavest me;
And I in turn reluctantly
Give up thy rounded shining plate
Wherein said brew did percolate.

Nor would I, Pot, old pal, old chap,
Be now consigning thee to scrap
Were not I certain thou dost go
To deal the Hun a deathly blow.

And when thy blow is surely dealt
And war is done, pray be re-smelted yet again—again (why not?)
To be my faithful Coffee Pot.

MAY QUEEN'S DIARY

"Call me early mother, dear," sounds so pretty—but in these days what really happens is this:

7 a.m.: Mother calls May Queen.

7.10: Mother calls May Queen, again.

7.14: Mother runs upstairs and shakes May Queen by both shoulders, cooing gently.

7.14—7.45: Still shaking.

8.00: Mother shakes May Queen by both ears, snarling horribly. May Queen smiles in her sleep.

8.05: Frantic mother socks May Queen with wet sponge.

8.06—8.12: Hysterical mother, all control gone, lifts up slumbering May Queen and hammers bed rail with head.

8.13: Mother, exhausted, collapses sobbing on carpet.

8.14: May Queen opens one eye and asks mother not to forget to call her early, for she is to be Queen of the May!

Nazis Face Bloody Fight For Odessa

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Aug. 14, (AP) Hard-pressed Russian armies attempting escape from the great Nazi trap in the Southern Ukraine are admittedly in grave peril; yet a long and bloody fight for Odessa still may be possible.

German claims say that the Russians caught in the pocket between the Bug and Dniester Rivers are fleeing southward to the Black Sea coast, hotly pursued. Moscow is silent as to the situation on that or any other sector of the long battlefront.

Yet even a casual study of the seacoast terrain about Odessa indicates that Nazi mechanized forces face serious obstacles in completing the investment of Odessa. The three-pronged German effort described in Berlin despatches as stabbing from the north and the west to cut off Russian retreat to the coast is obviously dictated by the nature of the ground rather than by a strategic concept.

Protected by Lakes

The Gulf of Odessa is the Black Sea drainage basin for a vast sweep of plateau lands in the Southern Ukraine. Between the mouth of the Dniester, thirty miles or so southwest of Odessa, and the mouths of the Dnieper, nearly 100 miles east of the city, half a dozen big or little streams flow into the Odessa Gulf. Each forms what is called a "lake" some of them stretching far inland.

They fan out about Odessa like the spread fingers of a huge, outstretched hand. Each bears the name of the river for which it is the sea outlet. West of Odessa, for example, Dniestrovski Lake, ten miles or so wide, forms a thirty-mile-long water hazard barring Nazi-Rumanian tank approach along the coastal plain.

North of Odessa each of the three branches of the Kuyalink River comes down into a lake-like estuary They stretch twenty miles or so to the northwest barring eastwest movement about the city. Twenty-five miles eastward is Lake Giligulski, reaching thirty miles or more inland, and beyond it eastward is Lake Beranski, an even more formidable barrier to Nazi approach along the coast from the east toward Odessa.

The next eastward estuary is Lake Bugski, the outlet of the Bug River. It runs almost due north to Nikolaev and beyond for a distance of sixty miles. Beyond that is the Dnieper and the huge lake which bears its name.

Can't Attack From East

Berlin reports have intimated that the only Nazi forces to reach the Black Sea coast east of Odessa down the Bug River did so at Ochakov. That is a coastal hamlet forty-five miles east of Odessa and between the lake mouths of the Bug and the Beranski. It offers small chance of any direct advance westward on the coastal plain toward Odessa.

This system of finger lakes fanning inland from the Odessa Gulf forces the Germans to split up their attack into separate operations. The unit at Ochakov would have to turn back northward around Lake Beranski to press westward toward Odessa, and still would be east of Lake Giligulski and two other smaller estuaries.

The most open land approach to Odessa is from the northwest, east to Lake Dnietrovski. The main rail line into Odessa comes that way with a lesser line running northward between Beranski and Giligulski Lakes. It was this widespread lake system about Odessa which compelled the German-Rumanian advance from the west to follow an inland route toward Nikolaev.

The military importance of the lakes in a siege defense of Odessa would be very great if it is the Russian purpose to hold out there to the end. They virtually forbid piecemeal encirclement of Russian troops posted on each relatively narrow strip between the lakes.

Odessa may be doomed as London militarists virtually concede; but a stern and bloody fight still could be made for it.

Insulin and Mental Cases

Although Dr. Frederick Banting has passed on, the effects of his discovery of insulin becomes more widespread as time passes. Not only did this discovery make it possible for diabetics to live many years but it has stimulated research work as to its effects in other diseases particularly mental ailments.

First there was the discovery that many cases of dementia precox — persistent dream state—could be completely cured or greatly helped by insulin shock. After recovering from the shock, the patient is clearer mentally until finally he is considered fit to return home.

More recently, research workers have found that individuals who were not confined to mental institutions but were a little "odd" in their behavior could be helped by doses of insulin, not large enough to cause shock.

And now a case of straight mental deficiency, where a boy had been below normal from birth, is reported greatly improved by insulin. For years these youngsters deficient mentally, who are unable to accomplish much at school or elsewhere, have been treated with other gland extracts—thyroid, pituitary, adrenal, sex—with a fair amount of success. That the extract from the pancreas — insulin—can favorably affect a backward child is now recorded by Dr. Robert L. Pitfield, in Clinical Medicine. The boy did not talk till he was three years old, nor walk until he was four. During the first eight years of his life he had difficulty in keeping his balance on arising to his feet. He was so weak physically he did not attend school so learned little during the first ten years of his childhood.

Examination showed him a couple of inches short for his age and about twenty pounds underweight. His expression was stupid and he was listless and quiet.

To increase his weight, Dr. Pitfield put him on insulin, ten units twice a day for thirteen months and he was given an increased amount of starch food. There was no thought of helping his mental condition by the insulin and extra starch food.

"At the end of a year this patient had grown three inches gained twenty pounds (nine pounds more than the average gain). His whole expression and behavior had changed to one of more normal intelligence.

While one case does not prove that all such cases can be helped, this improvement in this case is in line with the favorable effects of insulin in adults with mental symptoms.

INDIAN TOBACCO

Because of the tobacco shortage many English farmers are reported to be smoking oak leaves, docks and the foliage of a flowerless field plant known in Suffolk as "monkey tobacco."

This means that smoking is getting back about where it started about 400 years ago.

Europeans acquired the smoking habit from the American Indians, but when white men first visited the New World the natives were smoking all sorts of leaves, roots, bark and twigs.

The plant that we call tobacco had only a limited distribution in North America and most of the Indians knew little about it.

There is very little evidence that the pre-Columbian Indians smoked habitually and privately merely for personal enjoyment.

Among certain Indians tobacco and several other plants had a sort of sacred character and were smoked on solemn occasions, accompanied with suitable invocations to their deities

Smoking tobacco and other vegetable materials had among them a significance somewhat similar to the burning of incense among some other peoples.

These substances were also smoked by the Indians ceremonially to cure disease, aid in distress, ward off danger, bring good luck, to allay fear, to confirm treaties and to celebrate victories. Perhaps tobacco and the other sacred plants were sometimes smoked socially, as distinguished from religiously among the Indians, but in such cases the Indians passed the pipe from one to the other as they sat in a circle on the ground.

It is doubtful whether any Indian in pre-Columbian days knew what it was to sit down and enjoy a good smoke by himself.

Smoking tobacco as a personal habit apparently originated among Europeans who adopted and modified an Indian custom that they did not thoroughly understand.

As a personal and private habit, the American Indian learned smoking from the white man.

The North American Indian in his primitive condition had no satisfactory method of curing tobacco, and the only pipes he had were adapted for ceremonial rather than private smoking.

Perhaps some of the natives of the West Indies and Central and South America smoked tobacco for private enjoyment and acquired the nicotine habit, but the average North American Indian didn't distinguish between tobacco and several other plants for smoking purposes.

LESS NEWSPRINT FOR AUSTRALIAN NEWSPAPERS USE

Restriction for Sunday Papers Ranges From 20 to 65 Per Cent, Smaller Weeklies are Exempt

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP)—In an Australian government move aimed at saving foreign exchange in wartime, use of newsprint by Australian newspapers now is restricted to 55 per cent of the quantity used in 1938-39, R. P. Bower, assistant Canadian trade commissioner, has reported to the department here.

The paper rationing, which came into effect July 1, is on a sliding scale based on the number of broadsheet pages printed by a newspaper during 1938-39. The percentage restriction on daily papers varies from complete exemption for papers which printed up to 24 broadsheet pages a week during 1938-39 to 60 per cent of 1938-39 consumption for papers which printed over 132 pages.

A 20-per-cent restriction from 1938-39 consumption is imposed on Sunday papers which printed less than 24 pages, ranging up to 65 per cent for those with more than 48 pages. Weekly papers which printed up to four pages in 1938-39 are exempt but papers with over 40 pages are restricted to 50 per cent of the newsprint used in 1938-39.

Tonnage of paper a newspaper may consume is increased or decreased according to whether its net circulation per issue increases or decreases. "If it is decided that the percentage will be further increased to 60 per cent as from Oct. 1, an amended sliding scale will be prepared," said Mr. Bower in his report.

Canada Affected

Since Australia imports most of its newsprint—much of it from Canada—a saving of foreign exchange is effected by reduced consumption in the Commonwealth. However, newspapers using Australian-produced newsprint do not obtain any more paper in the aggregate than do those which obtain their requirements from overseas. "The rationing scheme applies not to imports but to paper consumed by the various publishers, whether obtained locally or not," Mr. Bower reported.

Other periodicals will continue to operate on a 30-per-cent restriction of paper supplies. Paper to be used for catalogues, circulars and similar printed matter is being rationed by a reduction of 35 per cent on quantities used in the base year ended June 30, 1939.

Ad. Restriction

After Oct. 1 it will be unlawful to print matter advertising the sale and distribution of goods unless an authority to use paper for the purpose has been obtained from the collector of customs. "The rationing of paper for such use serves a double purpose," Mr. Bower said. "It saves paper and thus conserves foreign exchange and it also handicaps the sale of advertised merchandise when the greatest national saving is desirable in the interests of war finance."

Restrictions also will be imposed on use of paper for printing of calendars, sales docket books, counter sales books and couriers and throwdowns for motion picture advertising. Use of cardboard as a mounting board in the packing of apparel now is prohibited.

CANUCKS STILL IN HONEYCOMBS OF GIANT "ROCK"

Writer Tells of Cave Barracks and Other Engineer Making Solid Gibraltar Even More So

Gibraltar (CP)—In Gibraltar's "underground city" troops are working night and day on the task of enlarging and completing the amazing network of tunnels that honeycomb the "rock". They include strapping hardrock Canadian miners and men from many parts of Britain, working in eight hour shifts every day.

On a tour through some of the miles of tunnels a Reuter's correspondent saw how masses of rock had been blasted out to accommodate barracks and everything necessary for thousands of men to live and fight for a prolonged period. Of his trip he wrote:

"I inspected one large three-storey barracks in a huge man-made cavern in the heart of the rock. I saw hospitals fully-equipped with operating theatres, x-ray apparatus and even electric fires.

Tanks of Oil

"The city also contains power stations for generating electric light, well-fitted washrooms complete with built-in hand basins and chromium-plated taps and cookhouses. Vast quantities of oil and water are stored in subterranean tanks as well as food and even tobacco and boiled sweets.

"Side by side with the speed-up in work with the fortifications fresh supplies of war materials—including a number of new devices—have arrived and training is going ahead with renewed energy.

"Troops armed with rifles and other weapons patrol the town daily and take part in various defence exercises. The clatter of Bren gun carriers through the streets at night awakens the comparatively few remaining civilians and reminds them that training does not end after daylight. The roar of airplane engines at all hours proclaims that the fortress air arm is being kept in fighting trim."

More Canadians

The Canadians on the "rock" include members of a Royal Canadian Engineers tunnelling company which arrived last spring to work with a Canadian detachment which has been at Gibraltar since last December.

The unit, under the command of Maj. C. B. North, Vancouver, was formed after successful operation in England and Gibraltar of tunnelling detachments commanded by Maj. Colin Campbell of Kingston, Ont.

Rubber Products Require Export Permit

Ottawa, Aug. 13 (CP)—Trade Minister MacKinnon announced today the addition by order-in-council of rubber manufactures and semi-manufactures to the list of those commodities which require an export permit before they may be exported to any country outside the British Empire.

By ministerial order export permits are required on all exports of rubber tires and tubes, solid rubber tires for motor cars and trucks when exported to any country other than the British Empire.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Lillian Jean, to Mr. George Arthur Bound, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bound of Campbellford, the marriage to take place the later part of August.

Donna Parnell, Victoria Avenue, has returned home from spending a month's holidays with her uncle, J. R. MacKillican, Sudbury, Ont.

Mrs. H. M. Roblin and Miss Muriel Roblin, Toronto, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Norris, Bleecker Avenue.

Miss Dorothy Morgan, Campbellford, is visiting in the city the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. T. Sothwell.

Capt. R. L. Bird returned to his duty in Petawawa, on Sunday after spending a week's leave with his wife and family, Victoria Ave.

Mrs. Jas. Bradford, Centenary, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. Clapp, North Park Street.

Miss Margaret Middleton, Cedar Street, is holidaying at Presqu'Ile, the guest of Miss Lois Liddle.

Mrs. Fred Aikens, Doris and Teddy, are spending some time at the summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wilson, on Lake Simcoe.

Mrs. S. B. Upper, 144 Foster Ave., is in Sault Ste. Marie, to attend the funeral of her mother, the late Mrs. Joseph Hand.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Henderson and Joan of Miami, Fla., also Mrs. Cunningham and daughter, Patricia, of Hamilton, who have been holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Baldwin at their cottage on the Bay of Quinte, have returned to their homes.

A miscellaneous shower was held on Tuesday evening at the home of the Misses Hazel and Verna Keene, when Miss Dorothy Thrasher, bride-elect, was honored by her girl friends in Centenary community. After Hazel read a address Verna Keene and June Hall presented Dorothy with a huge gaily decorated basket filled with all kinds of gifts for use in the kitchen. Though greatly surprised by the kind thoughts and good wishes of her friends, Dorothy found words to express her appreciation. Dainty refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

WALLBRIDGE W.A. AND W.M.S.

The August meeting of Wallbridge W.A. and W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. R. F. Elliott on Wednesday of last week with a good attendance.

After the dinner had been served, Mrs. F. Shorey took charge of the W. A. meeting which was opened by singing hymn 387 and repetition of the Lord's Prayer in unison. It was decided each member give a donation of 25 cents at the next meeting. Plans were also made for quilting two quilts. The meeting was closed by singing hymn 356 and the Mizpah Benediction.

The W.M.S. meeting was in charge of the President, Mrs. R. Elliott. The theme for the month was "Demonstrating the way of Christ in social welfare."

Mrs. Elliott gave the call to worship which was followed by hymn 510 and responsive reading of No. 730 in the hymnary. Mrs. Elliott read a short poem on prayer. One should not pray only for one's own comforts but that others may also secure the blessings they need.

The Apostle's Creed was repeated in unison followed by prayer by Mrs. Elliott. The Bible reading was given by Mrs. W. Sine. The roll call was answered by "A verse of your favorite hymn." A temperance discussion followed, led by Mrs. Jas. Hinchcliffe Temperance Secretary "As God told Moses to go before the Israelites and lead them out of Egypt so we should go ahead and do all in our power for temperance"

Mrs. Elliott then gave a short reading. The women of the W. M. S. and community must do all in their power to raise the standard of living as regards housing, food, work, health of both body and mind. Our homes and home life should be such that the younger folks will wish to spend their leisure time at home and not in places of questionable amusement and make Christianity such that the younger generation will be ready to follow willingly our leading, but in order to do this successfully there must be faithfulness in individual private devotional life.

The meeting closed with hymn 378 and prayer by Mrs. Elliott.

Lipstick Leads Beauty Parade

Betty Grable likes a natural shade lipstick for daytime wear.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Lipsticks still carry the banners in the beauty parade. They're as necessary as the good old powder pad which lays on the dull finish. Life would be colorless without them.

Why not take a cosmetic fling, buy lipsticks of varying shades so as to have one that will not conflict with the color of the frock or hat? The rule is that a natural tint is best for daytime use, but one can go vivid as all get out when the lights are on and the music is playing. Sunlight jeers and hisses at faces that carry strong make up. Electric lights are kinder.

Powder and Lipstick.

The white haired woman can dramatize herself by using a lavender powder—it makes her skin look delicately transparent—and a crimson lip smear that carries a violet cast. The tow headed blonde, with hair like honey, can use the same lipstick, but for her an ivory powder is more flattering. Only the old fashioned soul fancies that the silver tressed woman should not use make up. There's no age limit. One must use taste and judgment, that's all. Why should grandma be left out of the beauty party? She's just a gay gazelle these days.

The woman with wide face and pronounced features can broaden her lips with pigment, but the girl with thin, narrow nose and small mouth will do better with a light film of faint coloring, carefully following the natural outline of the lips.

Remove the gay coloring at bedtime, using a cream for the purpose. Apply a white lipstick for the night, so the flesh will keep smooth and moist. Raggedy lips are seen all too often.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Doesn't Want to Be a Social Climber, So Her Husband's Disappointed

Why does a man, if he has the price—and sometimes if he hasn't, buy diamonds for his wife, let her have department-store charge accounts over which he grinds his teeth and tears his hair, live in a house that he can't afford to keep up, buy a new car on installments when the old one is good enough—why does he do these things?

Ladies, if you have been married a few years to this type of husband, you have discovered the answer to this riddle. He does not do these things wholly for the love of his lady wife. He runs into debt to bedizen her like the Queen of Sheba because she is his show-case.

He wants his business associates, fellow members of his Particular Chamber of Commerce, men at the links over which he plays a game of golf, to look at his wife and gauge his prosperity.

It's all a miserable keeping up with the Joneses and very often, the little woman, as in the case of one of my correspondents, would greatly prefer not to keep up. She isn't that type. She's a home body whose interest is mainly in her children and her husband, of course. Her letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"What's the foundation of this age-old delusion that a man selects hi swife for a fancied reflection of sme of his mother's qualities? Take my husband for example. He and his mother fought from the time he left college and went to live with her, until we were married.

"No two human beings could have been more unlike than my late mother-in-law and myself. She was an ambitious woman who thought very little about anything else but getting on, as she saw it. She starved and scrimped to send her son to a good preparatory school, secretly took paying guests to send him to one of the big colleges. Then she saw that he knew 'the right people.'

"I never saw my late mother-in-law. She had died before her son and I ever met, and what he saw in me that reminded him of her, only the angels could tell. My sister said it was because I always made my own clothes and put up such a good appearance that he imagined I would be socially ambitious.

"And I won't deny that I had a knack of setting a pretty table with a few inexpensive but attractive things. It was the same with our parents' home. The original furniture had gone threadbare. My sister and I made things gay with chintz and the paint pot.

"And so we were married and I think it was the disappointment of my husband's life when I didn't 'angle' to know what he called 'the best people,' but selected my friends because we were congenial and try didn't try to push and shove to climb the social ladder.

"He's terribly disapponted in me and says that I don't help him along in his profession, and that his mother did this and that—things I just can't do. Our children are still young, but he worries for fear the girls won't go to the right kind of schools and we won't have the money to send the boys to his preparatory school which, to my way of thinking, made a snob of him for life. Perhaps these seem small troubles to you, but they're getting me down.

Homebody."

Your husband will wake up one of these days to the fact that you don't have to wear jewels—you are one.

You're not a social climber, and you despise the snobbery of chasing after the Jones. If you attempted it, you'd probably fail. One has to have "boot-licking" qualities to get ahead by this means. Don't worry. Your children will have a sounder sense of real values than if they were brought up to be "boot-lickers."

ANSWERS TO ETIQUETTE PROBLEMS OF WORKING GIRLS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am employed as the only stenographer in a small manufacturing plant. I am getting married in October, and leaving this city and my job. I have had my position for two years, and am now well-trained in the carrying of many especially intricate responsibilities demanded in this position.

Because there is so much training to be done in this position, I am perplexed as to just when I should tell my employer of my intentions, as he will have to look for another girl and train her as he did me.

Also frankly, not only does the time of telling him puzzle me, but also I am at a complete loss of words as to how to tell him. Will you please give me some advice as to how to go about it? I know you think it is silly of me not to know how to do this, but I never had to face anything like this before. Will you help me?

Peggy.

Everything you write in your letter shows your fine sense of fairness to your employer and to his business, and also your sound understanding of how much time and effort he will have to take to locate just the right successor for you. So all I have to tell you is to do everything you can do to make things as easy as possible for him. Apparently he's been a good employer to you, and you'll want to know that when you leave your position.

Your employer will have to do the finding of your successor, but he no doubt would be grateful if you would take on all responsibility of training her.

So, when you've decided the date you want to leave, go to him and tell him your plans—that you're going to leave your position, that you're going to be married, how much you've enjoyed working for him and with him, of your willingness to train your successor in the responsibilities of the position.

INVITING AN EMPLOYER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am working for a dentist who is associated with a group of dentists, twelve altogether. I am acquainted with some better than I am with others. I have been working for this dentist for five months. Do you think that I should invite them and their wives to my wedding which is to take place in September?

Another Peggy.

It would not be necessary for you to send an invitation to the dentist for whom you have been working and to his wife (it should of course, be addressed to both of them) but it would be a courteous gesture for you to make. However, it would be definitely out-of-order for you to send invitations to your wedding to the other dentists and their wives. Since you have known these men casually, and for such a short time, they certainly would not expect to receive such a personal invitation.

COURTESY TIP

Did you receive a picture postcard from a relative or friend on vacation? Did you remember to say thank-you for thus being remembered?

THE LITTLE COUNTRY BY-WAYS

The little country by-ways
That curve and dip and bend,
And lead the laggard wanderer
To roads that have no end—
These have a lure enchanting
That highways ne'er impart—
A touch of scenic beauty
That ensares the tourist's heart.

A sudden bend discloses
A scene of beauty rare—
A quiet home, a hamlet,
A rustic garden fair;
And from a sudden hill-top
Is caught a vision bright
Of soft and rippling waters
Shrouded in mists of white

Would you escape life's tumult
And calm and poise regain,
Oh! leave behind the highway
And seek the country by-ways,
The calm sequestered by-ways
Where peace and beauty reign.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, August 15

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY on which there may be substantial gain and stability probably coming where and when least expected. There are strange forces of surprise and suddenness at work, promising to accelerate enduring growth and solidity in both old and new enterprises. However, it would be as well to accept assistance from such unexpected sources rather than to seek it from customary channels. The major interests of the day, however, may be found in sentimental, artistic, inspirational or social activities, with love, beauty, romance and the finer things of life holding sway over the more sordid. A time for pleasure and culture.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of increased growth and security, arising from some sudden and unforeseen source, with the element of the novel, singular or unconventional actuating things. Strange persons and circumstances may prove more beneficial than the intervention of regulation or looked-for agencies. The social, domestic, cultural, artistic and higher emotional or creative urges may be uppermost, with pleasure and growth for the young and romantic.

CANNIFTON W. M. S.

The August meeting of the Cannifton Woman's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School rooms. The President, Mrs. R. Lockyer was in charge. "Demonstrating the way of Christ in social Welfare" was the theme of the worship service and Mrs. Loucks, Mrs. Wells and Mrs. W. Brenton assisted the president. The treasurer, Mrs. H. Empson reported that Dollar Day had been very successful this year and that over thirty dollars had been received.

The following program was in charge of Mrs. W. Brenton, Friendship Convener: A reading by Mrs. C. Mills; a solo, "Love thyself last" Mrs. A. Armstrong; the study book "Rev. Oliver Jackson, the Apostle of the outposts" given by Mrs. J. Williams; a duet "Ivory palaces" by Mrs. H. Farnham and Mrs. R. Lockyer; Temperance reading, Mrs. H. Farnham. The meeting closed with prayer.

Misunderstood "Nerves" Make Your Life a Trial

Repression A Common Error

Seething over inside, but trying to hide it!

Such inner crises become worse and worse for the women who tries to control her "nerves" by repressing them.

If you are high-strung, you have more dynamic energy, keener sensibilities than the average person. Rightly understood, your nerves are an asset, adding to your charm.

But if you try to make yourself follow a too-rigid routine, if you keep yourself emotionally under lock and key, your sensitive nervous system gets out of gear. Edgy, miserable—you drive away friends. You may suffer from insomnia, other ills.

Have outlets. Don't be afraid to drop your duties for a day of fun. Express your creative self in a hobby—rug-making, perhaps. Talk out emotional problems instead of being grim about them. Know something, too, about diet and nerves.

In our 32-page booklet, a well known physician explains mental and physical causes of "nerves," what to do about them. Discusses nervous indigestion, insomnia, other "nerve" symptoms. Describes correct diet, body care for vitality, health.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of OVERCOMING NERVES AND EVERY-DAY HEALTH PROBLEMS to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

COLORED NAILS ARE FORBIDDEN BRITISH "WRENS"

Umbrellas, Jewels and Furs Also "Out" in Service on Which Canada's Auxiliary to be Modelled

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP) — "We're in the navy now" will soon be chanted with complete assurance by women of Canada. The envied song ceased to be the exclusive property of sea-going males with the announcement by Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles, Chief of Staff, that the navy, like the army and the air force, is creating its own official woman's auxiliary unit.

Though plans are still in the preliminary stages, Canadian "Wrens" (Women's Royal Navy Service) are likely to have much in common with the sister British organization, which traditionally takes seniority over army and air.

In the office of Admiral Nelles is to be found complete information as to the setup and requirements of the British W.R.N.S. These will be used as a guide in formulating plans, it was stated at headquarters, though it was emphasized that Canadian needs would necessitate adaptions which would preclude any copying.

In England women must be British subjects or daughters of British subjects before their applications can be accepted, though special qualifications may persuade the Admiralty to waive thsi condition. The age limit varies between 17 and 45 years with further exception in special cases where it may be carried to 49 years.

Cover Wide Field

Details of preliminary qualifications include that women be not already engaged in "reserve occupations" (other war work). Medical examination must show good health and teeth, while a personal interview with naval authorities is necessary before final decision. British women may join in one of two categories. As "immobile" if there happens to be a W.R.N.S. in their home town so they may live at home and work. Otherwise women must be prepared to go wherever they are sent.

After a 14-day probationary period they are posted to their stations. Only in certain reserved categories is special training given, notably in cooking, where recruits with special aptitudes are sent to cooking schools.

For transport work women must already hold their driver's licence, have several years experience, show a clean licence, be prepared to do a more than amateur job at repairing a truck or car and capable of driving a lorry in the darkness. A special post which has attracted many women in England is that of dispatch rider. Women who formerly belonged to the popular motor-cycle clubs in Britain were quickly worked into this phase of the work.

A field which will not be open in Canada in the beginning at least, Admiral Nelles said, is that of communications which include wireless, signal work and telegraph because of the need of training men for the sea. But in this field in Britain many women are already employed on land with notable success.

Officers are promoted through the ranks in accordance with the rule which now exists throughout the three services in Britain.

The Duchess of Kent is the honorary as well as active head of the British "Wrens" whose slogan "Join the Wrens and free a man to join the fleet" has been a popular one since the outbreak of the war.

Rigid Discipline

In this, as in the other services, women leave behind many aspects of civilian life when they join. In their conduct they are expected to show their respect for superior officers, salute the senior officers of their own units and show a similar courtesy to other units.

Much emphasis is placed on the respect owed to the uniform. "Women ratings and officers must discharge their duties with zeal and alacrity" the instructions read. "They must be conscious that the uniform is conspicuous and their behaviour should therefore be above reproach. They must not walk arm-in-arm, engage in noisy or rowdy behaviour, but maintain order and discipline."

In Britain, the regulations indicate clearly, women in the services are encouraged to devote themselves to public service. "Think of the comfort and the convenience of the public and be ready to help" they are advised.

In connection with personal appearance the uniform (decided by the Admiralty) is of dark blue, double-breasted jacket with brass buttons and soft blue felt hat. "Jewels, furs, hand bags, umbrellas, scent or colored nails are forbidden" is the statement, "and hair must not touch the collar."

For Offenders

Superior officers are addressed as "Ma'am." Punishment for insubordination, neglect or absence without leave ranges from discharge down through disrating, suspence from duty without pay, reprimand, pay dockage, to small fatigue duties or restriction of privileges.

While these rules will not apply directly to the Canadian W.R.N.S. something similar, especially arranged to fit Canadian naval needs, may be expected.

Perusal of the rules which are followed in similar auxiliary services in South Africa and New Zealand show that they are very similar. Particularly in New Zealand where naval personnel is of particular importance, women have been encouraged to fill every sort of position in the civilian shipping services in order to release men for active service.

Medicine in the News

Your Body's Need for More Salt in Summer

This is the season when the body uses and loses a lot of water from the skin in the form of perspiration, in order to control its heat production. With the increased production of perspiration there may be loss of salt from the body contributing to the production of heat cramps or heat stroke. For this reason most industries in which there is considerable heat, and many golf courses on which there is both physical and mental heat, provide salt tablets to be taken by those who are losing sal from the body in perspiration.

Also associated with the production of perspiration of course, is the dryness of the throat and the craving of the body for water that we call thirst. Many persons never know what it is to be thirsty because they drink quantities of water regularly. Indeed many people form a habit early in life of taking in at least eight glasses of water daily—3 with meals, 3 before meals, 1 on arising and one on retiring. This fluid is in addition to what is taken in the body as soup, coffee, tea and other beverages.

The water habit can be developed to the point of abuse, by taking in as much as 5 or 6 quarts a day. Excess water throws a burden on the kidneys and on the heart.

Often a dryness in the throat and mouth is not thirst, as this condition can be produced by excessive talking and singing and emotional disturbances like fear and anxiety. If the saliva is not flowing for any special reason, the mouth becomes dry. This, however, is quite different from the condition which results when large amounts of fluid are lost from the body by perspiration, diarrhea, bleeding or as in the case of new mothers, in the nursing of babies. Another type of thirst is that which results from eating salty or highly spiced foods. Indeed, whenever the salt balance of the body is disturbed, there is a sense of thirst.

Physiologists estimate the average person doing ordinary work drinks 2 1-2 to 4 quarts of fluid a day. In hot climates, however, this amount may actually reach, as reported by observers in India, an amount of thirteen quarts a day. Whenever the temperature of the body is elevated, as in exercise in hot weather, extra amounts of water will be required. For this reason any well conducted working place has conveniently located drinking fountains.

Because of the existence of heat cramps and the common loss of salt from the body in perspiration, medical officers on naval vessels and in army camps are now recommending the routine addition of salt to drinking water. The total salt content of the blood is estimated to be one ounce, with about two ounces of salt distributed in the tissues. Half an ounce of salt can be lost from the body by violent exercise in hot weather.

Marathon runners now take at intervals drinks containing both sugar and salt. The sugar is to supply the fuel energy lost from the muscles; the salt to provide for that portion lost from the body by perspiration. Specially flavored drinks containing sugar have an advantage in that they are taken into the body more slowly and in that they tend to stimulate the glands in the mouth and throat and thus help to rid the body of the sensation of dryness.

CHAPTER TWO

A Happy Cinderella

The spacious private room in the Trillmore Hotel, where thirty guests of Roberta Platt were dining, looked like a jolly aftermath of Christmas. With its clusters of red balloons suspended from the ceiling, its mirrors wound with silver fern and holly, it was catering nobly to the yuletide spirit.

The long lace-covered table, centered with red candles, silver and red glass bells and tiny Santa Claus figures, was the work of an artist. The balustrade about Ted Mills' famous dance orchestra, decorated with more silver fern and red silver bells, was glittering background for the Christmas carol swing tunes floating softly through the laughter and gay chatter of the guests.

Dona, sitting demurely beside the famous, anemic-looking George De Lane, glanced past Tom Castor on her right to the beaming Bob, startlingly lovely in the very gown her mother had wanted her to wear. She was posing now as an utterly sweet, naive girl wholly unconscious of her glamorous social position. And indications were that it was registering favorably with the eligible Tom Castor.

"Poor fellow — he little knows what he's heading for," thought Dona sympathetically. "That temper of hers will make him dance. But he's older—looks thirty—old enough perhaps to know how to manage her."

She decided that she liked the touch of gray at his temples, the set of his firm chin and the quality of grave reserve about him.

Then suddenly he looked her way and caught her studying him.

Dona felt her color rise, but the warm smile that quickly spread over Tom Castor's large-featured face was reassuring. It gave him a decidedly friendly air, which would mean something after several meetings, Dona decided. There was an indefinable depth about him that intrigued her. He excluded a kind of security, which had nothing to do with his solid fiancial rating.

"Why haven't I seen you around before, Miss Nickelson?" he asked now, his admiration in his steady hazel eyes.

Dona glanced quickly away from him. She wanted to tell him that he had passed her several times in the Platt house without noticing her; that one day out by the swimming pool, she had even told him where he could find Bob. In the lovely cream lace evening gown she was wearing, he could not see the simply dressed little secretary. "Clothes!" she thought contemptuously. "What can't clothes do for a woman?"

"I might ask the same of you?" she countered, and took a deep sip of water.

Fortunately, just then Bob drew Tom Castor in conversatin on her side of the table, and George De Lane, his blue eyes eager behind thick-lensed glasses, began giving Dona a vivid description of a bullfight he'd recently seen in Mexico. So another bridge was safely crossed as far as Dona's exact position at this feast was concerned.

Earlier in the evening she had been introduced by Bob as a cousin from San Francisco. This was partially true, because Dona had been born there. But her parents brought her to Unadilla as a baby and she had lived here ever since. The cousin business was convenient, Dona knew. Any breach of etiquette she made could be smoothly excused if Bob explained that cousins couldn't always be ignored. Bob was as clever as she was beautiful, thought Dona, a little apprehensively.

The dinner progressed without mishap to the dessert of frozen peach custard, with the pink-cheeked Dona receiving more attention than ever before in her life.

She knew that she looked her best. Her hair was a high mass of honey-colored curls tied with a ribbon that matched her sparkling wide, blue eyes. Jettie was an artist when she wanted to be. Mrs. Platt's skilled maid had added other touches, too. There was a hint of rouge on Dona's lovely lips and a bright lacquer on her pretty almond-shaped fingernails. De Lane's white orchids against her creamy bare shoulders and the grace of her softly rounded bare arms enhanced her fresh youthfulness and charm.

Even Bob, when Dona was ready and waiting for De Lane to come for her, had exclaimed in an annoyed sort of way, "Well, I never! You're — you're really surprising, Dona!"

But when Dona tried to express her appreciation for everything, Bob rudely threw a gorgeous blue velvet, sable-trimmed cape at her and snapped, "Don't ruin all your borrowed finery. It might look well on me sometime.

This wilted Dona's spirits somewhat, but Jettie whispered in her ear, "You're a knockout, Miss Dona—and don't let anybody tell you different."

This had sent a wave of confidence through Dona and given her courage to meet almost any bogey that might be lurking at Bob's party. Jettie had dressed a lot of women. She knew what was what.

Now in the midst of Bob's friendly guests, Dona felt entirely at ease. They weren't so different from other nice people she'd met. They had immediately made her one of them and quickly dispelled her fears and embarrassment. She nearly forgot that she did not rightly belong here, that one night lasted but a few hours, and that tomorrow she would be back in her exasperating job of attempting to please the emotional Mrs. Platt.

Later, when she was dancing in the crowded ballroom, the palpitating rhythm of Ted Mills' orchestra tempting her blue satin slippers to prance in spite of De Lane's lumbering gait, she knew she was the happiest girl in the world.

"You'd feel flattered, Miss Nickelson, if I told you I haven't danced in years."

He stepped on the toe of her slipper, said quickly, "Sorry. Just as I was about to brag. I have to apologize for my bad footwork. It's humiliating."

They laughed together and she decided that he was human, after all. She hadn't thought so famous a man could be. But he was far from good-looking with his unruly bright auburn hair, thin on his egg-shaped head, and his homely, irregular featured, which seemed too large for his short, too-slight frame.

"You needn't make excuses, Mr. De Lane," she told him brightly. "I haven't been dancing much lately—and anything's liable to happen."

She checked herself, remembering the role she was playing. Bob would be furious if this man discovered that her mother's secretary had been palmed off on him. And it really had been generous of Bob to include her in this brilliant crowd. She ought to be willing to do what was expected of her.

"I hope you're coming to Tom's cocktail party tomorrow," De Lane said a little later.

She did some fast thinking, then told him truthfully, "No—I'll be busy. I know Mr. Castor only slightly."

"What's the difference? Come and be my guest. Will you be too busy for that?"

"Yes—I'm sorry—I really couldn't."

"Then may I take you to the opera tomorrow evening?" "The Magic Flute'—"

"Oh, I'd love it!" she exclaimed impulsively.

Then immediately sho remembered all too much. Principally clothes. What clothes did she own fit for a gala evening? Of course, she might spend her small savings for an evening outfit, but it would be risky. Mrs. Platt might get provoked and fire her at a minute's notice—especially if she went out with this important guest. She wondered if she dared chance it.

"It's a date then."

"Ye-s." Now she'd thrown discretion to the winds. "But if you don't mind, I won't go formal."

"You'd be irresistibly lovely—in any case."

"You flatter me, Mr. De Lane." Her eyes were shining.

"Don't you like flattery?"

She pursed her lips and gazed at him gravely.

"When it's sincere, I do—and you are, I belive."

"Thank you, my dear—we're going to be good friends, aren't we?"

But before she could reply, he was tapped on the shoulder and forced to relinquish her to a tall young man whose arms went around her so swiftly it took her breath.

"Don't look so startled," Tug Nash promptly told her. "It's only the boy reporter."

Her heart bounced, then flamed with ecstacy as she met those dancing dark eyes she remembered so perfectly.

CHAPTER THREE

Love — and Fear

"Mr. Nash!" Dona finally got out unsteadily. "You—here?"

"Why not?" Tug Nash's hand tightened on her slim waist. "Newspaper men get around. I had a hunch you'd be here," he said matter-of-factly.

She knew she was blushing furiously but she gave a happy laugh. "What a grand line," she told him, hoping the music covered some of the agitation in her voice.

They reached an entrance and he stopped dancing. "Let's get away from this mob, beautiful," he said, and took her arm possessively.

Gladly, she went with him to the cocktail lounge. He led her into a booth with a circular leather seat and sat down beside her.

"I know it could be done," he told her, giving her critical appraisal.

Her dark line of brow lifted. "You mean—you knew you could make me come here with you?"

"No—unspoiled child. I know you could be a beauty if you let yourself go. Now, why haven't you dolled up like this before—or have you? You're not allergic to admiration, are you?"

The dark curtain of lashes droopped over her big dreamy blue eyes. "You don't seem to realize—" she began uncertainly.

"I only realize you're the most beautiful creature I've ever seen—that I've fallen for you so hard it hurts."

A waiter interrupted with a menu.

"What'll it be, darling?" Tug Nash asked, his tone low and lovelike.

"Ginger ale, please," murmured Dona.

Her head was soaring in the clouds. This heavenly miracle! Tug Nash, the man of whom she had been constantly thinking since their first meeting, was telling her things she wanted to hear. It might go on and on, until he said that he loved her. It might lead—oh, she dared not think where!

"Martini," Tug told the waiter quickly.

He rested both elbows on the small table, leaned his chin on his clasped hands and bent toward her.

"Well—here we are! And up till a few days ago, I didn't know you existed. Keen, isn't it?"

"Yes," she breathed tremulously, a finger moving aimlessly on the white tablecloth.

He fastened his caressing brown eyes full on her.

"Tell me, dear—do you go for me in a big way, too? Say yes—I can't take it if you don't."

His fiery impulsiveness had found an equal in her own wildly beating heart and there was no use pretending otherise.

"Ye-yes, I do—do like you—very much."

"Then it's a deal, isn't it?"

"Yes—a deal," she breathed faintly not knowing or caring exactly what he meant.

"The name's Tug."

"Yes—Tug."

"That's more like it. And I know your given name is Dona. I asked that stiff-necked Platt Butler."

"You—you did?"

"Yes—over the phone. I pretended to be news scouting for the 'Star'—got aside order of information for myself. Ways and means—that's yours truly."

He laughed confidently, sat back and lighted a cigarette.

The waiter brought their drinks and went away again.

Dona found the ice-cold ginger ale soothing to her hot tight throat. Was she dreaming? Everything seemed unreal. Here was her man—and he had sprung into her life like a fresh buoyant breeze and changed her very existence.

Then all at once she heard a familiar strident voice. Bob Platt was bearing down upon them with Hal Jones, Jerry Armstrong and Ted Malcum in tow.

Bob paused significantly beside Dona and, in her best company manner, drawled, "Oh, hello! Mind if we join you We're dying of thirst.

Dona flashed one quick glance into the boldly tantalizing face of Bob Platt and was instantly on the defensive. She suspected that Bob had seen the handsome Tug Nash and was after new conquest. With a sinking heart, Dona performed the necessary introductions. Bob, with her money, looks and clothes, could go on being the beautiful, fascinating creature she was this minute; but Dona Nickelson must soon return to her neat, plain costumes, her dull routine of service, no matter how it went against the grain.

She felt sickly defiant now and her loyalty to Bob sank to low ebb. Love did this, she thought fearfully. Love had swept her off her feet this night—and into— what?

From all outward appearances, Tug Nash was not at all perturbed over Bob's rude interruption. He immediately began a lively exchange of repartee with her, which seemed to charge the very air with electric currents, blotting out the presence of the others at the table.

Dona exerted herself and tried to appear gaily interested in the three men Bob had brought in her train. But she felt that this effort to reestablish her own morale was slightly pathetic. Certainly, it wasn't getting her anywhere in particular with Tug, and the other men didn't matter to her in the least.

She was relieved when Hal Jones invited her to dance. She jumped up quickly, sharply disappointed not to hear an instant protest from Tug. She wondered if her pride could ever recover from this over sight on his part. After telling her he had fallen for her in a big way, his action now were puzzling.

Tug probably flirted with all the out of making them love him. She'd been a silly little gump—an easy girls he met and got a big thrill mark! After this, she would take everything Tug Nash said with a grain of salt.

Tears blurred her eyes as she danced with Hal Jones. Hal was a beautiful dancer but he could not keep her with him for any length of time. Dona began to be swept from partner to partner until she grew a little giddy from trying to remember names. New courage came to her but she regretted that Tug Nash was not here to witness her new social triumph.

Then suddenly she was in Tug's arms again, her head against his tobacco-scented shoulder, his cheek firm on her hair.

"A nice way to treat me," he murmured in her ear, with a gentleness that brought the blurring tears again. "Running away with another man! Darling, you know I wanted to be alone with you. But—business is business.'"

"Business?" she asked wonderingly.

"Yes. Ever since I first met you, I knew I had to make more money. So I've resigned from the 'Star'. Insurance is my game now. I wanted to explain before—but that gang of Bob Platt's spoiled everything."

"You appeared to enjoy it," Dona told him curtly.

"But if I sell Bob Platt a twenty-year endowment, you won't mind will you? She'll fall for it, you'll see."

Dona laughed and shed some of her irritation at him. If she could only believe that Tug had strictly business in mind when he was carrying on so outrageously with Bob! But somehow, with Tug's muscular arm around her, the annoying incident began to fade into unreality and she was nearly content.

She presently had her few minutes of triumph when man after man tapped Tug's shoulder and he scowlingly refused to relinquish her. She was glad that he was forced to recognize her popularity, glad that she was as lovely in his dear eyes as he was whispering now.

"I've bought a car," he soon told her. "I'll be around tomorrow night to take you driving."

She was happy and glowing. Tug's positiveness was magnetic and difficult to oppose. Of course, if she went out with De Lane, she might get into difficulty with the Platts.

So she wavered out, "We-ell, I'll see."

They were in a dim corner of the ballroom now and she felt Tug's lips warm on her cheek and her reason melted like snow under flame. All this lovely soaring gladness within her was love—it must be love.

But later, when she was dancing with De Lane, he remarked dryly, "Our hostess seems to do pretty much as she likes. She's appropriated that dark handsome fellow you danced with so long—taken some of her crazy crowd along and gone on to the Paradise Inn. Are bad manners a habit of hers?"

Dona managed to push a light laugh through the sudden lump in her throat.

"Bob Platt's a privileged character, isn't she?" she got out, a trifle thickly.

She wondered if it wouldn't be best for her peace of mind if she forgot Tug Nash completely.

Corbys Spring Back in Running For City Softball Title Winning From Point Anne by 13-4 Count

Johnny Bawden Hurls Four-Hitter While Team Mates Lash Out 18 Hits

PLAY ON FRIDAY

Showing a complete reversal of form from their first four appearances in the city softball finals, Corby's A.C. staged a strong come-back at Coleman Flats last evening to bury Point Anne "Cementmen" under a barrage of base blows to hang up an easy 13-4 victory. The series now stands at three games to two for the Cementmen with the sixth tussle scheduled for Point Anne on Friday evening.

A sterling mound effort by Johnny Bawden, who hurled four-hit ball and airtight fielding by his team-mates provided the balance in the scales to turn the tide against the aggressive eastern nine, who in the first four games rode roughshod over their opponents. A lapse of control in the initial innings by Bawden saw four Cementmen get free tickets to first but it was not until the seventh that an error paved the way for the first Point Anne counter.

Two games up in the series, Skipper Gaulin elected to gamble on his choice of starting hurlers and sent Barnhardt on the mound in an effort to repeat his four-hit performance of last week, but Corby's pounded his offerings unmercifully and lashed out an eighteen-hit offensive, including a homer with one aboard by Lunberg in the sixth. Both hurlers were wild, Barnhardt walking four and Bawden six, while Barnhardt fanned one and Bawden three.

Hit Safely in Every Innings

Corby's hit safely in every inning, their big inning being the fourth when six hits rattled off their war clubs, which with a walk and fielder's choice accounted for exactly one-half of their total of runs. Point Anne runs in the seventh came directly as the result of an error by Ronsky, when after two were away Barnhardt hit one down the third base line, which followed by a walk and another error by Jimmy Barriage in left permitted three tallies. Murney Green caught one of Bawden's slants in the next inning and lifted it over the centre fielder's head for a homer.

Johnny Bawden was the big hitter of the night when he helped his own cause with four safeties including a triple, while Chuck Barriage, Jimmy Barriage, Kiser and Lunberg also hit well.

ICE PRICES INCREASED

Ottawa, Aug. 14 — (CP) — The Wartime Prices and Trade Board said last night that when ice is brought to Montreal area from such distant points that it cannot be retailed at 10 cents a cake of 25 pounds without actual loss, dealers may be justified in charging "as much as 15c a cake."

The board's statement was issued after a delegaton representing the Ice Retail Merchants' Association of Montreal asked board officials to authorize a price increase of five cents for 25 pounds.

AUTO RACE CANCELLED

New York, Aug. 14—(AP)—As a measure of co-operation with the gasoline conservation program, the Automobile Racing Club of America announced yesterday that its annual race through the streets of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., set for Aug. 23, has been cancelled.

Thomas W. Dewart, co-founder and treasurer of the club, which is composed of 100 socially prominent young sportsmen in Boston and New York, said the members agreed it would be in poor taste to hold the event at a time when motorists are being asked to avoid wasting fuel.

PHELPS IS READY TO HELP DODGERS

Hard - Hitting Receiver Would Come Back to Fold if Asked

Odenton, Md., Aug. 14—(AP)—Babe Phelps is ready to return to Brooklyn and help the Dodgers in their pennant drive, but he won't beg for the opportunity—and the Flatbushers coud use their hard-hitting receiver but won't plead with him to re-enter the fold.

That's the way matters stand between himself and the pennant-bidding National League club, says Phelps, rotund, gentleman-farmer of Odenton, discussing his two-months'-old break with the Brooklyns, whom he left June 12 with a complaint he was sick.

Phelps said he wasn't backing down in his contention that, as an ill man, he was justified in leaving the club when the Dodgers departed from New York June 12 for a series with their pennant rivals, the St. Louis Cardinals.

And he was bitter against Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn general manager.

He asserted MacPhail hired a "spy" to check up on his movements the night he failed to accompany the Dodgers to St. Louis and "that spy told MacPhail a lot of lies."

Phelps said he had licked the sinus, grippe and rheumatism that floored him in the spring and brought about his illness and team difficulties.

Brooklyn Dodgers Gain Game On Cardinals in Hectic Race For National League Lead

Dodgers Down Phillies 7-2, While Cards Whipped by Reds in 10 Innings

PIRATES SLUMP

[illegible]

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The tangle in the National Baseball League is as hopeless of an early solution as the first day of a six-day bicycle race. St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers keep whirling 'round and 'round till one or the other spills off. Then they get up and do it all over again while everybody gets dizzy.

Last night the Cardinals lost 3-2 in 10 innings at Cincinnati as the Dodgers drummed out a 7-2 triumph over the Phillies to narrow the Cards' margin to half a game—where the matter is bound to rest today because neither team is scheduled.

The Cards collected a dozen hits off Bucky Walters, but they didn't get them close enough together.

The Dodgers had no such trouble. Dolph Camilli, current homer king of the senior circuit, notched his 23rd with two on in the third inning and Curt Davis coasted to victory on six-hit pitching.

In another National night game Chicago Cubs sent Pittsburgh Pirates sprawling to their third straight defeat 6-4, for their longest losing streak in seven weeks. Johnny Lanning rolled up to the ninth inning with a 4-1 lead but a walk and two errors blew the game wide open and the Bruins scored five runs, two on a pinch single by Charley Gilbert with the bases loaded.

Giants Divide Twin Bill

New York Giants and Boston Braves divided. Babe Young sparked the Giants to a five-run lead early and New York made it last for a 7-6 victory. Then Lefty Art Johnson pitched a steady seven-hit affair for a 3-1 triumph in the nightcap.

In the American League New York Yankees split a bargain bill with Washington Senators.

The Yanks were whipped in their first game 5-3 by George Archie's two-run homer in the 11th inning, but had no trouble taking the second session 5-1 on the five-hit hurling of Marvin Breuer.

Cleveland Indians were walloped 9-3 by St. Louis. This spurred Boston Red Sox to a 4-0 conquest of Philadelphia Athletics in a night game that lifted Boston within a game and a half of second place. Charley Wagner kept Philadelphia's eight hits scattered while the Red Sockers pecked away at young Phil Marchildon, Ontario product, for single runs in the third, fourth, seventh and ninth innings. It was Marchildon's ninth loss against eight victories.

Buck Newsome came through with a six-hit pitching performance to steer Detroit Tigers to a 4-1 victory over Chicago White Sox.

Lawn Bowling

Toronto, Aug. 14 (CP)—The London Elmwoods took possession of Eaton Gold Trophy, emblematic of Ontario bowling championships, here yesterday when they defeated Skip Jimmy Kay's Windsor rink 25-23 in the finals. The Elmwoods were skipped by Charlie Haskett.

In the No. 2 event of the tournament—the George S. Henry Trophy—Bill Hogarth's rink from Toronto, St. Matthews, came from behind to defeat Stan Chapman's Weston aggregation 19-15.

Haskett bowled a superb game to bring the Eaton Trophy to London. During most of the play Windsor commanded a lead, the balance shifting on the 21st end. A strong wind handicapped efforts of Kay to control his sweeping curve shots.

A double victory for London was scored when P. D. McCallum's Thistles squeezed through to a 21-19 victory over the favored Toronto Withrow rink, directed by Skip Jack Doughney in the finals for the Ontario Trophy.

The favored team slipped in playing for the Toronto Cup although the victory was well earned. Albert Morrin and his Niagara Falls, N.Y., rink defeated the Toronto Kodak of J. A. Burgess 18-15 to give the United States its only victory.

By a score of 17-12 Dr. A. E. Walkey's Hamilton Argyles defeated the Toronto Dentonia Club, skipped by A. Morran, to win the consolation award.

Playgrounds

Two games of softball were played in the City Playground League on Tuesday when the West Hill nine beat their East Hill rivals 18 to 12 in a Bantam game, while the East Hill kids gained sweet revenge in a Midget game by trouncing the West Belleville Midgets 12 to 7.

Bunton and Adams hooked up in another sterling pitchers' battle in the Midget contest that saw the East Hill hit strongly behind Bunton in the last two innings to win 12 to 7, Adams having won over the Easterners on Monday. Hunter, Wilson, Rollins and Hewson led the winners on the attack, while Mills was the best with the willow for the Western losers. The score by innings:

East Hill	4 0 0 0 3 5 0	12 runs
West Hill	3 0 2 0 1 0 1	7 runs

West Hill Bantams Win

In the Bantam game the West Hill kids scored runs in every inning, except the second, piling up eight runs in the third. C. Ostrom hit home runs for the winners, while P. Bush and E. Bush each counted one round-tripper. S. Smith hit the only circuit blow for the losers. R. Nolan was the losing moundsman, while E. Bush hurled for the West Hill. Score by innings:

East Hill	4 3 0 3 1 1 0	12 runs
West Hill	1 0 8 2 3 4 x	18 runs

VIKINGS RALLY IN SEVENTH FRAME TO BEAT ZELLERS

Bessie Doolittle Shelled From Mound in Seventh, Vikings Scoring Two Runs

A GOOD CONTEST

Playing inspired softball the Vikings rallied strongly to beat the Big-Z lassies 12 to 11 in a seven-inning Ladies' Softball League semi-final game played at the Armouries last night. In winning the Vikings evened their semi-final series with the Big-Z team at one game each in a best-in-five series.

The game developed into a pitchers' battle between the veteran Bessie Doolittle, who was shelled from the Zeller mound in the ished the winning twirler and seventh and Rita Rabbie, who fin-helped her own cause with a six-inning home run that scored two runs and saw the score tied. The game was terminated in the eighth on account of darkness and the score reverted back to the full inning giving Vikings the one run edge.

Last Inning Rally

Tied going into the seventh Chuck Barnett's Big-Z outfit squeezed one over on hits by Doolittle, Bennett and Garrow. One down the Vikings, led by Coach Ted Schwab, who inspired his squad to rise to dizzy softball heights, M. Tummon strolled to open the bottom half of the eighth, M. Chambers cuffed a double putting two aboard. "Lofty" Colden was rushed to the Zellers' mound and made Rabbie pop out. Marg Zebedee then swung at three, but was safe on the catcher's error and two runs scored ultimately giving Vikings the victory and knotting the series.

Rita Rabbie helped her own cause with a home run, while M. Tummon and Gwen Bennett also hit for the circuit. Norma Maker, Helen Garrow and Molly Hunter all had three hits.

GOSSIP · NEWS · COMMENT

The complete list of playdown dates for the various O.A.S.A. clubs in this district were announced today by Convener Harry Knott. The Belleville-Trenton series is slated for Aug. 18, 20 and 22nd. The winner of the Belleville-Trenton Intermediate "A" series meet Kingston on Aug. 26th and 30th with the possible third game slated for Sept. 2nd. At the same time Oshawa and Peterborough play-off and the winner of the Belleville-Trenton-Kingston tangle meet the Oshawa-Peterborough winners in the Eastern Ontario softball finals. In the Intermediate "C" series Point Anne play Rawdon Township on Aug. 19, 21 and 25th, if necessary. The winner of this series meets Oshawa South in the district finals. In the zone junior O.A.S.A. finals Oshawa have been drawn against "Red" Townsend's Esquire kids on Aug. 18th at Oshawa, Aug. 25th in Belleville, with the possible third game on Sept. 2nd. The provincial semi-finals follow.

Corbys looked a little more like their old selves last night, but still Johnnie Bawden had to hurl a four-hitter to assure victory and keep the Corbys in the chase for the City League championship. Skipper Harold Bawden's fielding combination looked the best of the series last night, while at bat they welcomed Doug Barnhardt with 18 hits, including Lunberg's homer. Bawden helped his own cause with four hits, while not a single Cementmen counted more than one safety off Bawden, including Murney Green's homer. However, Corbys are not out of the mire yet for they must win on Friday night at Point Anne to knot the series and force a seventh and final game here. Secretary Harry Knott announced today that in case the City League fnials are advanced to seven games, the final saw-off will have to be played on Saturday night as all local teams are playing in the O.A.S.A. playdowns next week and the City championship will have to be concluded this week.

Do you remember when the Australian tennis stars out-played the Japanese for a 3-2 victory and the North American Davis Cup honors at Montreal four years ago today. The triumph moved the Aussies into an interzone match against Germany at Brooklyn, Mass., where they won a victory that qualified them for the challenge round in which they were beaten by the United States.

Last week an ardent patron of girls' softball in Belleville dropped a note into the collection box stating he had no avaliable change and added an I.O.U. On Tuesday night when the collection was being taken up the same man dropped a piece of paper into the collection, which, when unwrapped, was found to contain a 25c piece and a note congratulating the girls upon their fine entertainment. It's too bad there aren't more such patrons of sport in Belleville, those who realize it costs money to equip teams and stage games, be it girls' or men.

Accompanied by his parents Doug Bone, winner of the All-Canadian Belleville Kinsmen Soap Box Derby, left yesterday enroute for Akron, Ohio, where he will compete in the All-American and International Soap Box Derbies at Derby Downs outside of the Ohio city on Sunday. Since winning the local race Doug's father, Harold Bone, rebuilt the car, that Douggie drove to victory here and judging from trial runs down North Front Street lately the car will be the best ever to represent Canada. In a trial run recently Doug rolled down North Front Street hill, west on Moira Street and south on Coleman to a point near Christ Church before [illegible] to a full stop, but he's facing the stiffest opposition in the world at Akron.

Most golfers go through life with two arms and no holes in one. Lester P. Edge of Spokane, Wash., goes blithely along with one arm and four holes in one. The veteran attorney lost his left arm as a youth, but it didn't cramp his golfing proclivities. He has toured the difficult Spokane Country club course several times in the 70s, swinging with his sturdy right arm.

Playing inspired softball, thanks to the driving force of Ted Schwab coach pro tem, the Viking lassies evened their semi-final play-offs with Zellers last night, winning 12 to 11. The Vikings drove Bessie Doolittle to the showers in the last inning and then scored two runs on Zeller miscues to cinch the game. However, the surprise came in the sixth when Vikings pounded out five hits to score four and even the count. Rita Rabbie was the winning pitcher and helped her own cause with a sixth inning round-tripper. The patrons of girls' softball saw less errors last night as the teams were equipped with fielders' gloves, which tended to lessen the errors on both sides.

"Doc" Empson's Latta nine drew first blood in the South Hastings Baseball League finals by beating the league champion Cannifton club 5 to 2 at Sportsman's Field in Bill Reynold's fair village. A goodly crowd of baseball fans were treated to a sterling game with the issue never settled until the final out. The Latta team return to their home diamond on Friday for a second game in a best-in-five series.

It pays to be aggressive—well, at least James J. Dykes, scrappy leader of the Chicago White Sox, has proven this axiom. After battling umpires, the opposition and the rest of the baseball world all season and when rumors were rife that Dykes was to be replaced, the Comiskey-owned White Sox signed Dykes to a three-year contract yesterday. All the world loves a fighter and if the White Sox front office give Dykes another starting pitcher and some hitting strength in the outer garden his Pale Hose will make matters interesting any old day in the junior circuit. Aggressive players as well as managers command the respect of the public in any sport.

Stirling and District

Leadership Camp Now in Session

Stirling, Aug. 14 (Special)—The seventh consecutive Leadership Camp for the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada is in session at Oak Lake this week. The registration is up to that of other years with sixty-five in attendance representing each of the seven Presbyteries in the Conference.

The camp is again under the leadership of Mr. Stephen Saywell, Oshawa, and with him as secretary and registrar is Miss Susie Van Camp of Blackstock.

The staff is made up of men and women who are specialists in their various departments. Rev. D. M. Stimson of Blackstock takes charge of the Vesper Services and teaches a course in Administration. Rev. Fred Riding of Montreal has charge of the course in Christian Culture, Rev. Arthur Cragg of Bowmanville gives the Bible course on "The Larger Fellowship" and Rev. T. Tucker, missionary on appointment to Africa, speaks on Missions.

Rev. C. G. Park of Whitby is the Dean of the Camp, and also gives instruction on the subject, "Thinking About Marriage." Miss Loretta McDougall of Peterborough takes charge of the course in Recreation. Miss Olive Van Camp of Blockstock is Camp mother and nurse, while the kitchen activities are directed by Mrs. Currie of Woodville, Miss Merle Campbell, Woodville, and Mrs. Armstrong of Colborne, Ont.

Inspiring Addresses

Of special interest during the Camp session are the inspiring and helpful addresses delivered by local ministers of the United Church at the Campfire meetings held each night. Speakers for these meetings include: Rev. A. M. Laverty, St. Paul's United Church, Stirling; Rev. S. L. Delve, Ivanhoe; Flight Lieutenant Rev. Gordon Porter, Mountain View Airport, and Rev. James E. Beckel, Stirling.

The Camp is divided into two groups and these groups are in charge of Mr. Ken Kidd of Peterborough, Mr. Randy Boyle, Renfrew, Miss Mildred Williams, Lindsay, and Miss Kitty Warburton, Oshawa.

The Worship convener is Miss Marion Daniels, Foxboro, with Miss Jean Matthews of Cannifton; sports convener. The editor of the Camp paper is Miss Gladys Gerrard, of Peterborough.

Attend Church in Stirling

Last Sunday morning with St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church holding union services under the ministry of Rev. A. M. Laverty, the latter building was filled to capacity for the special service which included members of the Oak Lake Camp, Rev. Fred Riding of Montreal, delivered the sermon, with Rev. C. G. Park and Mr. Stephen Saywell assisting.

Special music during the service included organ and piano duets by G. L. Clute, Stirling and Chas. Allen of Leamington. They also combined their talent in leadership of the musical part of the service. A vocal duet by Miss Loretta McDougall of Peterborough and Mr. Orm Benson, R.C.A.F., who sang, "Just As I Am."

Quaker Hospital In Enemy Hands

British "Friends" Ambulance Located After Serving in Four Countries

London (CP)—Sixteen members of a Friends' (Quaker's) Ambulance Convoy who have followed the fortunes of war in four countries on errands of mercy are in enemy hands in Greece.

Word that the party is intact after being reported missing was received by friends of one of the members, R. E. Early, former Gloucester rugby football player.

The convoy left England for Finland in January, 1940, and under Arctic conditions tended the wounded of Finnish and Russian armies. Then they took their ambulance on a hazardous journey across the mountains to Norway and cared for British wounded there.

When the British withdrew from Namsos, the convoy was marooned for five months in Sweden, earning a living at various jobs until able to go through Russia, Turkey, Syria and Palestine to Egypt where they worked at a military hospital for six months.

Early and his colleagues crossed to Greece when the Imperial forces landed there and carried on their ambulance work during the heavy fighting. They remained behind with the wounded and were captured when the evacuation took place.

Night. Fighters Expect Century

Famous R.A.F. Squadron Hopes to Have 100 Enemy Planes by Summer's End

London (CP)—A night fighter squadron first in the Royal Air Force to destroy 50 enemy aircraft, hopes to pass the 100 mark before the summer is over.

A Heinkel shot down over land in the light of the full moon brought the total to 50 and on the same night a flight lieutenant put a nick in the second half century by sending another raider into the sea.

Two of this squadron's pilots are the R.A.F.'s leading "cat's eye" marksmen. Squadron Leader John Cunningham, D.S.O., D.F.C., a former test pilot, has 14 enemy planes to his credit, while R. P. Stevens, D.F.C., who used to fly a commercial plane from Paris to Croydon, has 10.

Maybe Will Run When it Rains

Dancer Tells How to Paint Legs to Replace Silk Stockings

San Francisco (CP)—As a dancer at the "It" Maxime Frances finds silk stockings very important. If she can't get any more she wanted to know what to do about it. So with her friend Alice Hulett, also a dancer, Maxine worked out a series of tips on leg-painting which aids the illusion.

1. Maxine used a soluble theatrical makeup. The legs must be free of hair, the "stockings" must be painted neatly, without streaks; the top even.
2. For best results under artificial light, she experimented with a cream which gave the paint more lustre.
3. A few yards away it was hard to tell silk stockings from the painted ones. Maxine's garter aided the illusion.
4. Skirt should be in contrast, said Maxine. Nude or tan shades "give away" the paint.

CRASH HELMETS OVERDUE

Akron, O., Aug. 14 AP)—Duraluminum crash helmets ordered from England for the International Soap Box Derby here Sunday are long overdue and must be considered lost at sea, J. P. Gormley, Derby director, said yesterday.

The local champions from Canada, Alaska and Mexico and many sections of the United States will race instead in football helmets which they retain as souvenirs, Gormley said.

Some 125 youths have entered their home-constructed, gravity-propelled racers for the trials.

BELIEVE BADER PRISONER OF WAR

Efforts Being Made to Confirm Information That Legless Flier is Alive

London, Aug. 14 (CP)—An authoritative source said today information had been received that Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, legless Royal Air Force pilot reported missing two days ago, is alive and a German prisoner.

Efforts are being made, the source said, to confirm the information.

Bader, 30, was credited with shooting down 15 German planes and was one of two R.A.F. pilots holding both the Distinguished Service Order with Bar and the Distinguished Flying Cross with Bar. He won fame as leader of the all-Canadian Squadron of the R.A.F. in the Battle of Britain.

Whitten - Brown, Atlantic First Flier, to Have a Special R.A.F. Job

London (CP)—The War Office announced that Sir Arthur Whitten-Brown, a lieutenant - colonel and battalion commander in the Home Guard, has resigned his commission.

Pioneer of British flying, he was one of the first men to fly the Atlantic, with the late Sir John Alcock, in June of 1919, from Newfoundland to Ireland.

He was recently gazetted as acting Pilot Officer in the R.A.F. and it is understood that he will be engaged in training or research.

Montreal Twins May-June-Waafs

Look So Much Alike Only Boy Friend Can Tell Them Apart, They Say

London (CP) — May and June Saunders hope they won't cause as much confusion in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force as they did among friends back in Montreal and more recently among fellow-workers in a Birmingham chocolate factory.

The pretty, 20-year-olds who came to England from Montreal seven years ago have joined the W.A.A.F. as clerks.

Identical twins their old Montreal friends hardly knew which was which. May and June were employed in the chocolate factory until they decided to join the W.A.A.F. In the factory, their employers had difficulty keeping track of them. Often, one was credited with work done by the other.

"The only difference between us," says May, "is June's boyfriend. I have none."

The girls have three brothers, two in Canada, and the third with the Canadian forces in Britain.

Miss Betty Bongard is spending this week at camp at Oak Lake.

Turkey Welcomes Assurances by Britain and Russia

Istanbul, Aug. 13 (Delayed) (AP)—The official Ankara radio said today that Turkey welcomed assurances by Britain and Russia that they had no designs on the Dardanelles and that they would aid Turkey if she were attacked by a European power.

Turkey is anxious to further peace and will give the assurances all due consideration, the radio added.

Political circles in Ankara, meanwhile, expressed belief Britain and Russia would move soon to occupy Iran (Persia). In event of such a move, these circles said, Turkey would maintain the same hands-off policy she pursued in connection with developments in the Balkans.

Young Pilot Tells of Raid Over Cologne

Just 50 Feet Above Ground at Times — Dutch People Wave to Squadron

SIGN 'THUMBS UP'

London, Aug. 14.—(CP Cable)—The British public was introduced today through a newspaper picture to 19-year-old Sgt. Pilot Jack Nickleson of Toronto, and the two other members of his bomber crew who participated in a Royal Air Force mass raid during daylight Tuesday on the German centre of Cologne.

The caption, under a three-column cut of the picture in the News-Chronicle, said that "for these men the bombing of Cologne during daylight was their introduction to actual war".

Nickelson, wearing a shy, boyish smile and the Royal Air Force-style battle dress, is shown standing in front of his taller English crewmates, an observer and air gunner. The crewmates were not identified.

The "baby" of his squadron, Nickleson was flushed with excitement after piloting his bomber to its base following the raid.

"Gee, it was swell", he said. "Everywhere you looked there were Blenheim bombers. We had bad luck because our formation leader hit a high-tension wire and crashed.

Less Than 50 Feet Above Cologne

"It's no use wearing a pair of shoes (parachute) at the height we were travelling over Cologne. We were less than 50 feet above the ground at times.

"We could see people waving to us all the way across Holland", the young pilot said. "Some were thrusting their thumbs into the air in the typical 'thumbs up' salute; some made the 'V' sign with their fingers. I saw others jumping up and down with their arms over their heads in the form of a 'V'.

"We saw them cheering —and thought we could even hear the cheers above the roar of our engines.

"It was a different story when we winged over Germany".

Nickelson was eighteen when he joined the Royal Canadian Air Force on graduation from North Toronto Collegiate a year ago last June. After training under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan he went overseas with a large contingent early last Spring.

While at school he starred at hockey and rugby and was centre and captain of the junior hockey team and captain and quarterback of the junior rugby team. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nickleson.

Ottawa Appoints Transit Controller

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP)—Appointment of a Transit Controller with wide authority over all forms of transportation and power to stagger working hours to relieve transportation congestion and shifts in two other major posts in the Munitions and Supply Department were announced last night by Munitions Minister Howe.

The Transit Controller is W. J. Lynch of Quebec. His office will be in Montreal.

F. B. Kilbourn of Montreal is appointed Steel Controller, succeeding H. D. Scully who will devote all time to his duties as Commissioner of Customs.

E. J. Brunning, Government-appointed Controller in the Hamilton plant of National Steel Car Corporation, is succeeded by Howard B. Chase, Director-General of the Labor Relations Branch of the Department.

Mr. Howe said Mr. Lynch will have "widespread powers over all forms of transportation throughout Canada." He will have complete control over use and operation of transport facilities and transport companies, and power to establish schedules of fares or rates. He may issue, reissue or cancel permits or licences and "prohibit, restrict, limit or extend the parking of vehicles."

"Empowered to stagger working hours to relieve transportation congestion, Mr. Lynch may order any employer to arrange or alter hours of employment of employees," Mr. Howe's statement said.

Government officials have said they expect Ottawa, Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and other centres of major wartime activity probably will be dealt with first by the Controller.

"Thunder Afloat"

Melodrama that has never been surpassed in sea thrills, plus three superb performances from Wallace Beery, Chester Morris and Virginia Grey, make "Thunder Afloat" the timely U-boat drama, one of the ace productions of this or any other year.

"Thunder Afloat" combines sea action even more exciting than that of "Captains Courageous" with a stirring story based on actual naval history and characterizations as authentic as the film's background. As a tugboat captain who joins the navy after a U-boat has sunk his craft, Wallace Beery turns in a portrayal that compares in all ways with the best of his previous hits, while Chester Morris gives him two-fisted support and Miss Grey proves the wisdom of her selection for this her first important feminine lead, as Beery's daughter. "Thunder Afloat" is entertainment that is remembered long after the final fadeout. A picture treat no lover of entertainment can afford to miss.

"Fugitive From a Prison Camp"

Not only is the McCarthy now presenting "Thunder Afloat" but as well, on the same program as a second feature, Jack Holt in "Fugitive From a Prison Camp" presents an added hour of the kind of action, drama and thrills which when mixed together, provide solid enjoyment from the first scene until the final fadeout. This week-end McCarthy Theatre patrons are assured of top-rating film fare. The first chapter of the power-packed new serial "White Eagle" featuring Buck Jones, popular Western star of the screen, also a technicolor Walt Disney Mickey Mouse and Pluto cartoon, round out the show, making it a grand movie treat for the whole family.

Community Club, Madoc, Sponsors Street Dance, Program

Madoc, (Speical)—On Wednesday night Madoc Community Club sponsored a most successful street dance. A fine crowd was on hand in spite of the chilly evening, which perhaps kept some from attending. The first part of the evening the Bingo Boys did a whirlwind business and the hot dog and lunch booths were kept busy all evening.

Ken Soble's Amateurs entertained the crowd with songs and dancing. A draw on a silver tray by the Madoc Red Cross and a hand-painted picture donated to the Madoc Red Cross by Mrs. Robert Wickham took place, Mrs. D. Wilson of Ottawa, winning the tray and Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty the picture.

A cake donated by an American tourist was auctioned off bringing $5.50 which was in aid of the British War Victims' Fund. Also two small silk flags (Britisn and American) were auctioned for $1.50. The Austin orchestra from Wooler provided the music for the dancing for the rest of the evening.

Vitamin Doses For Army, Navy And Defence Workers

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (AP)—Science is almost ready to pep up the army, navy and defence workers in capsule doses. Dr. Roger W. Truesdail, nutritional expert and president of Truesdall Laboratories here, said a new capsule containing all the known 'B Complex' factors is expected to be ready shortly. With it can be combined A and C vitamins, thus assuring required vitality, resistance and other health elements.

ROYAL WELCOME AT OTTAWA FOR FILM "THE MINISTER"

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP)—Ottawa gave a royal welcome to the Warner Brothers' British picture, "The Prime Minister," at a gala hemisphere premiere here last night. The Governor - General, Princess Alice and governmental, military and diplomatic officials were among the crowd which packed the Capital Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Queen of the Yukon"

Based on a Jack London story, Monogram's "Queen of the Yukon" now at the Capitol Theatre, is a thrilling story of Alaska gold rush days.

The prospectors along the river have depended for years on Sadie Martin and her boat, "The Queen of the Yukon," to take them up the river to their claims. They rely on Sadie as a friend to give them advice when they need it, and see that they don't spend too much of their money in the big gambling salon on the main deck.

Sadie and Ace, her helper, have run the boat for many years, but when Sadie gets news that her daughter, Helen, is coming to visit her, she finds it necessary to sell the "Queen" for fear that her daughter will find out that she owns a gambling boat.

Helen does find out, and admires her mother immensely. The damage has been done, however. The boat has been sold to an unscrupulous corporation headed by John Thorne, who proceeds to prevent the miners from traveling on the Queen and, by a legal trick, he jumps their claims.

The miners turn to Sadie for help. Thorne is a hard person to deal with, but finally the pair find means to beat him at his game.

The role of the courageous Sadie is splendidly portrayed by Irene Rich, while that of Ace gives Charles Bickford another opportunity for top-notch acting as the strong he-man whom Sadie can rely on when she needs him most.

June Carlson, just graduated from being daughter in the Jones family series, plays Sadie's lovely young daughter who finds romance in the Northwest with Dave O'Brien, guaranteed to win all those feminine hearts which have not been captured already by Bickford.

Plenty of humor is supplied in the picture by that fine pair of former stage players, George Cleveland as Grub and Guy Usher as Stake, two of Sadie's prospector friends.

"Double Date"

Gay and sparkling, Universal's clever comedy romance, "Double Date," is now at the Capitol Theatre.

Jammed to the final scene with amusing dialogue, the film has been designed strictly for gay entertainment. Edmund Lowe, Una Merkel, Peggy Moran and Rand Brooks are the featured foursome.

As usual, Lowe is ingratiatingly funny in his tongue-in-the-cheek role of the misunderstood father. Miss Merkel equals, if not tops, all her previous combined comedy-romance portrayals and gives Peggy Moran real competition in the glamour line.

Miss Moran comes through with another fine comedy performance, reminiscent of her success in the recent "Trail of the Vigilantes."

Brooks, up and coming young leading man, is again handsome, capable and convincingly irritating as Lowe's sophisticated son.

The same programme includes a late news reel and the sixth chapter of "The Mysterious Doctor Satan."

Salvage Operations Started to Refloat The Rapids Prince

Montreal, Aug. 14—(CP) — Salvage operations have been started to refloat the Rapids Prince, Canada Steamship Lines' steamer which went aground at Ville Lasalle while shooting the Lachine Rapids a few weeks ago.

Workmen of the Pyke Salvage Company of Kingston, Ont., are busy making preparations to refloat the vessel under the direction of J. E. Barrett of Kingston.

Before any attempt will be made to move the Rapids Prince from the rocks, all cargo, including a number of passenger automobiles, and all furniture will be removed to lighten the vessel as much as possible.

It was estimated that it will take five or six weeks to complete the refloating operations.

AT THE BELLE

"The Bride Came C.O.D."

It's a laugh hit at the Belle! Living up to the intrigung promise of its title and exciting star combination, "The Bride Came C.O.D.," with James Cagney and Bette Davis now playing, easily walks away with top comedy honors.

The two stars have pooled their considerable talents to make "The Bride Came C.O.D." hilarious entertainment. Cagney, who had some practice in his recent hit, "Strawberry Blonde," approaches his comedy role with an effortless savoir faire that is a joy to behold. As for Miss Davis, playing her first light role in several years, she proves that comedy is just as much her forte as drama.

The story, adapted for the screen by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, twin scenarists responsible for some of the screen's wittiest output, has the supreme virtue of getting comedy from legitimate situations, rather than trumped-up ones. Briefly outlined, the plot concerns itself with a spoiled young debutante who becomes engaged to band leader. Planning to elope, they hire a taxi plane to take them to Las Vegas. The pilot, however, decides he can make more money by delivering the bride C.O.D. and unmarried to her father, who opposes the union. He captures the bride and flies off with her, but they are grounded in the desert. They find shelter in a nearby ghost town, populated solely by a philosophical old inn-keeper. From then on, it is a tug-of-war between the heiress and the aviator—with the girl trying to get back to civilization and her fiance, the man trying to keep her until he gets his plane fixed and deliver her to her father. During the battle they reluctantly fall in love with each other. The climax is refreshingly different and we won't spoil it by giving it away.

William Keighley, whose knack with comedy is well known through his work on such films as "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and "No Time for Comedy" has directed "The Bride Came C.O.D." superbly, keeping the story going at a fast clip, without a wasted foot of film, deftly emphasizing the humor, without pounding it down. Scores of inspired little touches pop up here and there through the story to contribute to the general merriment.

An unusually grand supporting cast lend able aid to the stars in bringing the picture to such a high peak of perfection. Jack Garson is marvelous as band leader, so egotistical that when his bride-to-be tells him she hates him, he asks with genuine amazement: "How is that possible?" Harry Davenport is even better than his usual best as the ghost town innkeeper and Eugene Pallette is properly apoplectic as the bride's father. Stuart Erwin does a clever caricature of a radio gossip columnist who tries to engineer the wedding in order to have a juicy item for his broadcast and George Tobias contributes a clever comedy bit as Cagney's dumb but adoring assistant at the airport.

If it's laughter, entertainment and sparkling romance you're after, treat yourself to a seat at the Belle and see "The Bride Came C.O.D."

The enjoyment of the feature attraction is enhanced with the exhibition of a splendid array of junior features including a Pete Smith specialty in technicolor, "Penny to the Rescue," and "Wings of Steel," an unusual and entertaining film in multiplane technicolor.

Ashes of Willingdon To Rest in Abbey

London, Aug. 14 (CP Cable)—The ashes of the Marquess of Willingdon, former Governor-General of Canada and Viceroy of India, will be buried in Westminster Abbey, it was announced today. No date was set.

Lord Willingdon died Tuesday at the age of 74.

POLICE SEEK BOY

Alameda, Calif., Aug. 14 (AP)—Police pushed search for 14-year-old Billy Johns today, and the lad's life may depend on their success. Billy's father, William T. Johns, said the boy, a diabetic, departed leaving a note saying he was too much of a burden. He carried with him his small supply of life-giving insulin, but had no idea how to take it, his father told police.

Arthur Groba, Nazi, Busied With Intrigues

London, Aug. 14 (CP)—A sharp-eyed, swarthy Nazi, who likes to be known as Germany's "Colonel Lawrence,' is busy with German intrigues in the Middle East—at the present moment in Iran writes the Daily Mail correspondent in a dispatch from Cairo. The correspondent said the Nazi, Arthur Groba, organized anti-Jewish and anti-British agitation in Palestine.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 14 (CP)—Gold stocks dipped for a half point loss in the index and other groups were unchanged to slightly lower at noon. Trading was inclined to dullness and turnover for the first three hours was only 105,000 shares.

O'Brien sold back to 1.35, off 20 cents from Wednesday's close and other golds showing weakness were Macassa, Preston, Kerr-Addison and Premier. Base metal shares recorded only minor changes. Steep Rock moved in considerable volume with the price down a cent or two.

Food, steel and liquor stocks held steady. In the utilities, Bell Telephone was higher by ¼ at 148. Loss of a cent to 2.25 for Home Oil was the only change in the western oil list.

WALL ST.

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—The Stock Market today refused to be jolted out of its lengthy calm and fractional variations for leaders again were the rule.

Stocks attracting occasional support included Bethlehem, General Motors, Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Curtiss-Wright, Standard Oil (N.J.), Woolworth, Westinghouse, U.S. Rubber and Anaconda.

Among the Canadian issues, Canadian Pacific gained 1-4 point while Distillers Seagram lost the same amount. Lake Shore was 1-8 point higher. In the bond market, Canada 4s were unquoted.

Another batch of Corporation earnings statements for the second quarter and first half of 1941 brought further confirmation of the inroads mounting taxes are making into profits. International Nickel, for instance, while enjoying considerable improvement in operations, revealed net after provision for taxes fell below that of the 1940 months. Curtiss-Wright was an exception with a sizable profit increase over the year before.

Darlan Says He Will Follow Path of Petain

Vichy, Aug. 14. — (AP)—Vice Premier Jean Darlan, in his new role as Minister of National Defence, told Vichy France's land, sea and air forces today that he will lead them along the road designated by Marshal Petain.

Darlan's message was contained in an order of the day broadcast as newspapers from Nazi-occupied Paris indicated belief that defence powers both at home and overseas now concentrated in Darlan's hands give him complete power over colonial commanders in chief.

"I know I can count on the devotion of all to the cause of France so nobly defended by the Marshal", Darlan declared.

To Follow Petain

"Everyone can count on me to lead them along the road indicated by the wisdom and far-sightedness of the illustrious soldier who has made the country the gift of his person".

He said there's no reason for despair but to study the causes of defeat in order to avoid them in the future.

"This meditation surely will incite you to align yourselves among the best workers for the national revolution in discipline, confidence and optimism", he declared.

Darlan's assumption of command over all land, sea and air forces, technically through an order of the day, had first been announced for broadcast last night and then it was postponed to today in order to permit a rebroadcast of Marshal Petain's speech.

His Orders of the Day

Darlan, in his order of the day, declared:

"Called by the Marshal and Chief of State to the functions of Minister of National Defence, I express to general officers, officers, non-commissioned officers, petty officers, corporals and quartermasters and soldiers and sailors of the land, sea and air, the pride I feel in the great honor that has been done me.

"Everyone can count on my determination as an organizer, my impartiality, my spirit and justice and my affection".

Further Advance In Egg Prices

Toronto — While the two top grades held steady, grades A pullet, B and C registered advances in egg trading on a rather dull Toronto open produce market yesterday. All grades maintained their recently advanced prices on the butter market.

The egg market kept its firm tone as light receipts proved sufficient to meet the demand. Grades A pullets and C were increased 1 cent a dozen to country dealers, while grade B also advanced 1-2 cent in this section. A-large and A-medium remained unchanged at 35c and 34c a dozen respectively. All prices held steady in wholesale-to-retail action.

A firm tone was credited on the butter market as prices held steady under light offerings. Sellers were asking 37 1-4 cents a pound for No. 1 creamery solids, while wholesale-to-retail quotation for first grade creamery prints was 38 3-4 cents. With sellers unable to get any produce to offer.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Aug. 14 (CP)—Produce market prices here yesterday as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 38; first grade solids jobbing price, 37 1-2; Quebec, No. 1 pasteurized current receipt price, 36 3-8; No. 2, 36 3-8; No. 1 wholesale price, 36 3-4; No. 2, 36. Receipts, 811 boxes.

Eggs: Graded shipments, offering at A-large, 35 1-2; A-medium, 34 1-2; pullets, 28 1-2; B grade, 28-28 1-2; C grade, 24-24 1-2. Receipts, 496 cases.

tain common principles in national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hope for a better future of the world.

First, their countries seek no aggrandisement, territorial or other.

Second, they desire to seek no territorial chances that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned.

Third, they respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live; and they wish to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them.

Fourth, they will endeavor with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all states, great or small, victorious or vanquished, of access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world, which are needed for their economic prosperity.

Fifth, they desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing for all improved labor standards, economic advancement and social security.

Sixth, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries and which will accord the assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want.

Seventh, such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance.

Eighth, they believe that all the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armament continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that disarmament of such nations is essential. They will likewise aid and encourage all other practicable measures which will lighten for peace loving peoples, the crushing burden of armament.

Disarmament of nations which threaten or may threaten aggression pending the establishment of a permanent system of general security was declared essential.

Although the declaration made no direct reference to any government other than the "Nazi tyranny" the preamble said the two leaders considered the dangers to civilization arising from the policy of domination by conquest embarked upon by "the Hitlerite government of Germany and other governments associated therewith."

The announcement, made simultaneously in London, Washington, Ottawa and broadcast from London by Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal in the British government, was the first official indication here of the meeting.

More than a week ago when reports of the meeting were first circulated Prime Minister Mackenzie King let it be known he had no knowledge of any Roosevelt-Churchill meeting. Later spokesmen for his office declined to comment in any way on further queries about the meeting.

So far as could be learned no Canadian officials took part in the conferences but Mr. King was expected to make a statement endorsing the declaration on behalf of the government of Canada.

Copies of Official Statement.

Newspapermen were advised last night to come to Mr. King's office for an important announcement. A secretary delivered copies of the official statement a few minutes before Mr. Attlee's speech came over the radio.

There was more than one discussion during the time the two leaders were together.

In several conferences, the announcement said, they "considered the dangers to world civilization arising from the policies of military domination by conquest upon which the Hitlerite government of Germany and other governments associated therewith have embarked."

The statement said they "made clear the stress (explained here as probably meaning steps) which their countries are respectively taking for their safety in the face of these dangers."

Most Concrete British Statement of War Aims

The joint declaration, constituting the most concrete war aims yet disclosed on the British side, set out "certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better world."

The President and Prime Minister declared their belief after their historic meeting at sea, that "after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny" the disarmament of aggressor nations "is essential" pending the establishment of "a wider and permanent system of general security."

The White House statement said only that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill "have met at sea" without indicating where the unprecedented conference occurred. It said they were accompanied by high ranking officials, including Lord Beaverbrook, but there was no specific mention in the announcement of Harry Hopkins, United States Lease-Lend administrator, whose whereabouts also has been a mystery since he flew back to London after talks in Moscow with high Soviet officials.

The omission did not mean that Hopkins was not also present and in London he was reported either back in the United States or on his way back.

Problems of Today

That ample subject matter existed for a Roosevelt-Churchill conference no one denied. The outstanding problems facing the two men were well known:—

1. The Vichy government's decision to embrace closer collaboration with Germany—a decision that raised the question of the future disposition of the French fleet and possible Nazi domination of French colonies;

2. Japan's new southward expansion in Asia, with its potential threat to American, British and Netherlands possessions or interests in the south Pacific;

3. The Axis program for a new world order, in which Hitler has made plain that National Socialism and the present democratic systems cannot both survive;

4. Further acceleration of arms production in the United States to provide a larger and faster volume of Lease-Lend aid to Britain; to increase the military and naval strength of both the United States and Hemisphere nations, and to build up stock for Russian cash purchases.

Informed diplomatic sources, noting that each of these topics had manifold ramifications, said they expected the United States and Britain to cope with them, not by an Anglo-American alliance, but by a flexible agreement for generally parallel policies and action.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The facility with which Nazi propaganda changes its tune makes it difficult to judge whether the Germans expect heavy fighting in front of the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolaev.

On Tuesday Berlin spokesmen pictured the Russians as "scrambling to withdraw their troops by sea" after the German army had cut off, or so the Germans claimed, all avenues of escape by land. The German news agency said six Soviet troop transports had been sunk by German bombers off Odessa.

Last night and early today the story from Berlin was that Odessa would be no Ukrainian Dunkerque, that the Russians would hold on and sell their positions dearly. The German army, it was conceded, faced the stiffest sort of fight before either Odessa or Nikolaev could be occupied.

Hitler's Communique Returns to Theme of Transports

Then at noon in Berlin today the High Command communique, the Daily Document, which is said to have been edited in recent weeks by Hitler himself, returned to the escape-by-sea theme. The war bulletin spoke of Russian transports, strangely "anchored" off the coast, being bombed by German aircraft as the "continuous, relentless pursuit" of the Red Army proceeded.

Whichever course the Soviet Command adopts, the Germans will find the ports of little use when they are finally occupied. Soviet quarters in London yesterday said that if the Germans enter the cities they will find "smoking ruins of demolished factories and empty streets."

In other words Marshal Semeon Budenny's forces will do the same sort of job on Odessa and Nikolaev as Marshal Timoshenko's men did at Smolensk, which the Germans occupied after weeks of fighting only to find the city 90 per cent destroyed and all but a fraction of its population gone.

Exact Toll in Blood From Huns

The Soviet spokesmen in London said that the Russian troops "will extract an awful cost in blood" before the harbor facilities, shipyards, machine shops, grain elevators, numerous railheads and other industrial treasures are dynamited and put to the torch as a last resort.

Doubtless it is to this newest German menace that Stalin, as Supreme Commander of the Red Army, is now devoting his organizing ability. During the Civil War of two decades ago Stalin made a name for himself by pulling the Red Forces out of many tough situations.

Stalin as Expert

Stalin is an expert on supplies and organization, two vital factors if the present serious position of the Soviet forces in the Ukraine is to be retrieved.

Once in the Revolutionary War when the City of Tsaritsin (now Stalingrad) was on the point of falling to the White Army, Stalin arrived on the scene and with ruthless energy so reorganized the Red set-up that the city was held. And in other tight positions his intervention changed the tide of battle.

DISARMING OF

disarmed. That's the golden rule of the show. We are not going to be the fools we were the last time and scrap our weapons when the war is over."

It was firmly believed by many competent observers that although the eight points—which they regarded as strongly reminiscent of Woodrow Wilson's famous fourteen points in the First Great War—dealt mainly with general questions, the meeting was marked by adoption of a "down to brass tacks" attitude in dealing with the Japanese.

Probable Matters of Agreement

It is quite probable, according to these informants, that the two leaders agreed on:

1. The precise moment when the British and United States governments would discard passive resistance for action against Japan.

2. Mutual use of British and United States bases in the South Pacific.

3. A request to the Soviet Union to open a northern front with a Siberian Red army of 1,00,000 men if war should start in the South Pacific.

Japanese sources admitted ruefully that "all these are possibilities, not necessarily probabilities."

Russia's War Needs

The presence of United States Lease-Lend administrator Harry Hopkins at the meeting, an American source said, "assured a full and complete picture of the Russians' war needs, for war not only on one front but in Siberia if necessary."

Mr. Hopkins had returned to London from Moscow shortly before leaving with Mr. Churchill for the meeting at sea.

Japanese here declared that announcement of the meeting was not news to them and probably not news to Tokyo since the first admissions in the Japanese press that Britain and the United States were jointly opposing Japanese expansion southward appeared "after it was pretty certain that Churchill and Roosevelt were meeting."

Senior Officers of Forces Present.

Presence of senior officers of the fighting services of the two countries implies, one source asserted, that there would be at least the groundwork for active co-operation, if not staff talks, should the United States enter the war.

Such groundwork would be vital, it was said if the two nations begin jointly any military or naval action in the Pacific.

Spanish diplomatic sources in London, who probably are closer to the axis than any other diplomats here, declared that today's joint declaration "says nothing which has not already been said by the two leaders separately."

This was admitted by informed British sources, who nevertheless made the important addition that "the very fact that only this much of the discussions was disclosed points to agreement on more specific plans."

"The Eight Points."

One of these was believed to be the attitude of the United States toward the Vichy regime should it allow the Germans to occupy Dakar and French North Africa.

It was understood Mr. Churchill has long feared such a German move and he probably made every effort to stress its importance.

The general opinion in London is that the eight points borrow heavily on Wilson's fourteen points in many respects.

Instances of this similarity most quoted are points four and five which echo Wilson's third point calling for the removal of trade barriers.

Point seven demanding a world which would guarantee the freedom of the seas recalled Wilson's second point asking for "absolute freedom of navigation."

Applaud Final Point of Realism

Members of parliament generally—at least those remaining in London during the recess—applauded the final point especially. It was described as a radical departure from previous theories of disarmament as a path to peace. It shows, they said, that the United States and Britain had abandoned the old notion of a general disarmament.

This was called "a step toward realism lacking in Wilson's plan."

Comparing the sea meeting to those of Hitler and Mussolini in The Brenner Pass, one informed diplomatic source said that the ultimate similarity would be that this meeting, like those, foreshadowed some "decisive step in joint policy."

Probably Discussed Whole Field of War

This source said that the President and the Prime Minister were in close consultation for three days during which "they probably discussed the whole field of war."

The presence of Lord Beaverbrook at the meeting was believed to be a reply to disturbed American opinion after recent allegations in parliament that British war production was lagging. It was believed that both Lord Beaverbrook and Mr. Churchill reassured President Roosevelt on the extent of the British effort.

Things left unsaid in the statement are regarded as fully as important as those of the eight-point joint declaration.

Omission of reference to Japan "implies that Japan was one of the main points of discussion", a Japanese diplomat admitted.

British informants said the meeting was at Mr. Roosevelt's invitation.

The Japanese source said that the tempo of the Japanese advance in South Asia was slowed even as rumors of the historic meeting between the British and American leaders sped around the world.

The Roosevelt-Churchill conferences, which were attended by senior officials and military naval and air experts of both countries, were reliably reported to have lasted at least two or three days.

But neither the time nor the place of the meeting was disclosed here immediately.

There would be no surprise in London if a further announcement were made that Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt had sent personal assurances to Joseph Stalin and the Russian people that Britain and the United States will give the U.S.S.R. the fullest industrial co-operation in arming and supplying the Red army, air force and navy.

News of the meeting was broadcast to Britain by Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, who has been acting as Mr. Churchill's deputy in his absence.

Workers in factories and workshops throughout the country heard Mr. Attlee by radio instead of their usual "music-while-you-work" program. In some factories machinery was stopped or otherwise made quiet so the workers could listen.

With the entire nation warned a day ahead of time to stand by for a "momentous announcement" dealing with war effort, radios in millions of homes and in offices and shops were tuned to the broadcast.

Short wave transmitters in addition carried translations of Mr. Attlee's words to Germany, France and other parts of the world.

11 NAZI DIVISIONS

"The German army still is powerful," it conceded, "but the myth of the invincibility of German arms is crushed once and forever."

Russian war dispatches indicated that fighting again was developing into isolated actions and that German armies which spurted yesterday in the areas of Kakisalmi, Staraya Russa, Smolensk and Bel Tserkov again have been halted.

"Behind the modest Soviet reports," said Pravda, "lie great and serious events.

"No important changes occurred in the disposition of troops because the German offensive is being smashed by the mighty resistance of the Red army, exhausting the German forces.

"Simultaneously, however, very important changes are taking place in the composition of the German army.

Many Nazi Divisions Annihilated

"In the western direction, many German divisions already have been annihilated and only countless graves recall the existence of these divisions. Dozens of other divisions, after several battles with the Red army, have lost nearly half, and others more than half, of their make-up."

The Soviet information bureau's communique, again reporting "nothing of importance occurred" during the night, avoided mention of fighting sectors and said only that the Red air force was co-operating with land troops in attempts to halt the Nazis.

Earlier information indicated Soviet forces were fighting to stop a German threat to the Moscow-Leningrad railroad. A communique said some Nazis had reached the area of Staraya Russa, 80 miles from the rail line and 140 miles southeast of Leningrad.

Russian artillery, resorting to a high degree of camouflage, was still pictured as taking a tremendous toll of German tanks, in one battle, fought at about 500 yards, 32 were reported destroyed.

Batteries Prepare For Assaults.

The tanks were said to have attacked at night when their ordinarily limited visibility was further handicapped. Scouting reports had enabled the Russian batteries to prepare for the assault. The first tanks appeared directly in front of the camouflaged Russian guns, according to the communique.

"The Soviet artillerymen let the enemy come within 400 to 500 metres and then opened fire simultaneously from several guns," the communique said. The tanks swerved, it was said, but were taken under flanking fire. Some of the tanks were knocked out and the force had to reform. Their next assault likewise was repulsed, the communique said.

"The battle which lasted several hours resulted in destruction of 32 Fascist tanks," the report said. The sector of the engagement was not identified.

Staraya Russa, a small summer watering place on Lake Ilmen, also has steamer connections with Leningrad via the Polista River. Nazi troops which reached this area apparently came from the direction of Solsti, 40 miles westward.

Smolensk Abandoned.

A Russian communique, mentioning this sector for the first time, also acknowledged that Smolensk was abandoned "a few days ago".

(The Germans first claimed capture of Smolensk in mid-July. An Associated Press correspondent with the German army told of visiting Smolensk this week.)

Another German move toward Leningrad from the north was reported in the Kakisalmi region on the Karelian Isthmus, 75 miles away, where fighting has been in progress for many days.

Information concerning the southern front was limited to a laconic mention of fighting in the Bel Tserkov direction.

The Soviet Air Force was reported to be pounding German troops and airdromes. The Russians admitted the loss of 35 planes to 43 Nazi planes downed yesterday.

Russian guerillas were reported roaming the Ukraine to deal destruction to Nazi tanks, motorcycles and soldiers. Bridges were destroyed, occupied villages raided and traitors shot, a communique said.

GERMANY CLAIMS

"The air force yesterday struck severe blows against transports held in readiness for the flight of Soviet troops in the coastal areas of Odessa and Vernoleninsk," it went on.

All German war reports stressed air blows behind the Russian lines, both in the south and the north.

One 5,000 ton Soviet merchantman was said to have been beached near Odessa and another, of 6,000 tons, to have shown a list after air attacks. A scout plane claimed a Russian destroyer dive-bombed on Monday was drifting keel up in the Gulf of Finland.

Rail facilities at Gomel, in White Russia north of Kiev, and "another important rail centre" between Moscow and Lake Ilmen sector were hammered overnight, DNB said.

Elsewhere on the eastern front "operations also are continuing according to plan," said the communique.

German infantry was said steadily to be tightening its arc around Odessa and advancing toward Nikolaev, 65 miles farther east, after annihilating a rearguard covering retreating Red Army forces.

Decision Impending

Nazi spokesmen asserted a decision is impending in the gigantic struggle raging in this sector, but expressed belief the Russians would put up the stiffest kind of fight to hold both Odessa and Nikolaev.

Reports of operations in other sectors of the far-flung eastern front dealt mostly with the activity of the German Air Force, which was claimed to have downed 184 Soviet planes in the 24 hours ending last night while losing only four.

DNB, Nazi propaganda and news agency, told of a heavy Nazi air raid on an important railway junction at Bryansk, 150 miles southeast of Smolensk, where German forces are aiming a spearhead at Moscow.

DNB claimed the Moscow-Kiev railway line was badly damaged in this assault and a great number of railway cars set afire. A Russian armored train, 11 guns and eight armored cars were claimed destroyed in raids on Soviet troops in the same area.

Claim Russians Trapped

The reported Nazi advance toward Nikolaev, a city of about 150,000 situated at the confluence of the Bug and Ingul Rivers, apparently helped strengthen a ring the Germans claim they are drawing around Odesso, 70 miles to the west.

Large Soviet forces in the area between the two cities were said to be virtually trapped, with no avenue of escape except by sea, but German observers expressed doubt the Russians would attempt such a flight.

It is more likely, these sources said, that the Russians will hold on and try to sell their positions as dearly as possible.

The push toward Nikolaev was said to have been held up temporarily by a Russian covering force occupying strong positions in an unspecified village to the northwest. The positions were reported overrun, however, after a shelling by Nazi artillery.

Nikolaev is regarded as an important objective in itself. Its naval shipyards and machine shops are among the best in Russia and it is the terminus of four railway lines. The port, greatest exporter of grain in South Russia, is heavily fortified.

The city was occupied by the Germans in March, 1918, under the terms of the treaty of Brest Litovsk, which ended German-Russian military operations in the First Great War.

PLENTY OF PEACHES ON LOCAL MARKET

Tomatoes declined to 95c per hamper or 25c per six-quart basket on the market this morning as increased quantities caused by the season advancing forced prices to lower levels. Prices for potatoes were also easier with peck lots going for 35c and bushels at $1.25.

Peaches sold at 75c per six-quart basket for No. 1's and 65c for No. 2's, while plums sold at 60c and 50c according to variety. Corn held at 25c and 30c per dozen ears with cucumbers ranging from 25c the basket up to 65c and 75c for gherkins. Muskmelons sold at prices ranging from 10c each up to 20c and 25c. Eggs held firm at 35c per dozen.

No Hint Given Of Meeting Place In Atlantic

Washington, Aug. 14—(AP)—The announcement today that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt held a momentous conference at sea gave no hint of where in the North Atlantic the meeting took place.

A joint statement from the two said "several conferences" were held indicating Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt may have been together several days. From Saturday until this morning there was no published word from the President's party which sailed from New London, Conn., on the U.S.S. Potomac August 3.

The statement said Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply, and high ranking officials of military naval and air forces of the two countries also were present. The latter group presumably included Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, United States Navy Operations Chief; and Major-General H. H. Arnold, Chief of United States Army Air forces.

Harry L. Hopkins, U.S. lease-lend administrator, was not mentioned specifically but there was reason to believe that he, too, was present, probably accompanied by his principal aide, Maj.-Gen. James H. Burns.

How Mr. Churchill and his aides went to the meeting as well as the place of the meeting, was kept secret in London.

Speculation regarding the Prime Minister's present whereabouts was not permitted in England.

WILL AFFECT WORLD OPINION

Joint British - American Declaration of War Aims Will Have Widespread Results Says Prime Minister King

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in a statement given out at his office at noon today, said the meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and the joint British-American declaration of war aims "is bound to have a most important effect on world opinion."

He expressed deep satisfaction at the meeting which, he said, "could only lead to even closer relations in the future between the British Commonwealth and the United States of America."

"The friendship and understanding between the two leaders has now been sealed by their first meeting together," the Prime Minister's statement said.

"The joint declaration which followed the meeting deserves the closest study.

"The text indicates complete understanding and co-operation in the prosecution of the war and complete agreement in the eventual objects of a peace of victory but not of vengeance."

"Forces of Freedom"

The Prime Minister contrasted the meeting of the British and United States leaders who represented "the forces of freedom," with the meetings between Hitler and Mussolini "representing the forces of tyranny."

"From the meetings between Hitler and Mussolini there have come nothing but secret plans for domination and enslavement," the Prime Minister said.

"From the meeting between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt there has come a new declaration of hope for mankind, of equal rights, world peace and the social and international justice without which they cannot be achieved."

Collaboration in Economic Field

Mr. King, the statement said, laid particular emphasis on those portions of the joint statement which dealt with the extension to all nations of the principles of close collaboration in the economic field.

In recent years this collaboration had found increasing realization in the case of Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

"Equality in trade opportunity, improvement of labor standards, social security, freedom for all men to use the avenues of commerce without hindrance, abandonment of force and disarmament were all objects for which the Government of Canada had faithfully labored in accordance with the wishes of the Canadian people," Mr. King said, adding:

"The (British-American) statement is evidence of resolution in war, a determination to destroy Nazism and of the desire for a just, merciful and lasting peace.

"It is a declaration of realistic and spiritual significance."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper us fellows were sitting on my front steps talking and arguing, and pop was standing in the door smoking a cigar, and Sid Hunt said, There was a mad dog in our house today.

G, good night, how did he get in, who put him out, did he bit anybody? us fellows said, and Sid said, He was my dog Teddy and he brought a bone in the house so my mother took it away from him and O boy did he get mad, you never saw a madder dog in your life.

For Peet sake, pop said, and Puds Simkins said, There was a fire in our dining room this morning.

How big was it, what started it, did you have to send in an alarm? us fellows said, and Puds said, It was my mother firing the cook for sassing her back about whether the coffee was hot or not, but nobody thought anything about it because my mother fires her about once a week anyways just on general principals.

My father kicked my mother last night, Skinny Martin said, and us fellows said, Go on, like fun he did.

Sure he did, Skinny said. He kicked her a cushion. She dropped it and he put his foot under it and kicked it back to her. My father used to be a great football player and I've got pictures to prove it, he said.

Yee gods, pop said, I'm going in and read my paper, and if the headlines dont bare any more relation to the facts than the headlines I've been listening to out here, I'm going to write a letter to the editor, he said.

And he went in and us fellows kept on talking and arguing about diffrent subjects such as wich is the best place for ice cream, on top of a piece of pie or inside a half of a candelope.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Farmers Expecting Shortage of Help To Harvest Tomatoes

That farmers in Prince Edward County and in the Bay of Quinte district in general are expecting a shortage of help to harvest their tomato crops is indicated by the visit to Belleville yesterday of A. J. McTaggart of the Ontario Farm Service Force, with the view of enlisting local women and girls to assist in the picking of tomatoes which within the next ten days will be at its height.

Prince Edward County farmers expecting difficulty in getting labor to pick their tomatoes had approached the Farm Service Force officials with the view of opening resident camps for women and girls in their county, these camps to be under the supervision of the department, with the farmer to assist in the maintenance of the camp, paying on the basis of the number of employees working for him and who were quartered therein.

Rate of pay to be received by the pickers would be six cents per bushel, with the farmer being asked to pay 26c per day for each employee towards the maintenance of the camps, this going towards the wages of cooks and camp supervisors. This would result in the cost of picking tomatoes being raised to about six and one-half cents per bushel, it was estimated.

Whether any such camps will be established will be dependent upon the reception the farmer gives to the scheme, it was stated.

At least one such camp will be established in Prince Edward, it was revealed, as preparations are going forward to the fitting of living quarters for canning factory workers in one district. In this case the camps are owned by the canning factory company and have been in disuse for some time. This camp will be opened to provide quarters for women and girls working in the canning factory and will be under the supervision of the Ontario Farm Service Force.

New York, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Here it is Thursday already, and Ben Jones hasn't signed a rider yet to steer Whirlaway home in the Travers Saturday.

The Good-Old-Times

If Nova happens to take Louis' title (with or without Yogi), the heavyweight championship will go back on the fight-once-a-year basis of Dempsey's days . . . .And Louis' Bum-of-the-Month Club will fold its tent . . . But if Joe wins, he'll take on the Buddy Baer-Abe Simon winner in January. . .

Hit-and-Run.

Frank Leahy is tipping Notre Dame Alumni not to be too disappointed if the Irish drop as many as three decisions this fall . . . . Among other things, Pauline Betz, the tennis-ette, also plays field hockey, golf, basketball, the piano, volley ball, bridge and a typewriter (she's studying journalism at Rollins) . . . just to show how much chance the Indians still have of winning the pennant an agent is getting in touch with syndicates to see who wants to buy Bobby Feller's By-line for World Series coverage.

Note to Christy Walsh, Hollywood, Calif:

Glad to see you're out tha'r taking a hand in the Lou Gehrig picture, since you knew both Lou and the Babe. . . .But don't you think the Iron Hoss would have liked it better if a baseball man, not a matinee idol, portrayed him on the screen. . . .Somebody like Buck McCormick, fr instance, who looks like Lou . . . or Jimmy Foxx.

American Pilots in R. C. A. F. At Picton School Escape Injury

Two Planes Crash on Wednesday, Possibly Due to Engine Trouble

PLANES DAMAGED

Picton, Aug. 14 (Special)— Two American pilots now stationed at the Picton Bombing and Gunnery School with the R.C.A.F. miraculously escaped injury and possible death when their planes crashed separately in diversified areas on Wednesday afternoon.

The first, a Fairey Battle Bomber which had seen service in the battle of Dunkirk and piloted by Pilot Officer R. B. Meyersburk of Brooklin, N.Y., passed safely beneath hydro and telephone wires while crossing East Lake road, smashed through two wire fences and a rail fence. The plane piled up against a group of trees on the farm of Sam Dodds and George Rose, five miles southwest of Picton, after traversing a long pasture field.

The propeller of the plane was bent, the engine damaged and the wings torn, while the pilot, a native of California, stated that he was only bruised.

Sergeant Pilot W. L. Ogden of Wilmett, Illinois, piloting a Harvard trainer, made a forced landing in a deep gully at the west end of Glenwood cemetery, immediately at the foot of the "mountain" on which the air station is located.

Arthur Milner who was an eyewitness of the crash stated that the motor of the plane started to sputter shortly after it took off from the flying station. The pilot attempted to gain a clear spot in which to land and passed beneath high tension wires, struck an apple tree and turned over twice. Damage to the plane was chiefly about the wings.

The first crash was witnessed by Mr. Sam Dodds on whose farm the plane came down. Mr. Dodds stated that he first called the air station and then rushed to the scene of the accident. The pilot was then out of the plane and stated he was only bruised, Dodds said.

Mrs. Charles Johns left for Montreal on Wednesday after two weeks with her mother, Mrs. A. E. Calnan

Miss Ruth Walters entertained at bridge at the I.O.D.E. Chapter House in honor of Miss Audra Clow, whose marriage to Donald Walters takes place Saturday. Miss Dorothy Maher entertained at a shower for Miss Clow Wednesday afternoon. Previously Miss Georgia Bovay entertained at a china shower and Miss Madeline Ward at a miscellaneous shower.

The marriage of Lieut. William Graydon to Mary Clegg, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. G. Clegg is taking place in the church on Saturday with a reception following at the Officers' Mess in the Armouries.

Bloomfield United Church will be the scene of an interesting wedding on Saturday when Freda Marshall becomes the bride of Errol Cahoon. Attendants will be Miss Helen Cahoon and James Allison of Belleville. Miss Marshall has been much entertained previous to the marriage. Miss H. Cahoon gave a crystal shower; Mrs. James Gough and Miss Ival Stark, a kitchen shower.

George H. Carver, Belleville, spent a few days in town before leaving for Halifax to visit his sister, Mrs. Hirst and William Hirst.

Mrs. C. F. Hepburn, Kingston, is a guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Morley Currie.

Flight-Lieut. Merlin Hicks, M.D., and Mrs. Hicks of Victoriaville, Que. are guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Hicks.

Miss Alice Lowery who completed the course in oxy-acetylene welding at Belleville, is taking a further course at Central Technical School in Toronto.

John Mallory has joined the R. C. A. F., receiving the rank of Pilot Officer. He will be attached to the Administration Branch.

A steady rain on Tuesday proved of great benefit to late crops and pastures.

Russell Perkin, B.A., of New Liskeard has been engaged as principal of Picton Collegiate, succeeding J. E. Andoff, now with the R.C.A.F. at Trenton.

Newlyweds Honored

Forty friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roberts, who were recently married, gathered at the home of his mother, Mrs. Ernest Roberts, East Lake Road, Monday night and tendered them a miscellaneous shower. Mrs. Geo. Leavitt and Mrs. Sam Dodds were conveners. Mrs. Keith Noble was the winner in the name contest; Mrs. Leavitt conducted a quiz contest; Roy Sykes won a novel stunt; picture drawing was another novelty.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were called to the front and while Sam Dodds read an address, Jeanne Parliament and Mary Sykes carried in the gifts in a basket decorated in pink and white. The groom expressed appreciation for the remembrances and "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung. Lunch was served during the social hour with the National Anthem bringing an enjoyable evening to a close.

VANCE IS VICTIM OF TRIPLE STEAL BY THE ROYALS

Toronto Relief Hurler Has Six Runs Scored on Him in Sixth

BEARS KEEP PACE

(By The Associated Press)

It just wasn't Joe Vance's hour last night as Montreal Royals defeated Toronto Leafs for their fourth straight International Baseball League victory.

Vance not only was charged with the defeat after he went to the mound to relieve Walter Lanfranconi in the sixth inning as the Royals began to get out of hand, but he suffered the misfortune of being victim of a triple steal.

It was the sixth inning which permitted Royals to cling to the heels of the fast-travelling Newark Bears. The Leafs had worked their way to a 7-4 lead going into that frame, but Royals put on a rousing rally to push six runs over the plate and win 10-7.

Frank Kelleher was the whole show as Newark defeated Baltimore Orioles in the rubber-game of their [illegible] 32nd home run drove in all Bear runs and enabled Allen Gettel to coast to his ninth victory 4-3.

Buffalo and Rochester ended their day's work with little profit either way. They split a double header. In the abbreviated opener the Bisons took a 9-3 decision thanks to some classy pitching and hitting by Floyd Giebell, making, his first start since being purchased from Detroit.

In the regulation nightcap Hershel Lyons pitched Rochester to a 5-4 decision.

L. Nelson was right at home in football weather as he pitched Syracuse Chiefs to their fourth straight victory over Jersey City Giants 6-5.

Stable of Hunters To Be Sold by Auction

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 14 (AP)—Deborah Rood, one of the outstanding horsewomen in the United States, is going to sell the stable of hunters that made her famous at horse shows throughout the nation. She doesn't plan to rebuild.

Seventeen of her string of 20 giant hunting mounts and show hunters are to be auctioned off at Fairhill, Md., before the Foxcatcher National Cup Race there Sept. 6. She's going to keep two steeplechasers and one jumper "just to keep in touch with the game."

"The main thing influencing me to hold the sale," attractive Miss Rood declared, "is that I don't feel able to continue the excessive activity of operating a large stable while devoting four months of hard work to the Wilmington Horse Show each spring."

Miss Rood has owned, trained and sold 422 horses, including some of the finest in the hunting world. Virtually all of her horses have stood above 15 hands, the biggest in her present string being Dublin Venture who stands 17 hands, one inch.

"I found out early that nearly everybody wants a big horse where many people don't want small ones," she explains. "Big men must have big horses. And half the smaller riders want the thrill of riding a big horse, too."

Nazi Organizations To Be Outlawed

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 14—(AP)—The Chamber of Deputies, called into extaordinary session last night, received early today a bill to outlaw Nazi organizations in Chile and heard at the same time an assertion that 95 per cent of the nation's army officers are pro-Nazi in their sympathies.

Introduced by a Socialist deputy, the proposed legislation not only would ban Nazi activities but would permit deportation of persons engaged therein.

The assertion that Chilean army officers are largely pro-German was made by Deputy Jorge Gonzales Von Marees, Chief of the popular Socialist vanguard formerly known as the National Socialist Party, who claimed it is "absurd to combat the German regime."

He declared Chile would receive "any benefits" if Germany won the war.

Gonzales was reproved by a Conservative deputy, who called his statement "inconvenient."

Back Ached So Badly He Could Hardly Straighten Up

Also Suffered With Stomach, Kidney and Blood Disorders, Felt Rundown and Couldn't Sleep — Tells How Syntona Helped Him.

Mr. John W. Jewitt says he suffered with rheumatism due to continued disorders of the stomach and kidneys, causing poisons and impurities to become dammed up in his system.

I had rheumatism in my muscles and joints so bad I could hardly get out of a chair once I sat down," said Mr. Jewitt. "I had pains in my back and was so nervous I couldn't sleep, and felt all tired out in the mornings. After eating, I would get a heavy feeling in my stomach and become terribly bloated. Sour acids would rise from my stomach and I seemed to be constipated all the time.

"I read about what Syntona had done for others and decided to try it as nothing else I tried seemed to help me. Right from the first, Syntona seemed to 'hit the spot' and my stomach trouble was relieved. My other trouble was more deep rooted but I kept right on with Syntona and now I am completely rid of the backache and rheumatism also. I feel so much better in every way that I am glad to be able to recommend Syntona to anyone suffering as I did."

All who suffer are cordially invited to give Syntona a trial. For sale in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge—In the absence of the pastor Rev. L. W. Scott who is away on vacation, the Sunday morning service was taken by the Young People's Society, Mr. Jack Ketcheson being the leader. After singing the opening hymn, the Scripture lesson was read by Miss Bessie Beatty followed by a short poem "Selfish praying" read by Miss Nita Woods and a selection by the young people's choir.

Mr. Ketcheson then gave the address, his subject being "Opportunities." We have all the same amount of time and the use made of it depends on the individual. One can get the very best from life if time is rightly used. There are great opportunities ahead in the field of science, chemsitry, etc., but there are also great opportunities for the young folk of the agricultural community for farming, better methods of doing farm work, ways of raising better crops and improving standards in community life. This can be done if time is used to the best advantage.

Miss Marjory Latta read a poem showing the great benefit to be derived from the touch of the Master's hand.

The young people deserve great credit for the service.

The Ful-O-Pep Plan Helps Poultrymen Save up to 30% to 50% on COST OF FEEDING NEW PULLETS

● Some have asked why a commercial feed manufacturer advocates a plan of restricted feeding. The answer is simple. By advocating this basic principle in the Ful-O-Pep Rearing Plan, substantial economies are possible to alert poultrymen, and at the same time he can raise a stronger, healthier bird than by limited feeding.

With Ful-O-Pep Chick Starter and Growing Mash—so exceptionally rich in nutritive value—as a foundaton of the Ful-O-Pep plan, poultrymen may complete the growing ration with whole oats and scratch grains, thus saving considerable money.

We believe this to be an important contribution to the practical poultryman's method of operation.

CORINTH CANAL WRECKED BY BRITISH BOMBERS

Attacks Cause Landslides to Block Passage

Will Delay Enemy Shipping in Strategic Waterway in Greece For Some Time

TWO RAIDS

Cairo, Aug. 15. — (AP)—British bombing planes in two recent attacks have wrecked the Corinth Canal, strategic waterway between the Peloponnesus and the mainland of Greece, the Royal Air Force Middle East Command announced today.

Examination of photographs of the attacks on the German-controlled canal show "considerable landslides on the banks .. Sufficient to prevent passage of enemy shipping for some considerable time", a communique stated.

It was announced also that Fleet Air Arm planes had attacked the Axis submarine base at Augusta, Sicily, and started fires in a raid on the Sicilian city of Syracuse.

AXIS GARRISON AROUND TOBRUK IS WIPED OUT

Strong Point of Siege Line Surprised by Large British Patrol

ARTILLERY FIRE USED

Cairo, Aug. 15 —(AP)— A whole Axis garrison on the siege ring around Tobruk has been wiped out by a British patrol from the Libyan port, British Middle East headquarters announced today.

The strong point on the siege line was surprised by the sortie Wednesday night, the communique said, the patrol then striking further into the Axis positions to attack "strong working parties" with grenades and light machine-gun fire.

British patrols again were active yesterday in the Egyptian-Libyan frontier area and artillery fire struck effectively two Axis working parties in the desert although heavy dust storms hampered forays out of Tobruk, the communique said.

Includes Five Millions Cans of Various Food Stored Against Possible Nazi Invasion Attempt

FOOD AREAS

London, Aug. 15 —(CP)— Food Minister Lord Woolton announced today that Britain's "shadow larder," including 5,000,000 cans of various foods, is ready.

He said Prime Minister Churchill had instructed him to have all emergency arrangements ready by Sept. 1, the date the Prime Minister has given as the zero hour for a possible invasion attempt by the Germans.

Preparations have been made to deal with conditions that might arise in event of invasion by sea or air in any part of the British Isles and for dealing with "the most severe blitz our most pessimistic imagination could devise," Lord Woolton said.

He said the arrangements included creation of a hundred "watertight" food areas throughout the country, each independent of outside help.

Daring Escape From Oxford Jail Staged by Pair

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP)—Olly Ignace, 18, and John Virag, 21, both of Niagara Falls, staged a daring escape from Oxford County jail here last night when Virag overpowered Turnkey Jones, seizing his keys. Virag then released Ignace and the pair let themselves out of the front door.

Head Turnkey Melville Hamilton immediately notified city and provincial police.

Ignace was under a four-year sentence at Windsor for robbery at Harrow and was on one week's remand here in the case of an armed robbery at the Babier service station at Thamesford. Virag was brought here from Niagara Falls as a material witness in the Thamesford robbery.

Girl Carries on Normal Duties Although Shot Through Lung

Meaford, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP)—For two days 17-year-old June Mottershaw of Detroit cooked her own meals, answered the door bell, and lived an apparently normal life with a hole in her left lung made by a slug from a .32 calibre revolver which accidentally discharged.

This was revealed here by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Mottershaw, called home from here when she was taken to hospital when a friend persuaded her to get the wound treated.

"I was just wandering around the house Tuesday afternoon and I didn't have much of anything to do and I thought I'd sort of look at things in mother's trunk," she wrote her parents.

"I didn't know the gun was there. I picked it up to examine it. It was while I was looking at it that it went off It hurt terribly. I didn't know what to do. I had fallen on the floor but after a while I felt a little better and then I got up and lay on the bed. Later I went downstairs for something to eat but I just fixed a little soup and then went back to lie down.

"I paid the postman for some stamps on a letter in the morning, but I didn't tell him, nor the man who came to look at the piano (which was advertised for sale) nor the landlord who came for the rent, for fear they'd call a doctor and there would be a big doctor's bill." She said she hated to add more expense for her father, a bricklayer, because he had been out of work. Her only brother is in the army.

June's wound might easily have been fatal as it entered just below the heart. It penetrated the base of the left lung, and the lung was about half-filled with blood, according to Dr. George Hanna. The bullet went through her body and out the back and there is no mark of infection.

ROYAL INQUIRY TO INVESTIGATE ARVIDA DISPUTE

All Matters Between Employees, Employers To Be Discussed

TWO JUDGES CHOSEN

Ottawa, Aug. 15—(CP)—Justice Minister Lapointe announced today the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate all matters concerning the dispute between employees and employers at the Aluminum Company of Canada plant at Arvida, Que.

Named as Royal Commissioners were Mr. Justice S. Letourneau and Mr. Justice W. L. Bond of the Quebec Court of King's Bench. Both men are from Montreal.

The Justice Minister told The Canadian Press the Royal Commissioners had not yet set a date for their inquiry but would "investigate all matters concerning the dispute at the Arvida plant."

On July 29th Munitions Minister Howe told a press conference that 300 men had seized control of the gigantic aluminum plant at Arvida and held control from July 24th until July 27th.

The matter already has come under investigation by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and authorities of the Dominion arsenals.

Mr. Howe, at his press conference on July 29th, said the disturbance at Arvida had caused a loss of three weeks' production.

He termed it "the most serious interruption of war production in Canada since the war began."

Early this week, M. S. Campbell, chief conciliation officer of the Labor Department, visited Arvida to direct negotiations between the Aluminum Company and employees.

Concerned in the negotiations were A. Charpentier, President of the National Confederation of Catholic Workers of Canada and J. B. White, personnel director for the Company.

Roosevelt Has Great Love for the Sea

Washington, Aug. 15—(AP)—Those familiar with President Roosevelt's great love of the sea inclined to the view that the unprecedented meeting between him and Prime Minister Churchill in the North Atlantic was Mr. Roosevelt's own idea.

Although Mr. Churchill originally rose to world prominence as First Lord of the Admiralty and usually is identified in the American mind with thoughts of seafaring—as are most Britons—there is no evidence that he possesses any such passion for ships and the sea as does Mr. Roosevelt.

At least once a year, the President has gone voyaging and has long had a custom of inviting visiting dignitaries and high government officials to go along with him.

Battle of Atlantic, Safety of U.S. Convoys Topics at Rendezvous

London, Aug. 15. — (CP) — Among the "most important" subjects discussed between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in their historic meeting at sea were the battle of the Atlantic and the safety of convoys from the United States an authoritative source said today.

The principal meeting between the two democratic leaders was held Sunday in the captain's cabin of the British battleship Prince of Wales under weather conditions which "unfortunately were not ideal", it was said.

The location of the big new battleship at the time of the conference remained secret. It was reported that there were no untoward incidents in the arrival or departure of the United States or British representatives.

Russians Abandon Two Key Towns in Ukraine

Deny Nazi Claim That Armies of General Budenny Have Been Encircled

SINK GERMAN SUB

Moscow, Aug. 15 (AP)—A fourth major Nazi offensive, apparently aimed at Leningrad simultaneously with the southern smash toward Odessa, was reported today in Soviet war dispatches.

After a threeday lull in which there was only sporadic action, the communique reported that battles had broken out anew on the eastern front and that fierce fighting had raged through the night chiefly in the Kakisalmi, Staraya Russa and Smolensk regions and on the Estonian sector.

There was no further mention of the Ukraine where the communique last night acknowledged the Red army's withdrawal from Kirovograd (Levo) and Pervomaisk.

The new offensive was pictured as a sequel to three major thrusts in which the Nazis had reached their present positions on a line running north from the Ukraine east of Smolensk to the northern lakes and the Baltic Sea, with the Russians holding out in northern Estonia.

No Indication Given

Areas mentioned in the communique are parts of the battlefront developed in the Germans' three way squeeze on Leningrad, jointly with the Finns from the north and by themselves from the west and south. The communique gave no indications of how the battles were developing.

German tactics now, however, appear to be to attempt to advance gradually, carving out bits of territory in small pincer movements with the front line kept straight instead of the previous blitzkrieg plan based on long salients and wide sweeping thrusts.

Germans Say All Crossings of Dnieper River South of Kiev in Nazi Hands

ODESSA ENCIRCLED

Berlin, Aug. 15 (AP)—Nazis predicted today there remained another fight in the offing in the Western Ukraine with Soviet troops not already enclosed between the Bug and the Dniester Rivers.

These sources claimed these troops are doomed for they are being bombed by the Nazi Air Force which also is within striking distance of the huge power dams at Dnepropetrovsk.

The Nazis also claimed that all crossings of the Dnieper River south of Kiev for several hundred miles were in German hands.

They apparently meant the German wedge reported following down the west bank of the river had control of some crossings while the remainder of the waterway, forming a bow ending at the Black Sea, was guarded by German planes.

Situation Left Standing

Except to report steady success on other battlefields of the eastern front, the communique from Hitler's headquarters today let the Ukraine situation situation stand on yesterday's two special communiques claiming encirclement of Odessa and Nikolaev and capture of the important ore region of Krivoi Rog in the lower Dnieper Basin.

D.N.B. claimed the Germans yesterday wiped out a large group of Soviet forces but did not say in what sector. A tentative count it said showed 20,000 prisoners captured and 32 tanks, 85 guns and an armored train seized or destroyed.

The capture of Krivoi Rog, reported yesterday, was cited as indication of how far Nazi troops had progressed on the Dnieper Bend Plateau since the drive began southwards from the Zhitomir and Kiev Salient.

Krivoi Rog, an industrial centre, is 40 miles from the nearest section of the Dnieper, and the rush appeared to be aimed at Dnepropetrovsk, 110 miles northeast.

Fruit of the wedge sent south from Kiev and Zhitomir appeared to be Odessa, grain and oil port possessing the greatest grain elevator in Europe.

Nazis claimed "encirclement" of Odessa was carried out by Rumanians under Gen. Ion Antonescu.

DRIVE LAUNCHED TO TELL EUROPE ABOUT MEETING

Declaration of Aims Broadcast 80 Times in 40 Languages Within Twelve Hours

EDITORIAL COMMENT

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Britain launched a mighty propaganda campaign today to tell Europe's millions of the historic meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and their joint declaration of principles for establishing a lasting peace "after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

The pledge that the two great English-speaking nations were not seeking territorial gains and the declaration they desired "no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely-expressed wishes of the peoples concerned" were considered prime propaganda points here.

B. B. C. Fires First Gun

To spread word across Europe, Information Minister Brendan Bracken prepared a campaign to be carried on by broadcasts, pamphlets dropped from British and Russian planes and underground channels.

The Daily Herald, which called the declaration "a matchless weapon of propaganda," declared that "boldly and skillfully used it will contribute immensely to winning the war."

British Position Very Much Better In Atlantic

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Britain's position in the Battle of the Atlantic is "very much better" than in the early summer because of widening operations against German submarines and "most valuable," United States assistance, authoritative sources declared today.

Although the scale of attacks has remained about the same and, in fact, has increased in some areas, these sources said British aircraft and surface units have "done very well in recent weeks" in the struggle to retain mastery of the sea lanes.

The Axis, simultaneously, has "suffered very heavily" in the Mediterranean, they added, with British there reversing the Atlantic situation and attacking German and Italian convoys successfully with light forces.

300 RAF BOMBERS SMASH HEAVILY AT NAZI TARGETS

Main Attack Centred On Hanover, Burnswick and Magdeburg

14 NAZI PLANES DOWNED

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—"Especially large fires" were started in Hanover last night when more than 300 Royal Air Force bombers roared over Germany for heavy assaults on Hanover, Brunswick and Magdeburg.

Other attacks were made on the docks at Rotterdam and Boulogne, a communique said. Loss of 12 planes was acknowledged.

During yesterday, the communique declared, Blenheim bombers scored direct hits on an Axis supply ship off The Netherlands coast and left it in flames and sinking. One plane was lost in daylight operations.

An Innovation

Announcement of the number of planes participating is an innovation and authoritative sources said they understood the step was "carefully considered and will be repeated as often as possible". Loss of only 12 of the 300 planes—four per cent— was considered low.

"By stating the number of bombers used our losses are put in proper perspective", authoritative sources said. "It gives the lie to clumsy and almost invariable attempts by the Germans to minimise the scale of our raids by describing them as carried out by weak forces".

Over the British Isles, a communique said, Nazi night activity was on a small scale. A few enemy aircraft bombed parts of northeastern and eastern England causing slight damage and a few casualties.

Cross in Steady Stream

Just prior to last midnight southeast coast residents heard British planes roar across the Channel in a steady procession. Then Nazi anti-aircraft batteries threw up shells from along the French coast and the rumble of bomb blasts was heard.

Of yesterday's daylight forays over enemy territory the Air Ministry said 14 Nazi planes were shot from the skies. Five British planes were lost.

Three Polish squadrons of fighters were credited with downing 13 of the enemy aircraft. Three Polish fliers are missing, the Air Ministry said.

Targets attacked yesterday afternoon included the docks at Boulogne and bombs were seen bursting on the objectives. Blenheim bombers carried out this raid and none was lost although two British fighter planes protecting the bombers are missing.

Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 15 (AP)—An indication that President Roosevelt might come ashore tomorrow, ending the historic cruise during which he conferred with Prime Minister Churchill, was given today by a member of the White House Secretariat.

Britain's Beaufighter is World's Most Heavily Armed Fighting Plane

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Britain's new Bristol beaufighter, designed particularly for action against the night bomber, are being constructed at an "astonishing" rate, officials disclosed today, as a result of simplification of the construction job.

Every part of the beaufighter is inter-changeable and rapidly replaceable. Every job is simplified to the last degree. A new method of wiring alone has cut down production time 100 hours per machine, it was stated.

The plane, Britain's most heavily armed fighter aircraft, includes navigation, identification and formation-keeping equipment, landing flares, auto-recognition equipment, signal pistol, oxygen apparatus, cine-camera mounting, stowers for computers and map cases, automatic fire extinguishers, first-aid outfit and axe.

The armament of the beaufighter, which is painted black to render it almost invisible at night, consists of four 22-millimetre Hispano cannon guns and six Browning machine guns. The cannon are mounted in the fuselage and the machine guns in the wings. The machine may be made more deadly by the addition of a turret.

An all-metal, mid-wing monoplane, the aircraft is fitted with two Bristol Hercules III engines developing 1,400 horsepower. It carries a pilot and observer and has a speed of 330 miles an hour at 14,000 feet, with a range of 1,500 miles.

Arthur B. Purvis One of Victims Says Air Ministry

Returning Trans-Ocean Aircraft Crashes at Airdrome In United Kingdom

SECOND IN WEEK

Montreal, Aug. 15 (CP)—The chief of the British Purchasing Mission in the United States, Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, has been killed, the Royal Air Force Ferry Command announced early today.

(The Air Ministry in London announced that 22 persons were killed in the crash.)

In a brief statement which indicated there were other casualties but did not say how many, the Ferry Command said Mr. Purvis was killed when "a returning trans-ocean aircraft" crashed at an airdrome in the United Kingdom.

The accident was the second serious misfortune announced by the Ferry Command this week. On Sunday, 22 airmen, eight of them Canadians and seven Americans, were killed when a plane returning them to this side of the Atlantic met disaster in the British Isles.

One of the victims of the crash in which Mr. Purvis was killed apparently was Capt. Joseph Creighton MacKey, the 31 year old pilot of a transatlantic plane which crashed in Newfoundland last February, killing Sir Frederick Banting, noted Canadian scientist.

Wife Informed of Death

MacKey's wife, a resident of Montreal, was informed officially early today that he had been killed in an overseas air crash. MacKey, a noted United States stunt flier before the war, had returned to the ferry service only recently after recovering from injuries suffered in the Newfoundland crash. His mother, Mrs. Besse MacKey, lives in Cleveland.

Another possible victim of the crash was Capt. Gerald Hull of Detroit. His wife, a resident of neighboring Westmount since last April, was informed of his death early today.

Two other fliers unofficially reported to have been killed in the accident were Capt. Stafford and Capt. Hamel. Further identification of them was not available immediately.

Resident of Montreal

Mr. Purvis, a resident of Montreal since 1924, left his position as president and general manager of Canadian Industries, Limited, soon after the outbreak of the war to fulfil his appointment as chairman of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States.

He carried out the vast responsibilities of the job with such success that he was made a member of the British Privy Council in the last King's Birthday Honors List, Dec. 15.

BOMBING PLANE MISSING

Calgary, Aug. 15 (CP)—Whereabouts of an Avro Anson training bomber and its crew of three men from No. 3 Service Flying Training School of the Royal Canadian Air Force remained a mystery today as officials of the school reported they had heard no word of the plane, missing since 4 p.m. (7 p.m. EDT), yesterday.

Sees Possibility Auto Speed Limit Cut to 40 M. P. H.

Toronto, Aug. 15 (CP)— Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle indicated Thursday afternoon in a statement that there is a strong possibility that the Dominion government will shortly introduce regulations to reduce the speed limit on all Canadian highways to 40 miles-per-hour as a measure to conserve gasoline.

Mr. Cottrelle said "the matter now is receiving serious consideration."

The oil controller reiterated previous statements that the gasoline and oil situation in Canada is serious and that he may have to impose further restrictions to curb consumption.

Reds Withdraw Beyond Dnieper Says London

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Russian troops in the Ukraine apparently are withdrawing beyond the Dnieper River, authoritative sources said today.

There is no positive information, however, these sources said, that the Germans have crossed the Dnieper at any point, although they may have reached it somewhere south of Kiev.

Although the Germans appear to be trying to occupy the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolaev there was no indication here that they had achieved their goal.

Authoritative sources said there was some danger that Russian units might be cut off by the Nazi advance toward the big industrial centre of Dnepropetrovsk at the great bend of the Dnieper River.

Any attempt by the Russians to evacuate Odessa and Nikolaev, it was said, might have to be carried out by sea, since troops falling back on those cities apparently have no other path of escape.

Observers declared the area reported overrun by the Germans contained about 50 per cent of the Ukraine's heavy industry.

Totalling up Russian claims of the number of German divisions and other units annihilated or badly battered, it was estimated the Germans had lost about 322,000 men killed, wounded, missing or taken prior to August 1.

Robbery Charges Laid Against Two

Ottawa, Aug. 15 (CP)—Charges of robbery while armed were laid last night against Glenn Roberts, 37, who gave his address as Sudbury, Ont., and Alfred Roberge, 30, no address given, by police investigating Wednesday's bank hold-up in suburban Eastview.

The men were taken into custody at Connaught race track. Charges were laid by Chief of Police Richard Manion of Eastview.

A girl taken into custody with the men was not charged, officers said.

Two men who entered the Eastview branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale escaped with a little over $300. Only a short time before two bank employees had left with $3,180 for the main branch in Ottawa.

PURPLE PETUNIA HAS PERFECT V

The "V" for Victory sign is now showing up in flower gardens. A purple petunia in the garden at the residence of Mr. Reg. Hardwick, West Dundas Street, is marked in white with a perfect "V," the only marking on the petals. The flower was conspicuous among the dark blossoms and a search of the flower bed revealed no other example of the significant letter.

MOTOR CAR FAILS TO NEGOTIATE CURVE

Two local citizens sustained multiple injuries and were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital following a motor accident west of Deseronto on Highway No. 2 at 2.30 a.m. this morning. The injured men, where were attended at the scene of the accident by Dr. Blackwell, of Deserono, were Albert Moon, 47 Henry St. and William Thompson, 31 1-2 Isabel St., both employees at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base.

Motorcycle Patrolman Milton, who investigated, stated that the motor car in which the men were riding had failed to negotiate a curve west of Deseronto, known as Avis' turn, and turned over into the ditch. Both men sustained deep lacerations and minor fractures.

TWO BIKES STOLEN

Two bicycles were reported stolen to Belleville police today. G. Taylor, Rossmore, informed Acting Chief Constable Arthur Harman his bike had been stolen from the rear of his home in Rossmore sometime last night.

Max. Royal, 212 Coleman St., parked his bicycle at the upper end of the main street last night and it was taken during his absence.

With the exception that a young girl was spoken to by a strange man on Dunbar St. last night, nothing else of consequence was reported to police during the past 24 hours.

PLEADS GUILTY TO FORGERY CHARGE

Samuel Kornbloom, Belleville, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in local police court here today. Kornbloom was remanded for sentence as Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., was not present to present the prosecution.

Kornbloom tendered a cheque for $17.78 at the Belleville General Hospital earlier this week. Officials of the institution suspected forgery when the writing of the endorsement seemed identical to that of the signature of the person who was supposed to have signed the cheque. Kornbloom, who was convicted of attempting to commit suicide early this season, admitted to the charge in court today.

GIRL INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY TRUCK

Knocked down by a truck near her home early Thursday evening, Miss Cole, 157 Station Street, sustained multiple abrasions and bruises. Miss Cole was taken to the surgery of Dr. R. A. Flynn, where first aid was administered. The injuries were said to have been superficial.

Police investigated and found that the truck was driven by John LaBarge of this city. LaBarge was detained at the police station for some time for questioning. Today Acting Chief Constable Arthur Harman stated that charges were pending in the case.

Rags, Old Clothes Paper, Cardboard Metals Wanted

Canada was compelled to import rags to the value of $3,800,000.00 in 1940.

Rags are in great demand in the manufacture of munitions for the prosecution of the war and the overthrow of Hitler and his gang.

Belleville housewives can materially assist in helping Canada's war effort by giving all rags and old clothes to the Women's Canadian Club War Service Committee in their Red Cross National Salvage campaign, which opens in Belleville on Saturday. Not only are rags and old clothes being sought, but all types of refuse around the home, such as old papers, scrap metals of all descriptions, cardboard boxes, bones and practically all kinds of salvage, except glass, which is too bulky.

In their initial drive for such articles of salvage, the Belleville National Salvage Campaign Committee will have a truck stationed in a convenient position on the Market Square all day Saturday when citizens are urged to scour their homes from the cellar to the garret seeking articles that have long since been dispensed with in the home, but which are of untold value to Canada's war effort.

No article is too small nor none too large for the committee to handle and the whole family can assist in making this campaign one of success as every home in Canada is urged to clean up all salvage and turn it into the National Salvage Campaign to insure VICTORY.

Every little bit will help to swell the truck that will be parked on the Belleville market to accept salvage on Saturday.

All proceeds of the Salvage Campaign are going to the Red Cross.

SALVAGE TO WIN is an equally good motto as "V" for Victory.

Belleville Boy Killed in Action When Plane Crashes

Word was received yesterday by Mrs. Roger Porter notifying her of the death of her nephew, Sergeant-Observer Jerry Morris, 26, who was killed in a plane crash in England. The plane, damaged in action over Germany, crashed on landing. Sgt.-Observer Morris was well-known in Belleville, where he had many friends among the younger set of which he was a popular member.

Sgt.-Observer Morris enlisted with the Royal Canadian Air Force at the outbreak of war and went overseas in December. Since February he has been flying over enemy territory. The day before word came of his death, Mrs. Porter had received a letter from her nephew in which he told her that he had been recommended for a commission.

CATANIA BOMBED BY BRITISH

Rome, Aug. 15—(AP) — British planes bombed Catania and Augusta on the Island of Sicily during the night, the Italian High Command reported today.

At the same time Italian bombers struck at the British island of Cyprus in the Eastern Mediterranean, hitting oil depots and storehouses, the daily War Bulletin claimed.

Footbridge Falls to River Bed When Both Cables Break

Several Pedestrians Escape Serious Injury When Structure Collapses

CABLES 67 YEARS OLD

With a crackling, then a sharp snapping and with a low-sounding thud the footbridge over the Moira River crashed to the river bed below, shortly after 8.40 o'clock last night, carrying down with it six or seven pedestrians who were passing over. Fortunately there was little water flowing down the river at the time and no serious injuries resulted.

"There was a crackling, the cables seemed to stretch out and the bridge sank in the centre. It was a sensational thrill and we were so helpless," admitted Earl Vandervoort, 223 Coleman Street, who was accompanying four young ladies across the bridge.

Platform Held Together

"The structure held together for the greater part, only the approach planking breaking as the entire structure fell to the river bed below. The bridge swayed slightly from the north to the south before it finally flattened out and crashed downwards," added Mr. Vandervoort. Others known to be on the bridge at the time were: Miss Ferne Cannon, 46 Alexander St., who suffered a lacerated knee; Miss Irene Bell, Marmora, who sustained an injured wrist, and two sisters, Misses Margaret and Frances Quinn, of Marmora. All of the girls were employees at the Deacon Shirt factory and were being escorted across the bridge by Mr. Vandervoort, who had obtained board and lodgings for the latter three girls, who came to Belleville for employment and received the greatest thrill of their lives when the footbridge sank beneath them. Miss Bell and Frances Quinn were thrown into the shallow water, but unhurt.

Third Time Down

For the third time in the present century the footbridge is no more, but on the previous two occasions it was the elements of weather that caused the bridge to be destroyed, as it was washed out by floods in 1918 and 1936. However, last night both cables broke simultaneously, the north cable snapping at the west knuckle, while the south cable snapped off at the east knuckle, which allowed the bridge platform to drop straight into the riverbed. Citizens who had passed over the bridge only a few moments before it crashed into the river, told police that three boys had ridden bicycles across bridge in a zig-zag manner causing it to swing and sway at a dangerous angle, which is believed may have contributed to the breaking of the cables.

Built in 1874

The original footbridge over the Moira River was built in 1874 and the cables, that broke last night, were the original cables set up to support the bridge, City Engineer Charles Mott stated today. "The deed for the land for approaches to the swing bridge was obtained by the city from the estate of Sills and Holton in 1873 and the bridge was opened for pedestrians in 1874. The cable upon which the bridge had been suspendid all those years was an inch and one-half steel cable." Mr. Mott added that the bridge would be replaced as soon as possible.

After the footbridge was washed out in the 1936 flood a new steel frame and wooden platform were built and secured to the original steel cables, that were not damaged. Before the bridge was replaced in 1936 a government inspector approved then of cables, which at that time had been in place 61 years and had served the citizens of Belleville exactly 67 years before the elements of weather finally caused the steel strands to rust and break under the heavy strain.

Guard Stationed

Police were immediately notified and stood guard at either entrance until City Engineer Charles Mott was able to procure barricades from the Public Works Department and thoroughly barricaded both approaches so as to insure the safety of the public. Constables Evans, Ellis and Thomson assisted in keeping the public at a safe distance from the bank left open when the bridge collapsed. Hundreds of citizens viewed the wreckage, that resembled a collapse in miniature, of the Rainbow Bridge over the Niagara Gorge some years ago.

Will Rebuild Footbridge States Mayor Thompson

"The footbridge will definitely be replaced and as soon as possible," His Worship Mayor Glen Thompson told the Ontario Intelligencer today after the collapse of the 67-year-old structure last night.

"We are bringing to Belleville a bridge expert today, who will examine the broken steel cables and make his report to City Engineer Chas. Mott," added His Worship.

"There is some question as to whether or not the city can procure steel cable at this particular time. However, if cable cannot be obtained, the bridge expert will be asked as to the advisability of the erection of a cantilever bridge type. Regardless, there will be some kind of a bridge erected, if only temporary, until steel cable can be procured," assured Mayor Thompson, as numerous citizens were enquiring as to whether the bridge would be replaced.

Kinsmen to Supply Powdered Milk To British Children

Having completed their war service program in the provision of hostess huts at Canadian military training centres and providing a fully equipped mobile dental unit for the C.A.S.F., the Kinsmen Club of Canada have pledged themselves to supply milk to children of the bombed areas of Great Britain at their recent annual convention held in Toronto.

"The Milk for Britain campaign is the newest form of war service undertaken by the association of Kinsmen Clubs in Canada. Our clubs propose, through our war service work, to provide the equivalent of 100,000 fluid quarts of milk in the dried powdered form to be purchased and shipped to those in need throughout bombed Britain," explained Gardiner Duff, President of the Belleville Kinsmen Club today.

The new proposal is sponsored by the Kinsmen National War Service Committee under the chairmanship of Hal Rogers of Toronto, founder of the Kinsmen movement. Other organizations will be invited to contribute to the fund, which will absorb about $5,750.00 for every 100,000 quarts of powdered milk provided the needy children of Great Britain. The Kinsmen milk supplies will be administered by the Women's Voluntary Service of Great Britain and already contacts to distribute the first shipment of this much-needed nourishment have been completed. President Duff added.

The Belleville Kinsmen Club are preparing plans for programs with which to raise money for this fund. The public of Belleville will be invited to assist in assuring Belleville's quota in this vitally needed nourishment for the children.

Many Milch Cows Being Lost Through Bloat; Relief Recipe Given

Recurrent cases each summer of farmers losing valuable milch cows from bloat as the result of overfeeding from lush clover and alfalfa pastures represents considerable loss to stockmen in the Bay of Quinte district and this year again, numbers of cattle being lost from this cause have been reported.

Summer rains giving alfalfa and pasture fields a lush growth and cows being turned into these fields from comparatively dry pastures is again given as the reason for these losses. Cattle are left in such pastures too long with the result that they overfeed and become susceptible to bloat. It is recommended that cattle be left in fresh clover pastures only a short time at each feeding to prevent the bloat which results in possible death of the animals.

So prevalent has this trouble been during the past week or so that hide dealers in the city report receiving as high as five hides some days, the death of the animal in practically every case being the result of bloat from over-feeding.

Mr. George Cook, retired farmer now residing in Belleville, is gravely concerned over the plight of stockmen losing valuable animals from this cause and has been kind enough to forward a recipe he recommends very highly.

In Mr. Cook's opinion powered charcoal rates high as a relief for animals affected with bloat, the procedure being to powder the charcoal and mix with a pint of water. The bloated animal should be given one tablespoonful every fifteen minutes until relief is noted.

According to Mr. Cook, who during his farming days had considerable experience with bloat, this remedy has never failed him, even when the animal was so badly affected as to be off its feet.

Six Small Girls Raise $12 For British War Victims' Fund

Giving generously of their time and energy so that additional comforts might be supplied to British war victims, six little girls from the east hill district early this week showed the stuff of which loyal Canadians are made, when they set up a stand on Bridge Street near Albert and Charles and sold lemonade, cookies, tarts, etc., to passers-by and realized the sum of $12 which has been forwarded to the Evening Telegram's British War Victims' Fund.

Using a small table from which the little girls displayed their wares, a large sign bearing the words 'British War Victims' Fund, Please Help!", proved self-explanatory and a willing public promptly dug down in their jeans to show their patronage. On three different afternoons this week the girls were to be seen as they catered to the public the high point of their endeavours being realized when on one afternoon they took in almost six dollars.

The girls who took part in sales of lemonade and cookies were Betty Holway, 11, 169 Albert St.; Helen Davidson 12, 168 Charles Street; Theresa Callaghan, 10, 163 Albert Street; Doreen Summers, 10, 181 Albert Street; Donna Cameron, 5, 161 Albert Street, and Carol Licence, 297 1-2 Front Street.

Kiwanis Club Hopes for Big Sale of Tickets

Members of the Kiwanis Club are concentrating on the sale of tickets for the new Plymouth car that will be drawn for on the second night of the Street Karnival, which will be held on Wednesday and Thursday night of next week, Mills Marr, Chairman of the car committee announced today.

Everyone is working hard to put this Karnival over so that the Club will be able to carry out their projects, which cannot be done without money. Each year the Kiwanis Club appeals to the public for funds to carry out their normal work, which is quite extensive and added to these projects are the service for war work. It is expected that the sale of tickets on the car will give a most substantial profit and added to the funds from the Karnival proper, all the work contemplated can be carried out. The members have been given 20 books to sell, while many others have been sent to outside points, and it is the wish of the committee to have these books sold and the money returned as soon as possible. Residents of the district can assist in sending books away to friends and acquaintances with the full knowledge, that all the money derived by the Kiwanis Club will be wisely and judicially spent.

The new car has been on exhibition at several points in the city and also in several towns and villages in the district and the response to the appeal of the ticket sellers has been satisfactory but there is still much more to be done and with only a few days left. Other features of the Karnival are progressing satisfactorily and it is believed that this year's Karnival will be the best ever put on by the Kiwanis Club. The games will be new and there will be added entertainment. The ladies of the Club are working hard on the Hope Chest draw and Mrs. Barclay reports the sale of tickets to be satisfactory. All in all the committee is hopeful of a good Karnival but the members are requested to stay with the ship until the last minute.

Decisive Anglo-American Action Expected to Follow FDR-Churchill Conference

Pictures of Meeting Show Two Leaders Talking Earnestly Aboard Warship

OFFICIALS PRESENT

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP) — A feeling pervaded the Capital today that parallel Anglo-American action of a decisive nature is in the offing to implement the policies agreed upon in the historical sea conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Informed diplomatic sources here as some in London, shared the opinion that much more than the joint declaration of peace aims after destruction of "the Nazi tyranny" could be expected from the momentous meeting, that the first manifestation could be looked for soon and there would be no mistaking it when it came.

Numerous Decisions Made

This was based on the belief there were numerous important decisions behind the generalized language of the joint statement issued yesterday. Only in the statement's preamble was mention made of unspecified measure being taken by Britain and the United States.

The decisions, it was recognized, would remain in the category of military secrets, for Mr. Roosevelt has made plain on past occasions that he did not care to provide information he thought Hitler would like to have and that future defence strategy would be based on beating the other fellow to the punch.

Despite the rule of secrecy, some official sources thought that the President might give further details of his conversations with Churchill—perhaps in a fireside chat. Such a broadcast, it was said, could be used effectively to announce the first significant step taken as a result of the meeting.

Beaverbrook at Washington

The importance of American arms production in the discussions was evidenced by the arrival in Washington of Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's dynamic minister of supply, who participated in the conferences.

Lord Beaverbrook flew here yesterday from Canada and made no bones of the fact that his mission was to see about increased lease-lend aid.

In the course of a rapid-fire interview, Lord Beaverbrook announced he is seeking more of everything—more tanks, more planes (particularly bombers), more food, more supplies of all kinds.

He threw cold water on theorizing that Britain was counting on winning the war from the air.

"Bombing from the air did not beat us," he said.

This remark was interpreted as implying that Britain intended sooner or later to invade Europe in an attempt to roll back the Nazi armies.

Tanks Are Needed

His other comments, however, did not convey the impression that such a military venture was close at hand, for he stressed, among other things, that "we haven't got enough tanks"—and tanks in quantity are considered indispensable for such an operation.

Meanwhile some additional details were added to the still-meagre store of public information on the circumstances surrounding the meeting of Britain's Prime Minister and Mr. Roosevelt.

Exact location of the rendezvous remained veiled by the vague description "Somewhere in the North Atlantic" but photographs released by the White House last night disclosed that H.M.S. Prince of Wales and the U.S.S. Augusta had figured in the conferences.

Came on Warship

Both are warships of reputation. The Prince of Wales, one of the newest battleships in the Royal Navy, was commissioned since the war and played a big role in the death hunt of the Nazi dreadnaught, Bismarck. The Augusta, a cruiser, was the flagship of the Asiatic squadron during the Sino-Japanese fighting there in the early 1930's.

The White House pictures also disclosed the large number of high British and U. S. officials who had gathered at sea for the unprecedented series of conferences.

For Britain there were Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the Imperial Staff; Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, First Sea Lord; Lord Beaverbrook; Sir Wilfred Freeman, vice-chief of the Air Staff, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, Foreign Undersecretary.

U. S. Officials Present

For the United States there were Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State; Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet; Harry L. Hopkins, Lease-Lend administrator; W. Averell Harriman, who has been handling Lease-Lend matters in London; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire; Brig.-Gen. Edwin M. Watson, the president's military aide, and Capt. John R. Beardall, the president's naval aide.

The presence of all these high-ranking officials was one reason which led to the conclusion here that some of the decisions taken during the consultations required a thorough canvass of the entire military and naval situations. It also raised conjecture on the possibility informal staff talks might follow.

Fair Weather Enjoyed

One London newspaper, the Daily Sketch, called pointed attention to the personnel present, commenting: "The veriest nitwit will conclude that behind this facade and eloquence (of the Roosevelt-Churchill statement) and linked up with this formidable mustering of military, naval and aerial experts of both countries lurks some grave, practical and important decision and act of welfare calculated to further our mutual cause."

Apparently the President and Mr. Churchill had fair weather and moderate temperatures.

One of the photographs released by the White House showed Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt chatting after church services last Sunday on the deck of the Prince of Wales. They were seated side by side, the President bareheaded, with a prayer book in the lap of his dark suit, Churchill in a peajacket and seagoing cap he frequently favors.

Many Photos Taken

Another photograph was taken Saturday night on the Augusta where Mr. Roosevelt entertained at dinner. The President and Churchill are in evening kit surrounded by their aides and advisers. The President's two sons, Capt. Elliott Roosevelt and Ensign Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., were in the party, and the President's Scottie Falla, was at his master's feet.

A few vivid glimpses of the conferences at sea appeared in the London Daily Mail in a dispatch from its correspondent, Walter Farr, "somewhere on the American Atlantic Coast."

Sat Together on Deck

The President and the Prime Minister sat on the sunlit deck of a warship, Farr wrote, "with seagulls wheeling around.

"Occasionally the drone of a big American flying boat patrolling the skies was heard. The navy was taking no chances."

Besides the planes droning overhead the account reported, a constantly moving circle of destroyers, patrol boats and other small naval vessels formed a precautionary cordon around the conference ship.

A high American official who participated in the conferences was quoted by the dispatch to this effect:

"At the conferences it was hard to tell which looked happier—the President or Mr. Churchill.

"They knew each other well by talking for months on the trans-Atlantic telephone, so they were like two old friends meeting."

After an exchange of greetings, the dispatch related, the two plunged into eager conversation.

"Officials left them and for more than an hour they talked along with their ship rocking on the Atlantic swell."

Reaction Quite Favorable

Senate reaction to the declaration was largely favorable.

Senator Ellison Smith (Dem-South Carolina) told reporters, however: "The thing that is so humiliating to me is that the President did not take Congress into his confidence."

"He should have called Churchill to the White House and then invited Congressional leaders supporting his policies to sit in on the conference. . ."

Chairman David Walsh (Dem-Massachusetts) of the Naval Committee was even sharper. He charged that Mr. Roosevelt had entered into a "commitment that goes far beyond the powers of the President and one that no other President in our history even presumed to assume."

In Walsh's opinion the joint declaration of peace aims obligated the United States "in partnership with Great Britain, to go on to the bitter end—first, to overthrow the Hitler tyranny, then to disarm the aggressor nations and finally to police the entire world as a guarantee against future wars."

Pepper Advocates More Aid

Senator Claude Pepper (Dem-Florida), ardent advocate of more active aid to Britain and Russia, said he believed the joint statement "will mean that we will mesh our efforts more perfectly with those of Great Britain and Russia. We will step up our efforts, and there will be an increase in the volume of aid we will give."

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Dem-Indiana), opponent of many administration foreign policies, found "nothing startling" in the Roosevelt-Churchill statement.

"I believe all Americans can agree with the objectives," he said. "What concerns me is what method may be used to attain them."

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fresh from the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting at sea, Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply, is in Washington to give the United States production chiefs the benefit of his experience in overcoming in British industry innumerable difficulties similar to those now confronting American leaders.

Questions of high policy, rather than of industrial production, probably occupied most of the time of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in their conferences, but the presence aboard the battleship Prince of Wales of Harry Hopkins, Lend-Lease Administrator, and W. Averell Harriman, Lend-Lease co-ordinator, in addition to Lord Beaverbrook, suggests that supply questions were not neglected.

Loses No Time

Lord Beaverbrook after arriving in Washington lost no time in conferring with his American counterpart, William S. Knudson, and in telling reporters that Britain has the trained personnel, but not the tanks, to undertake large-scale operations against Germany and needs in large quantities more tanks, more bombers, more food.

After putting British aircraft production into a satisfactory condition, Lord Beaverbrook is now devoting his main energies to tank production, and his mission in Washington most likely is centred on getting American factories turning out tanks in volume comparable to the production now being achieved by the American aircraft industry.

Hard Blow Struck

The death in an aircraft accident last night of Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British Supply Council in North America, strikes a hard blow at Lord Beaverbrook's organization of this side of the Atlantic and doubtless will complicate the minister's plans, since Mr. Purvis at the time of his death was leaving Britain to join his chief in the Washington negotiations.

Lord Beaverbrook is bound to give early consideration to the appointment of a successor to Mr. Purvis due to the urgency of Britain's supply demands. Deputy chairman of the Supply Council is Morris W. Wilson of Montreal, who gave Lord Beaverbrook notable service as his chief representative in North America while he was Minister of Aircraft production. The next senior official is Sir Clive Bailleau, head of the British Purchasing Commission in New York.

Beaverbrook May Take Charge

It is just possible that Lord Beaverbrook himself will take over direction of the United States Supply organization on a temporary basis until the urgent problems he has come to this side to straighten out are settled

One New York newspaper, The Daily Mirror, went so far this morning as to suggest that Lord Beaverbrook "should be persuaded to stay here, to help do for America's factory front what he did for British Aircraft production". It added "The Beaver" is in Washington "to smash the log-jams that are strangling the full flow of lend-lease supplies to Britain".

Picton and District

Picton, Aug. 15—At its August meeting on Tuesday, Cherry Valley W.I. decided to purchase 192 pounds, four dozen Red Cross cans, of honey. These will be shipped overseas through the Red Cross.

Athol W.E.C. met at the same time and voted $50 to Prince Edward branch of the Red Cross.

W.I. meetings have been given over with sewing and the ladies, including twenty from Point Petre W. E. C. quilted a quilt. Mrs. A. Beckwith led in community singing, Mrs. M. Flake gave a reading and Mrs. W. C. Haggerty a paper on "Facing the Facts". Refreshments have been dispensed with during war time.

About 450 persons were served at the chicken supper at South Bay Wednesday night and the fine sum of $213 was realized. Tables were filled four times and there was an abundance of chicken and other delicacies for which South Bay ladies are famous.

Rev. Lehigh presided for an enjoyable program which included vocal solos by Jack Clark, Black Creek, H. Morman, Belleville, Mrs. Cecil Lobb, South Bay, Mrs. L. Wright, Picton; cornet solo by R. Morman, Belleville; violin solos by Miss Ryckman accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Turner, Grand Rapids, Mich.; music by an orchestra composed of Lloyd Hicks, saxaphone, Miss Gena Hicks, violin, of Belleville, Miss Ryckman, violin, Mrs. Turner, piano, A. C. Hilliard, violin.

Several members of the R.A.F. at Picton also assisted and were given generous applause. A.C. F. Howes sang three numbers accompanied by A.C. Connelly; A.C. C. Hillard and A.C. Connelly gave violin and piano duets and Cpl. M. Gupwell gave an interesting talk on the work of the R.A.F.

Members of the R.A.F. assisted at a concert at Northport Wednesday evening. Their numbers were well presented and much enjoyed. A.C. Messenger gave piano selections; A.C. Penn and A.C. Young, harmonica numbers; A.C. Lawson, cornet solos and A.C. Rigard, vocal solos. The airmen are most generous in assisting at such events and this is greatly appreciated.

DRAMATIC CONFERENCE MARKS NEW PHASE IN WAR

The historic meeting at sea of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt has been officially confirmed at last. They were accompanied by officials of their governments, including high-ranking officers of military, naval and air services. A dispatch from Washington states that a joint U.S.-British declaration of peace aims has been agreed upon "after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny." Lord Beaverbrook was one of the British conferees and is proceeding to Washington for further talks.

Now at the McCarthy Theatre, "Thunder Afloat," the timely and thrilling U-boat drama of war on the high seas. Wallace Beery, Chester Morris and Virginia Grey head the all star cast. On the same program, Jack Holt in "Fugitive From a Prison Camp."

42 Penniless Tobacco Croppers Stranded in Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP) — 42 penniless tobacco croppers from Tifton, were stranded in Windsor today after arriving last night to work on a number of tobacco plantations in Western Ontario.

The truckers were brought from Georgia in a truck by a Canadian tobacco grower who promised them work. Last night they were left at the Detroit end of the Windsor-Detroit tunnel by their Canadian employer, who failed to return.

The men were brought across to the Canadian side and slept in the lobby of the Immigration Building. Mayor J. Reaume treated them to breakfast—their first meal in 24 hours.

Duke of Kent Rests at Regina

Regina, Aug. 15 (CP)—Refreshed by an overnight stay in the heart of Western Canada's vast grain belt, the Duke of Kent today prepared to leave by plane for Brandon, Man., to continue his inspection of training schools operating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

The Duke and his party are scheduled to leave Regina this morning after spending the night at Government House as the guest of Lieutenant Governor A. P. McNab of Saskatchewan.

Before leaving Moose Jaw for the Saskatchewan capital, the Duke of Kent spent two and a half hours among Royal Air Force men stationed at nearby No. 32 Service Flying Training School.

Six Workmen Killed by Blast As U.S. Quarry

Sitka, Alaska, Aug. 15 (CP) —A roaring 35-foot wall of rock, loosed by a premature explosion, resulted in the deaths of six workmen at a quarry for the United States naval air base on Japonski Island in Sitka Harbor.

A seventh man, H. W. Hagadorn of Tacoma, Wash., was rescued after he had lain helpless for five hours under a mass of rocks. He suffered only slight head injuries and bruises.

The slide occurred at noon on Thursday. Three bodies have been recovered.

The island on which the air base and quarry are situated is 200 yards offshore from the town of Sitka, in the island and mountain framed harbor. Sitka is on the Pacific Ocean side of Baranof Island, about 100 miles southwest of Juneau. It has been a booming centre of defence activity.

The island was named Japonski (Japanese) by the Russians because a Japanese junk went ashore on the coast in 1805 and the rescued sailors lived for a time on the island.

FOR VICTORY AND LASTING PEACE

One of the great events of the war has been enacted somewhere at sea, the first meeting of the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, and President Roosevelt of the United States. These two men have been to the front in the world's thought bearing the world's burden to preserve democracy and liberty for mankind. The conference of the leaders of the greatest of Empires and the greatest Republic at some place, free, thanks to the watchful eye of the British Navy, was a tribute to the safeguards with which Britain has protected the ocean paths and the channels of commerce for the world.

This meeting brought momentous decisions which are graphically depicted in the statement, the decision to crush the Nazi menace this time and forever and the agreement by points upon the future peace which these two great democracies which are world leaders see as necessary for the preservation and guarantee of peace for nations 'without fear or want.' Disarming of aggressors until the establishment of security is one of the points which has been praised as showing the sense of realism with which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill face the question of the post war security. There are the points in the declaration that they make clear they have no desire for gain of territory or for aggrandizement. There is the important statement concerning restoration of sovereign rights to nations which have been deprived of them by force. The peace they desire is one that will make it possible for "all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance." They will endeavor with due respect to existing obligations to further enjoyment by all nations on equal terms of access to the trade and raw materials of the world needed for their economic prosperity.

Decision on these points is important and the question of suppling munitions and materials and carrying on the war against the Nazi aggressors is of prime importance. There must have been a thorough canvass of the whole situation in the meetings which were held. Such a locale as "somewhere at sea" was the most fitting setting for such a meeting where the great leaders had the opportunity to go into every phase of the situation. It may be taken for granted that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt have thoroughly discussed the whole field of the war effort and the post war days. Such understanding probably could not have been reached in any way except at a meeting held secretly with sufficient time for the development of all the ideas which the discussions would bring up.

How different this meeting was from those of Hitler and Mussolini, who are plotting to chain the world, while Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill discussed plans for a peace that would endure in which nations could live under their own form of government and not be molested by other nations, "after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

RUSSIA SPEAKS

German reports now tell of rain and naturally that offers a reasonable excuse for building up an explanation why Germans are behind schedule.

But Pravda says German units have felt the full brunt of Soviet arms and "have left the old Napoleonic roads strewn with the corpses of tens of thousands of German soldiers." This is well said for it brings up the fact which the Germans cannot avoid facing—the disaster which met that previous invader, Bonaparte, back in 1812.

The Pravda declares that the myth of the invincibility of German arms has been crushed and broken down forever. That myth was what the Germans desired to create.

Pravda again says, "Behind the modest Soviet reports lie great and serious events." With the peculiar directness and concreteness of the Russian, Pravda tells of German divisions as having been wiped out and "only countless graves recall the existence of these divisions. Dozens of other divisions after several battles with the Red Army have lost nearly half and others more than half of their makeup."

HITLER'S BROKEN PLEDGES

May 21, 1935

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "Germany neither intends nor wishes to interfere in the internal affairs of Austria, to annex Austria, or to conclude an Anschluss."

(Documents on International Affairs, 1935, Vol. 1, P. 171).

July 11, 1936

The German Government concluded with the Government of Austria an agreement repeating the terms of the foregoing promise.

(The Times, July 13, 1936).

February 15, 1938

This agreement was explicitly reaffirmed by the German Government.

(The Times, Feb. 16, 1938).

March 11, 1938

German troops crossed the Austrian frontier, and Austria was annexed to Germany. Hitler entered Vienna in triumph March 14.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

September 26, 1938

Hitler (in the Sportpalast, Berlin): "I assured the British Premier, and I emphasize it now, that when the problem of the Sudetenland is solved, Germany has no more territorial problems in Europe. Apart from this I am no longer interested in the Czech State. So far as I am concerned I can guarantee it. We do not want any Czechs at all."

(Bulletin of International News, Sept. 1938).

September 27, 1938

Hitler (in a letter to Mr. Chamberlain): "I regret the idea of any attack on Czechoslovakia territory......and I am even ready to give a personal guarantee for the remainder of Czechoslovakia. There can, therefore, be not the slightest question whatsoever of a check to the independence of Czechoslovakia."

(British White Paper on Czechoslovakia 1938, Page 22).

March 13, 1939

German troops crossed the Czech frontier.

March 15, 1939

Hitler entered Prague, capital of the Czech State, in triumph. He annexed the Czech provinces.

April 1, 1939

Hitler (at Wilhelmshaven): "I saw that this State (Czechoslovakia) had for a long time lost its inner capacity to live, and that it had already collapsed; I re-enforced ancient German right and reunited what had to be united by history, geographical position and all rules of commonsense. Not for the purpose of suppressing the Czech people! It will have more freedom than the oppressed peoples of the virtuous nations! I have, so I believe, thereby rendered a great service to peace......Germany does not dream of attacking other nations."

(British War Blue Book, Page 52).

April 28, 1939

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "I have never written a single line or made a single speech in which I expressed any attitude contrary to my actions."

(Daily Telegraph, April 29, 1939).

POLAND

January 26, 1934

Hitler's Government signed with the Polish Government a 10-year Pact of Non-Aggression, Hitler's communique stating that both countries "should renounce the use of force in their mutual relations."

January 30, 1934

Hitler: "Whatever may be the differences between the two countries in the future, an attempt to remove them by war-like actions would have disastrous effects which would bear no relation to any possible gain."

(Documents on International Affairs, 1934, Page 3234).

May 21, 1935

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "We recognize, with understanding and the heartfelt friendship of true Nationalists, the Polish State as the home of a great, nationally-conscious people. The German Reich, and, in particular, the present German Government, have no other wish than to live on friendly and peacable terms with all neighboring States."

SOME DAY, PERHAPS

Some day perhaps we'll toss the purse aside
And all the various trappings of man's pride,
And judge man solely by the wit he shows,
The useful work he does and what he knows.
Done with distinctions wealth alone prepares,
We'll hail the man and not the coat he wears.

Some day perhaps when comes a stranger near,
Instead of asking what he draws a year
We'll question this regardless of his dress:
"In what good field has he achieved success?
Skillful of hand is he to aid mankind?
His coat seems shabby; what about his mind?

Some day perhaps instead of fiscal worth
We'll judge by merit; brains instead of birth.
Beneath the vain pretensions of our pride
We'll deeper search to find the man inside,
And even though he little has to spend,
If he be useful we shall call him friend.

Cycling Toll

Fifty percent of the persons killed in bicycle accidents are children between the ages of five and fourteen, Paul W. Kearney, noted safety expert, points out in the current issue of The Rotarian Magazine. Over 1,000 youngsters have been killed and over 51,000 injured in such accidents in the last three years, he reports.

The fault is not entirely that of the bicycle rider. The fault is largely lack of stress on what Mr. Kearney calls "The three E's' — enforcement, education, and engineering." Few cities and towns — only about 150—have studied the "bike problem" at all, and these have been rewarded by an immediate drop in accidents.

The third "E," engineering, is of necessity slow and expensive, but enforcement and education can be readily put into practice. Requiring registration of bicycles is a helpful practice, but only if used to enforce the laws pertaining to bicycles and used to report infractions of the law and common sense. Many towns that require tail lights or reflectors for "bikes" ignore the ordinance and permit bicycle riders to pedal after dark with no sort of light to protect themselves—or to protect the motorist who cannot easily see a dark object against a dark field.

Safety lanes in schools have disclosed that few bicycles are up to mechanical safety standard. The first day of the test lane at Steinmetz High School in Chicago, only three machines passed. Most rejections were for lack of lights or horns.

Several communities have special "bicycle traffic courts," administered by youths themselves with the co-operation of the authorities. Many of these use the police to serve summonses, but the actual trial and admonition is by youths of high school age. Penalties are usually attendance at a traffic school for riders conducted by the police or safety engineers working with the police.

'Eight Points' Bear Resemblance To Wilson's '14'

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP)— The first official declaration of the joint peace aims of Great Britain and the United States—made by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt after their historic conference at sea—bears close similarity to Woodrow Wilson's famous 14 points designed to guide the world to a lasting peace after the first Great War.

The Wilson and Churchill-Roosevelt declarations both set forth a determination to achieve a just peace, restore the sovereign territories of conquered nations, guarantee equality of economic rights to all countries, assure freedom of the seas, establish a permanent system of general security and enable the world to disarm.

One of Wilson's points which the 1941 declaration did not parallel was his No. 1, of "open covenants of peace" and "open diplomacy" without secret agreements between nations.

President Wilson made his address containing the 14 points before a joint session of Congress on Jan. 8, 1918. The message was credited with speeding the collapse of the Kaiser's forces in the Nov. 11, 1918 armistice.

ON THE RECORD
By DOROTHY THOMPSON

An International Bill of Rights

London, Aug. 15—(By Wireless)— The eight points jointly put forward by the Prime Minister of Great Britain and the President of the United States as a basis of world peace are a revolutionary document. Simple, axiomatic, economical of phraseology, they constitute a Bill of Rights for nations and for the people in those nations.

They offer no common political formula for all men, but recognize the rights of nations for any form of government they choose, providing they do not seek to impose it upon their neighbors. They recognize that political differences are not incompatible with economic collaboration, and that such collaboration, if it be not in the interests of all, must rest upon common standards of labor and social security.

The document again enunciates a common traditional policy of the English-speaking nations, freedom of the seas, and is thoroughly realistic in proposing to disarm aggressors while maintaining sufficient force to protect the aims enunciated until they are transformed into organization and practice.

We may presume also that the points were elaborated after a consultation with the governments of the British Commonwealth and the heads of governments in London of the nations overrun by Adolf Hitler. The eight points forestall any peace offensive that might be launched by Hitler should he succeed in breaking the resistance of Russia.

By being generous, realistic and in harmony with the trends of the century toward national freedom, international economic collaboration and social and economic security they should appeal to all reasonable men in Germany, if any such are left in that unhappy prison of conscience and intelligence.

Yet, one is forced to ask, how are we going to achieve this world of reason and realism, of freedom and order that the points envisage? What are they — platitudes or a fighting, working credo? What are they for—propaganda or mobilization of the will?

One might well ask what right has the United States to propose such a program for the world unless she is willing to spend a fortune and shed blood and stake all upon its realization?

I write this from a country that for a year has held her finger in the dyke against world chaos. A year ago this country lost a war and the whole world was adrift in chaos and despotism and the end of all free nations and free men seemed to have come.

It lost a war, but because in a moment of extreme exaltation and national renaissance over the miracle of Dunkerque it refused to recognize that fact, the picture today is very different.

Today from one end of Europe to the other revolution is brewing, the revoluton of free and sane men, who hold on in hunger and oppression in the midst of daily imprisonments and executions, believing in a deliverer.

But Britain bears on her body the scars of a terrible year. Still free, still with all trade unions and institutions intact, the workers of this island toil by their own agreement from 8 in the morning until 7.30 at night on limited and monotonous food.

The fortune of Britain, the economic, social and domestic lives of all the people have been thrown into the scale for a world based on these eight points. There is not a person but has his most intimate domestic affairs radically rearranged by the exigencies of war, and only the spontaneous genius for affectionate and democratic co-operation that has sprung up in Britain under pressure, danger and the plan of recovering a lost cause has made it possible for President Roosevelt or anybody else even to dream of a world envisaged in those eight points.

They can be won with America; they hardly can be won without us. Nor can they be maintained in victory without a permanent, close and brotherly collaboration between all parts of the English-speaking world—collaboration that includes a common naval defence, a common foreign policy and a common financial and economic program, especially as regards the use and disposal and surplus commodities.

The United States and the United Kingdom, with all the free dominions, have nothing to lose but their place in history, and they have a world to gain. They can become the focal point and liberators of the world, or continue to exist as secondary powers on the periphery of the great complex of Europe, Asia and Africa which are not three continents, but one.

But the United States cannot change the course of history by words. Freedom doesn't come cheap any more; that which is the most costly is most worth the price. But the price is not for the pusillanimous, but for the keen, generous, daring and brave.

• • •

So the eight points can be reduced to the question: Does the United States intend again, as it did in 1776, to throw down the gauntlet to history and make a bid for the future, or will she linger on in the futility of the last twenty years?

Will we throw off the shackles we forged for ourselves, or help by lethargy to forge them for the rest of the world? Will we translate the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights into a code for all and so create interdependence and security, or will we lose them for urselves by refusing them to others?

I do not know the answer to this question. But I do know that the whole future of men on this planet hangs on it.

Beaverbrook At Washington

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook, British Supply Minister, arrived in Washington Thursday afternoon to discuss war supply problems.

Lord Beaverbrook, who participated in the dramatic sea meeting between Prime Minister Churchill of Britain, and President Roosevelt was flown here in a United States army bomber.

Accompanying him was Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, who also attended the sea rendezvous.

The Supply Minister was driven directly to the British Embassy where officials said he would see the press later in the day.

THE SACRED COD

During the drive to collect scrap aluminum it was suggested that a large aluminum codfish hanging in the Massachusetts senate chamber be donated to the national defence.

A similar large wooden image of a codfish, known as the sacred cod, hangs in the Bay State house of representatives chamber in the Boston statehouse.

Massachusetts was long noted for its codfish industry and formerly families in the commonwealth who became rich in the codfish industry were known as "the codfish aristocracy."

In 1905 Dr. John C. Bossidy, of Boston, recited the following jingle at a Holy Cross College alumni dinner:

Here's to good old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod
Where Cabots speak only to Lowells
And Lowells speak only to God.

The codfish is one of the most common and important food fishes in the North Atlantic ocean and occurs also in the North Pacific.

Although the white, flaky flesh of the cod is rather tasteless, it is widely eaten in both Europe and America.

It is used fresh, dried, salted and is canned in large quantities.

Norway, Iceland, Newfoundland and New England are the chief centres of the codfish industry.

Ranging in length from three to five feet and in color from olive green to white below, the codfish spawns in mid-ocean and is a prolific breeder.

A female is said to produce as many as three million eggs in a season.

The great shoal in the North Atlantic off the Newfoundland coast known as the Grand Banks is famous for its codfish.

In this region the bottom is covered with fine mud and sand and the meeting of two currents brings in an endless supply of diatoms and algae, which supply food for crustaceans and mollusks and other types of invertebrates, and these latter in turn fatten the hosts of codfish which swim in from the deeper water in May and June.

Enormous hordes of sardine-like fish known as caplin, which spawn on the sandy bottom of the Grand Banks, act as heralds for the codfish.

The bladders of codfish supply isinglass and their livers the important cod-liver oil of commerce.

Kipling's "Captains Courageous" is a story of the codfishers off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

Fourth Annual Cassidy Re-Union

Mr. John Cassidy, Sr., of Bogart was the honoured guest on the occasion of his ninety-fourth birthday on Sunday, August 10th, to receive congratulations on attaining such a grand old age and on acquiring such a long line of direct descendants which must be a record, perhaps Canada-wide. Along with many distinguished visitors there were present approximately eighty-five percent of the one hundred and sixty-six who call Mr. Cassidy father, grandfather or great grandfather.

Each re-union has set a record for attendance and this year's broke the record again with one hundred and sixty-eight present on the grounds. Among the special visitors were: His Excellency Archbishop M. J. O'Brien of Kingston, Most Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson of Belleville, Very Rev. Dean D. A. Cullinane of Tweed, Rev. Dr. Leo J. Byrne of Kingston, Rev. Father V. Meagher of Stoco, Rev. Fr. J. J. Collins of Belleville and Rev. Fr. J. Lamarcke of Tweed.

The re-union was arranged by the efforts of the president, Mr. J. J. Trudeau of Belleville, the secretary, Miss Monica Murphy of Tweed and a committee consisting of the sons and daughters: Mrs. Bridget Whalen, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. John Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Cassidy and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cassidy, all of Stoco, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Akey of Sulphide, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cassidy and Mr. and Mrs. George Cassidy of Bogart, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Doran, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. James Trudeau of Tweed.

The celebration took the form of a basket picnic on the spacious grounds surrounding James Trudeau's Riverview Cottage on the Moira River north of Tweed. After dinner on the grounds, the business meeting was held, after which there were treats of ice cream, soft drinks and candies, games of various kinds, boating, swimming, singing and dancing, distribution of prizes, and supper on the grounds.

Following the president's address at the business meeting, speeches of congratulations were made by the members of the clergy present, who lauded and complimented Mr. Cassidy as the grand old patriarch of the re-union.

Following the clergy supper in the cottage, His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien gave a very appropriate speech of congratulation to Mr. Cassidy and his family in which he paid tribute to them and their lives as exemplary of the teachings of the Catholic Church.

The winners of sport prizes were: [illegible]licka Cassidy, Clarence Cassidy, Jim LeSage, Theresa Cassidy, John Cassidy Jr., Mrs. Stan. Trudeau, Claire LeSage, Sheila Trudeau, Beverley Rose, Veronica Cassidy, Jean Trudeau, Carthagh Cassidy, Claire Gabourie, Thomas Cassidy.

The prizes for the oldest and for the youngest member on the grounds were won by Mr. Cassidy and by Baby Margaret Dillon of Enterprise, and the prize to the family coming the greatest distance to attend was won by Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, Honey Harbour, Ontario.

Foxboro

Foxboro — Mr. and Mrs. John Hall and Faye were included in a dinner party at the Sandbanks on Sunday under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson, Consecon. Others in the party were: Miss Adala Millar, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Millar and two boys, Wisconsin; Mr. and Mrs. Spafford and family, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Maybee, Sydenham; Mr. and Mrs. Walters and Mr. and Mrs. Yott of Bloomfield; Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Wellington; Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs and family, Victoria; Mr. and Mrs. G. Waterhouse and Mr. and Mrs. J. Waterhouse; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Brown and sister, Carrying Place and Miss Sager, Albury.

A number of members of R.B.P. No. 382 of Foxboro attended the commemoration of Derry at Havelock on Saturday. Threshing operations prevented some from attending but those who did included: Sir Knight Frank Howes, E. Hubbs, Frank Reid and Russel Christie.

Miss Luella Morton of Belleville and Mrs. J. Cook and children of Lindsay were recent callers at Mr. R. A. Morton's.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Yorke and Allan of Gilead were Saturday evening guests at Mr. W. Hodgen's.

Miss Bernice Dainard of Belleville spent a few days with her sister Mrs. Harold Stewart.

Sincere sympathy is extended to Dr. P. V. Helliwell who had the misfortune to be thrown from a horse and break his hip while on military duty at Ottawa. Friends hope he may soon be around again.

The church service on Sunday evening was in charge of the W.M.S. under the leadership of Mrs. Helliwell, who led in a very impressive worship service consisting of responsive reading by the congregation and the singing of appropriate hymns. A beautiful duet: "Lord I'm Coming Home" was well rendered by Mrs. E. Tummon and daughter Marion, after which Mr. Tucker of Stirling gave a most interesting address on "Life in Africa" telling the means employed to interest the people in a better, more holy life and in a Saviour who truly saves all creeds or colors. After singing the National Anthem the meeting was closed by the speaker.

Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Cooke and Buddy are holidaying at their summer cottage near Rice Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stewart, Jack and Carol and Miss Bernice Dainard spent Sunday with relatives in Hastings.

Mrs. W, Prentice spent a week with her son Mr. Earle Prentice of Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke of Gilead were Sunday evening guests at Mr. Wm. Hodgen's.

Woods Family Holds Annual Gathering

On Wednesday, July 30th, members of the Woods family and their descendants gathered at Oak Lake for a yearly re-union.

At 1.30 P. M. about seventy-five present sat down to a sumptuous dinner prepared by the ladies. After dinner the president, Mr. Robert Woods of Madoc spoke a few words welcoming all to the re-union. Special mention was made of Mr. Sam Woods who was in Belleville Hospital, the result of an accident. Mention was also made of members of the family who have "joined up", Roy Woods R. C. A. F., Francis Harris, Morley Holmes and Everett Woods, overseas.

Prizes were given to the youngest, Wayne Alfred Woods, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Woods, Belleville; to the eldest, Mrs. Curtis of Madoc, and to those coming the farthest, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Parks of Watertown, N. Y.

The afternoon was spent in sports of all kinds by the younger members and re-calling of past days by the older members.

Officers elected to arrange picnic for next year were as follows: President, Mr. Alfred Woods, Sidney; Vice Pres., Mr. Clarence Marshal, Plainfield; Sec. Treas., Mrs. H. S. Campbell, Trenton; Committee, Albert Woods, Madoc and Gordon Woods, Thurlow; Sports committee, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell of Trenton, Hilda Kirkpatrick of Ivanhoe, Cecil Woods, Huntingdon and Clarence Woods, Wallbridge.

Ocean Rendezvous Details Secret

Ottawa Aug. 15—(CP)—Details of the meeting at sea between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt remain an official secret so far as Canadian authorities are concerned.

No information could be gleaned here as to whether the British Prime Minister and his aides travelled by battleship to a mid-ocean rendezvous with the presidential yacht or whether they travelled by air.

"We know but we are not permitted to speculative or give out any further information," said a spokesman at the Prime Minister's office here.

"AFTER YOU SIR!"

Our Nation Comes First!

"Never was so much owed by so many to so few". But we owe more than thanks. Today, we owe it to our Fighting Forces to take our foot off the accelerator — to cut down on our driving. Oil tankers have been diverted overseas — some have been sunk — and our war needs increase as our strength grows.

The Government hopes to avoid rationing: conservation can help counteract the threatened shortage. So it asks you to do your part voluntarily—to keep our planes in the air, our ships at sea, our armies moving, and our munitions plants going full speed.

Have foresight. Sign the "50/50" pledge. Cut your mileage to cut your consumption in half. Cut open road speed from 60 to 40. Don't be a jack-rabbit starter. Drive others. Let them drive you. Use one car where two were used before. Save today to save tomorrow.

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

17 easy ways towards a 50% GASOLINE SAVING
(Approved by Automobile Experts)
Reduce driving speed from 60 to 40 on the open road.
Avoid jack-rabbit starts.
Avoid useless or non-essential driving.
Turn motor off when not in use, do not leave idling.
Don't race your engine: let it warm up slowly.
Don't strain your engine: change gears.
Keep carburetor cleaned and properly adjusted.
Tune up motor, timing, etc.
Keep spark plugs and valves clean.
Check cooling system: overheating wastes gasoline.
Maintain tires at right pressure.
Lubricate efficiently: worn engines waste gasoline.
Drive in groups to and from work, using cars alternate days.
For golf, picnics and other outings, use one car instead of four.
Take those short shopping trips ON FOOT and carry parcels home.
Walk to and from the movies.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, August 16

THE AUSPICIOUS astral vibrations are found to greatly stimulate the intellectual, creative and emotional energies on this day, and probably with culminations of their keen and forceful expression inciting to some sort of public acclaim, or the support of group, community or fraternal organizations devoted to humanitarian, cultural or social welfare. Such fine talents should be expanded or exploited for collective good, but with an eye to small treacheries or intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which their fine mental and spiritual forces may find avenue of expression and service in connection with conspicuous public works. Groups, community or fraternal bodies may be ready to assist such aspiration to find place in humanitarian, charitable or social employments. But be alert to petty deceits or treacheries, provoking and resented. Let the higher nature prevail.

A child born on this day will have talents of a high order, quick, keen, brilliant and probably uncommon, finding expression in some unique or dramatic form of public work or service.

Silk Rationing

Actual rationing of a major commodity has come to Canada with the "freezing" of raw silk stocks in this country. The order from Ottawa comes as no surprise. It was bound to occur, from the moment when the United States took similar action a few days ago.

True, an effort has been made to soften the blow. It is provided that silk stocks may be released if it can be shown that they are not needed for defence materials. This is merely a means of initiating the people into an era of embargoes by easy stages. It can be taken as assured that there will be little, if any, silk available for ordinary civilian uses. The United States has taken the stand that all of it is needed in that country for defence purposes, and certainly it has no greater proportionate demand for such military goods than have we.

The freezing order means that, for the first time in nearly two years of war, Canadians will be forced by arbitrary governmental action to undergo a change in their standard of living. Though silk is, to some extent, a luxury product, it enters into many of the articles of every-day life. It touches the population in general most closely, of course, in the field of women's hosiery, and it is there that the effect of the order will be most seriously felt.

Canadian women have been resigned, for some time past, to seeing their silk stockings disappear. In fact, they have been approaching a famine by progressive stages. The freezing of raw silk stocks simply hastens the day when they must turn to substitutes.

They will probably show the men an example in gracefully accepting the necessity for sacrifice. Women have done this before, and they can be counted on to live up to their traditions. It will be, for them, a matter of evolving a vogue for hosiery of other materials and following it, and in no time at all they will be looking back on the "silk age" with hardly a pang.

It is as an indication of future developments that the silk order is most important. Those who have not realized that Canadians have been much more fortunate, in respect to retaining all the comforts of normal living, than they had any right to expect, must see now that the days of "comfortable" war are over. This commandeering of all the available stocks of one essential commodity is only the forerunner of other such orders to follow.

Up until now, there have been nothing more serious than appeals to the patriotism of the people, to cut down voluntarily on their consumption of certain goods. In one or two instances — bacon, for example — there has been rationing of a sort, but this has meant only restricting home consumption to that of last year, and certainly that constituted no hardship.

The day of enforced sacrifice is now at hand. Silk is not the only material of which our war effort has need of all available supplies. A new test of patriotism is coming. The Canadian people will be called on to do without many things they have heretofore looked on as essential. The spirit in which they accept these restrictions will provide an accurate gauge of their actual sincerity and zeal to support the cause for which the Empire fights. Windsor Daily Star.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Correct Plans For Birthday Party For Adult Daughter

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is having a birthday soon, and I would appreciate advice about a party which will do honor to her and which will entertain about twenty guests. My daughter is thirty years old and is unmarried, bust most of her friends whom I wish to invite are married. My apartment is small, and I am not very well, and so I thought of having the party in a better-class restaurant where there is a good orchestra.

1. Would a supper-dance be appropriate? If you agree that it is, please tell me how to go about making the arrangements?

2. Is it proper to separate married couples at the table?

3. Would place cards be proper? I should think they would be very convenient.

4. Should the supper permit dancing between courses, or should the supper be served first and then have the dancing, or should the supper be served after the dancing?

5. My daughter's birthday falls on a Saturday, and this would, I am sure, interfere with the week-end plans of many of her friends. Do you think it would be terribly out-of-order if I plan to give the party the night before? Then it could "go on" as long as the guests would like to stay.

6. When would a cocktail be served as a "starter"?

7. Do you think that printed invitations would be too formal? (I don't intend to mention the fact that it is to be her birthday.)

G. R.

1. I think you've made a perfect plan for the party to honor your daughter's birthday! I'm sure she'll be enchanted. All your guests are probably dance-enthusiasts, and having your party at supper-time will give it a pleasant, leisurely air to your guests.

Do all arranging you can before the party, so you'll be easy in your mind during the party and can give your complete attention to the guests. When you decide where you are to give the party, go well ahead of time and see the manager or headwaiter, reserve a table for that date, decide with him about the menu (he'll have good suggestions about specialties of the restaurant), choose a desirable position for the table, and tell him whether you wish to have a flower centerpiece and what kind (it's more gala to have one for a birthday party, and if you do, whether he is to supply it. If you are known at that restaurant, or if you can open an account, arrange to have the bill sent later. Also you can arrange to have the tips for the waiters added to the bill—more than ten per cent for this kind of party-service. When you make these arrangements, give a tip to the headwaiter—this will be reassuring to you and to him!

2. A married couple should not be seated together at a dinner or supper party.

3. Yes, it would be proper and very convenient for you to use place cards.

4. I am sure that the guests will take for granted that they may, if they wish, dance between courses. That's what's usually meant by a supper-dance.

5. I'm sure you'd be wiser to plan the party for Friday evening.

6. There will probably be a cocktail lounge where you can have cocktails served as the guests are arriving. Or, and I prefer this, you can have them served at your table.

7. Please don't send printed invitations for this kind of party. You wrote such a charming and friendly letter to me that I'd like to have you turn your gift to writing charming and friendly notes of invitation

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl Friend Disgusts Soldier

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Before I went to camp, I didn't ask my girl to wait for me because I didn't think, owing to the unsettled state of everything, it would be fair to her. But I did expect, as long as she confessed her love for me and cried when we said goodbye, that she would have some sort of loyalty for a few weeks at least.

But my brother writes me disgusting things about her, that she has seen her drinking beer, dancing with men she must have picked up there as she didn't know any of them. And one of the boys here in camp has a snapshot of her holding out a glass and underneath is written: 'A short life and a merry one.' These things make me miserable, not to say. Disgusted.

It may be a pretty stiff dose to take, my dear soldier, but be thankful you're not engaged to this girl who seems to have thrown "her bonnet over the mill," as the old saying goes, since you've left. And at the same time, don't judge her too harshly. She may be missing you more than she realized and is taking out her loneliness in a sort of desperation.

She Regrets Her Jealousy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm so down-hearted. I went steady with a certain young man and we were very happy. Then one day I saw him with another girl, and when he came over the next time, I flew into a jealous rage and couldn't control myself.

That seemed to affect him so much that he has gone back to a girl he went with before he met me. I realize my mistake now when it's too late, and would give a great deal if he would be reconciled to me. I still love him. Jane.

It's cold comfort, I'm afraid, but it looks to me as if you would have to charge this experience up to trial and error. You were not engaged to the young man, which left him free to go with whomever he pleased. And your flying into a jealous rage opened up to him the terrifying prospect of life with a jealous partner.

If you meet him, you might try to be casual and laugh off your tantrum and show him you've reformed. But men are afraid of jealous girls, and can you blame them?

He's The Clinging Type

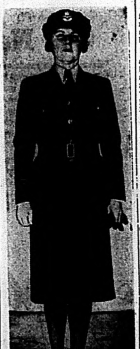
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I know a young man who is handsome, a good dresser, his ties and socks always match, but—he just can't keep his hand off me. I go out with him occasionally, but all he wants is petting and kissing all the time. He pretends to be broken-hearted if I fail to respond. A little of this stuff is O.K., but I get sick of too much of it.

Do you think I ought to quit going with him? I have no thought of marrying him, or anyone for that matter, as I'm only Seventeen.

It's safe to say, Seventeen, that you will be better off without the attention of this petter and kisser. So far as you are concerned, all this chap has to recommend is his haberdashery.

Uniform of C.W.A.A.F.



Officers of the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force will wear the comfortable, distinctive uniform shown ABOVE by Flight-Officer K. E. Walker, first commissioned Canadian woman in the unit.

Fashion Flashes

From here it looks like a colorful season, even if it is autumn. A new autumn hat is of purple velvet and not only has a trimming of pale blue ostrich but has a cerise veil.

The first days in town after the summer are always exciting. A beautiful early autumn frock is of smooth black woollen with a deep, rounded and draped yoke of black velvet with jewelled buttons. A flat panel from the yoke down the skirt in front with pleats on either side.

There's charm to spare in some of the new coats. Soft blue woollen with a velvety surface is used for a pretty coat made with a detachable Victorian capelet banded in mink. Without the capelet, the coat is smart for wear with furs.

A holdover for autumn is the tiered skirt, with the tiers placed in various ways. For instance, an afternoon frock of heavy black silk crepe has three tiers on either side of the skirt, leaving front and back perfectly straight and plain.

Bright afternoons and gay evenings in town call for neat but smart "don't dress" fashions. A two-piece frock of black crepe with a molded jacket top trimmed with big jewelled buttons has detachable neck ruffles of black point d'esprit.

A FEATURE of the winter fashion scene will be enormous hats of fur. One house is showing a tall helmet on busby lines fashioned of silver fox with an accompanying muff in drum shape to carry out the military motif.

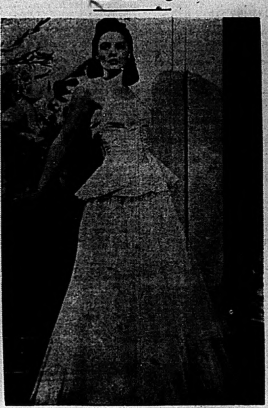
White at Night



By ALICE ALDEN

It's autumn, so far as the fashion world is concerned, but the white evening frock goes on and on, knowing no limitations of season or occasion. A smart idea for the early fall is to combine one of the richer fabrics with an airy, fragile material and so strike a nice balance. Gene Tierney models a delightful white dance dress, ideal for present wear. The bodice is of moire, the skirt is layer on layer of frosty white net. The buttoned-down-the-front bodice has a corset-like midriff which flares into a flirtatious peplum. Shoestring straps go over the shoulders.

Caffeine in Soft Drinks?

A cup of coffee made with a tablespoonful of coffee contains 1 1-2 to 3 grains of caffeine. Caffeine is a stimulant drug. Some persons find their nervous systems exceedingly stimulated by the amount of caffeine content in a cup of coffee. However, caffeine is generally recognized through the world as a comparatively harmless form of stimulation.

There are available at soda fountains, refreshment stands and in many other places summer drinks which contain caffeine in the form of sugar - containing flavored beverages. Children drink great quantities of these beverages and there are discussions as to whether the beverages are habit forming, as to whether it is good for children to drink them, and also as to whether it is safe for an adult to partake of such beverages.

The contents of the bottle in various soft drinks vary from 6 ounces in the smallest to 12 ounces in the majority and to as many as 28 ounces for certain special brands. When the contents of all these drinks were analysed, it was found that they range in their caffeine content from something like a quarter of a grain of caffeine in six ounces to one-half grain of caffeine in six ounces. Among twelve bottled brands analysed, the highest caffeine content found in any of them was 0.65 grains in a six ounce glass of the one most widely sold.

Since the average cup of coffee contains from three to six times as much caffeine, it is obvious that the average soft drink is not important as a source of caffeine.

Unless a child drinks three or four bottles in rapid succession, it is hardly likely to get enough caffeine from the drinks to have a serious effect on its nervous system. A better reason for watching the intake of such flavored beverages is their content of sugar. Sweet drinks, candies and pastries tend to cloy the appetite. If the child drinks any considerable amount of such drinks just before dinner, it is likely to spoil its appetite for food it needs. Inasmuch as most children do not get enough milk in their diets, it is preferable to have the child take milk if it needs a between-meals fluid.

Dazzling Promise

CHAPTER FOUR Reactions

Dona stood by a front window in her sitting room looking out at the dull gray landscape. From dark clouds pounded a heavy rain, which weighed down crimson poinsettia petals until they looked like strings of dripping blood against the white side fence. The branches of the tall old sycamores bent wearily over the sodden lawn and the mountains, hidden in mist, were turned into pygmy hills.

It was nearly noon but there was no particular duty for Dona to perform until Mrs. Platt rang for her. She and Bob were evidently sleeping late after the night's festivities and only the sound of servants going about their various tasks disturbed the silence of the hotel-sized house.

Dona pressed her fingers hard against her throbbing temples.

"Nothing to do," she said to herself. "Nothing—but to think, think, think!"

Last night's gaiety had had an inebriant effect upon her. Now she was thoroughly incensed at herself.

What a fool she'd been! For a few glorious, bubbling hours last night she had deluded herself into the belief that she was somebody. And now in the cold pitiless light of day, she knew exactly where she stood. Bob Platt had shown her. Bob snapped her fingers and all the men came running. Tug Nash was no exception. And he called it—business! Hump!

Angry tears blurred her eyes now and impatiently she wiped them away with the back of her hand.

"I can't endure it!" she declared rebelliously. "I've got to get out of here!"

She went quickly to her dressing room, grabbed up an old brown raincoat and slipped it on over her blue crepe dress, she yanked an old brown felt hat over her blond curls as if she had a grudge against them. She looked in a mirror at the drab little figure reflected there and made a wry face.

She walked along the nearly deserted sidewalks of the boulevard, the fragrant rain beating cool against her hot cheeks, the damp smell of earth pleasant in her nostrils. She slouched through shallow puddles, making mud polka dots on her sheer hose. And she felt new resolution go sailing through her.

She flung up her head and breathed in the spicy fragrance of a magnolia bloom on a shiny-leafed tree. Every fiber of her being now responded to the rhythmic beating of the rain, which was drenching everything on this smart thoroughfare, covering the beautifully landscaped lawns with a veil of purity no artifical sprinklers could imitate.

She paused finally at a busy intersection to wait for the traffic light to change.

A car pulled out of the line and halted beside her.

"Good morning! Like a lift?"

Tug Nash was peering out from the open door of his car. He was bareheaded, and his brown sport coat and matching slacks gave him a kind of unstudied masculine charm. Around his dark eyes now little wrinkles warned her that waiting for women was not in his line.

But she met this with a cool "Thank you—no" as she stared vaguely beyond him.

The light turned green and terrific honking began from cars behind.

Tug scowled, urged quickly, "Please, Dona—we must talk."

Whether it was curiosity that made her change her mind, or her intense desire to tell Tug Nash what she thought of him, Dona did not actually know. But impulsively, she jumped into the car now and slammed the door shut behind her.

She settled into the worn seat with an ironic little smile playing across her features. She gave Tug a sidelong glance of appraisal. She was surprised to find that she had correctly remembered every line of his handsome face.

He was paying no attention to her now. He was giving his entire attention to wedging his car back into line without getting a ticket from the traffic officer up ahead.

With this hazard passed, he made the next turn to the right and came into a quiet street. He parked in front of a vacant lot and turned to her abruptly.

"I don't understand you, Dona. To tell the truth, I felt pretty much cut up last night."

She looked at him in wide-eyed astonishment, her proud little nostrils dilating. "You—felt cut up?" came from her.

"Certainly. How'd you think I'd take it? I didn't let on to Bob Platt, naturally—but it took me a long time to thaw out. You could have come along to the Paradise, you know. De Lane's a bigwig now—but wait till I get a chance to—",

"Tug!" It came from her liltingly eager. "Are you trying to tell me I was invited out to the Paradise last night?"

"Don't stall, darling. Bob Platt said you were entirely disinterested—so I decided you hadn't fallen for me so hard after all. Finally, I gave Miss Platt a—well, a sort of whirl. She's not so bad when you get to know her."

"How — remarkable!" Dona was bristling with indignation. "I wasn't invited to go to the Paradise by Bob Platt or anyone else!"

"Good grief! Do you mean it?"

"It's the truth, Tug. But we'd better forget it. I'm thankful we've thrashed this out. I thought — thought—" She choked up, couldn't continue.

He took a hand off the wheel and laid it on her knee.

"It was a rotten trick—but I get your point. You can't put on a scene with Mrs. Platt's daughter—get fired. But you won't be on that job long, if I can help it, darling."

This announcement fell on her ears like a tenderly sweet melody. She was thoroughly ashamed of herself for her recent doubt of him, but she could find no words to say.

"You're shivering. We'll fix that," he told her now.

He turned on the ignition and began driving swiftly over the slippery pavements. Every now and then the old model coupe skidded on its worn tires but Dona had no sense of fear. The mere presence of this man beside her gave her confidence. They were together—they would sometime be together for always. It was unbelievable. This new happiness had come to her so swiftly it made her fairly dizzy.

Her mind whirled into the future. Of course she and Tug would be very poor. She thought of all she would do for him; the little sacrifices that would be so precious to make for his sake. It would be such a golden poverty that she wouldn't mind it. With his love to sustain her, she'd never long for luxuries. Besides, Tug was smart; he would get places. Then how proud she'd be of him! And he would turn to her and say "Yes, if it hadn't been for the little woman here, I wouldn't be where I am today." Beautiful dreams, beautiful plans.

They were soon swinging up to a drive-in stand. The car stopped jerkily on the drive.

Tug said, "Honey, you're chilled through, you need something hot."

His concern made her breath come faster. Gratefully, she laid a hand on his arm.

"You're the nicest person I ever met," she got out unsteadily, stars in her great blue eyes.

He threw back his broad shoulders and smiled complacently down at her.

"That's the way to talk," he said, then gave a brisk order to the hovering waitress.

A few minutes later, when they were leisurely eating juicy hot dogs and drinking steaming coffee, Tug announced [illegible] Honey, I've a proposition to make. Are you listening?

Dona's hand tightened on her cup. His words had a peculiarly momentous ring.

"Yes," she told him. "Yes—I'm listening."

"You see," he continued, "I've never proposed to a girl before."

Dona's heart pumped fast. Her cheeks were blooming with a new raidance. She met Tug's dark eyes in trancelike adoration.

"You me-mean" she stammered, "You—you love me—you're asking me to marry you?"

"You guessed it. What's the comeback?"

She tried to read the love light in his eyes but his gaze was firmly fixed now on her trembling lips.

CHAPTER FIVE
A Promise

"Yes, Tug—I'll marry you—sometime," Dona promised low.

"Sometime? Long engagements are fatal. I want to marry you right away." He picked up his paper cup and took a long drink.

"But, Tug—how would we manage? Could you support—us?"

"Gee, you're practical. Can't two live cheaper than one? Better yet—we can keep our marriage a secret?"

"Oh."

It came from her flatly. She tried to ignore the edge of disappointment that hurt her. She set her empty paper plate carefully on the window tray. She was filled with an indecision that perplexed her. More than anything else, she wanted to marry this man and she wondered why she hesitated.

"I must have you, honey." he went on. "First thing you know, some guy like De Lane will snatch you up. Then where'll I be?"

"Probably better off than if you were burdened with a wife, Tug. You're ambitious—I'd hate myself if I ruined your career, dear."

"Nonsense! I've got it all planned. If you keep your job while I'm looking around for my big chance, there's nothing to it. And we'd know we really belonged to each other. Isn't that something, sweetheart?"

Abruptly, he honked for the waitress as if he had settled everything.

After the tray had been removed from the window-sill and the waitress paid and tipped, he started the car.

He drove quickly across the street and into a small deserted park. He pulled up beneath a great live oak and shut off the engine.

When his arm went around her, Dona buried her face on his rough tweed shoulder and burst into tears.

He pulled her upright demanding severely, "What on earth are you crying about? You ought to be happy?"

"I—I am happy," she sniffed out, drying her eyes on the handkerchief he had snatched from his coat pocket. "I'm so happy— I can hardly stand it."

He threw back his head and broke into a loud laugh.

"Of all the little sissies! You're turning things upside down. Would a sound beating make you smile? Listen—darling—you're all mixed up. We're engaged—we're going downtown now to get a marriage license. How 'bout it?"

"Oh, Tug—I love you too much to refuse to marry you. It will mean nothing can ever separate us, won't it? There'd be that wonderful bond between us. I'll—I'll try to be a good wife, Tug."

Her face glowed with a beaming sincerely that was conclusive evidence of what was going on in her heart. He quickly bent his dark handsome head and kissed her squarely on her sweet quivering mouth.

Her eyes closed in an effort to keep forever the exquisite soaring gladness that clutched her now at the touch of his warm vibrant lips. But it seemed too big a moment to confine any humane memory and it made her a little afraid.

She came abruptly to herself when he straightened. She said breathlessly, "It must be getting terribly late. Mrs. Platt doesn't know where I am—she'll be furious."

"That won't do. You can't lose your job now."

Quickly they were out of the park and spinning down the street.

Dona let down the window on her side, settled contentedly back in the seat and gazed dreamily out at the passing world. The little breeze turned straggling ends of her blond hair into tiny curls around her hat, making her lovely to look at. Now and then, Tug flung her a quick glance that held all she wanted to see.

It had stopped raining now and sunshine made diamond pools on the pavement; it brightened holly and mistletoe and laurel hanging on the doors and windows of nearly every house they passed.

"Someday Tug and I will have a real home," thought Dona happily. "And a Christmas tree in the living room—turkey for dinner — toys scattered around."

But she said nothing to Tug about these roseate plans that were spinning through her mind. She was too overcome by this new joy of hers to risk blotching it with mere words. She was beginning a glorious adventure, which fate had allotted her in a really generous moment. It filled her with awe and reverence and thankfulness.

Tug was quiet, also. But she knew it was because he hated as much as she did to break the spell they were in.

She nearly wished that they didn't have to keep their marriage a secret. Telling Mrs. Platt about it might work out all right. Of course, she could appreciate Tug's position. He was proud, didn't want his wife to work—which was perfectly silly. Lots of wives worked. Yet whatever Tug wanted, she'd do—naturally.

Tug stopped the car finally before a large white granite building which sprawled over a block or more of the downtown business district.

"The courthouse, darling—where you sign away your liberty. Willing?"

His large dark eyes held her gaze. She nodded soberly, too filled with emotion to reply.

"It'll only take a jiffy," he assured her now. "I'll have you back with old lady Platt before you know it."

She smiled up at him in dazed uncertainty and got out of the car. She found herself walking swiftly toward a revolving door, with Tug's hand firm on her arm.

Soon in a big square room they were signing their names to forms which looked too coldly legal to have any connection with the unbounded ecstacy that was racing through her.

The thin, disillusioned clerk behind a littered desk saw the sparkling light in Dona's blue eyes, the delicate flush on her fair cheeks and wondered for the millionth time why so many people got so keyed up when they barged in here to answer his questions. This girl, with those blond curls so cunning around her hat, was a pretty one. He hoped she'd be happy. So many of them weren't these days. They came back after a while to those other rooms in this building where judges had to listen to a lot of tales of love grown cold.

But fortunately, Dona had no inkling of the clerk's soliloquizing. She left him and his drab surroundings with a happy, relieved sigh, her hand clinging tightly to Tug's. On her face was that hint of ethereal promise worn by so many brides, and deep in her heart was as much faith and courage and hope as any bride had ever had.

"First bridge safely crossed," Tug said, when he and Dona were walking briskly toward the street door. "Not such an ordeal, was it, honey? Marriage license safe in my pocket—everything set. We can be married in three days."

He gave her hand a tender squeeze, then released it as they came out into the sunshine.

He was walking so fast now that she had to skip a step to keep up with him.

"I'm glad we don't have to go through that again," she told him, a little shakily. "That place was gloomy—it gave me the creeps."

His thick dark brows lifted questioningly. "How could you feel like that, honey—when I'm with you?"

"Oh, so much can happen, Tug! Marriage seems so—so eternal. A minister says a few words and the ceremony's over with. Yet marriage is big and solemn—a kind of sacred trust. Perhaps we shouldn't go into it too lightly—too hastily, Tug."

He threw her a quick sidelong glance, grasped her roughly and brought her to an abrupt halt.

"I'm not going to have you think it over—deciding against me," he blurted out hotly.

She smiled gently up at this persuasive man who already, without much effort, had rushed her into a big moment back there in the courthouse. Perhaps she had lost her head but it was well worth it now, she thought. This tall strong creature all agitation, afraid he would lose her! She swelled with pride. If he only knew what small chance there was of his ever losing her!

"I've given my promise, dear—you can rely upon it," she told him levelly.

The smile she loved immediately brightened his good-looking face. He pushed a lock of wavy black hair back from his brooding brown eyes.

"That settles it then. I didn't mean to go off the handle. Sorry, honey. Everything's okie doke now, isn't it?"

"Yes," she told him, on an edge of worry over keeping their coming marriage a secret.

Later, on the Platt drive, he clasped her hands firmly in his, and his dark eyes intently searched her face. There was that hypnotic gleam in them again which convinced her of his love. It nearly drove away the little doubt that was trying to creep into her mind.

V for VICTORY . . . —

The new "VICTORY POLICY" meets war-time needs!

Whatever your job, whatever your income, you should be investing regularly in War Savings Certificates. Yet your family needs adequate protection, too!

The new "Victory Policy" developed by The Mutual Life of Canada enables you to meet both these essential needs. Premiums are exceedingly low for a fixed period of years, while you are investing in War Savings Certificates. And even at the end of this period, when the rate is adjusted, the premium is still lower than you would normally pay. You will be able to use the proceeds of your War Savings Certificates as they mature to pay the premiums.

Permanent protection

The "Victory Policy" is a permanent plan of life insurance. It has been specially prepared to meet your immediate needs and to provide future protection as well. The new "Victory Policy" is available to every adult who is insurable . . . and is especially attractive to men and women with modest incomes.

Ask your nearest Mutual Life representative for complete details of this plan. Or write to The Mutual Life of Canada, Waterloo, Ont.

Shooting at Vichy, Police Fire on Demonstrators

16 Arrests Are Made at La Gare St. Lazare, Main Railway Station

Vichy, Aug. 14—(AP) — Paris newspapers said today that police fired on demonstrators yesterday at Porte St. Denis, wounding some of them and that 16 others were arrested at the Gare St. Lazare, a main railroad station.

The newspaper Aujourdhui asserted those involved were "solely Jews and foreigners."

(A German broadcast, heard in New York, claimed Communists provoked the incident and that all arrested persons were Jews.)

The Gare St. Lazare, scene of the first of the demonstrations, is the most important station serving workers' suburbs of Paris.

This was followed by skirmishes between demonstrators and police at the Porte St. Denis, which is on the boundary between Paris proper and the workers' suburb of St. Denis and before the war was a Communist stronghold.

(These demonstrations followed by one day the speech from Vichy of Marshal Petain envisaging permanent collaboration with Germany and lining France up ideologically against Russia.)

Fascists Boast Axis Continues On Its Course

Rome, Aug. 15—(AP) — Fascist circles said that the joint Churchill-Roosevelt declaration Thursday would fail to run the Axis countries off their courses.

Fascists had forecast that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt had agreed on a war plan before its announcement. The authoritative editor Virginio Gayda, anticipating such an announcement, said United States and Britain were "hatching new plots in the form of oratorical manifestations and strategems toward this or that part of the globe in the vain hope of halting or deviating the fatal course of war."

The meeting, Gayda said in his Giornale D'Italia, was "proof of Anglo-Saxon worry, bewilderment and disorderly action." He noted that it took place at a time when the Russian situation was "critical" and when tension was growing worse between Japan and the United States and Britain.

"Whatever is said and done," said Gayda, "the war of the Axis, like that of Japan, will continue straight ahead on its course."

German Reaction To War Aims Statement

Berlin, Aug. 14 (AP)—The first authorized German reaction to the war aims statement of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was that the whole declaration was a "propaganda bluff."

"Churchill and Roosevelt are unfortunate in their declaration being made at a time when every hour brings new reports of impressive successes for German arms in the Ukraine," one Nazi spokesman asserted.

Previously, there had been only the brief report of D.N.B. the German news agency, that the United States President and British Prime Minister had met and issued their joint statement.

D.N.B. later said Roosevelt and Churchill had agreed on eight-point war aim statement but it did not give the points. It said the high spot was "disarmament of the Axis powers."

Another objective, the agency told German readers, is that after "final destruction of Nazi tyranny" a permanent system of general security should be established.

It mentioned economic co-operation but gave no details.

RACE HORSE DESTROYED

Toronto, Aug. 15—(CP)—Harry Giddings, owner of Undisturbed, said it had been necessary to destroy the three-year-old runner in this year's King's Plate event.

Giddings said an examination showed the animal's heart was dilated to three times normal on one side but the other was withered, subnormal, apparently impeding its own development by a form of growth.

Giddings said he refused $8,000 for Undisturbed last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rowe entertained for a few days, Mr. and Mrs Griggs of Manitoba.

Mrs. Frank Wessel is entertaining Mrs. Bruce Ellis, who is progressing favorably.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dorland attended the wedding of their niece, Miss Evelyn Kilbanks of Belleville.

A large crowd attended the W.M.S. on Tuesday afternoon last week which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Terrill.

Miss Marion Nelson is entertaining Miss Hazel Thomson, Queensboro, for a few days.

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. R. Delve have returned from their visit among friends at Toronto and Oshawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robson of Toronto were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

Mr. and Mrs Robert Booth of Ottawa were guests of Rev. S. A York and Frances during the week-end, celebrating their recent marriage.

Yankees Swing From Heels Like Bombers of Old Defeating Washington in Double Bill

Marius Russo and Atley Donald Were Winning Hurlers

CHICAGO WINS PAIR

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press, Sport Writer)

The musical comedy currently occupying the stage of the National League theatre has taken the spotlight away from New York Yankees and the rest of the American League in the last couple of weeks.

They took advantage of the recent diversion of most fans' attention to rest and relax just like ordinary folks do during the heat of August.

Yesterday, while the Dodgers and Cardinals had an open date and people were looking, the Yankees buckled down to duty again and walloped Washington Senators in a doubleheader, 7-0 and 10-3, to add another full game to their 14 1-2 game lead.

Lefty Marius Russo pitched three-hit ball for the shutout and Atley Donald followed with a six-hitter. Charley Keller hit his 29th home run and drove in five runs. Joe DiMaggio made four hits, including two triples. Johnny Sturm shook up the second game with a home run, a triple and a single.

Battle to Draw

Cleveland Indians, meanwhile, battled 10 innings to a 3-3 tie with the last-place St. Louis Browns. The game was delayed an hour and 20 minutes in the middle by rain and Bob Feller was called in to work after the storm, but even his magic presence couldn't bring victory.

The third-place Boston Red Sox divided a batting-practice doubleheader with Philadelphia Athletics. The two teams totalled 62 hits, including six home runs, two triples and 10 doubles, off 11 pitchers.

Jimmie Foxx returned to action and won the first game for Boston 11-8, with a three-run homer in the 11th inning. In the second game the A's won 10-8 with two lusty four-run rallies.

White Sox Win Twin Bill

Chicago White Sox swept their doubleheader from Detroit Tigers 3-1 and 3-0 in a pair of fine pitching duels. Lefty Thornton Lee captured his 15th victory in the first game and pitched shutout ball after the first inning. Johnny Humphries held the Tigers to six hits in the nightcap while the Sox made eight.

Only two games were played in the National League.

Chicago Cubs sent Pittsburgh Pirates staggering to their fourth straight defeat 6-2.

Fiddler Bill McGee, the former Cardinal worthy who had made 15 appearances for the Giants this year without ever attaining a victory, finally broke into the victory column as New York beat Boston Braves 4-3.

O. B. A. REJECTS CITIES' REQUEST

Oshawa and Peterborough Will Not Play in Senior Playdowns

Hamilton Ont., Aug. 15 (CP) — Two teams from the Niagara district league and one each from the Intercounty and Windsor circuits will compete in a round-robin tournament for the Ontario senior baseball title this season. A request from Peterborough and Oshawa interests for permission to enter a team representative of both cities was rejected by the Ontario Baseball Association sub-committee at a meeting here last night.

Niagara earned the privilege of sending two teams into the Provincial finals by beating the other leagues in the toss of a coin. The series will start Sept. 6.

West Lorne was granted a bye into the Intermediate "B" playdowns and Dresden a bye into the Junior "B" playoffs.

Start of the playdowns in the Intermediate "A" and "B" series was tentatively set for Aug. 30 with the Senior "B" playdowns to open Sept. 6.

Like Old Man River

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 15 (CP)—Ageless John Pesek is still rolling along on the grunt-and-groan circuit. The fabulous wrestler, turkey-raiser and greyhound racer refuses to become legend, despite his years. His retinue declares unequivocally that Pesek is 46 years old. They've been saying as much, in fact, for the past three years.

Pesek had been packing them in at least 10 years when he took on Joe Stecher for what the sports writers termed the world's title" in an Omaha ring. That was 21 years ago. Still agile and formidable, he paired off against Bronko Nagurski, the ex-Minnesota university gridder, recently, huffed and puffed 60 minutes to a draw with that husky.

With rare forethought, Pesek declines to become specific about his age, thus preserving an ever available topic for speculation.

Aussie Wins Road Race

Winnipeg, Aug. 15 (CP)—Gerald Backhouse, member of the 1936 Australian Olympic team and now a student at the No. 3 Wireless Training school here, won the three-mile Tribune trophy road race here while two other airmen were runners-up.

Backhouse, a member of the Royal Australian Air Force, handily beat C. R. McMullin of Arnprior, Ont., and Dan Lorch, of St. Vital, Man., who finished second and third. Only two others of the 11 starters finished the race, run during a hot, sultry day.

Backhouse won a heat, finished second in a semi-final heat and sixth in the 800 metres final in the 1936 Olympics.

WHIRLY ENJOYS AN EARLY BREAKFAST

Musings of a turf aristocrat. "Mmmm! Carrots for breakfast. These stablehands certainly know their oats. Good for my complexion, though. Want to look my best for the Travers this Saturday. Some of the best horses are going to be there". The turf aristocrat is none other than the redoubtable Whirlaway, one of the champ three-year-olds who meets the topnotchers at Saratoga in the historic Travers.

OTTAWA BOWLERS WIN THE DOUBLES

Ontario Lawn Bowling Tourney at Toronto is Completed

Toronto, Aug. 15—(CP)—Bowlers from Ottawa and Markham took top honors on the final day of the four-day Ontario Lawn Bowling Tournament yesterday. McKenzie and Vessie, of Ottawa, won the Townsend-Clark Trophy, principal doubles competition, defeating Wheler and Baillie of Toronto Balmy Beach. R. MacDonald, of Markham, captured the Rice Trophy, main Singles Championship, from Sam Matthews of Toronto St. Matthews.

Toronto bowlers scored victories in both the secondary awards. Davis and Taylor, from High Park edged Scott and Hood, of Norway Park, in a close contest for the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie Doubles Trophy, and W. Fenton of Runnymede won the Roden Singles Trophy.

Six of the nine championships at stake in the tournament fell to out-of-town rinks. London Elmwoods won the Eaton Gold Trophy, main rinks event, and London Thistles won the Ontario trophy. The Toronto Cup went to Niagara Falls, N.Y., and the Hamilton Argyles took the consolation award. The Ottawa and Markham representatives completed the parade for the visitors.

SENIOR O.R.F.U. AGAIN REVIVED WITH 3 STARTERS

Harold Bailey, President of C.R.U., Man Behind the Scheme

Toronto, August 15 (CP)—For downright doggedness one has to hand the palm to Harold Bailey, long-time secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Union and President this year of the Canadian Rugby Union.

Bailey, a giant lineman in his playing days, has once again resurrected the apparently dormant senior series in the O.R.F.U. and promises that the venerable circuit will have a worthy representative in the Eastern Canada play-offs.

Too many football fans, the blow suffered by the loss of Toronto Balmy Beach was enough to put the circuit—beset for many years by lack of sufficient teams—away for good. Beaches joined Toronto Argos, Ottawa and Montreal in a new set-up recently.

Bailey rustled even harder after this development and last night was able to announce the senior series will continue with Toronto Oakwood Indians, Kitchener-Waterloo and Hamilton Alerts three sure starters. He also held out the possibility of a fourth club competing to round out the group.

At the same time the hard-working secretary announced the league had a new president—Frank E. Lennard, former member of Parliament for Wentworth. Mr. Lennard succeeds Floyd E. Muirhead who has enlisted in the Canadian army. He will hold office only while Mr. Muirhead or the latter's predecessors, Flt.-Lt. Rev. M. E. Lynch or Maurice Chilton are on Active Service.

Oakwood Indians and Kitchener-Waterloo have both been represented in the intermediate series in other years. Kitchener captured the intermediate honors last season and will be further strengthened this year by the acquisition of a number of players from the Ontario Agricultural College's Intercollegiate intermediate champions.

Ted Williams Says Luck Keeping Him at the Top

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (AP)—Boston's cocky Ted Williams isn't at all surprised he's leading the Major League hitters with a gaudy .408. In fact, he's a little disappointed his average isn't heavier.

But now that the Red Sox shrinking violet is on his way, he wants the baseball public to know there's no question about him winding up the American League as the circuit's first player in 18 years to top the .400 mark.

"Sure I will," roared the fly chaser as he sprawled on a dressing room table after yesterday's Sox-Athletics doubleheader. "It's going to be a cinch. All it takes is luck, confidence and good hitting—and Boy, I've got all three."

Clouting basehits at a .400 clip is really very simple, to hear Ted tell it, even though .327 and .344 is the best he's been able to do in his two previous years in the majors.

"You've gotta have luck," declared the 22-year-old thin man, rapping on the side of the table.

"And I've got my share of confidence. Everytime I go up to bat I feel like a million dollars. When a curve ball comes down at me—Wham! I lay into it."

TORONTO LEAFS DEFEAT BISONS

Hutchinson, After His 23rd Victory, Runs Afoul of Six-Hit Splurge in Sixth

(By The Associated Press)

Newark Bears, who in their front-running International League race once could boast they hadn't lost a doubleheader, now are having their troubles winning them.

They looked as if they might be on their way last night, when they won the opener from Jersey City's Little Giants 3-2, and then sent George Washburn, who had won four of his last five starts, after the nightcap.

But the Jerseys discovered that, for this time at least, Washburn was their dish, and they won 7-4.

Buffalo Bisons sent Freddie Hutchinson after his 23rd victory of the year at Toronto, but the $75,000 prize package ran afoul of a six-hit sixth inning by the Leafs and came out on the wrong end of a 4-1 score.

Montreal's home-run hitting Jack Graham came through with his specialty with a man on base this time, to carry the Royals to a 7-6 decision over Rochester Redwings.

Baltimore Orioles and Syracuse Chiefs broke even for the night, the Chiefs taking the first game 5-1 and Baltimore the second 3-2.

Connie Banks On Farm Clubs

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (CP)—Rookies helped so much in the Athletics' drive toward the American league's top four that Connie Mack is lining up a new crop of youngsters for 1942—and they're coming from the A's farm clubs.

The 78-year-old pilot is enthusiastic about his current team—the first late season top flighter he's had in eight years—but he gets more excited about next year's prospects.

This might be called the first season in which the Athletics have gone seriously into the farm business.

"Father never believed in farm clubs before," explains Earle Mack, Connie's son and heir-apparent to Athletics. "Now he's convinced you have to have them to get the ballplayers. You can't find them anywhere else."

To that end the house of Mack has taken over a couple more minor league teams and they also have working agreements with Toronto of the International and Williamsport of the Eastern.

The other minor league clubs in the possession of the Athletics are Newport News in the Virginia league and Federalsburg in the Eastern Shore league, as well as Wilmington of the Inter-state circuit.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Regardless as to whether Corby's A.C. win at Point Anne tonight and force a seventh and final game for the city championship on Saturday, Messrs. Bawden and Barriage had better take stock of affairs before the local nine launch upon their quest of an Intermediate "A" championship in the O.A.S.A. The waters on which the Corby ship have been sailing of a late date haven't been any too placid, but there is nothing wrong that a little heart-to-heart talk, with all playing personnel taking part, could not remedy. Corby's have a potentially strong team, with such players as the Bawdens, Henn, the Barriage boys (all three of 'em), Kiser, Ronsky, Tuttle, Pointer, Harris and maybe others having had a world of O.A.S.A. play-off experience behind them. Such experience is invaluable during the provincial playdowns, as it is the player wth the knowledge of clutch playing who usually delivers in the moneyed classics, which opens with Trenton here on Monday. And then who was it once said: "United we stand, divided we fall?"

A football coach in the South had a gridiron prospect who was troubled by defective teeth. The 'coach paid for dental treatment' that fixed the young gent in fine shape. It was a kindly act and wouldn't do the football team any harm. Or so the coach thought. But, with his teeth repaired, the athlete went off and enlisted in the Army Air Corps. He had been there before and had been rejected on account of defective teeth. Probably the coach will now knock some of the teeth out of his surviving gridiron prospects to make sure that they will be on hand for early fall practice.

New York Times John Keiran tells this one: "A story from Camp Shelby, Miss., carried the information that Private Zeke Bonura, a recent and large recruit from the baseball field, played in a camp ball game and evoked great enthusiasm by hitting a home run. Nothing was said about Zeke's fielding, probably because that never did evoke any great enthusiasm. However, his fielding isn't so bad that the Army will give him his unconditional release."

In all probability "Doc" Empson's Latta nine will become 1941 custodians of the W. E. Tummon Cup, emblematic to the championship of the South Hastings League, along about dusk tonight. The Latta Club won the first two games of the S.H.L. finals and have to but take their home stand tonight to win over Cannifton in a best-in-five final series. The irony of the series, however, is the fact that Skipper Empson led the Cannifton squad to a league title last year and now seems destined to repeat this accomplishment at the helm of the Latta nine. Incidentally Skipper Empson hopes to select an all-star team from the S.H.L. and enter the club into the Intermediate O.B.A. provincial playdowns.

Once they were known as the seven little Seabiscuits, but now they have names of their own. The first seven colts sired by the retired leading money winner of turf are called Sea Convoy, Sea Skipper, Sea Patrol, Sea Knight, Sea Frolic, Sea Mite and Sea Belle. The last three are fillies.

Do you remember when Paul Dean's attempt to make a comeback for St. Louis Cardinals ended in failure two years ago tonight when the National Baseball League Club announced his release to Columbus of the American Association? Paul since has come back again, playing this season with New York Giants.

THIS AND THAT—Sticking to his guns that he won't play professional football, Tommy Harmon, Michigan's All-American of last year and movie star of this summer, will help Harry Wismer, veteran Detroit football announcer broadcast the home games played by the University of Michigan this fall. . . Always honest, Joe Louis reckons as how he won't have nearly so much trouble toppling over Lou Nova in their September bout in New York as he did convincing Billy Conn that he was still the heavyweight champion of the world. . . . Incidentally, Louis is still insisting that he has no thoughts of retiring within the next year. . . . But we shall see what we shall see.

Joe Louis says he can't afford to pay his wife $200.00 a week separation allowance. Mrs. Louis stated in a Chicago court yesterday that Louis had an annual income of nearly a half a million dollars. "After the taxman gets through with me I haven't got much over $50,000.00 left," admitted Joe. Joe's lawyers say Mrs. Louis is getting $100.00 a week alimony, plus $360.00 a month from apartment rents, which ain't exactly hay.

Dit Clapper played for the Toronto Maple Leafs, but it wasn't at hockey. Aubrey played softball for the Leafs in a war service benefit game in Toronto last night. Clapper made two hits for the Leafs as they won 6-3.

Sugar Plantations Throughout Canada

Sugar plantations are not necessarily limited to the regions of the south for Canada had 80,000 acres of them in 1940. Forty thousand of these acres were in Ontario, 24,000 in Alberta and 16,000 in Manitoba which indicates a fairly wide distribution. The acreage is no less in 1941 and it is quite possible that the plantations will extend into Quebec province by 1942. The essential difference between Canadian sugar plantations and those of the south is the substitution in Canada of the sugar beet for the sugar cane, but each produces identically the same kind of sugar, states P. Dimmock, Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

A record yield of 825,344 tons of sugar beets was harvested in Canada last fall, and since each ton produces nearly 300 pounds of refined sugar this meant a total production of 213,602,511 pounds of refined sugar, or 18.5 per cent of Canada's refined sugar production. If conditions for the 1941 crop continue favorable, this production should at least be maintained if not increased.

The infant of the sugar beet industry is the Manitoba acreage. While small acreages were grown in that province in previous years, large scale production began only in 1940 when a beet sugar factory was erected near Winnipeg to handle the crop. Alberta's sugar plantations are distinctive from the others in at least one respect and that is their location on irrigated land. Two factories are equipped to handle the beets, one at Raymond and the other at Picture Butte. Ontario has three factories located at Toronto, Chatham and Wallaceburg, respectively, and these handle the crop from the extensive plantations which occur throughout the counties of Kent, Lambton, Essex, Elgin and Middlesex.

How Pennies Count

Britain has what is called the Red Cross Penny-a-Week Fund and Lord Southwood, chairman of the organization, writes the London papers to say that collection a month ago had passed £20,000 a week. "This means", he writes, "that more than 5,000,000 workers are now voluntarily and regularly donating their pennies each week to the splendid work of the Red Cross.

Lord Southwood adds:

"This seems to me an outstanding example of what can be achieved in these difficult times through the co-operation of employers and workers. It is a spontaneous national expression of good will and good fellowship."

The pennies everybody can spare add up to more than a million pounds a year for the noble work of the British Red Cross. It is a lesson in both patriotism and organization.—Ottawa Journal.

Fish for the RAF

(London Calling)

As far back as the oldest stomach in a desert squadron of the R.A.F. could remember, it had had nothing in the way of food that had not came out of a tin. But, close at hand, the blue Mediterranean lapped the sands of the North African coast. With a sudden flash of insight, one or two of the more astute minds grasped the fact that this blue water, Mussolini's very own Mare Nostrum, could solve the problem of gastronomic monotony.

They got the lines, made hooks, opened tins for bait and fished assiduously, with watering teeth, for hours on end. The fish sniffed at the bait, sneered, and swarm off.

It was, therefore, somewhat tough on the fish that an R.A.F. V.R. Officer, a one-time Kenya gold miner, was working nearby, blasting trenches out of the rock with H. E. "Fish?" he said, "I'll get you some fish."

Next day he was seen walking down the beach with a number of beer bottles in his hand and a posse of stout swimmers at his heels. The bottles contained H.E. and fuses. Shortly afterwards there was a dull rumble, the sea heaved slightly, the swimmers plunged in and returned with shoals of stunned fish in their arms.

There was fresh fish for everybody that night. The toast in the Mess was: "To the greatest fisherman the R.A.F. has ever known."

Temperature Vital In Egg Production

Possibly the most important factor in conserving egg quality is temperature, states Bulletin 57 of the War Time Production Series, issued by the Agricultural Supply Board and entitled "Conservation of Egg Quality," which is available on request to Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture. The fact that in fertile egg, germinal development starts at about 68 degrees F. makes it seem logical that eggs should be held below this temperature. In fact, a holding temperature of 65 degrees or lower would appear desirable.

Tests carried out at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, definitely showed that, if eggs of similar quality were divided into two groups the one held at 50 degrees F., while the other group was kept at 70 degrees, there was a marked difference in quality in a very short time. The eggs held at 50 degrees showed better cooking quality at the end of ten days than the eggs held at 70 degrees did at the end of 24 hours.

The white of eggs very quickly becomes watery at the higher, or so-called summer temperatures. It is perhaps just as important that the holding temperature should not be too low. For example, eggs held at a temperature of 50 degrees or lower, if brought out into summer temperatures of 70 degrees or higher, will sweat severely and spoil quickly. The best holding temperature is possibly 60 to 65 degrees. In no case should the holding temperature go below 55 degrees, especially from April 1 to October 15.

Various types of special coolers have been devised with varying measures of success from the standpoints of economy and efficiency. However, as most farm cellars can provide temperatures of from 60 to 65 degrees F.—the recommended range—the cellars would appear to offer the most logical place for storage. It would of course be vitally important that the cellar permit of good ventilation and that it be free from strong odours. The type of cooling is not so important as the fact that eggs be kept at the proper temperatures and under conditions that would not affect their quality adversely.

Production Of Sugar In Dominion

The production of all kinds of sugar in Canada in 1940 amounted to 1,156,807,190 pounds, of which 943,204,679 pounds were made from cane sugar and 213,602,511 pounds from beets. Compared with 1939 the production of beet sugar increased by 44,282,168 pounds mainly through the opening of a new sugar producing plant in Manitoba, and cane sugar declined by 44,061,812 pounds. Granulated sugar comprised over 88 per cent of the total sugar produced. At present, the percentage of beet sugar to the total produced stands at 18.5, the highes since the inspection of the annual census of manufacturers in 1917.

The refineries operating in Canada in 1940 were as follows: Nova Scotia, 1; New Brunswick 1; Quebec, 2; Ontario, 3; Manitoba, 1; Alberta, 2; and British Columbia, 1. These eleven refineries in 1940 reported a capital investment of $42,966,073 and a gross value of production of $57,274,122.

AT THE BELLE

"The Bride Came C.O.D."

It's a laugh hit at the Belle theatre tonight! Living up to the intriguing promise of its title and exciting star combination, "The Bride Came C.O.D." with James Cagney and Bette Davis, easily walks away with top comedy honors.

The two stars have pooled their considerable talents to hilarious entertainment. Cagney, who had some practice in his recent hit "Strawberry Blonde," approaches his comedy role with an effortless savoir faire that is a joy to behold. As for Miss Davis, playing her first light role in several years, she proves that comedy is just as much her forte as drama.

A Pete Smith specialty in technicolor, and "Wings of Steel" an unusual and entertaining technicolor film precede the feature.

Marx Bros. "The Big Store"

Marking their eleventh picture in eleven years of Hollywood stardom, the madcap Marx Brothers invade the Belle theatre next as private detectives in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Store." With five musical numbers interspersed in the wild Marxian antics, critics hail this latest as on a par with "Cocoanuts", "Animal Crackers" and "A Night at the Opera," previously considered their outstanding films.

As in each of their previous 'one-a-year" efforts, "The Big Store" presents the culmination of almost twelve months' work. Since completing their last picture, the Marxes have been working eight hours and more daily, writing and re-writing gags, routines and planning musical numbers. Because of the maximum preparation which they have given each picture, they never have been able to do more than one a year.

Tony Martin joins the Marxes to carry the romantic lead opposite Virginia Grey and also sings two hit songs. Harpo and Chico provide their traditional high-lights at the harp and piano, while Groucho gives out with comic singing and dancing during a novelty number. Virginia O'Brien, frozen-faced torch singer, also contributes during the latter.

"Forbidden Passage" is the title of the latest of the Crime Does Not Pay stories to be presented on the same program with "Goose Goes South," a color fun cartoon and the Belle latest World News Events. The closing chapter of "Winners of the West" serial will be presented Saturday Matinee.

How to Get Rid of ATHLETE'S FOOT

If you want the quick, sure way to clean up a case of Athlete's Foot, on either the hands or the feet, go to J. S. McKeown's and get a bottle of Cortisol. The first application will stop the itching and burning and a few days' use will completely kill the germ causing the infection. Easy and pleasant to use, not expensive. Cortisol must please you or your money back. A day or two will convince you and we take all the risk because we know what Cortisol will do. Try it today.

Irene Rich, Charles Bickford and June Carlson in "Queen of the Yukon," the picturization of Jack London's best-selling novel of gold rush days, now at the Capitol. A comedy, "Double Date," with Una Merkel and Edmund Lowe is shown on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Queen of The Yukon"

A powerful drama of man's struggle to gain gold in the Alaska wilderness, is Monogram's thrilling Jack London story, "Queen of The Yukon," now at the Capitol Theatre.

Sadie Martin is "Queen of the Yukon," as she travels up and down the river in her sternwheeler, carrying the prospectors to and from their claims. Although there is gambling in the big salon, Sadie is always careful to see that none of the boys gamble more than he can afford to lose. They regard her as their friend, and look to her for advice.

Sadie and Ace, her he-man helper, have had many successful seasons aboard the "Queen," when John Thorne enters the scene. He wants to buy the boat, and thus control the only fast means of communication with the Inland Empire, forcing the miners to pay any price he asks for transportation.

Sadie refuses to sell until she finds out that her daughter Helen who has been away at school, is coming to Alaska. Rather than have her daughter find out she is running a gambling ship, Sadie decides to sell out to Thorne.

Despite this precaution, Helen does find out, and considers her mother's life most exciting. Other complications beset Sadie, however, when she learns from the miners that Thorne, through a legal technicality, is about to jump their claims.

A struggle between Sadie, Ace and the ruthless Thorne results, with some very clever strategy displayed by both sides. Thorne confesses in the end, and the miners are allowed to keep their property.

Irene Rich as the intrepid Sadie Martin, and Charles Bickford as Ace give delightful portrayals. Bickford adds to his stature in this new role of a strong silent he-man while Miss Rich proves herself capable of playing a character role with the best of the screen actresses.

June Carlson as the young impressionable Helen, gives a promise of many fine portrayals to come. Cast opposite her, Dave O'Brien will again flutter all feminine hearts.

Adding a rollicking touch to the whole, are those old screen favorites, George Cleveland and Guy Usher, two of the miners who rely on Sadie.

"Double Date"

What happens when two young moderns try to dictate the love interests of their elders provides the amusing romantic tangle involved in Universal's "Double Date," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, with Edmund Lowe, Una Merkel, Peggy Moran and Rand Brooks enacting the comedy foursome.

Glenn Tryon, former comedy star, directed the gay picture and Joseph G. Sanford was the associate producer.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Three Loves Has Nancy"

Strangely enough, Janet Gaynor, appearing next week on the McCarthy Theatre screen with Robert Montgomery in "Three Loves Has Nancy" never ever dreamed that she could ever become a motion picture star.

The combined efforts of her family were necessary to get her to make her first call at a studio casting office, and the rebuffs she received in her first weeks so thoroughly disheartened her that she renounced motion picture work "forever" and instead took a stenographic course in a Hollywood business college.

"We were living in San Francisco when I finished high school", Miss Gaynor related in an interview on the set of her latest picture. "I had done a little entertaining at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station near Chicago during the war and had appeared in one or two amateur shows. But it never occurred to me to think of acting as a career until my stepfather began talking about it."

Personally, she confessed, her childhood idea was that she would become either a teacher or a lawyer. At one time she intended to enroll in a teacher's college. That was just after she graduated from Polytechnic High School in San Francisco. Funds were none too plentiful, so instead she went to work in a smart shoe store in the Union Square district, where she wrapped packages until she became a clerk.

"The family never stopped talking pictures", Miss Gaynor laughed, "and eventually, much against my will, I found myself in Hollywood trudging from studio to studio with the rest of the extras".

She won a few extra parts, then "bits" and finally small speaking parts. Suddenly she emerged as the overnight sensation of "Seventh Heaven". Since then she has been one of the leading stars of filmland.

ALMOST A TWIN KILLING

It looked like a double play when the Brooklyn Dodgers' Pee Wee Reese nabbed Shortstop Miller of the Boston Braves at second on Moore's roller and whipped to First Baseman Camilli to catch Pinch-Hitter Moore. But the Bostonian beat the peg and the Braves went ahead to beat the Dodgers 8-7 in their own park.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, saying, The point is, Willyum, are the old things really the best, or do we merely hang on to the tried and the true because of an old fashion fear of the new and the modern?

It's the old, old pull between conservation and radicalism, with the taxpayers squeezed in the middle, pop said. Shall we break away or shall we stay put, even though our comfortable shelter is only made of the walls of a rut? he said, and ma said, That's what I mean, Willyum, that's just the point. I mean why should we tear down all the solid good of the passed in our haste to get at a few glittering modern improvements wich may only prove to be an empty passing shell? she said.

That's the thorn in a nutshell, pop said, and ma said, But on the other hand nothing is worse than to blindly get set in your ways just from the irresistible force of habit, when the fallward march of progress is knocking on your very doorstep.

It's a problem, pop said. Perhaps the best way is to bend a cautious ear to the new and at the same time slow up sufficiently to follow the leisurely but sure footsteps of the old, he said, and ma said, That's what I've decided. After all, we've seen Ronnell Ronnell and Viola Latour together in so many pictures, so perhaps we ought to go to the Narcississ this evening and see this new team that's getting so much publiicty, I mean Tyler Force and Landria Pond in Drifters, she said.

Yee gods, I'm settled for the night, I've got both my slippers on, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum you sh[illegible] long ago if you're going to take any such attitude instead of sitting there calmly allowing me to waste that long speech. The idea, I mean I'll get your shoes for you, she said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Industrial and Mining Stocks today weakened to show group index losses of .10 to .37 by noon. Turnover was fair at 122,000 shares for the first three hours.

An advance of 20 cents to $1.80 was registered by O'Brien in active trading and Teck Hughes gained 15 cents to $2.90. Minor losses appeared for several secondary golds, including East Malartic, McKenzie, Chesterville, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Malartic gold fields. Only minor recessions were showing for the Base Metals. Nickel weakened 1-4 to 30 and Hudson Bay 1-2 to 26.

A gain of 2 points to 73 for Canada Packers was the main change in the Industrial section. Fanny Farmer and Bruck Silk were up and small declines were showing in the steel and senior oil groups.

Bids were firm for the western oils.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Enough selling appeared in today's stock market to stem the mild rally of yesterday which broke the longest stalemate in the history of the exchange.

While a few aircrafts and scattered industrials managed to tack on minor fractions, many leaders wavered at the start. Near the fourth hour there were more minus than plus signs, although weakness was a rarity.

Stocks inclined to give ground included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Great Northern, Sante Fe, Du Pont and Montgomery Ward.

Resistant were United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, Climax Molybdenum, Sears Roebuck and Texas Corp.

Canadian stocks were generally lower. Canadian Pacific and Walkers each were 1-8 of a point lower and Distiller Seagram off 5-8. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

Plane is Made Wholly in Canada Except for Engines

Amherst, N.S., Aug. 15 (CP)—The first training plane of its type made wholly in Canada except for the twin engines was given a successful test flight here last night.

The machine was assembled at the Amherst plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company. The fuselage was constructed here, and the wings were made in the Company's Montreal plant. The power plant came from the United States.

In operation around six months, the Amherst plant turned out its first all-Canadian machine in record time. Prevously, it had been engaged in the assembly of plane parts brought from England.

The type of plane is not being made public.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Aug. 15 (CP)—Price changes were mixed on the Livestock Market here this week, with cattle steady to strong, calves strong to 50 cents higher, hogs steady to 10 cents lower and sheep and lambs steady. There was a liberal supply of cattle with about 500 plain killers and stockers left at the close.

Weighty steers sold at $8.25 to $9.50 with one load of choice 1,300 pound steers at $9.85. Butcher steers and heifers sold at $7.50 to $9. Boners and plain butchers were traded at $5.50 to $7. Butcher cows sold at $5 to $7 with canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.75. Bulls sold at from $5.50 for light bolognas up to $7.25 for tops on butchers. Fed calves sold briskly at $9 to $11. Good stockers were a ready sale at $7.50 to $8.25 but the plainer kind sold slowly downward to $5.50. Milkers and springers were unchanged at $85 to $95 for tops.

Veal calves sold at $12 to $12.50 for choice with occasional tops at $13 and common selling downward to $7.50. Grassers were mostly $6 to $6.50 with a few at $7.

Hogs held a price range on the market of $14.50 to $14.60 dressed while a few sold as low as $14.40 at the plants. Sows were $9.50 to $10 dressed.

Lambs held steady at last week's decline, at $12 for good ewes and wethers with bucks at $10 to $11 and a few culls at $8.50 to $9.50. Sheep were $3 to $5 cwt with some good light ewes at $6.50.

Creamery Solids ¼ Cent Higher

Toronto, Aug. 15—Prices on all grades of creamery butter solids were increased an additional ¼c a pound in trading on a firm Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs closed steady on recent gains.

Though trading was not heavy, light offerings had a slight firming effect on butter. Sales of first grade creamery solids were made early in the day at 37¼c cents a pound, but in later action sales were reported at 37½c.

A slight pick-up in demand tended to firm the egg market, as receipts continued light. All quotations held recent gains. Grades A-large, A-medium and A-pullet closed at 36, 34 and 28 cents a doz. respectively, while the two lower grades sold at 28 and 24 cents a dozen to wholesale dealers.

Largest Convoy Of Aussies At Singapore

Singapore, Aug. 15 — (CP) — Slouch-hatted Australian fighting men marched singing and cheering from the piers of this Gibraltar of the east today after their arrival in the largest convoy to reach Malaya since the war began.

Some of the Imperial reinforcements were transported immediately to posts in the Singapore area and some to other stations on the Malaya Peninsula.

Much of their heavy equipment such as tanks and artillery arrived ahead of them from Britain and Australia.

Watching the disembarkation of these thousands of men were Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Commander-in-Chief of Far East forces, and Maj.-Gen. H. Gordon Bennett, Commander of Australian forces in Malaya.

A spokesman said that with the formidable reinforcements from Britain and ndia which reached here two weeks ago, Marshal Brooke-Popham has an army considered sufficiently numerous and powerful to make any potential invader think not twice but ten times before attempting to strike at the Empire's Far Eastern bulwark.

Fascist and Nazi Reaction to Joint Declaration

Rome, Aug. 15—(AP) — Fascist spokesmen said today they accepted the joint declaration by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt as indicating the president considers the United States already in the war "whatever may be the opinion of the American people and Congress."

They professed to scorn the eight-point declaration as an abbreviated revival of President Wilson's 14-point peace plan and its "errors."

German Reaction

Berlin, Aug. 15—(AP)—The meeting of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt was described today by German spokesmen as "a 100 per cent flop."

The meeting, these sources claimed, gave Germany "the most favorable diplomatic position possible."

"The President of the United States and the British Prime Minister are in a bad situation," they said. "Ever since Sumner Welles formulated ideas concerning a new post-war order including a new League of Nations and British Foreign Secretary Eden replied with a demand for one authoritative power to police Europe, we have noticed a discrepancy between the aims of the two countries, but we didn't dream the divergence was so great as has now been revealed."

These spokesmen claimed it was significant the British kept emphasizing it was President Roosevelt who took the initiative for the meeting.

"It is an old accepted fact that when the battle is won everybody claims the credit but when it is lost one looks for a goat. It would be undignified ever to discuss the Churchill-Roosevelt eight points. We know but one offensive and that is military. We have but one aim and that is the annihilation of the enemy. We have but one task and that is victory. If the so-called democracies want Germany disarmed, let them come and get our arms."

Sources Ask Questions

All Germany, "and indeed all of Europe," these sources said, are interested in an answer by President Roosevelt to the following questions:

"1. Is there to be freedom of the seas for all nations, large or small?

"2. Are you ready to give up your military bases and raze your fortresses?

"3. Will you give up your program of a two-ocean fleet?

"4. Will you and Churchill renounce your monopoly on the raw materials of the earth?

"5. Will you restore their colonies to the peoples of Europe who have the rightful title to them?

"6. Do you propose to revalidate the Monroe Doctrine and do you recognize a Monroe Doctrine for others?

"7. What are you prepared to do against the Bolshevik danger threatening Europe?

"8. Are you prepared to put an end to the blockade war and to strangling economic measures?"

When asked whether the strictures of the Churchill - Roosevelt meeting were to be regarded as criticism of the eight-point program, the spokesmen replied: "No, they are biting scorn."

To the suggestion of one American newspaper that Mr. Roosevelt should be President of the world and Mr. Churchill his Prime Minister, the spokesmen replied: "We can only congratulate."

Nazi Foreign Office Expression

A Foreign Office mouthpiece said the joint declaration had disclosed "openly and brutally their desires for omnipotence."

The organ, the semi-official Deutsche Diplomatsch-Politsche Korrespondenz, described as an "impudent lie" the assertion that the United States and Britain have no territorial aspirations.

"As in the World War, England now aspires to make foreign peoples subject to her which want to be free. As for Roosevelt's policy, it is an important part of his program to acquire economic and military sovereignty, not only in the Western Hemisphere but far beyond it.

"This sovereignty does not bother in the slightest about the wishes of interested peoples."

Possible Rationing Of 'Gas' Seen in U.S. Within 3 Weeks

Washington, Aug. 15 —(AP)— At the height of the vacation season, United States motorists of the eastern seaboard today faced the possibility of gasoline rationing within three weeks.

Interior Secretary Harold Ickes told newsmen flatly it "wouldn't be safe" to say no rationing would be ordered during that time.

"More rigid" measures for oil conservation in the east were imminent, he said, charging "there hasn't been any response at all encouraging" to his pleas for voluntary co-operation by motorists.

Some sources here expected Ickes to propose rationing of gasoline to filling stations rather than issuance of ration cards to motorists. They did not indicate how the service stations would allow their supplies to purchasers.

WOMAN KILLED IN RAID

Nicosia, Cyprus, Aug. 15 (AP) — One woman was killed and 26 persons injured in two air raids yesterday on the British island in the Eastern Mediterranean.

ARTHUR A. PURVIS

Mr. Purvis was particularly fitted for the purchasing mission through experience he gained in the last war as the first purchaser of war supplies for Britain in the United States. A leading salesman and executive in the British Nobel Dynamite Trust Company at the time, he was appointed in 1914 to purchase all available American supplies of acetone, a chemical used for high explosives. He spent $25,000,000 in a quick round-up of the material.

Born in England

After the First Great War, Mr. Purvis acted as representative of the Imperial Chemical Industries in the United States and came to Montreal in 1924 as president of Canadian Explosives Limited: This organization later merged with a number of other concerns as The Canadian Industries, Limited.

Born in London, England, in 1890, Mr. Purvis was orphaned at the age of 13 and began working with the British Transvaal and General Finance Company for $2.50 a week. The company he managed before the war had resources of $50,000,000.

Mr. Purvis is survived by his widow, the former Margaret Jones of Jamestown, N.Y., and a son, Blaikie.

12 Americans Killed

London, Aug. 15 —(CP)— The Royal Air Force Ferry Command announced today that 12 Americans were killed in the plane crash Thursday in which Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British Supply Council in North America, lost his life. In all, 22 persons were killed.

Without giving the initials or United States addresses of all, officials listed the American passengers as:

Capt. Hull (identified in Montreal as Capt. Gerald Hull of Detroit); Capt. Joseph Creighton Mackey, 31, Kansas City; First Officer Errol Wellington Watson, California.

Capt. Dilly, Capt. Earl, Radio Officer Trimble, Capt. Wetzel, Capt. Kerwin, Capt. Anding, Capt. Hamel, Capt. Moffatt, and Capt. Lee.

Officer Watson was the only man taken from the plane alive, and he died in a hospital during the night.

British Version of Crash

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal, chairman of the British Supply Council in North America, was killed yesterday with 21 other persons when an aircraft of the Atlantic Ferry Command crashed while taking off—the second such accident in less than a week.

Eight Canadian and 14 British and United States officers died last Sunday when their plane cracked up a few minutes before Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply, took off in another craft to fly to the sea rendezvous between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Mr. Purvis' death was announced by the Air Ministry, which did not identify the other victims.

It was reported officially the plane caught fire before it left the ground.

Capt. Harold Balfour, under-secretary of State for Air, flew to the scene of the crash this morning.

Later reports gave this version of the crash:

The plane was clear of the field on its takeoff, but suddenly lost altitude. At the edge of the field it ploughed into a raised road, skittered through a fence and burst into flames.

Wreckage was scattered over a considerable area and airmen and soldiers who ran to the scene with fire-fighting apparatus were held off by intense heat and smoke.

RUSSIANS

The Russian withdrawals of the past two days were said to have been the consequence of a previous Nazi offensive which is declared checked now with the Red army intact and the Germans suffering great losses.

Change of Plans seen

The month-long Russian defence of Smolensk, conceded now to have been vacated, was cited by the army organ, Red Star. It said the Germans frequently were forced to take the defensive because of Russian counter-attacks and "this alone shows their calculations of a lightning war suffered defeat and the offensive sweep of German troops is exhausting itself."

Red Star said captured German documents showed there had been a change in plans.

(Authoritative sources in London expressed the opinon that Russian forces in the Ukraine were withdrawing beyond the Dnieper River, the next great defence line beyond the Big River. Although the Germans claimed to hold control of the west bank of the river for several hundreds miles south of Kiev, London and no report that they had crossed.)

While officials denied the German claim that the armies of Marshal Semeon M. Budeney had been encircled, it was admitted that Pervomaisk on the Bug River, 115 miles northwest of Nikolaev, and Bevo, 100 miles northeast of Nikolaev, had been abandoned.

The 14 words of the communique on this aspect of the fighting from the Baltic to the Black Sea said nothing as to where the troops were withdrawing from this area.

However, recent communiques have mentioned fighting in the Uman sector and it is possible the Russians were withdrawing eastward to the Dnieper River or southward down the Bug.

To the eastward of this important corner of the Ukraine with its seaports, river communications and farm land lay even more vital territory and some observers considered that Red troops would fall back on the defence of Dnepropetrovsk and the ore-rich Donets Basin.

An important part of Russia's heavy industry was centred in this sector east of the Dnieper with the river forming a natural defence line.

Officials made no comment about Odessa and Nikolaev which observers expected to be vigorously defended.

The Soviet Information Bureau said the Red Air Force destroyed 74 German planes Wednesday to 27 Russian losses.

Russian warships reported the destruction of a Nazi submarine in the Baltic.

DRIVE LAUNCHED

The first gun in the campaign was fired by the British Broadcasting Corporation, which broadcast the announcement 80 times in 40 languages within 12 hours.

In general, British reaction seemed to be that the declaration was important because of what was left unsaid as because of what was said.

To Keep Axis Guessing

It was taken for granted Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt discussed many things concerning British - American collaboration which did not appear in their statement and that the Axis powers would be kept guessing—just as they have kept the rest of the world guessing after meetings between Hitler and Mussolini.

Commentators said the declaration, variously dubbed "the charter of freedom," "charter of human liberties" and "Atlantic charter," implied recognition by Britain that the United States would sit at the peace table, whether she fought or not.

Editorial comments in the British press included

DAILY MAIL—". . . The meeting . . . is the potent of tremendous events. The octopus of war is spreading its tentacles across the globe. . ."

DAILY TELEGRAPH—. . . "The meeting proclaims the change by which united effort has transformed 3,000 miles of ocean from an abyss dividing us into a means and bond of union—an endless belt of communication and supply."

THE TIMES — "When Mr. Churchill last crossed the Atlantic (in 1931) the world was on the eve of that economic blizzard from which emerged not only Hitler but the 'new deal' devised by Mr. Roosevelt for his own country. This new crossing in the midst of a military blizzard may well accelerate elimination of Hitler and his imitators and a new deal for the world . . ."

NEWS CHRONICLE—"The significance of duality will not be lost upon the world—Allied, neutral or enemy. In Germany the memory of 1918 will be revived and fear of Anglo-American invincibility will add its dark shadow to the thrusting wings of the Royal Air Force over the land of the Third Reich."

HAD ACQUIRED SPIRIT OF NAVY IN FEW WEEKS

Late Earl Day of Belleville Cited by Canada's Navy Minister as Example of Spirit That Will Win War

Somewhere on the Southcoast of England, Aug. 15—(CP)—Canada's Naval Minister, Angus Macdonald, yesterday thrilled British and Canadian naval forces soon to join the ships of the Royal Navy with the story of a young Canadian rating, who did not live to see England, but who died after a fire on H.M.C.S. Otter with the words "There'll Always be a England", on his lips. He identified the youth as Earl Day of Belleville, Ont., rating who died of exposure soon after he was rescued from icy water into which he had fallen from a raft.

As he was dying he murmured the words of the song.

He had acquired, said Mr. MacDonald, in a few short weeks the spirit of the Royal Navy — "a spirit that actuates the people of the Empire, a spirit which will win the war".

Mr. MacDonald spoke in a crowded mess hall after a three-hour tour of naval establishments, where he was shown many aspects of training. He said he was "tremendously impressed".

"Canadians can be assured", he said, "that their lads are receiving the best possible instruction".

The Minister was piped aboard one shore establishment where he was greeted by the captain. At two others the blast of a bugle announced his arrival to officers standing to attention at the entrance.

During the tour he stopped to talk to W. A. E. Sheppard, Toronto, an officer cadet, who is undergoing officer's training after completing sea duty. Sheppard told him he was in the water for an hour after the sinking of the Bonaventure, and the water was "a bit colder" than Lake Ontario, where he used to sail his yacht.

In another school a husky sub-lieutenant put out his hand with the greeting "It's a small world. How are you, Angus?".

He was Hugh Plaxton, Toronto.

INDIAN OFFICERS INSTRUCT BRITISH TROOPS

Two Indian officers who have distinguished themselves in recent operations in Abyssinia, are making a lecture tour among the troops in Northern Ireland and giving interesting details of their experiences. They are Capt. K. L. Atal, Shankhat Hayat Khan, RIGHT, the former was at the Battle of Keren and the capture of Asmara while the latter was for five months a prisoner of the Italians, and after recapture by our troops took part in the Battle of Amba Alagi. His father is premier of the Punjab. SECOND from LEFT, and Capt.

Beaverbrook Wants More U.S. Food, Heavy Bombers and Tanks Soon

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook, who described himself as "the biggest buyer on the cuff you've ever seen," flew in from the historic Roosevelt-Churchill conferences yesterday and immediately began negotiations to obtain more arms and supplies of all kinds for embattled Britain.

"We have had hundreds of millions of dollars worth of benefit under the lend-lease program, but we need more," the dynamic minister of supplies told newspapermen in a rapid-fire interview at the British Embassy.

He named tanks, planes (particularly bombers) and food.

Lord Beaverbrook sat in on the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences at an undisclosed point in the North Atlantic. Immediately afterward he flew on here to talk with William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, and other American officials.

Lend-lease Administrator Harry Hopkins, who recently has held discussions in London and Moscow, was also believed to have participated in the sea conferences, but Lord Beaverbrook would not confirm Hopkins' presence or shed light on any other aspect of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting.

"You've been very generous," Lord Beaverbrook said, sticking exclusively to supply matters. "But we need still more from you. Remember that we are engaged in a terrific conflict with an enemy that is confident, an enemy well organised, an enemy who has been preparing for years to fight.

"If you expect us to do as well as we have done, send us as much as you can and as swiftly as possible, under the generous terms of the lend-lease act."

Planes?

"Yes, we want bombers. We've had wonderful results from your beautiful American bombers. In fact I should say that the best bombers we have came from the United States."

Tanks?

"We have plenty of tank divisions and tank brigades but, despite the fact that we have produced a great many, we haven't got enough tanks. We want many."

Food?

"We're working our men very hard, long hours and on Sunday and they require lots of food. We like and need—bacon and beef and cheese—which our agricultural workers live on—and other food supplies. The British public is feeding much better on your account. You've been very generous. But we need more."

When asked whether Britain expects to win the war in the air Lord Beaverbrook stuck out his jaw, glowered, and exclaimed:

"Bombing from the air didn't beat us!"

Lord Beaverbrook sidestepped a question as to whether Britain needs American man-power with the observation that "Britain needs munitions and food for many men."

As to pilots, the Ontario-born minister of supplies declared that the air training program is "getting on very swiftly" and that the "youth of the Empire is inexhaustible."

All American planes shipped to Britain have now been put to good use, Lord Beaverbrook declared, although there was some delay in utilizing some models because of the necessity of remodelling them to carry British machine-guns.

The question was put to Lord Beaverbrook—formerly Minister for Aircraft—because of rumors that some American planes had been found not suitable for aerial warfare under existing conditions.

During the time he was Minister of Aircraft, Lord Beaverbrook revealed, "we received 2,200 planes from the United States. Many had to be remodelled to carry British machine-guns for our purposes but by the time I left 1,200 had been put in service by the R.A.F. and since then all have been put to good use."

London, Aug. 15 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply who participated in the Churchill-Roosevelt conferences and now is in Washington, flew the Atlantic in a companion plane to that which crashed with a loss of 22 lives Sunday night, it was disclosed last night.

The Beaverbrook plane flew on, landing him and his staff without incident.

Spends Night at Moncton

Moncton, N.B., Aug. 15 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply, visited his old home town of Newcastle, N.B., and later came to Moncton before leaving for Washington.

Lord Beaverbrook was born in Ontario but grew up at Newcastle.

He spent Wednesday night in a Moncton hotel after meeting old friends in Newcastle. He was accompanied by Morris W. Wilson, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, and W. A. Harriman, United States lease-lend co-ordinator in London.

Lord Beaverbrook's friendly personality was manifested at the Moncton hotel, where he appeared as just another guest and chatted genially with those around him.

He visited a motion picture theatre and was instantly recognized. The British statesman was tired, fell asleep during the performance and returned to his hotel before the show ended.

At breakfast yesterday morning he appeared much refreshed. His presence in Moncton was not made public officially.

He declined to see newspapermen and had no statement to make regarding his visit or how long he planned to remain on this side of the Atlantic.

Pray for Peace But Not Through Appeasement

Meridian, Miss., Aug. 15 —(AP)— Promptly at noon a wailing siren halts all activities, even court trials, in this city of 35,000 citizens of all faiths pray for peace.

Mayor Clint Vinson, who proclaimed the prayer period, said he had received letters and other communications from all parts of the country indicating that men and women elsewhere are praying for peace.

"We want peace to come to the world but not through appeasement," Vinson asserted. "The offenders must be crushed. It is for this peace that we pray."

Increases in Prices of 13 Prominent Foodstuffs Show The Average Jump of 54 P.C.

Contrary to the Ottawa estimated 11.9 per cent increase in the cost of living since the declaration of war, a comparison of today's prices and the prices two years ago on thirteen prominent foodstuffs—living's first needs—reveals the average jump of roughly 54 per cent in Toronto and district, says Toronto Globe and Mail. The increases range from 14 per cent on beans to 100 per cent on tomatoes and peaches. Butter is up 70 per cent, eggs 36 per cent, and cheese 77 per cent, while meats have risen from 25 to 50 per cent. In order to keep figures consistent and as near correct as possible, prices as paid by the retail trade only have been considered.

Prices paid for thirteen Canadian grown or manufactured articles on Aug. 14, 1939, are compared with today's prices to obtain the following results:

	1939	1941	% Inc.
Butter, first grade	.23	.39	70

Letters From the Troops

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

The following letter has been received by the Ontario Intelligencer from Sergeant H. G. Thompson, overseas with the Canadian Army:

Dear Sir:

Just a line to your paper for your kindness in sending your paper to me. No doubt you know about my father, R. Thompson. I would like to thank you and the editor of your paper for the splendid write-up of my father and further than that, I would like to thank each individual paulbearers, and to express appreciation to those who loaned cars at the funeral, the Martin Funeral Home, for their splendid co-operation, Dr. Gibson for the wonderful part he took in trying to save my father's life.

It is hard to lose someone who is as dear to you as your father, especially when you are so far away from home. There is no other like Dad.

Thanking you,
Sincerely yours,
(Sergeant) H. G. Thompson,
C4948.

The following letter was received by Mrs. W. K. Kells, Sidney, from Gunner Robert Andrew Kells:

England, July 8th.

Dear Mother,—

I received four letters from you, and there are twenty-one all told, waiting for me to answer. We have been away at a firing camp for over two weeks so the mail piled up when we were away.

I got the 1,000 smokes O. K. to-night. Many thanks. Received mail from several at Aikens.

Our battery made a record at the firing camp, twelve hits on the sleeve that they draw behind a 'plane. Our gun crew made the first hit; Our officer gave us £1 for the twelve of us, for the hit.

General McNaughton is coming down to inspect us to-morrow, so it will not be long now, until we move. I think we will be in England for some time yet. I had a great time on my leave. Did you get the card I sent from Scotland? It's a grand place; great people.

I got the Belleville paper of June 2nd. It is good to see it again. I got the Toronto Stars Edith sent. The other boys like to read them too.

The camp was on the sea. It was nice and we slept in tents. We were the first Canadians there. The people were very friendly. It is very warm here now. Have more letters to write to-night. Write soon.

Your loving son,
Robert.

BACK OF CONSERVATION DRIVE

William Bailey, president of the Ontario Garage Operators' Association, standing in front of his service station on the Dundas highway, Ontario, with a carburetor in his hand, the important piece of equipment which can help reduce gasolene consumption. Mr. Bailey had the following to say regarding the conservation campaign: "Yes, the Ontario garage operators are behind the government's voluntary gas and oil saving campaign one hundred per cent. It's the right and only thing to do, and, judging from the way our gas and oil sales are down and our inspection and adjustment work is up, the public are certainly co-operating. A lot of gas and oil can be saved by proper adjustments. Look at those cars going by. They're crawling compared to the way they used to go. No, we have had no squawks from our American tourists, and they are rolling through as thick as ever. I have made a canvass of my customers and American [illegible] here, and they are cheerfully co-operating to the limit. They regard it as a patriotic duty and say any inconvenience is a small sacrifice to make to aid the war effort."

Trenton Native Honored at Palace

Honour came to Trenton when a native son, John Henry Ogilvie Jilbert, received at the hands of King George VI at Buckingham Palace in June the highest award conferred by the British police, the King's Police Medal.

Mr. Jilbert was born in Trenton, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jilbert who, until five years ago, resided on McCann street and are now living in Cornwall, England. When his parents left Trenton for England over half a century ago he continued to reside in the Old Country while they returned to Canada. He learned the trade of electrical engineering in Yorkshire and in 1912 joined the Deeds City Police, later becoming superintendent of the force, a post he held for many years.

Offering his services at the outbreak of the present war, although slated for retirement, he was seconded to the British Home Office as Regional Staff Officer, accomplishing much important wartime work in conjunction with Scotland Yard and British police throughout the old land.

The following paragraph was published in the Yorkshire Evening Post of June 12th: "The King's Police Medal is awarded to Superintendent John Henry Ogilvie Jilbert, who joined the Leeds City Police in December, 1912. After demobilization from the last war, in which he served with the Royal Artillery, he was for a time head of the Hackney Carriage Department and when he was promoted Superintendent he became Court Superintendent, undertaking police prosecutions with rare skill. At the outbreak of war he was seconded to the Home Office as Regional Staff Officer."

At his home in Leeds, England, Mr. Jilbert has been the recipient of many congratulatory messages from friends in Britain and Canada. He is an elder brother of Mrs. William Cruickshank, North Byron Street, Trenton.—Quinte Sun.

First Stage Nerve-War Lost by Hitler

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, August 15 (AP). — Although the greatest military crisis of the German-Russian conflict is shaping up into the Battle of Odessa, the Churchill-Roosevelt statement takes first place in the war news.

The chosen leaders of the British and American peoples proclaim their solidarity in the matter of post-war aims. As for the current struggle they grimly imply that there can be no peace with Hitler or Hitlerism on any terms.

There have been widespread whispers in Europe that Hitler, at some point in his Russian campaign and before winter sets in to stalemate the war there, would launch a peace offensive. If so, he has been answered in advance so far as the Prime Minister and President are concerned.

The Churchill-Roosevelt sea meeting was definitely a part of the war-of-nerves. It goes without saying that the meeting was designed to impress upon Hitler's Japanese Axis mate and upon the Vichy regime in France the grim determination of the British and American leaders not to be diverted from their main objective of stamping out Hitlerism wherever it shows itself.

There is also an open bid to the German people to throw off the Hitler yoke. It comes specifically in point four of the joint declaration, pledging the endeavor of the authors and the Governments for which they spoke to secure economic equality of opportunity to "all states, great or small, victor or vanquished."

That is an obvious attempt to undermine Hitler on his home front. His greatest appeal to many Germans known to view his Nazi regime with distrust is the argument that Britain with American backing is out to destroy Germany as a nation; to dismember and utterly disarm her economically as well as militarily.

United States observers of long residence in Germany and only recently returned, say Nazi propagandists have made much of that argument to induce dissenting elements in Germany to accept the Hitler-made war. They have seen little prospect, however, that serious public opposition to Hitler or his ever-widening war program can arise in a nation under the heels of the Nazi police system.

The Churchill-Roosevelt move suggests that with German battle losses in Russia unquestionably mounting into terrible figures and with no end to the struggle yet in sight, London and Washington may have intimations of rising public discontent in Germany. A German defeat in Russia well might turn the tide against Hitler at home. Defeat in a negative sense — a winter stalemate of his great crusade — might serve the same purpose.

This is admittedly pure speculation as to the motives behind the dramatic Churchill-Roosevelt gesture. If this action does nothing else, however, it puts them and their Governments on the offensive on the nerve-war front.

United States Puts Away Naval Swords

Washington — For the first time since the days of John Paul Jones, the United States Navy suspended its requirement that its officers equip themselves with swords.

It announced that modification of its rules regarding the use of this distinctive piece of equipment for officers had been ordered "because of the urgent need for metals used in the manufacture of swords" and said the order would remain effective "until further notice."

Effective yesterday, it said, officers first reporting for active duty will not be required to own swords, and senior officers present at any station or afloat, at their discretion, may discontinue the wearing of swords by officers in their commands. Possession of a sword by Naval Reserve Officers as a requisite for uniform allowances also has been eliminated.

The swords thus ordered, in effect, to be beaten, not into the ploughshares of peace but into the weapons of modern warfare, long have been worn by naval officers chiefly as a decorative badge of rank. Nevertheless, officers still are taught how to use their swords as weapons.

Of the combined cutting-thrusting type, the regulation Navy sword dates back in its present form virtually to the war of 1812. In the earlier days of the Navy, when swords were more important as weapons for boarding operations, officers had considerable freedom in selecting the type they wanted. Some tastes ran in those days to cutlasses and others to the rapier, or straight thrusting sword, as well as the combination weapon subsequently adopted as standard.

Most of the swords now being laid aside bear the insignia of crossed naval rifles on their blades, though some have crossed cannon etched there. They range in price from $21 upward, depending on the officers' individual tastes and means.

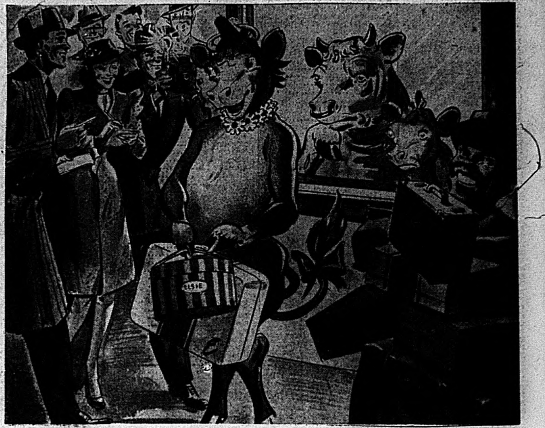
"Happy? Goodness, Gracious Yes," Says Elsie As Visit To Canada And The Ex. Approaches



REPORTERS, PARTIES, CAMERAMEN; YES; ELSIE IS INDEED FAMOUS

By MARGARET AITKEN
Telegram Staff Reporter

Elsie, the war guest, whose cowee has been meteoric, is accustomed to being the centre of attraction. Her fame and her public have grown to fantastic proportions.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific she has been handsomely feted. Reporters, parties, interviews, screen cameras, along with all the other pendants to fame, she has taken in her slow stride. But the fact remains Elsie the cow is naively excited about her approaching visit to Canada. She frankly admits it.

"Naturally I'm excited", she explains to her New York admirers. "I'm British. I'm a war guest and now I am going to work for The Evening Telegram British War Victims' Fund. It's enough to excite any girl".

Elsie is coming to Canada as guest of the Canadian National Exhibition. And while here all her energies will be directed towards raising money for war victims in Britain. It is her ambition to double the B.W.V.F., which is why she brings her "V" chest. It will be substantially filled with American dollars before leaving the United States, and with such a start—well no girl ever had higher hopes for a hope chest than Elsie has for her "V" chest. Raising money for victims and victory is her slogan.

Elsie From Jersey

This is the first time Elsie has stepped hoof on British soil since that stormy night in June, 1940, when a slow moving, overloaded ship sailed stealthily away from the Isle of Jersey. It was filled with the last Britishers to leave Jersey before the Nazis arrived, and Elsie has never forgotten the fellow Jersey cows she left behind. It is to help regain the freedom they have temporarily lost that her "V" chest is dedicated.

In fact she feels pretty strongly about this matter. Her birthplace is the only bit of Britain's vast Empire to fall under German domination, and Elsie is determined to do something about it. Not even her taciturn spouse, Elmer, who belongs to the old fashioned school of thought (holding to the theory that a woman's place is in the home) can sway Elsie from her self-appointed task of raising money for the B.W.V.F.

"I'm just a home girl at heart, but naturally I'm going to Canada to work for the British War Victims' Fund", she tells reporters, and at the same time casts a significant glance at Elmer.

Elmer Not Pleased

He is not pleased, but Elmer knows there are times in every woman's life when she will NOT change her mind. This is one of them. He recognizes the gleam behind Elsie's soft brown eyes. It reminds him of the portrait of Elsie's great-uncle, Bosworth, that salty old admiral who sailed the seas and quelled many an enemy for Britain in the yesteryears. And now, Elsie, like her ancestor, is determined to work for the peoples of Britain.

Elsie comes of a long line of champions. She is blue blood aristocracy. Naturally she doesn't boast about it, but her fine breeding is apparent to all. She is championship class and in 1938 her sire, Franchise Wonderful Aim, was crowned champion over the Island of Jersey. Now Elsie is the glamor girl of America. And there are many who predict that after this visit to Canada she will be voted the glamor girl of North America.

Three years old this month, she is slim and willowy, weighing less than 900 pounds. Her limbs are dainty, her ankles than and graceful. She is alluringly light cream in color and has all the exquisite gentleness of fine breeding and education. She is beautiful.

Besides being a beautiful glamor girl, a movie star, a World's Fair attraction, Elsie is also a good girl. Everybody says so.

2nd Division Leaves Britain's 'Front Line'

Full Canadian Division Posted for Past Six Weeks on Constant Guard

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 15—(CP Cable)—After six weeks' service in Britain's "front line," the 2nd Canadian Division returned to the Canadian Corps area yesterday.

Since the beginning of July, the Canadians have been spending their "summer holidays" in one of Britain's most important coastal areas, manning defence posts and keeping a constant watch for invaders.

It was the first time a full Canadian division had been posted in this vital duty although individual brigades had previously spent some time in the area.

The division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, moved back to the corps area when they were relieved by British troops.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Good Foods May Cause Allergic Symptoms

As a youngster of ten I can remember my mother telling a visitor about an aunt who was unable to eat butter because it caused the skin to be irritated like hives. Later I heard of several individuals who developed hives when they ate strawberries. Still later I heard of several individuals who suffered with hay fever due to golden rod and golden rod was a "forbidden" plant in many neighborhoods. Later it was found that it was ragweed, rather than golden rod, that was the cause.

It is only within the last few years that this new branch of medicine—sensitiveness to foods and other substances—has been given its proper and prominent place in medicine. It is called allergy. Besides affecting the skin and the nose and throat, it is known that the various foods affect the stomach and intestines, the nervous and other systems.

Thus foods to which an individual is allergic may affect the digestive system and cause diarrhoea, constipation, irritation of the lower bowel, dizziness, gas pains, canker sores and miggraine or one-sided headache. If some unusual or different food than usual was eaten, this food may be blamed, whereas the symptoms may be really due to some common or everyday food.

In addition to hay fever symptoms or head colds with a running nose, foods can cause coughing and symptoms of asthma in individuals allergic to these foods.

As regards the nervous system, actual "behavior" symptoms may be caused by foods as can also irritation of the nerves—neutritis.

I have spoken before of the foods that commonly cause allergic symptoms—cereals, milk and other dairy products, eggs, shell fish, pork, veal, strawberries, oranges, melons, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, tomatoes, chocolate, cocoa.

Foods that do not commonly cause allergic symptoms are beef, lamb, rice, rye, tapioca, green beans, carrots, asparagus, grapefruit, salt, sugar, corn syrup.

Now, some of the foods listed above as not likely to cause allergic symptoms may cause symptoms. When symptoms—skin, nose and throat, digestive system, nervous system—do occur, the foods eaten at the previous meal should be recorded and by leaving out these foods, one at a time, the food or foods causing the symptoms may be found. of the Interstate circuit.

STALIN APPROVES THREE-POWER CONFERENCE

World Waits Any Further Disclosures About Conference

President to End 13-day Mystery Voyage, Which Began As "a Vacation" Jaunt

TO MEET NEWSMEN

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Rockland, Me., Aug. 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt cruised toward this down-east fishing port today from an historic rendezvous at sea with Prime Minister Churchill and the world waited tensely for any further disclosures of how they hoped to assure "a better future for the world."

The President was scheduled to put in here some time today, ending a 13-day mystery voyage which began as "a vacation" jaunt but produced an unprecedented meeting between the Prime Minister and President and a statement of their present objectives and post-war aims.

The White House yacht Potomac, with Mr. Roosevelt aboard, was anchored last night off Deer Island, Me. For the first time since he sailed away from the submarine base at New London, Conn., Aug. 3, the President had authorized the disclosure of his whereabouts.

Will Hold Press Conference

Presidential aides assumed Mr. Roosevelt would hold a press conference here before leaving for Washington by special train. From it, reporters hoped to obtain the first detailed account of the epochal conferences with Mr. Churchill and answers to questions puzzling statesmen and the world.

That the conferences aboard British and United States warships, somewhere in the North Atlantic, dealt with more immediate and possibly more significant issues than an ultimate peace was taken for granted in many world capitals.

Many Questions Unanswered

Foremost among the questions thus far unanswered was whether the head of a nation still at peace had worked out with the chief of government of a country at war a specific plan for bringing about what they termed "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

Lending credence to a supposition that some course of action had been decided on was the fact that army, navy and aviation heads of the two nations were present.

Had Mr. Churchill and Roosevelt determined on possible joint action in the Far East?

Had they discussed the battle of the Atlantic, convoys or other means of trying to guarantee safe delivery of American war equipment to Britain?

Might another multi-billion dollar lease-lend appropriation be expected soon?

Would Russia be asked to subscribe to the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration of an eight-point post-war policy "on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world?"

There was no assurance the President would answer any or all of these question. Newsmen waiting for him were none too optimistic, since Mr. Roosevelt repeatedly has declined to engage in any discussion which he thought might tell the Axis of future moves.

PILOT BELIEVED KILLED IN CRASH REPORTED ALIVE

Jos. Mackey, U.S. Bomber Ferry Pilot, Not on Ill-fated Plane

WIFE OVERJOYED

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Aug. 16 (CP).—So overjoyed she hardly could speak, Mrs. Joseph Mackey heard late Friday the news that her husband, a United States bomber ferry pilot, had not been killed in the crash of a trans-Atlantic plane, as previously reported.

"I'm thrilled; I'm happy—you'll never know how much," said Mrs. Mackey. "There isn't another person in the world as happy as I am right now. I'll never be able to thank you enough for this telephone call."

Before hanging up to advise relatives of "this wonderful news", Mrs. Mackey said she had "had an idea" that her husband had been planning to return to this continent by clipper plane.

Mackey's name had been included in a list of twenty-two persons announced by the Royal Air Force Ferry Command as killed in the crash. A London dispatch late yesterday said it was learned that Mackey was not aboard the plane, which carried, however, a Canadian radio officer named G. W. McKay of Toronto.

Receives Official Word.

Earlier Mrs. Mackey received official word from the Ferry Command that her husband was safe and alive. The note apologized for the mistake which had been made but did not explain how it occurred.

In an apartment bedecked with flowers which friends had sent in condolence, Mrs. Mackey received a constant stream of visitors who came to express their regret personally. In the past week, she had been doing the same thing, herself, visiting the wives of pilots and radio operators who were killed in another crash Sunday.

Describing the strain she had felt in consoling the wives of the fliers killed in the previous crash, Mrs. Mackey said "I had no doubt this news was correct—I felt I had been building up to it during the last week. For the next few hours I don't really know what happened.

"Lots of flowers came in, but now my friends, on hearing the good news are ready to come and take them back. I was overjoyed to hear from The Canadian Press that he was still alive. Right now I'm the happiest woman in the world.

"The only thing I want to know is —where is Joe?"

BRITISH UNITS INTERCEPT AXIS SUPPLY SHIPS

German Vessel Norderney and Italian Ship, Stella, Taken on High Seas

TIME NOT DISCLOSED

London, Aug. 16 (CP).—The Admiralty announced today that two Axis supply ships, identified as the 3,667-ton German vessel Norderney and the 4,272-ton Italian Stella, had been intercepted on the high seas by British naval units.

Neither the time nor the place of seizure was disclosed.

The Norderney was built in 1922 at Emden for South American trade. She was reported last on March 17 at Belem, Brazil, ready to risk the British blockade with a cargo of hides, rubber and other products. Two officials of the German Embassy at Rio De Janeiro were reported to have boarded the vessel at that time.

The Stella, built in 1923 at Sunderland, was in European trade until the outbreak of war and was last reported to be anchored with three other Italian ships June 8, 1940, at Recife, Brazil.

Nazi Pressure Heaviest On Battered Leningrad And the Ukraine Flanks

Bulletin Tells of Increased Parachutist Attacks Behind Lines in the Ukraine

NAZI CLAIMS DENIED

Moscow, Aug. 16 (AP).—For the fourth time since Germany's war machine crashed into Russia eight weeks ago, a Red army communique failed today to mention specific sectors of the war and said only that during the night "our troops continued to fight with the enemy on the entire front".

(An authoritative source in London said that the Russians apparently are withdrawing steadily to points behind the Dnieper River but the situation "would appear quite cheerful".)

It was the second consecutive bulletin to omit names of fighting fronts. An earlier communique today indicated the Nazis were putting heavy pressure on the Leningrad and Ukraine flanks.

Moscow again had a late night air raid alarm, but all attacking planes were reported dispersed before reaching the city.

For the third time in the war the Soviet Ministry of Information issued a communique with no mention of specific sectors of fighting. It said: "During Aug. 15 our troops continued fierce fighting with the enemy along the whole front."

The war bulletin told, however, of increased parachutist attacks behind the Red army's lines in the Ukraine. The parachutists were said to have been dropped from large transport planes, but the Russians declared they were being mopped up as fast as they landed.

The Russians reported yesterday that the forward drive by the Germans which took the Ukraine cities of Kirovograd and Pervomaisk, 100 and 115 miles north of Nikolaev, had been stemmed at least temporarily.

(A British broadcast heard last night quoted Moscow informants as denying German claims of the capture of a third Ukraine city, Krivoi Rog, 120 miles west of Dniepropetrovsk.)

The renewed drive against Leningrad, in the north, was said to have been launched from the Karelian Isthmus, the Estonian front, and the Staraya Russa sector southeast of the big Russian port.

Germany Expects Marshal Budenny to Erect New Front Line to Protect Basin

ATTACK RAIL LINES

Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP).—Hitler declared through his high command today that the whole offensive against Russia is moving "successfully according to plan".

As the Nazi armies rounded out the eighth week of the march to the east, the German press lacking specific information fell back to speculating on military problems facing both sides.

Whether Soviet Marshal Semeon Budenny could form a Dnieper River defence in time to check the Nazi sweep in the Ukraine, now threatening that territory's coal and mineral belt, was a favored subject.

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said: "It is only natural to expect Marshal Budenny will try to erect a new front to protect the Donets Basin." Military reporters claimed the Nazi Air Force was making the withdrawal of Russian Forces across the Dnieper a tough problem.

Further complicating the Russian withdrawal, writers contended, was the predicament of Red Forces reported cut off at the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolaev. Military dispatches claimed still other Russian units encircled west of the Dnieper bend were being broken up.

The Nazis claimed their bombers had damaged one Russian destroyer in waters near Odessa. They said information available in Berlin indicated the Red Navy's strength in the Black Sea included one battleship, one airplane carrier, one heavy cruiser, three light cruisers, two torpedo-carrying cruisers, five destroyers and 30 submarines.

German bombers were claimed to have attacked rail lines at Cherkasi and Gradishsk on the Dnieper River mid-way between Kiev and Dniepropetrovsk, as well as in the Leningrad sector of the northern flank.

Berlin had another air-raid alarm last night, attributed to Russian planes. A communique said "a limited number of Soviet bombers last night attempted to attack the northeastern and eastern part of the Reich," but claimed "the attempt was unsuccessful."

Anti-aircraft fire was heard in Berlin.

Collection to Start Next Month On 1941 Income Tax Instalments

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (CP).—Everything is in readiness to begin collection next month of initial instalments of 1941 income tax and last night Revenue Minister Gibson expressed confidence an increasing number of taxpayers would take advantage of the voluntary instalment payment inaugurated this year.

As Finance Minister Ilsley explained in his budget speech last April, the tax on 1941 income may be divided into twelve monthly instalments. The first of these should be sent in before September 30 and the last by August 31, 1942.

In this way the taxpayer who finds it inconvenient to meet entire burden by March 31, 1942, will be able to spread it over the entire twelve months, avoiding the five-per-cent. interest penalty that otherwise would apply on the unpaid balance from April 1 next.

For payments on 1940 income the impost was divided into eight instalments starting at the beginning of this year and terminating at the end of this month.

"I am very pleased at the large number of people who have been paying in instalments," the Revenue Minister said. "I feel they realize they are not only assisting the government but are helping themselves by following the easy-payment plan."

Col. Gibson said also it was gratifying the way people who undertook the present instalment method were keeping up their payments.

Full figures on the amount collected in this fashion may not be available for some time on account of the volume of work devolving on the income tax division.

Departmental officials explained that those who engage in the new instalment plan should estimate their entire 1941 income on the basis of the amount earned so far. At the beginning of next year when the full 1941 income is known they should readjust the final eight instalments to make them fit.

It was emphasized that account should be taken of the changes in rates contained in the last budget, because they were substantially raised in many income brackets.

WAC REGULATIONS ARE ANNOUNCED BY COL. RALSTON

Women Recruits Must Be Between 21 and 40 Years and A or B Category

NEED 830

Ottawa, Aug. 16 (CP).—Defence Minister Ralston announced today that recruits for the new Canadian Women's Army Corps must be between 21 and 40 years of age, of medical category "A" or "B" and British subjects with education equivalent to complete Grade VIIIM.

Regulations made public by the minister said that although organized on a military basis and under military control and supervision, "the corps shall not form part of the military forces of Canada".

"Women with dependent children will not be eligible for enrolment, and a woman whose husband is serving in any of the Canadian fighting forces will, on enrolment, cease to be eligible for dependent's allowance," the minister's statement said.

Formation of the C.W.A.C. was announced some time ago at one of Col. Ralston's press conferences. Subsequently a requisition for 830 of the 2,000-odd women expected to be enlisted in the next few months has been sent to the Department of National War Services which will select recruits and call them for their probationary period of three months.

"It is anticipated this number (830) will be available by Sept. 1," Col. Ralston said last night. "As provision for living accommodation can be arranged, requisitions for further groups for the various military districts will be made."

Plan Other Branches.

Women's Auxiliary Corps for the air force and navy also are planned, but the army is the first to complete its arrangements. Air force authorities expect to have their corps operating by Oct. 1, but plans for the naval corps still are obscure.

Last night a defence department spokesman said that overcoming masculine skepticism is one of the biggest problems now being disposed of by C.W.A.C. organizers.

"The plain truth of the matter is that there's a lot of masculine skepticism around which has to be overcome as the groundwork is being laid," this official said.

Regulations for the C.W.A.C. as announced today by Col. Ralston are similar in many respects to King's regulations and orders for the army.

Three Months' Probation.

Women joining the C.W.A.C. will be designated and addressed as "volunteers" after they are enrolled following three months' probation during which they will be known as "recruits".

Britain and U.S. Thanked for Offer Of 'Maximum Aid'

Ambassadors of Two Countries Attend Kremlin to Deliver Joint Note From Churchill, Roosevelt

MOLOTOV PRESENT

Moscow, Aug. 16—(AP)—Joseph Stalin agreed to a British-United States-Russian conference for joint opposition to Nazi Germany and the exchange of messages with British and American envoys implied a complete pooling of resources of the three powers.

The conference proposal was conveyed to the Russian leader yesterday in a joint personal message from Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, delivered by the British and United States ambassadors, Sir Stafford Cripps and Laurence Steinhardt.

One phrase out of the exchange of invitation and acceptance described one proposed subject of the conference as "distribution of raw materials and arms."

Stalin told the ambassadors he was ready to "take all necessary steps" for the conference.

Stalin received the ambassadors at the Kremlin, where they delivered to him a joint note from Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt.

The Premier expressed to them the thanks of the Soviet Government for the offer of "maximum aid" contained in the note and said he would expedite arrangements for the proposed conversations.

Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov attended the conference.

Paper Praises Accord

Isvestia, the government's newspaper, and Pravda, organ of the Communist party, called the Churchill - Roosevelt accord a strengthening of the world front against Hitler.

"The United States government, as seen from the (eight-point) declaration and as concretely illustrated by the Soviet-American agreements concluded in Washington August 2, considers as its direct task the extending of maximum aid to countries repulsing the German Fascist murderers and sacrificing the blood and life of their sons with the aim of freeing the civilized world from the Hitler barbarians," said Isvestia.

Pravda pointed out that United States assistance to Britain "was not and is not restricted to armaments. Such measures as extensive patrol activities by American warships and the dispatch of American troops to Iceland have, to a considerable extent, assisted Britain in solution of problems connected with the battle of the Atlantic."

ROOSTER HAS RIGHT TO CROW

Cortland, N.Y., Aug. 16 (AP)—The Common Council has declared itself powerless to act on the complaint of Elm Street taxpayers against a neighborhood rooster, commenting:

"A rooster's right to crow at dawn is a sacred thing."

Eastern U. S. Motorists Placed Under Immediate Gas Restrictions

Washington, Aug. 16 (AP)—The government ordered gasoline rationing for the eastern United States today, and straightaway the fuel pump operator assumed new importance to 10,000,000 motorists.

Filling station operators will be in control of the consumers' end of the conservation program, deciding how to divide their reduced supply among customers.

The rationing order, issued by the office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, calls for a 10 per cent slash in deliveries of gasoline to service stations. However, the reduction in non-essential use of gasoline, such as in pleasure cars is expected to amount to 20 per cent, since under the order commercial, emergency, farm and government vehicles will not be subject to the rationing at all.

The order, without precedent in peacetime, involves no issuance of individual ration cards.

Fire engines, ambulances, physicians' cars, farm tractors, commercial vehicles, government automobiles ,and other such essential cars must be fueled. It is up to the filling station operator to determine how to dole out the remaining supply.

O.P.A.C.S. issued the order on the recommendation of Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, who also is Defence Petroleum Co-ordinator.

Each supplier of motor fuel will be required to keep for inspection complete records of all deliveries showing the date, name and address of consignee, price received, the use for which the fuel was delivered, and the quantity of each type of fuel delivered.

The rationing is effective in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida east of the Apalachicola River, and in the District of Columbia.

2 Nazi Pursuit Planes Shot Down

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—Royal Air Force fighters shot down two Nazi pursuit planes and lost one of their number in a sweep over northern France today.

Apparently British bombers were grounded during the night for no new forays against Germany were reported.

A small number of enemy planes dropped bombs in northeast England, East Anglia and the southwest and east of Scotland last night, causing some damage and a few casualties at one place, a communique said.

The last British bombing of Germany was Thursday night when 300 bombers made heavy raids on Hanover, Brunswick and Magdeburg.

German Request Being Considered Ankara Reports

Ankara, Aug. 15 (Delayed)—(AP)—High foreign diplomatic officials said today Turkey is considering a German request to transport food by rail through Turkey to the Russian border after refusing Berlin transit of war materials.

The reported Nazi request apparently was made in the expectation that Nazi troops would succeed in driving through the Ukraine to the Russian-Turkish border in the Caucasus.

It has been surmised here for many weeks the Germans were seeking permission to use Turkish transportation facilities not only to supply Nazi forces in Russia, but to guarantee provisions for a possible move against Iran (Persia).

Food Poisoning Kills 3 Passengers On Tatatu Maru

Tokyo, Aug. 16—(AP) — Domei, news agency, reported today from Yokohama that the Japanese liner Tatatu Maru had arrived off that port with three passengers dead of food poisoning and 120 others ill.

(The Tatuta Maru sailed from San Francisco Aug. 4 after unloading a $2,500,000 cargo of raw silk.)

All those stricken were Japanese, mostly steerage passengers, the news agency said. The vessel was ordered held in quarantine until tomorrow and physicians were sent aboard.

Expressed as a per cent. of normal the report on field crops for Prince Edward County is, spring wheat 63, oats 68, barley 68, soybeans 70, husking corn 70, potatoes 75, buckwheat 80, mixed grain 72, hay and clover 70; roots 70, corn for fodder 74, and pastures 72.

BREAKS WRIST WHEN CRANKING CAR

Mr. Reginald Cox of Point Anne, had the misfortune on Friday afternoon of breaking his right wrist when the automobile which he was cranking backfired. Dr. E. M. MacDonald attended the injured man and reduced the fracture.

SUGGESTS ADDITION OF BAKING SODA TO BLOAT REMEDY

Dr. D. H. Ackerill, Veterinary Surgeon, after reading the account of Mr. Cook's remedy of powdered charcoal as a cure for bloat in cattle as the result of over-feeding on clovers and alfalfa, suggests that baking soda be added to the charcoal to make for quicker action. Teaspoonful doses of baking soda given the animal at the same time as the charcoal remedy will result in the quick action that is necessary in such cases, according to Dr. Ackerill.

DECORATION DAY WILL BE HELD SUNDAY

The annual War Veterans' decoration day will be held on Sunday at which time the graves of all war veterans will be decorated at the Belleville and St. James' cemeteries.

President Bill Ford of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Unit No. 201, Belleville, today urged that all citizens desirous of sending flowers for the decoration day program kindly leave their floral contributions at the Armouries before 1.30 p.m. Sunday. Automobiles to transport the flowers and war veterans to the cemeteries would also be appreciated.

The Decoration Day services will be preceded by a parade of War Veterans, which will leave the Armouries at 2.00 p.m. headed by the Belleville Pipe Band. The impressive memorial service will be held at the Belleville cemetery.

HIT-AND-RUN-DRIVERS DAMAGE TWO CARS

Two cases of hit-and-run drivers were reported to police authorities here last night. Norman Nidderg, Trenton, told Belleville police a motor car had sideswiped his automobile west of Marysville and continued easterly without stopping under the cover of darkness. Considerable fender damage was caused as the result of the impact.

A few hundred yards west of the city on Highway No. 2 later Friday night a similar accident occurred when a motor car sideswiped an automobile being driven into the city by Norman Barriage of this city. Mr. Barriage informed Provincial Police he was unable to obtain the licence number of the vehicle owing to darkness. The cars were travelling in opposite directions. Fender and body damage resulted in this case.

CAMERA AND TRUCK REPORTED STOLEN

Two cases of theft were reported to Belleville police last night. P.-O. Hacket of the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, complained a camera had been stolen from his parked automobile on Ann Street last night. P.-O. Hacket was visiting friends in the city and had parked his car on the street.

Trenton police reported the theft of a Ford truck stolen from that town last night. The truck was the property of the Mohan Construction Company, but no licence plate number was given.

NO BIG RUSH HERE TO BUY STOCKINGS

With the recent order-in-council freezing all raw silk stocks in Canada, Belleville women have been purchasing odd pairs of silk stockings and doubtless storing them for possible cases of emergency. Department store managers say there was no wholesale rush to horde stockings, but a strong general increase in their sales of silk stockings.

"It would appear to me that the women of Belleville are merely playing safe and placing the odd few pairs of silk stockings away for emergency's sake," suggested a department store manager, whose sales of silk stockings showed a general increase all week.

No rush for six or seven pairs of silk stockings was observed in Belleville, as was reported in other larger centres. Local women merely bought up the odd pair just in case.

V ORNAMENTATION OBSERVED ON SIDES OF CITY HALL TOWER

Possibly the architect who designed the Belleville City Hall had a premonition that a "V" for Victory campaign would sweep the country someday and so decided to work into the general line of the building something which would be synonymous with the movement.

Anyway, whether it was as the result of premonition or just pure co-incidence, worked into the ornamentation of the building at various heights on the tower and around the tower standards at the base of the building along Front Street are a series of large "V's." It was suggested by the person who took note of the timeliness of the feature that the "V's" be painted in bright colors so as to make them stand out. Belleville would then be original in having the "V" for Victory campaign emblasoned in the architectural design of its civic building.

Medium Regiment Of R.C.A. Wins Corps Track, Field Championship

Somewhere in England, Aug. 16—(CP)—A medium regiment of the Royal Canadian Artillery won the Canadian Corps Troops Track and Field championship, it was disclosed today. C. Fuller, Kingston, Ont., was a member of the team that won the 440-yard relay title.

An army field regiment team of the R.C.A. won the tug-of-war. Included were eight men from Toronto, one from Hamilton and S. Inder, Hespeler, Ont.

Parachute Spy Came Prepared to Send Weather Reports Home

London, Aug. 16—(CP Cable)—Josef Jakobs, 43, the Nazi parachute spy who was executed in the Tower of London Friday, hoped to establish his own weather station to send daily reports to the Nazi Air Force.

Details of his trial, now revealed, said he suffered a broken ankle when he landed in a field in the Home Counties. Farm laborers Charlie Baldock and Harry Coulson spotted him and told Home Guard Lance Corporal Harry Godfrey who made the parachutist a prisoner.

Jakobs wore a grey striped suit, a grey overcoat and spats under his flying suit.

Godfrey said: "I asked him what he was doing and he said he had been flying solo and baled out at 300 feet.

"When I asked: 'Where the hell's your plane?' He was unable to answer."

NOT IN AIR CRASH

Captain J. C. Mackey, pilot of the ill-fated plane in which Dr. Banting was killed, was not aboard the giant plane which crashed in England on Thursday in which twenty-two men lost their lives. One of them was the Right Hon. Arthur R. Purvis of Montreal chairman of the British Supply Council. Capt. Joseph C. Mackey was first reported among the victims but this was due to confusion over the name of a Toronto radio officer, G. W. Mackay, who was one of those killed.

Changes in Methods of Rural School Education Advocated

Speakers Maintain Secondary Students Should Take Greater Interest in Life

8 POINTS PRAISED

Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—Greater interest by secondary school students in civic, Provincial and Dominion politics and changes in the methods of rural school education were advocated last night by speakers at the opening meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation Committee on the teaching of democratic citizenship.

Miss Agnes Macphail, of Ceylon, Ont., said that "formal education" has drained many people from the country by the gospel that "life other than tilling the soil was the good life" and by not properly equipping those who remain in the country for their rural life.

"If some serious-minded young person asked me where to go to study for better rural citizenship, I would not know where to tell him to go," she added.

Secondary school teachers could assist rural students by studying the situation relative to rural life, Miss Macphail said. She advocated two or three-year courses for students who would not continue to university.

Miss Macphail praised the work of Rev. J. J. Tompkins of Antigonish, N.S., Dr. A. E. Corbett, director of Adult Education for Canada and Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, in developing thought and action "in adult education."

Praises Eight Points

Mrs. H. P. Plumtre of Toronto, said that the eight points agreed upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was a "definite statement on the democratic faith which its two most responsible leaders think worth fighting for now—today."

"Every teacher—either in a school or out—now has a plan for action, a faith to fight, the first teaching of democracy must be an understanding of a faith to fight for. The best way to learn democracy is to live it and live it in the class-room as well as in the home."

Mrs. Plumptree, a former council member, spoke of the need for studying civic politics in the secondary schools. "The newspapers give you the news and I think one part of a teacher's duties should be to teach use of the newspapers as a source of current events."

Kelso Roberts, Toronto lawyer, told the convention that "it does seem most important to inculcate in young men and young women during their secondary school period of education, an interest in the politics of this country."

Students whom teachers consider have outstanding ability should have an opportunity to extend their education along national lines," by being enabled to visit their fellow citizens during their formulative-age period."

Miss Evelyn McDonald, of Toronto, chairman of the committee, in referring to the discussion remarked "there may be Communistic and Fascist leanings among us. Some may want to take the best in these and incorporate them (into democracy.)"

CITY COUNCIL TO BUILD BRIDGE

What Type or Whether Old Bridge Will Again be Used Not Decided at Special Meeting

In connection with the reconstruction of the "Footbridge", which dropped into the water early Thursday evening without serious injury to any resident, the City Council held a special meeting on Friday afternoon in the City Hall and after considerable discussion in the committee room passed the following recommendation: "That the City Engineer proceed to obtain information and particulars from Department of Highway's engineer as to proper bridge suitable for this location, also that he take the matter up with prospective contractors for design and price on bridge, using whatever material, which may be used from the present bridge."

The Council definitely decided at the meeting to establish this familiar route to the west side of the city but whether a new bridge or the same one repaired would be used is still a matter for discussion. When the Engineer has secured all the data necessary, another meeting will be held and the work authorized. All members of the council, excepting Ald. Harvey were present.

Cheese Production In P. E. County Shows Increase in July

Despite the fact that factory cheese production in Ontario showed a reduction of 4.8 per cent. from the output in July 1940, production in the county of Prince Edward showed an increase. Taking into consideration that the district has suffered greatly by drought, the increase in production is a tribute to the efforts of the farmers, who have done everything possible to increase their output of cheese so that the quota for Britain might be attained.

In July 1941 a total of 244,665 pounds of cheese were produced, compared to 241 797 pounds in July, 1940. During the first seven months this year 1,429,862 pounds of cheese were produced in the county against 1,189,844 pounds in the same period last year.

That a percentage of the milk which usually goes into other channels was this year diverted to the cheese industry is indicated by the fact that butter production in Prince Edward shows a decrease with 19,611 pounds in July 1941 and 32,113 pounds one year ago. In the first seven months of the year 189,284 pounds of butter were made compared to 266,401 pounds in the same period last year.

Current Film Features Canada's Production of Empire War Machines

Canada's interest having been intrigued by glimpses of fleet gun carriers, squat artillery tractors and other military vehicles speeding around the countryside and through the rotogravure sections, the National Film Board has produced a timely, informative film release which shows how Canadian workers are turning out "fighting machines for Empire fighting men". This fast-moving review of an important phase of Canada's war effort is featured in the current "Canada Carries On" release, "Strategy of Metals", being shown at the Belle Saturday and Monday; and the Capitol Sunday midnite, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Along with an exceptionally entertaining regular program, moviegoers this week will get a dramatic "close-up" of the complicated machinery and skilled manpower which is striving night and day to speed the steady flow of military vehicles to Empire armies. Perhaps the most spectacular of these modern war-making machines is the Universal gun carrier, the "battle taxi" which travels over the roadless terrain at better than 40 miles an hour with a machine gun crew, ammunition and supplies. The film shows how these and other military vehicles are put through gruelling tests on a "mock battle-field" located at Windsor, Ontario.

Canadians who have been wondering just how much Canada's automotive industry is contributing to the Empire war effort will get an eye-opening surprise when they see how fast and how well these modern fighting machines are being produced. As representative of the industry, the National Film Board "shoots the works" at the Empire's largest single source of military vehicles, the Ford of Canada plant at Windsor. The film shows quickly and dramatically how peacetime production simmered down to a small percentage in a remarkably short space of time to make way for war production on a really huge scale. Most Canadians will be surprised to learn that this one Canadian plant alone has produced more than 90,000 military vehicles since war's outbreak.

Included in the formidable array of military vehicles being turned out by Canada's automotive experts, are gun carriers, artillery tractors, mobile workshops, refuelling tenders (for Empire fighting planes), Red Cross ambulances, mobile dental laboratories and many other units which have been especially designed, tested and put into production to serve in this modern "war on wheels". The current film release is highly recommended for the whole family.

Czechs Fight at Home Against Nazi Oppressors

By JAN MASARYK,
Czechoslovak Foreign Minister,
In the London Daily Telegraph

The total war which the whole world is now experiencing has not resulted merely in new methods of warfare. The character of the struggle for national existence that has been forced on the enslaved countries on the European continent is also very different from anything the world has seen before.

In the last World War the Czecho-Slovaks fought their main struggle abroad, where their legions were formed. In this war the centre of gravity of the Czecho-Slovak fight for freedom is the home country.

It is true that we have our pilots and our army — in Great Britain and in the Middle East; but we realise that even more important is the way in which our nation is fighting against Nazi oppression at home, slowing down the German war machine and making life a burden for the conquerors who are striking at the very roots of the nation's life.

This struggle for freedom did not begin only when the new world war broke out in September, 1939. From the time that the Munich agreement delivered them to the mercy of the Third Reich the Czecho-Slovak people have not wasted a moment. In the Autumn of 1938 it was not only the President, Dr. Edward Benes, who went abroad to organise a campaign of liberation. Individual soldiers, scholars and technicians also began to leave the country, and they are now doing good work in Great Britain, in Canada or in the United States.

After the violent occupation of Czecho-Slovakia in March, 1939, there was, of course, a mass exodus abroad. It was an exodus which was carefully planned; only thus was it possible for thousands of soldiers and hundreds of pilots to cross frontiers guarded by the Gestapo.

These men defended France until she capitulated in June, 1940. They are now as bravely defending Great Britain, and their determined courage has already taken a heavy toll of the Luftwaffe.

In the months that passed between the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia and the outbreak of war, the main task of the Czecho-Slovaks at home was to prevent the Germans from fomenting dissension among them and to see that the Czech nation did not fall a victim to moral depression or political blandishments. This task was successfully carried out, and consequently the Nazis cannot boast of any Quisling who exercises an important influence on the Czech people in the Czech lands.

The Nazis naturally gave support of all kinds to any organization which they thought might become the instruments of Nazi policy. But within a short time they realized that hope of such support was vain. The money and the authority which they invested in these enterprises have in fact, brought them no profit; the Czech nation has remained united in a single political organization which it formed very quickly of its own accord. More, it has refused to abandon the organizations that have always been the backbone of its national struggle and prosperity. I have in mind, above all, the Sokol, which was suppressed by force at Easter.

We abroad were not in the least surprised, therefore, when the Nazis in the Czech lands began a policy of direct terrorization by sending off to concentration camps thousands of the finest Czechs.

The underground struggle is on a vast scale and ranges from whispered propaganda to the definite sabotage of Nazi war production. A worker who is tending an important machine cannot simply destroy it, since he is watched by the Gestapo, but he can slow it down. The very fear of sabotage retards the speed of German war production.

There are many reports on the methods of sabotage used by the Czech workers. For example, they will intentionally reduce their working output and prevent war production from attaining the scheduled volume. This is the main reason why Czech workers in different factories are arrested so often. The Nazi newspapers have admitted this several times, pointing to the fact that important war contracts are not only late in completion, but badly executed.

The Czech peasants act in exactly the same way. Deliveries of grain have dropped to a considerable extent and meat deliveries have fallen to a minimum.

Already many death sentences have been carried out because certain machines in this or that factory have suddenly broken down, although the Nazi supervisors could not discover any visible defect; and there are many workers who have risked their lives in order to cut a driving belt.

To show how large is the scale of Czech resistance to the whole Nazi order I will give two examples.

Recently a group of Czech policemen were arrested for continually listening to the Czechoslovak wireless transmissions from London and systematically spreading the news they heard.

On May 1 the Nazi paper in Prague, Der Neue Tag, published an article complaining that even among cows a national difference is made. It is true, said the writer, that cows cannot be divided up according to race, but cows belonging to Germans are found to give much more milk than those of the Czech peasants, even when they are in the same village and the same district.

This serious, systematic and risky sabotage in industry and agriculture is now all the more important because a considerable part of German war industry has been removed to Bohemia in order to escape British bombs.

But what I have said about industry and agriculture applies also to transport and other branches of economic life. Thus the political movement has at the back of it a fierce struggle in which the totalitarian Nazi machine has clashed against the total resistance of the Czech nation.

There are many things about which we cannot speak at present without doing harm to the Czech people at home; and we know of many incidents which would be incredible if we were not aware of how well the Czech nation knows how to fight underground.

Such, then, is the background of a battle of which we never cease to think, wherever and however we may be helping and working in the common struggle.

There is not only our own struggle in Great Britain, where Czech airmen are fighting and Czech soldiers making ready to continue the fight. There are not only the factories that have been founded in Great Britain by Czecho-Slovak citizens so that they might help in war production, of which the first to make Bren guns is an important example. Nor are our thoughts only with the large number of Czecho-Slovak workers and technicians who have found places in the various branches of war production in Britain.

We think, also, of the hundreds of thousands of Czecho-Slovaks who live in the United States and are undoubtedly among the most loyal workers and supporters of the cause for which we are all fighting.

The same may be said of the tens of thousands of Czecho-Slovaks in Canada, and of the Czecho-Slovak colonies in all South American States where groups of our people are doing their part.

U. S. Soldiers Stay in Camp

(Montreal Star)

Two things combined to bring about the passage of the Army Service Extension Bill by the House of Representatives: one, the Russian campaign, and the other the always overwhelming prestige and power of the Presidential office.

It was of course a remarkable thing that the bill should have squeezed by even by the almost unprecedented margin of one vote in a total ballot of 405. Up to a week o rless ago it was apparently more than an even bet that the House would refuse the great responsibility of keeping men who were conscripted for war in peacetime long beyond the period for which even this unusual procedure had put them into uniform.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that Germany's latest violation of a solemn treaty followed by the usual mad-dog leap at the throat of a neighbour nation had a lot to do with fixing wavering or unformed opinions. Manifestly, if the United States is to be drawn into the war, it would be plain madness to scatter her army-in-training to the four winds of Heaven before such training was completed. That idea was as valid six months ago as it is today, but it is doubtful that without further evidence of Germany's mania the average Congressman would have "heard from home" as distinctly as yesterday's vote indicates.

In the second place, the President's white-hot earnestness in his latest messages and interviews will have had a tremendous effect on public opinion. Our neighbors are not always openly respectful to their Chief Executive but, ninety-nine times out of one hundred, in matters of great national moment, "trust the President" is a powerful slogan. It, more than anything else, accounted for the miracle of the American entry into the war in 1917 after Wilson's successful "he kept us out of war" campaign three months earlier.

Perhaps never before has there been so general a realization that any President actually knew, of his own personal, private knowledge, more about what was going on; what dangers threatened the State; what measures had to be taken to counteract them and how much—or how little—time remained to take them than Franklin Roosevelt knows at this minute about the world war situation in relation to the United States of America.

Germany will naturally make the most of the narrow escape of the service extension plan from defeat, but those who have tried to follow mass American opinion as it has regarded "European wars" in the last decade will have a more just appreciation of the amazing change in it which yesterday's vote represents. Even a majority of one is cold comfort for Germany.

General "Run" On Silk Stockings Increases Prices

By The Canadian Press

Canada's action in freezing non-essential supplies of silk as a war-time measure has resulted in an almost general "run" on hosiery and other goods.

The order, effective at midnight last Saturday and just one week after the United States office of production management ordered complete stoppage of all processing of raw silk, started a buying rush that kept store hosiery clerks on the hop.

No official figures were available as to the total extent of present depletion of stocks, but some stores report a complete sell-out of ordinary silk stockings and others say they have enough to last a month.

The odd $100-$200 single sale has been "rung up" in a few of the larger department stores.

One Toronto department store official said that women "are in practically before the store opens and you can't get them out at night." Sales have been three times the average and rationing of four pairs to a customer has been instituted.

He believed that substitutes, when available, would prove acceptable to women. "They'll take to them just like they took to silk and I wouldn't be surprised that if at the end of the war they don't go back to silk stockings," he added.

Another Toronto department store official said that silk hosiery business now is five to eight times greater than at this time last year. Prices have risen 10 per cent in the last month mainly because of an increase in the price of raw silk. Branch stores across the country report they haven't a pair left.

Russia Has Helped The Chinese People

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This old copy book adage is brought to mind by the entrance of the U.S.S.R. into the war on the side of the Allies. Now it appears that Russia has been helping China in various ways in her struggle against the Japanese invader. Curiously enough, the U.S.S.R. does not appear to have taken advantage of China's plight to spread the doctrine of Communism among the Chinese. This could have been done quite easily, as in China there is a Communist army which has been lending aid to Japan by harassing China's Nationalist forces. In this connection the London Times recently published a letter from C. C. Wang, president of the London Chinese Association, in which the writer says he voices the sentiment "not only of the "Chinese community in London, but also of our 400,000,000 compatriots everywhere, in wishing our Russian neighbors the best of lunch and best of success in defending their homeland so that, through this baptism of fire and blood, Russia, as China, may come out not only victorious but purified and strengthened."

Mr. Wang does not take much stock in the Communist bogey, declaring that with a common frontier between Russia and China longer than that between any other two countries, China would have become Red long ago "were Communism such an exportable article as it is represented to be." China, he maintains, is not even pink. Whatever basis there is for Mr. Wang's faith in this respect, he seems justified in his argument by the fact that Russia has not taken advantage of her position to spread Communism in China while the Chinese were fighting the aggressor, Japan. On the contrary, he declares, Russia has helped China on a friendly, national basis, and has on many occasions advised the Chinese Communists to sink their political differences and co-operate with the Central Chinese Government in the common effort against the invader. In short, Russia's help to China has been friendly and without conditions. That, at least, is the testimony of the president of the Chinese Association in London.—Montreal Gazette.

Daily Stretching and Bump on Head Fail By Half-Inch to Get Youth Job as Fireman

New York— This is the story of what Gino Franceschini, 19 years old, of 338 East Sixty-first Street, did in his effort to meet the 5 feet 7 inches height standard required in the Civil Service physical test for a Fire Department appointment.

Two and a half months ago he was 5 feet 5½ inches tall. So he devised a canvas sling that he strapped under his chin, flung an attached rope over a gymnasium chinning bar and spent some time daily pulling himself off the floor for five minute intervals.

Late Friday night he hired a room at 2162 University Avenue, about two blocks aawy from the N. Y. U. athletic field where the tests of 5,000 candidates began yesterday. He rested on his back on a thin mattress on the floor for more than fifty hours so "the bones would relax" and his body stretch.

He had captured some wild bees on Long Island that he hoped would bite his honey-soaked head and induce swelling. The bees died. So he used the honey and some gelatine as food. Just before his brother, Louis, and an uncle, Angelo, carried him on an improvised stretcher to the door of the N.Y.U. gymnasium yesterday morning, he hit himself on the head twice with a heavy wooden club. The bumps were still there for a reporter to feel hours later.

But he missed the standard by half an inch. However, because he passed the regular physical examination with an average of 89.9 Gino received a conditional approval subject to his adding the necessary half inch in six months.

Paul M. Brennan, examiner in charge of the competitions, which includes weight-lifting, climbing, jumping, running and other strength agility and coordination tests, said to be the most difficult in Civil Service history, expressed doubt that Gino would make it.

But Gino said:

"I expect to be a half inch over the requirement in four months. Why, I lost a half inch on the way from the rooming house because my brother got tired and I had to walk a short distance."

Gino is the son of a restaurant cook and is a student at City College evening session where he is studying accountancy.

Eighty other candidates, all of whom have passed the written test —Gino received 90 per cent in this —went through the strenuous ordeal that marked the first examination day. Forty-two passed, twelve were rejected by the doctor and twenty-seven lost in competition. The tests, devised by Associate Professor Francis P. Wall of New York University, will last four months.

U.S. IMMIGRATION LAWS TIGHTENED

All Residents Entering or Leaving U.S. Must Have Permit

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP) — All United States citizens and aliens desiring to enter or leave the United States after Sept. 1 will be required to obtain entry or exit permits, or their equivalent, under new regulations under preparation by the State and Justice Departments.

President Roosevelt is expected to announce the new policy in the interests of National Defence through a proclamation to be issued after his return to Washington.

Officials said they did not expect any changes in present regulations governing travel to and from Canada and Mexico, or to Cuba, which does not require passports from American citizens.

The new regulations are designed particularly to curb the movements of spies, propagandists, fifth columnists or other travellers whose activities would be detrimental to the interests of the United States.

While the U.S. along with most other countries, long has required aliens to hold entry visas, the United States hitherto has placed no barriers against the departure of Americans or aliens (except Germans and Italians) from the U.S.

"eye-track"

A certain advertiser asks us--"What does eye - track mean in advertising?"

A logical question we say-and here's the answer!

The "eye-track" was devised by advertising experts to force the eye to travel as you want it throughout the various elements of the advertisement.

It creates high interest in the heading and carries the eye through the various leader items of the advertisement to the store name. It continues the movement of the eye down through the advertisement to the attractive illustrations and highlighted features . . . then pushes the eye down through the descriptive copy of these leaders to the price and hence on to the signature.

EYE-TRACK is one of the latest creations of advertising in general and newspaper advertising in particular.

It is not uncommon in advertisements appearing in The Ontario Intelligencer to see advertisements using eye-track. That is why many advertisements appearing in this newspaper are so easy to read.

In this Advertisement EYE-TRACK is illustrated in the heading . . . and effective use of white space.

THE FOOTBRIDGE

The collapse of the footbridge over the Moira River has precipitated a situation which will be remedied as soon as the city authorities can possibly do so, for the traffic borne by this thoroughfare is very heavy.

The footbridge gangway and the footbridge are used by many hundreds daily. On it is concentrated a volume of pedestrian traffic, the story of which certainly would prove very interesting if it could be told in exact figures. Centrally located between the upper and lower bridges and opposite Catherine Street and leading into the heart of the business section on the east side in a way to which Bridge Street alone can be compared, it is the means of communication for a very large proportion of the people who live on the West Side, from the bay shore as far as northwest Belleville and as far east as Coleman Street northward from Moira Street intersection.

In recent years the footbridge has been called on to bear much heavier use through the development of automobile traffic. With the heavier demands by the hundreds of automobiles for parking space on Saturday night particularly, there has naturally come the development of the parking spaces on the east bank of the river and the use of the streets on the west side, close to the river. Hundreds of cars are parked on these streets west of the Moira River and the footbridge bears a very large share of the pedestrian traffic which has resulted from the parking of cars on Coleman, Catherine and other streets, for occupants of a good many of these use this bridge to reach the shops in the business section. Without the footbridge the lessening of the concentration of the demand for space with the use of streets on the west side near the footbridge would not have been possible. The footbridge has helped in its way to solve in part the parking problem. Crowds of people can be seen any Saturday afternoon or evening making use of this bridge.

City council will of course take immediate steps to replace the bridge which has been a great time-saver for hundreds for many years as well as a means to lessen the congestion on Front Street.

CHANGE A YEAR BRINGS

It is slightly over a year ago since the Battle of Britain began with a mass attack by the Luftwaffe on August 8, 1940. On August 11, 1940, Nazi planes numbering 400 raided the British Isles. From then on night raids continued until the maximum effort of the Huns was reached in the middle of September. After that came a marked let-down by the enemy, though raids continued.

Now what a change! Today British squadrons are pounding German military targets with a regularity which must be discouraging to the enemy. Day and night the British make their forays over Germany and Nazi-dominated countries along the coast.

For the aviators who won the immortal words of Prime Minister Churchill, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few," and their planes, Britain now can count many more airmen and many more mightier planes.

Recently there has come the double pounding of Germany with British and Russian raids on the Fatherland at the same time.

Steadily Britain keeps to her course of hammering at the nerve centres and the lifeline of German military strength. She is not led into attempts against civilians and individuals as the Germans have, she keeps her bombs for the great factories, railway lines, power stations and communications such as roads, electric and telephone systems.

Now has come word that the British will announce the number of their planes as often as possible in the raids over Germany. This will put the proper stress on the raids.

Germany, the cause of the tragedy which has come upon mankind, is now under constant fire of British planes.

The end of this great development of strength by the R.A.F. is not yet. It will continue to grow for it is one of the chief weapons to crush militaristic Germany.

Hitler, on Berchtesgaden Hill at night,
Hear you the Banshee's wail, the Werewolf's scream?
Or does a Hell of ugly devils fright
Your shrunken soul with some tormenting dream?

See you, in dreams, the Channel yet unspanned
While British Flyers rule the daylight air
Look how the English beaches now are manned;
Know you who keeps relentless vigil there?

Harold who fought and died on Hastings Hill,
With Norman William, Knight and Squire and Thane,
Makes common cause; and through the blackouts still Stride Drake and Nelson, masters of the Marin.

Look, how they stand on guard, that spectral crew!
Ghosts of the dead from far-off stricken fields,
Ghosts of the squares that held at Waterloo.

Walter Clitherow started his career with baby bonds and ended up with bonded babies. At a crowded intersection in the Bronx, New York City, he runs New York's only parking lot for babies. Clitherow, one-time accountant in a brokerage house, says he would rather tend babies than sit at a desk in Wall Street.

Mamas with no one to watch their offsprings, leave them with Clitherow while they shop. His lot is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. A mother may leave her tot in the lot as long as she wishes. He makes no charge for parking the carriages or watching the babies, but grateful mothers are generous with their tips. In addition a nearby store pays hm a weekly salary.

"I thought I was thru with babies when my seven children grew up," he said. "But I guess I wasn't. I like it. They keep me young."

"First thing I do when a mother parks her baby here is look in the carriage," he says. "I look to see if she has brought a bottle along. More than half of them don't. But I can quiet 'em even without a bottle.

"When they start squawking, I just rock their carriages a while, wiggle my fingers in front of their nose and coax them with some baby talk—which I can speak in seven different languages. They soon quiet down.

Business reaches its peak in the summer, Clitherow says. "But, hot or cold, I'm always on the job. One of the coldest days last winter I got only one customer. The mother, all bundled up in furs, left the baby with me while she went shopping.

"I got so cold I was afraid the baby would get chilled, so I threw my coat over the carriage. When the mother returned she handed me my coat, wheeled the carriage around and left without even thanking me. But I was so glad to get my coat back I didn't mind."

In all his experience as a professional baby-minder Clitherow has never had a mix-up nor a casualty. He keeps his charges straight by using numbered identification tags, like those used in regular parking lots. When a baby is parked, the mother takes one half of the tag and Clitherow attaches the other half to the carriage.

Near tragedy visited his lot one day when a carriage parked near the curb got caught in the bumper of a passing auto. "He got clear to the next corner before I caught up with him," Clitherow said. "When I finally stopped him, he was as scared as I was. As soon as he stopped I looked in the carriage. The baby was sound asleep. I never told the mother about it. What was the use of scaring her for nothing."

Another time, Clitherow reveals, a young mother parked her baby with him at 10 in the morning and didn't return until after six o'clock. When she finally got back, he says, she was wobbling like a corkscrew—so he pushed the baby home himself.

The secret of his success, he says, is that he understands babies, and they understand him.

QUESTION

In this mad world of hate and strife,
Of war in sky and earth and sea,
One wonders if God's gift of life
By men must always ruined be.
Must men forever fill the years
With warfare's "sweat and blood and tears."

Here in a land where lilies blow
And tropic palm and northern pine,
Where the four seasons come and go
And good is the supreme design,
Men into bitter quarrels fall
From time to time and spoil it all!

Men oft declare themselves to be
God's greatest handiwork, and tell
Their mastery of land and sea,
And point to skills they use so well;
But thinking of the wars they start
I wonder does God think them smart?

X-ray Treatment Effective in Cases of Psoriasis of Nails

Some months ago I spoke of the different methods being used for treatment of psoriasis—the white raised patches of silver scales on the skin—diet in which no fat was allowed, treatment by viosterol, treatment by pituitary extract, and treatment by X-rays.

As psoriasis is a disfiguring and therefore distressing ailment with a tendency to return every few months or years, any treatment that will give relief is most welcome to patients.

The successful treatment of psoriasis by X-rays in which the nails are affected is reported by Drs. W. C. Popp and E. A. Addington, Rochester, Minn., in Radiology. There were 24 unquestionable cases of psoriasis of the nails treated. In six, only the fingernails were affected. Nine of the 24 patients had arthritis of the joints of fingers and toes. With the development of the psoriasis of these nine patients there was a definite increase in the symptoms of the arthritis with pain and swelling.

The average length of time the 24 patients had suffered was about seven years, the shortest being three months and the longest twenty years.

The X-rays were applied to the backs of the hands extending from the nail tips to the wrists and to the upper side of the feet, from the tips of the nails to the ankles. The treatments are usually repeated twice at monthly intervals.

At least three months must pass after last treatment before the actual results of these X-ray treatments can be estimated. After the first treatment, most of the arthritis cases showed improvement.

Six of the patients have been completely cured with no symptoms whatever; 10 showed enough improvement that no further treatment was considered necessary; and 2 patients have no improvement.

Of the nine patients with arthritis, one could not be traced, four obtained complete relief, and four much improvement. The beneficial results have lasted from six months to five years.

I am passing on this information because the X-rays give much help in various forms of skin disease. As psoriasis is a particularly stubborn skin ailment, perhaps some discouraged sufferers may now be willing to try X-ray treatment for the first or even the second time.

And so we come to August. It is one of the year's sweetest months. It is the month of holidays in a peaceful world, of rich, lazy days in the open, of hot beaches and warm lakes and soft evenings.

It is the month of early harvest also, with wheat going down under the binder, and the last alfalfa crops coming in, with lavish perfume. It is the month of apples ripening on the trees and the early varieties ready for picking, and now the blackberries take over the job where the raspberries left off.

In August the hills are smeared with ragged streaks of bluish haze and the dawns begin to have a certain sharpness of them that speaks of the Autumn ahead.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFF

Montenegro, little mountain kingdom absorbed by Yugoslavia after the first World War, has been declared an independent kingdom again under the protection of Italy.

The name Montenegro literally means "Black Mountain."

Henequen has been declared a strategic and critical material and Uncle Sam has agreed to take Mexico's surplus for the next 18 months.

The word "henequen" is the anglicized form of the Caribbean Indian name of a plant native to tropical America.

Henequen is a strong, yellow fiber made of the leaves of the henequen plant and is used chiefly in binder and other twine.

Ordinary solder is an alloy of tin and lead used to join metallic surfaces.

To conserve the limited supply of tin, national defence officials suggest that silver be used as a substitute in solder, which means that, so far as national defence is concerned, tin is now more precious than silver.

The world "solder" is derived indirectly from Latin "solidare," and literally means to make solid.

The "l" in "solder" ceased to be pronounced centuries ago when the form "souder" was used by the Norman French in England.

A soldering iron is not made of iron, but of copper.

Graphite is another mineral that Mexico has plenty of and which the United States needs for national defence.

Most people know little about graphite except that it is the "lead" used in pencils, and is a mixture of graphite and clay.

In fact, the name is derived from the Greek word meaning "to write."

But graphite, a form of native carbon, has many other uses.

It is also called black lead and plumbago, from "plumbum," Latin for lead.

Graphite is a good conductor of electricity and is used for electric anodes.

It does not burn easily or fuse at high temperatures and is used for crucibles that must withstand terrific heat.

Graphite is also used in lubricants, stove polishes and paints.

A substitute graphite is produced artificially by passing alternating current through granular anthracite in an electric furnace.

Canada's War Expenditures Total $108,000,000 in July

Finance Minister Ilsley Says Expenses Now Running at 3 to 4 Millions Daily

ADDRESSES C.W.N.A.

Quebec, Aug. 16 (CP) — Finance Minister Ilsley revealed today that Canada's total war expenditures in July "reached the record figure of about $108,000,000" and warned Canadians against overconfidence which might result from the present "rising tide of optimism in this country and in England."

Addressing a luncheon gathering at the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association Convention, Mr. Ilsley said that Canada's war expenditures now are running "at a rate of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 a day."

Those figures, he said, have not been published before.

He appealed for public support of "two campaigns which are now of national importance." The first called for "drastic restrictions in the use of gasoline for pleasure purposes" and the second for curtailment of instalment credit sales.

Referring to credit sales, he warned that any "widespread mortgaging of the future will aggravate post-war difficulties" and urged business interests to impose conservative credit terms by increasing the required down payment and shortening the period over which payments may run.

He added: "I frankly admit that direct control of the production of consumers' durable goods will probably be necessary to secure the restriction that will be needed but voluntary reduction will probably always be a necessary supplement to such controls and in the early stages should probably be relied upon as far as possible."

Gas Restriction Necessary

Speaking of the restriction in gasoline consumption, he described the shortage of tankers and other transportation facilities "which has made this restriction essential."

He urged the weekly newspaper publishers to "bring home to your readers how urgent the need is in order to maintain adequate supplies for the armed forces of Britain and Canada" and expressed confidence that the Canadian people would then "respond to this voluntary appeal as whole-heartedly as they did in the Victory Loan campaign."

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Ilsley referred to the "dramatic and momentous meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt on the Atlantic—and to their joint declaration which offers so much hope for a saner and safer post-war world.

"There are events which make all comment on them superfluous. This was one of them. Democratic civilization has reason for profound gratitude to these great leaders who for their courage, vision and their genius of leadership will be honored not only by our generation, but by our children and our children's children."

Warns Against Optimism

Then he spoke of the "rising tide of optimism" in Canada and England and warned that overconfidence might impair the war effort.

"A lull has occurred in the Battle of the Atlantic and for the last month or so shipping losses have been greatly reduced. The centre of action has shifted for a time to the remote plains of Eastern Europe which the Russians, with great strength and courage, are resisting the full weight of the Nazi onslaught."

Other favorable developments were the diversion of the German air force's might into Eastern Europe, the ever-increasing power of Royal Air Force attacks on Western Germany and the swelling flow of war equipment for Britain from the United States factories.

"But it would be fatal for us to be lulled into a false sense of confidence. Over-optimism is just as dangerous as over-pessimism. . . The war has yet to be won. Our mortal enemy has still the finest best-equipped military force in the world. In recent weeks, the trouble has threatened to spread even farther and to engulf more remote portions of the world in its flame.

"Let us therefore not relax our efforts but rather gird our loins for new and greater tasks."

Public Unaware of War Effort

Drawing in broad lines a picture of Canada's war effort, Mr. Ilsley said the public probably had failed to realize the scope of "the tremendous war industry we have been constructing in Canada."

This new industry had required the investment of well over $500,000,000 of government capital alone —"nearly as much as the total capital invested in our metal mining and refining industry."

With many new factories coming into operation, technical problems were giving way to economic problems, involving labor supply, housing and the flow of parts and materials to the factories and from one factory to another to ensure steady and rapid production.

As more and more plants come into operation "we must draw much further upon our reserves of labor . . . and this will undoubtedly require bringing many more women into work than heretofore and making use of older and younger people and others less suitable for normal employment than those already working.

"I think too, that we will need to go further in drawing upon reserves of manpower in those areas of the country where it has not proven possible to expand war production as rapidly as in others."

Situation Along Entire Russian Front Under Control Says London

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—An authoritative source said today that although the Russians are falling back for a new stand east of the Dnieper River the situation along the entire Russian front is regarded as under control.

The source said reliable information from Moscow indicated the situation "on the whole would appear quite cheerful."

A "very heavy German attack on a very narrow front west of Kiev has been decimated by the Russians," according to this information but there was no indication when the attack was repulsed or of how large it was.

Moscow reports also told of heavy German attacks beaten off with great losses in the Kholm area below Leningrad, this informant said.

The present situation in the Ukraine south of Kiev, he added, "is extremely confused" on the basis of Russian information reaching London.

He said, however, that the Russian commander in the Ukraine, Marshal Semeon Budenny, apparently hopes to withdraw his forces more or less intact and that there was nothing to indicate whether the Red Army intends trying to hold the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolaev.

In the Smolensk area on the central sector, he said, "the Germans continue to dig in everywhere and there are no indications they will try to resume the advance there in the immediate future."

CHAPTER SIX

A New Mrs. Platt

"I'd like to kiss you, darling," Tug told Dona now.

"Not here on the drive, Tug," she protested, hastily withdrawing her hand from his.

"Just as you say—dream girl. Thursday, it is then."

She had already told him that, because of being out so long today, they'd better not plan on a date again tonight.

He whirled from her suddenly and she stood motionless, watching his leggy figure climb into the little car. She waved just before his handsome face disappeared from sight around a bend in the drive.

In a daze, she ran up the broad stone steps to the black iron grill at the front entrance of the big white house.

She was hurrying past Connell, who had opened the door, when he halted her with, "Mrs. Platt has been asking for you, Miss. She's in the sun room."

"Thank you, Connel."

She sighed guiltily and went more slowly toward the sun room in the southwest corner of the house. She was provoked with herself for not being wild with joy. Tug loved her, they were going to be married in three days—yet there was something missing. Was it the secret part of their plans that made her feel this way? But such marriage—whether it were shouted to the world or not. What difference did it make?

However, her own affairs would have to be shelved now. She'd better brace herself for a few difficult minutes with an infuriated Grace Platt.

Dona coming noiselessly over the deep-piled hall carpet, could see her employer sitting beside a tall window, holding a small magazine in her hand. Mrs. Platt catching up on her reading!

"Well, if I'm fired—so be it!" Dona declared defiantly to herself.

"Oh, Dona—is anything wrong?" Mrs. Platt asked as Dona entered the room.

Grace Platt's light blue eyes rested quizzically on Dona, but oddly enough, there was also an agreeable smile on her full round face. She laid the magazine on the table beside her, the lace sleeve of her rose silk hostess gown falling back from a too plump arm.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Platt. I hope you'll forgive me," began Dona stoutly. "I felt like going out in the rain, and you weren't up—so—"

"I'm glad you went. You needed fresh air after that big crush last night—that very successful crush, if I do say so who shouldn't." Mrs Platt's laugh was complaisant.

"I was a marvelous party, Mrs. Platt. I can't thank you enough for the lovely time I had."

"I should do the thanking. Sit down, will you, Dona?"

Dona obeyed wonderingly.

"I don't know what we'd have done without you," Mrs. Platt went on. "Those last-minute guests! But of course any friend of Tom Castor can't be ignored. You and De Lane seemed to get on rather well."

The flushed Dona stirred uncomfortably in the green leather chair. She said quickly, "Yes. Mr. De Lane was interesting."

"He should be—he's so famous. I've heard his books reviewed—but I never got around to reading any of them."

"Bob tells me he's taking you to the opera tonight," Mrs. Platt now added unexpectedly. "She's going with Tom. I thought you'd have nothing special to wear, so I had Jettie select one of the gowns the La Mode shop sent up this morning for Bob's approval. There are slippers to match — and Bob's taken a dislike to that mink cape I gave her on her birthday — so wear it as often as you like. You'll find everything laid out in your dressing room."

For an instant, Dona was mute with surprise and suspicion. Was there a string attached to this unheard of generosity?

"Why, Mrs. Platt—I couldn't—you see I—"

Her lips closed abruptly. What excuse could she give this woman for refusing her kindness? But ought she to go out with De Lane now—when her name would soon be linked with Tug's in that "Intention to Marry" newspaper column?

"Doubtless you're a little overwhelmed, my dear," Grace Platt went on. "But I'm completely selfish. I've a new idea you can help me with. Since last night—after I saw how well you were received—I've been realizing what you could do for me."

Dona stared at her in complete bewilderment. She sat straight and stiff in her chair, ready for anything.

"You've been here long enough to see how badly I manage Bob. Now, I'm absolutely baffled — I need help. Bob refuses to tell me where she goes or what she does. She says it's the modern way and calls me old-fashioned. Arguing with her makes it worse. You're different, Dona. You're steady, poised and efficient. Your aunt must have been proud of you."

"Thank you. Auntie was a wonderful woman."

"She certainly knew how to bring up a girl. I've failed so miserably at it. If Bob's father had lived—things might have been better."

Tears rolled down Mrs. Platt's round cheeks, threatening her clever make-up, but she carelessly wiped them away with a lace-edged handkerchief.

Sympathy for this temperamental woman, who had so much and yet so little, made Dona say immediately, "I'll be glad to help any way I can, Mrs. Platt."

"That's nice of you, dear, My plan is—that you associate closely with Bob. Be around where she is—find out what she's up to."

The plan did not exactly appeal

"You mean—report to you."

to Dona. Bob Platt—so determined to lead her own life without parental interference! Her mother could never understand or influence her if she tried a hundred years!

"Yes—give me a general outline of what goes on. She visits too many shady clubs—that is, I'm sure they're not respectable. Why, she even left her own party last night to go to some cheap place no daughter of mine should be seen in! The only thing she'd say about it was—she went with Adonis. Now who, for pity's sake, is Adonis?"

Dona abruptly checked a smile and said quickly, "I know the man, Mrs. Platt. You needn't worry—Bob won't see much more of him."

She had attempted to keep possessiveness out of her tone; also, resentment against Bob for trying to put her in a bad light with Tug. But this was past—it was history. She would never give Bob the satisfaction of mentioning it to her.

Mrs. Platt's heavy shoulders went up and down in a relieved sigh. "There! You've already made me feel better! But back to business. I'll double your salary—buy you a suitable wardrobe. I'll get in that Flora Lampkin to act as secretary. She's fearfully stupid, but she'll have to do."

"Bob may not care to have me going places with her, Mrs. Platt. I'm not so sure—"

"She likes the idea of your being friendly with De Lane, and he told me last night he'd decided to remain in town and write another book. He'll stay with the Castor's, of course. I suspect whatever De Lane advises has great weight with Tom. So if you can manage to say nice things to De Lane about Bob—it might help. Even if Tom and Bob are practically engaged, there's many a slip, you know. Bob's ambitious—and when she realizes you're on her side, she'll insist upon having you around. So you see, you can be of real assistance in more ways than one, my dear."

Dona looked at Grace Platt in blank astonishment. A shiver of distaste ran through her. She could plainly see that by this time tomorrow, she'd probably be looking for another job.

"Mr. Castor has known your daughter for years, Mrs. Platt. I'm afraid my opinions wouldn't count with him."

"Oh. well, we'll drop that angle then. Just try to influence Bob—without letting her know what you're up to. You see, I particularly want to keep her out of scandal."

Dona nodded understandingly. But she was far from convinced of Mrs. Platt's sincerity. She wondered if later, in some roundabout way, she would find herself forced to promote Bob Platt to the very eligible Tom Castor, and the thought repelled her. It seemed underhanded and nearly dishonest. Besides, she suspected the square-jawed Mr. Castor formed his own opinions without assistance. Extolling Bob's good points to him might react upon her own defenceless head. And for some inexplicable reason she preferred not to lose grace in Mr Castor's eyes.

"You wouldn't object to mingling with Bob's crowd, would you? Surely, any girl would like the excitement of it, even if it incurred some responsibility." Mrs. Platt looked anxious.

Dona's breath quickened. She couldn't deny, even to herself, that she wouldn't like being swept up in the swift pace of Unadilla's debutante set, with the powerful Platt prestige anchored solidly behind her. Of course it was the chance of a lifetime. Anything wonderful could happen.

CHAPTER 7

On The Alert

Dona did some quick thinking now. Would Bob Platt accept her influence could Mrs. Platt bring to as a member of her crowd? What bear that would make Bob, on one of her explosive, temperamental days, even civil to her mother's former secretary? Bob was a hateful little snob and she had let Dona Nickelson know it times enough.

As if she sensed what was going through Dona's mind, Grace Platt continued, "I'll make Bob see it's for her own best interests to keep you in the thick of things, Dona. She knows that on too many occasions she's exceeded the conventions—that eyebrows have lifted in her direction. She pretends not to care—but it's just a pose. It will smooth over some of her antics if a girl like you takes her part. I wish you could believe in her a little. Bob's a good girl, Dona. She'll settle down someday. But just now I've—I must protect her—from herself."

Grace Platt's voice choked and she blinked back tears.

Pity for this mother welled up in Dona again and she did not know how to refuse her request, in spite of what it might do eventually to her own peace of mind.

Then there was Tug. She and Tug would soon be married and perhaps she'd be able to include him in some of the parties. It might open up valuable business connections for him. He wanted a big opportunity. Wouldn't it be marvelous if through her he found it?

"I appreciate the position you're in, Mrs. Platt, and I'm going to accept the proposition. It goes without saying that I'll enjoy the social part, even though Bob doesn't exactly like having me around."

"Thank you, Dona. This takes a real load off my mind. I've wanted a good influence for Bob—and now you're the answer."

Dona smiled uncertainly and shook her head. "Please don't rely too much on me, Mrs. Platt. It's a little—overpowering. My head might be completely turned—then you'd wish you hadn't put so much confidence in me."

Grace Platt laughed off this possibility. She suggested quickly, "You'd better go up and take a nap, my dear—get rid of those dark circles under your eyes. You may have your hands full tonight—if Bob gets wild notions in her head."

"Yes — perhaps," said Dona thoughtfully.

But she knew as she stood up that there was no "perhaps" about it. Any minute Bob was capable of doing something spectacular. No doubt she'd feel snubbed if tabloid gossip columns ignored her. But now it was Dona Nickelson's job to keep Bob from being written up on the wrong side of the social ledger. She must see that Bob behaved like the perfect lady she never wanted to be; she must see that Bob captured the Castor millions and old family name. Some assignment! Whew!

Dona went up to her sitting room and threw herself down on the chaise-lounge to contemplate Mrs. Platt's extraordinary proposal. Probably, she should be jubilant, she thought, about her escape from humdrum secretarial work. Probably, she ought to thank her lucky stars that Mrs. Platt was being so generous to her. Generous? Well anyway, she was going to wear the loveliest of clothes, go to ultrasmart places with the sophisticated, gay young crowd and do all the things that looked so glamorous and desirable from the sidelines. Why wasn't she dancing for joy?

For one thing, there was Tug. Even if through her Tug met people who could assist his business career, he'd be jealous if she went out with De Lane or any other man too often. He had let her know this today. And after she was married to him, he'd have even more claim on her. How could she solve this delicate problem and still work for Mrs. Platt?

Then the mad idea of protecting Bob from herself! How could it be accomplished? Could a girl so near Bob's own age have much influence with the indifferent, conceited heiress?

Yet older people perhaps wouldn't make much headway with Bob, who always surrounded herself with youth and excitement. She was the sort of girl who laughed at advice from the middle-aged; suggestions from a younger person might be the solution. At least it could be attempted for poor Mrs. Platt's sake. But if Bob didn't get herself entangled in a regrettable scandal before she was through, it wouldn't be because she wasn't asking for it.

Dona tucked both arms under her head and sighed apprehensively. If Bob Platt ever suspected that she had a kind of glorified bodyguard, there was nothing she wouldn't do to retaliate. What Mrs. Platt was asking her secretary to do was not only peculiar—it was dangerous.

But that night Dona nearly overcame the load of doubt that had been threatening her when she stood contemplatively before a full-length mirror in her dressing room.

She saw the rust chiffon, softly draped about her slender waist the frivolously lace-trimmed yolk of this marvelously becoming dinner gown, and her fair neck and glowing face above it. Her hair, lustrous and oil and lemon shampoos, was rolled golden after one of Jettie's expert high on her perfectly-shaped head; and the little ringlets touching the tips of her pink, shell-like ears looked like tempting swirls of bright yellow taffy.

Rust slippers poked out from beneath her long flowing skirt as she laughed lightly and stepped back to allow Jettie to lay a luxurious mink cape across her shoulders. She glanced down at De Lane's corsage of white orchids she was wearing and a little sigh of satisfaction escaped her. The world was a grand glad she was going places!

Presently, she was riding in the Castor limousine with Bob, Tom Castor and De Lane. Bob was stunning in cream velvet over which she wore the blue velvet, sable-trimmed cape she had lent Dona the previous evening. Dona wondered at this. It was strange that a girl of Bob's snobbishness would wear an article of clothing she had ever seen on any one else.

The two men seemed highly amused at Bob's rippling chatter, leaving Dona to look out the window on her side at the green and red fairyland made by electric signs, lighted Christmas trees and wreaths, and the general air of festive hospitality the downtown streets and stores suggested. It was like sailing through some enchanted land where brilliance and happiness and security went hand in hand. She wondered if she would ever feel like the Dona Nickelson of old—the rather discouraged, envious Dona she had been only a few days ago.

Then De Lane drew her into the conversation and she suddenly remembered that she was not exactly a butterfly. She had a specific duty to perform and must be on her guard. But it looked as if it were going to be difficult, because tonight Bob was in one of her high-flung irresponsible moods.

When the Castor chauffeur halted the car before the civic auditorium, Bob declared emphatically, "I can't live through a whole evening here, Tom! I'm fed up with opera! We can have more fun at Sloppy Joe's—I feel like dancing."

Tom Castor laughed down at her as if she were a naughty child, but he said firmly enough, "That rotten hole? I'll take you anywhere else."

Fear of impending complications suddenly seized Dona. And she had not long to wait to have them confirmed.

Between acts, when she stood talking to De Lane, and Bob was with Tom Castor on the other side of the foyer, Dona came to attention.

She saw Bob smile mockingly up at Tom. Then Bob rushed rudely out the door with a large, florid-faced, flashily-dressed stranger.

Dona hesitated only an instant, then she went into action.

She quickly appealed to De Lane. "Come, please, we must follow them!"

She linked an arm through his and started him across the foyer to the checking stand.

"Follow—who?" asked the astonished De Lane.

"Bob and that man! They just went out the door!"

De Lane couldn't make head or tail of Dona's strange interest in Bob's behavior, but he was halfway in love with Dona and ready to grant her slightest wish. However, he enjoyed opera and disliked to miss any of tonight's superior performance.

So he protested, even as he wrapped her in the lovely mink cape, "Why follow that madcap? If Tom can't—"

"Oh, I must reach her! It— it's important!"

De Lane shrugged, sighed and gave in gracefully.

"Anything to please a beautiful lady," he told her meaningly.

They got into a taxicab and De Lane remembering Bob's earlier request, suggested visiting Sloppy Joe's.

But in that rather dubious night club, there was no Bob Platt or, for that matter, any one known to either De Lane or Dona among the mob of boisterous patrons.

GERMAN NATIONAL EXECUTED AS SPY

Was Arrested Shortly After He Landed in England Carrying Wireless Set

London, Aug. 15 (CP)—Josef Jakobs, described as a German National, was executed today following conviction as a spy. Jakobs, born in 1898 in Luxembourg, was shot at the Tower of London.

A War Office statement said he was a non-commissioned officer in the German army and was attached to the meteorological service.

The statement said that at the time of his arrest Jakobs wore civilian clothes, under a flying suit, and a parachutist's helmet. He carried a wireless transmitting and receiving set, a large sum of English money and an emergency food ration which included brandy and German sausage. Among his equipment was a small spade, described as for the purpose of burying his parachute and flying kit.

He was arrested twelve hours after he landed from a Nazi plane in the Home Counties area and was convicted after a court martial on August 4-5.

The execution was the first by shooting during the present war. Six others previously convicted as spies at civil trials were hanged.

The Treachery Act provides that persons, at direction of the attorney general, may be tried under military law, which stipulates execution by shooting.

2 Canadian Airmen Rewarded for Courage

(By LOUIS HUNTER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 15.— (CP Cable)— Two Canadian airmen, both westerners, were rewarded today for feats of courage and skill carried out in the face of great danger.

Flt.-Lt. C. S. Bartlett of Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for a successful flight during which he landed on enemy territory a party of Royal Engineers charged with destruction of a strategical railway bridge. (This award was forecast in a Canadian Press London Dispatch August 8.)

Sgt. Leslie Smitten, Royal Canadian Air Force from Edmonton, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal for extinguishing a fire in an aircraft hit during an attack on Bremen after which he successfully navigated the machine to Britain.

A citation in the London Gazette in which a number of awards were announced, said the 24-year-old Bartlett, who has executed eleven successful night raids, "one night in May. . . . carried out a flight which necessitated transporting a party of Royal Engineers and landing them beside a highly strategical railway bridge it was intended to destroy".

"Much of the complete success of this daring and difficult operation can be attributed to his skill", the citation added. It did not specify where the action occurred.

Concert and Social Evening Sponsored Red Cross Society By West Huntingdon Community

West Huntingdon— The spacious farm home and lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sills made a fine and convenient setting for a concert and social sponsored by the local Red Cross on Thursday evening. Many visitors came to partake of the generous hospitality of the neighborhood which added greatly to the joy of the occasion. Mr. Kenneth Stewart presided over a varied program which opened with several patriotic numbers from the Hastings-Prince Edward Regimental Band under the leadership of Mr. Floyd Ketcheson, of Frankford. This group were heartily applauded and favoured the audience with many numbers during the evening. Miss Arline Tummon of Stirling, youthful soloist was heard in a song with piano accompaniment. Mrs. Nelson Welsh of Moira offered two delightful solos with piano accompaniment played by Mrs. James Vandewater also of Moira. Mr. W. E. Tummon of Foxboro gave a vivid and challenging address based on the straight, rugged Cross of Christ and the crooked cross of Hitler. Mr. Tummon is well known throughout the district and gave two solos as well as his address.

Mr. Chester Sills in a few well-chosen words voiced the appreciation of the audience for Mr. Tummon's address and welcomed everyone on behalf of Mrs. Sills and himself.

Miss Anne Fleming of Ivanhoe contributed a solo with piano accompaniment played by Miss Bessie Fleming. Mrs. W. Vandone rendered a pleasing solo. Mrs. John McInroy gave a humorous reading.

The proceeds amounted to well over fifty dollars and will be entirely devoted to the Red Cross efforts of the community.

MISSION BAND

The July meeting of the Daisy Mission Band of United Church was held at the home of Marjorie Wright. 13 members and two visitors present. Phyliss Hammond presided over following program:—Hymn 446; Lord's Prayer in unison; A Psalm was read responsively. Roll call was "A Bible Character beginning with your initial". Readings by Jean Haggerty and Glen Wilson; duet by Phyliss Hammond and Joan McCurdy; music by Theda Moorcroft. Mrs. P. Wilson gave the talk on people of Trinidad. Mizpah Benediction and National Anthem closed the meeting.

KITCHEN SHOWER

Miss Jean Thompson entertained a large number of the girl friends of Miss Irene Elliott (bride-to-be) at a delightful party on Wednesday afternoon when a grand assortment of kitchen utensils were presented. Miss Georgie Pitman presided over the following program: Community singing; readings by Dela McMaster and Ada Sine; piano solo, Muriel Thompson; Miss Jean Thompson read an address and Irene thanked her friends for their kindness.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Stork Showers as Appropriate For Third Baby As the First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please answer some questions for me about when it is proper and when it is not proper to give a stork shower?

My sister-in-law is going to have a baby in November. This is her second child, but since her first child was born when she was living at a great distance from here, her friends here were not able to plan a stork shower for her. Is it proper to give her a shower for her second baby?

My other stork-shower problem is: Is it proper to give a woman who is also going to have her second baby a shower, since she had two showers given for her first baby? The point is that if she were given a shower for the baby that's coming it will be given by the same friends who gave her the other two showers.

Margot.

It is just as proper for the close friends of the mother-to-be to give a shower for the second baby or third (or however-many) as it is for the first baby. And obviously it's just as practical, too!

Close relatives, of course, aren't supposed to give a shower of any kind. This gives the too-apparent impression that the real reason for giving the shower is to outfit.

But if a group of close and devoted friends of the mother-to-be want to show their devotion and their affectionate interest in such an important and thrilling event in their friend's life as the coming of a baby, and if they know that giving her a shower would be welcome to her it's most natural and generous for them to gather together and make the arrangements. The only deciding point is whether or not they wish to give the stork shower.

Chiffon Dress Appropriate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to attend a semi-formal dance in November. I have a light green starched chiffon "dance dress", and a maize silk chiffon dress. Would it be proper for me to wear either of these dresses to a dance at that time of year?

Kate.

Since chiffon is an all-year-round material, either of these dresses would be correct to wear to this dance in November.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Lacks Faith in Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in poor health for about a year, and have not been going out much. Recently I was invited to a dance given by the fraternity to which my boy friend belongs. There were four of us in the party, and as it was my first real dance I enjoyed it immensely.

Since then, the other girl in the party has been making up stories about me to my boy friend. He won't come right out and say what it is, but his silence and mystery have been hurting me more than if he came to me and told me what she said.

I've no idea what it's all about, and I'm beginning to feel as if I don't care very much.

Delia.

When a young man acts that way, it wouldn't be a great loss if the friendship were broken. He listens to stories about you, and hesitates to tell you for fear of hurting your feelings. That sort of man seems a pretty poor stock to me. You will be within your rights if you insisted on being told what this other girl has said.

His Girl Is Temperamental

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend is a very lovely lady of 20, a good, all-round sport—skates, swims, plays tennis, and can carry on a very interesting conversation. Also, she's very pretty and has a great many friends.

I'm deeply in love with her and hope some day to marry her. But what's a man to do when a girl is so utterly temperamental? I've tried in every way to please her, always do the things she wants, never thinking of myself, and still she is so unreasonable at times. Often I'd like to take her acorss my knees and spank her. If I appear indifferent, I'm afraid I'll lose her. And life wouldn't be worth a thing.

Wondering.

Haven't you been spoiling this young woman? Perhaps if you show a little more independence in dealing with her, you won't have so much to worry you. Often you'll find that the proper treatment for these temperamental girls is the "iron hand in the velvet glove."

She Longs For Good Times

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I've been married for four years to a man ten years older than I am. I'm 22 now. We have two children. I've been sorry ever since the first week I married him. When he's away I almost despise him; but when he comes home I seem to care for him, although I know I'm not in love with him. He's a good provider and we don't want for things. But he does like his bottle.

"Do you think the ten years difference in our ages is the reason I feel this way? Or is it that I can't get over yearning for a good time—wishing I were single again? I don't want a lot of excitement, but I would like an occasional outing. Would you advise divorce?

Unhappy."

No, the difference in your ages does not account for your feeling toward your husband. I think that can be attributed to your youth. And your youth also is reflected in your desire to be single again and your wish for excitement.

Here's a little old-fashioned advice, which I hope you'll heed. These are hard times. Many a woman would give almost anything for a safe home with a "good provider." You have two children; if you're worried about your lost opportunities of youth, think of them. Center your life in these children. Give them a happy home. A woman with children is no longer a free agent.

Janet Gaynor and Robert Montgomery in a scene from the gay laugh hit, "Three Loves Has Nancy," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to Clive Brook and Jane Baxter in the mystery hit, "The Ware Case."

Fashion Flashes

APPEARING in many collections is the frock with touches of applique. Black wool in a sheer weave is used for a smart black frock for afternoon. It is made with a molded sweater top and has appliqued sprays of black velvet flowers and leaves on bodice and skirt.

GOING FORWARD is the line of the newest hats, some of which are tilted way down over the forehead. A smart forward posed hat is in green and gold jersey, the front and sides banked with tiny flowers made of the fabric.

SLATED FOR POPULARITY in the fur world is the coat of cocoa dyed ermine. A smart model in this fur has a boxy silhouette with slit pockets and sleeves with very deep cuffs, the skins of which are placed in horizontal fashion.

THE SLIM AND TRIM of figure will rejoice that the fitted reefer is important in autumn fashion. A smart single-breasted reefer is fashioned in purple herringbone tweed and has a collar and notched revers of mink.

PRESENTATION

On Tuesday evening of this week a large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ketcheson, Moira, to honour their daughter, Norma, whose marriage to Mr. Clare Horton takes place on Saturday. An interesting program prepared by Mrs. Jas. Vanderwater was presided over by Mr. Kenneth Stewart, the minister. In addition to his witty remarks, Gordon Foster favoured with a mouth organ selection, Mrs. Donald Holbert sang "I Love You Truly". Mrs. Arthur Emerson and Miss Dorothy Elliott played violin selections, Mrs. Nelson Welsh sang "The Little Brown Owl". Mr. Ross Ketcheson gave a reading "Yes, My Dear" and Miss Ana English gave another reading by Edgar Guest. During the course of the program, Mrs. Nelson Welsh read an address which was signed by Alice Ketcheson, Edna Welsh, Myrtle Emerson, Helen McInroy.

Two occasional chairs were presented by Miss Myrtle Emerson and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson. The bride and groom to-be replied, thanking their friends for the gifts and extending a welcome to all to visit them in their new home, after which a lunch was served bringing the delightful evening to a close.

Medicine in the News

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M.D.

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

THERE ARE NO DANGEROUS COMBINATIONS OF CLEAN FOODS

The old belief that it is always dangerous to combine certain food combinations in the same meal is strongly persistent. Almost everybody has a combination which he believes causes trouble to him, such as fish and ice cream, cherries and milk, oysters and milk, oysters and whiskey, and lobster and ice cream.

In the case of each combination it is possible that only one of the two foods or perhaps some other food taken at the same time was probably responsible for the discomfort caused. Most of the severe gastrointestinal upsets for which food combinations are blamed, are due to contamination of some single food. What was once called ptomaine poisoning is recognized as a type of infection.

The truth is than any food that is properly clean and well prepared is healthful and is not likely to cause even the slightest disturbance through forming a poisonous combination. If there is any proverb that can be ventured on the subject, it would be the following, "Any food that is digestible and free from germs cannot enter into an indigestible combination of foods."

One group of food faddists believes that it is dangerous to combine proteins and carbohydrates at the same meal. They object particularly to the old American combination of meat and potatoes. One needs merely to realize that this has been the basis of the American dinner for hundreds of years to recognize the complete lack of any scientific basis for this belief. However, the propagandists have been so active in promoting their peculiar views that it became necessary for specialists in diseases of the stomach in large hospitals to test all of these mixtures both on sick people and on well people. They proved that meats, fish, eggs, cheese and milk and bread, vegetables and fruit get along very well together in the human stomach—at least they proceed in the regular manner to be digested, to contribute their vital elements to the building of the body, to the provision of energy and then pass on as exhausted waste material.

None of these statements is planned to contradict the well established fact that there may be sensitiveness or allergies to any individual food. These conditions are well established, but the sensitivity is a sensitivity to an individual protein substance and not to a combination of substances.

If you are one of those peculiar people who likes to disturb his friends by eating watermelon and pickles or everything on the smorgasbord at a single meal, you can do so with certainty that you will have no dangerous symphoms if all of the food is clean and well prepared. You should remember at the same time, however, that the worst mistake most persons make in eating is to eat too much at one time.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 17

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is a very fortunate one, with all sorts of interests moving toward cherished goals, with high tension and effective enterprise. It is a time to reach decisively for favors, friendship, popularity and prestige, sustained by those in power. It is a time for consolidation of interests for future expansion and fulfillment. But be prepared for enmity, jealousy and underhand tactics.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very fortunate and eventful year, with important interests moving to the height of ambitious goals, perhaps with energy and high pressure. Influential personages may be depended upon to further such expansive and fruitful objectives, but be vigilant as to the wiles and snares of competitors and the jealous.

A child born on this day will have much versatility and talent, fitting it for place and power in important stations in life, friends assisting but enemies betraying.

For Monday, August 18

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a pleasant and intriguing day, with some happy surprises or unusual developments in both the business and private life. This may call for changes in plans and objectives, possibly environs, with travel, but with novel, unique and out-of-the-ordinary routines and plans flourishing.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of the unforeseen and unexpected, with unusual, novel and strange experiences or adventures. This pleasantly affects the private life, but with romance and thrills in the emotional attachments. Keep business well in hand foh substantial growth and security.

A child born on this day will be endowed with solid and dependable talents and traits of character as well as trends toward the unique, novel, radical and romantic. It will have an adventurous and thrilling life, a happy and useful one.

A SHINING SUCCESS for lingerie as well as for clothes is lustrous satin. Pure dye silk satin in heaven blue makes a new nightgown fashioned on tailored lines. Blue satin binds the bodice and is used for dainty appliques.

BAY OF QUINTE INSTITUTE

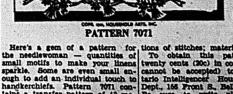
The Bay of Quinte Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Percy Bolton, Belleville, on Wednesday last. The president, Mrs. Fred Wilson was in charge. A reading followed "Love Thy Neighbor" by Mrs. B. Bonisteel. The convener of Red Cross, Mrs. Casey Ketcheson, gave a short report on work that had been done and is to be done in the near future. Many letters of correspondence were read and also cards and letters of thanks and appreciation for flowers and cards, from sick and shut-ins. Mrs. Richie Ketcheson, convener of program took charge of the remaining part of the program, the topic being historical research. The historical research was taken from the Old and New Testament prophecy of the Bible. A paper, "On things that are soon to come to pass" and "The second coming of Christ" was given Mrs. Bruce Hogle. Mrs. R. Ketcheson donated a beautiful pitcher and Mrs. Green was the lucky winner. Mrs. Wilson again took charge, the Institute creed was repeated and the National Anthem closed the meeting when Mrs. Bolton served a very bountiful lunch.

IVANHOE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The August meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Goldie McInroy with about thirty in attendance. The meeting was opened by singing the Institute Ode, followed by the Lord's prayer. During the business period it was decided to hold the September meeting in the evening. Miss Ethel Hagerman won a trip to Toronto Exhibition, also to Peterborough at the Homemaking Club Achievement Day held in Stirling July 31st. Mrs. W. Fitchett sang a beautiful solo with guitar accompaniment. Miss Lorna Wright was the guest speaker for the afternoon and chose "Legislation" as her topic. This topic was very educational and much appreciated by all present.

Mrs. W. French reviewed current events. A poem "Building a Nation" was read by Mrs. Geo. Wood. Mrs. Fitchett favoured with a guitar solo. Mrs. Morley Haggerty moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. McInroy for opening her home for the meeting. "God Save the King" closed the meeting. A dainty lunch was served and a social time followed.

Small Motifs Trim Many Linens



Household Arts by Alice Brooks

Quickly Made You'll Find Them Very Useful

COPR. 1941, HOUSEHOLD ARTS, INC.

PATTERN 7071

Here's a gem of a pattern for the needlewoman — quantities of small motifs to make your linens sparkle. Some are even small enough to add an individual touch to handkerchiefs. Pattern 7071 contains a transfer pattern of 42 motifs ranging from 1 3-4 x 3 inches to 1 1-4 x 1 1-2 inches; illustrations of stitches; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) to The Ontario Intelligencer Household Arts Dept., 166 Front S., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and PATTERN NUMBER.

Bath Rites

Women have a four-fold purpose in the ritual, which now includes special care of the feet and hands

THE BEAUTY BAZAAR---by Delight Dixon

BATHE with a four-fold purpose. Bathe to keep your body clean and lovely; bathe for relaxation of nerves; bathe for the wonderful things it does for your spirits, and bathe for the sheer joy of making yourself feel luxuriously elegant.

Bathing has reached a new high standard, and the ritual of the bath with a four-fold purpose is the kind modern women have come to applaud. Add to this greatly beneficial bath special care of the hands and feet and the entire procedure becomes a beauty rite from toe-tips to finger-tips.

The foundation of today's bath ritual is a splendid sea moss foam bath. This bath aid combines valuable ingredients of the sea with the finest essences of forest and garden, giving a treatment both by the minerals in the water and the inhalation of the vapors. These baths have therapeutic qualities, for they are based on sea moss which contains iodine in vegetable form. This, volatilized by the hot water, rises in vapors of the bath as in sea air. To the sea moss base have been added special minerals which stimulate and tone, and essences, the inhalation of which clear the nasal passages and soothe the membranes of the head and throat.

The pine bath with the sea moss base is for the time when one is feeling below par, when nerves and muscles have been over-active and are too stimulated for relaxation and sleep. The flower fragrances, orange blossom, clover and bouvardia, are for giving sheer joy and loveliness to the bath and the bather. A hot sea moss foam bath in any of the exquisite fragrances is the simplest form of four-purpose bathing. Take a bouvardia-scented bath after a busy day. Relax in it before going out in the evening and any blue mood will vanish in the fluffy pink foam of this refreshing bath.

Use the little bath mitt (shown on this page) for patting the foamy fragrance over your skin and as an aid in making your skin smooth. The mitt is made of heavy terry cloth and has thumb openings on either side so that it may be worn on either hand. A small pocket in the palm of the mitt is for the special sea moss soap which comes with the package. Extra envelopes of this excellent soap may be obtained or, if one is thrifty, she can utilize small scraps of bath or toilet soap in the pocket of the mitt. This useable aid is one of the nicest and most practicable ways of fragrant shower-bathing.

It isn't advisable to use a clear water rinse before stepping from the foamy bath. The therapeutic properties of the sea moss should remain on the skin, and a bath sheet wrapped around the body until the skin is dry.

The powder cologne, in addition to scenting, gives the skin a lovely finish and acts as a deodorizer. This bath aid, which is a combination of body powder and fine cologne, may, of course, be used on the body any time of the day, although modern women have found its fragrance particularly lasting when applied to newly-bathed skin. Use this delightful powder-cologne all over the body before putting on a stitch. It will give you a feeling of being extremely well dressed.

The permanent sachet-mitten is a newcomer in the ritual of the bath, but already has found its rightful place with the nice bathing aids. The mitten has been designed and tailored to fit the hand smoothly and is made of terry cloth and taffeta. The palm side is terry cloth and the back taffeta, which comes in soft, forget-me-not blue, pale rose pink, nile green or all white with pink and blue flowers. Powder-sachet refills come with the mitten. The powder sachet, which is made of selected and tested ingredients to produce fine moisture-absorbent texture, and is combined with perfume of a lovely bouquet blend, is kept in a special zipper-closing pocket right in the palm of the mitten. This means no fumbling for powder or powder puff and no scattered sprinkling of powder over the bathroom floor. Use the permanent body-sachet for giving your skin day-long fragrance and for keeping it exquisitely fresh and lovely.

Special bathing for the hands with the help of a companion aid serves to rest and relax the hands, smooth the skin and give the fingers a feeling of suppleness. The same basic properties as those used in the foamy sea moss, together with non-alkaline cleansing foam, have been incorporated in this luxurious aid to hand beauty. Use it before or after the manicure, to make or keep the skin soft, smooth and lady-like, and to give your hands a youthfully nimble feeling. Use it as a follow-up after your tub bath, or use it as a special rite when you want to give your hands a little extra care and to make them delicately perfumed with a satiny finish.

The special foot-bathing aid is a concentrated compound of sea moss, or sea herbs, with a vegetable iodine which is so beneficial to the health and well-being of the feet and entire body. The basic ingredient, volatilized by the hot water, rises in the vapors of the bath. The content of astringent salts takes away swelling and foot fatigue and counteracts perspiration. The woodsy pine and menthol of this foot bathing powder are thoroughly blended to soothe and cool the feet, while the refreshing vapors rise to lift gloomy spirits and benefit your whole being.

It's well to use this foot bathing powder before your pedicure for five minutes or longer. It makes the cuticle of toe-nails easier to groom. Massage the soles of the feet, pressing gently on the nerve centers in the arch and along the tendon at the back of the ankles. Follow this luxuriously beneficial foot immersion with a gentle twisting and pulling of toes, then pat on the moisture-absorbent powder-cologne.

That's how to bathe with a four-fold purpose. When you bathe your body you literally bathe your spirit. You wash away morbidness and your entire outlook on life becomes brighter. Bathe for the sheer joy of making yourself feel elegant, and give special attention to your hands and feet.

Above, a young women takes a healthy beauty bath in which iodine and minerals from the sea and the essences of both forest and garden are combined. At right, applying sachet with powder mitten.

MISS DIXON will be happy to answer questions on beauty upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, sent to her in care of this newspaper.

The use of powder cologne after the bath, in addition to its clear fragrance, gives the skin a soft finish.

Washing the hands in the sea moss combination does its bit for suppleness.

Menthol and pine, added to the basic ingredients, make the special foot-bathing powder soothing and relieve discomfort.

Delight Dixon Says:

YOU can help counteract the drying effects of summertime sun and wind by using creams liberally. Even if you are a soap and water addict, it's wisdom to follow this good cleansing rite with a second cleansing of cream. If your skin is literally parched, reverse the procedure and use scads of cleansing cream, then soap and water. Follow every thorough cleansing with an extra application of lubricating cream to help quench the dryness of parched skin.

Don't let unsightly stains spoil the feminine pinkness of your finger-tips. Scrub your fingers every day and follow with a good hand cream or lotion massage. If stains persist, use a fine pumice stone for erasing the discoloration, then scrub again.

Unruly hair ends that pop out of curl the day after they've been put in curl can be kept in perfect order between "sets" if nightly care is applied. Before going to bed, do this: Brush the hair well, wrap each curl around your finger and use a bob or hair pin for anchoring the curl in place. Then use a coarse-meshed cap or net for holding every curl in place. Secure nape-of-neck hairs up on little cloth curlers and confine them under the cap or net. Hairpins will hold cap in place.

Don't be a softie! Start before the need is so great to keep your body firm and youthful. Bicycle riding, roller skating, daily walking or any form of systematic exercising will keep the contours of the body under control and ward off flabbiness due to relaxed muscles.

In defense of smooth all-over skin, remember to suds your girdle often, particularly if it is made of elastic. Elastic, or rubber, encourages body moisture and unless both the body and the girdle are kept immaculate, the skin soon shows signs of roughness and slight irritation. A sprinkling of talcum between girdle and body will help absorb moisture, but a really fresh girdle will help keep the all-over skin flawless.

Keep your beauty and make-up accessories in good order and each in its right place. This will save you time searching for aids. Also, have a regular plan, arranging each step of your toilette to dove-tail with the next, and you won't waste time or energy.

WHAT ARE YOUR PROBLEMS?

WILL you be kind enough to help my granddaughter and me with our problems? My granddaughter would like to know if there is an exercise that will help correct a knock-kneed condition. She is 16 years old. I would like to know what to do about brown spots on my hands and forearms. The spots are the color of freckles but are as large as a 25-cent coin.

MRS. JULIA LORING.

I'll be delighted to send your granddaughter my exercise leaflet for knock knees upon receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. About your problem: I doubt whether a bleaching agent would have much effect on the brown spots though I'm sure it would be worth trying. Use any one of the good so-called freckle and liver-spot bleaches on the market.

●

Not content with my natural blonde hair, I used a bleach on it this summer and evidently had the application too strong or left it on too long. My hair is harsh and has a brassy color that screams "bleached." Is there anything I can do about darkening it just a little?

ELEANORE.

The use of a bluing rinse, or a special brown hair rinse, after the shampoo will help tone down the too-bleached hair. Use either the bluing rinse originally made for use on gray hair streaked with yellow, or any of the special brown hair rinses which are obtainable in drug and department stores, or, if you wish, send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope for names of special rinses.

●

How is white of egg used on the face and for what purpose? CLORIA.

White of egg is used as a corrective aid for oily skin. Beat the egg white ever so little and spread it over thoroughly clean facial skin. Let the coating dry, make a second application, let dry and apply a third. The egg-white mask also serves as a complete facial pack. Use lukewarm water for rinsing the mask from the skin. This egg white may be used two or three times each week.

●

I notice you occasionally refer to a corrective routine for doing away with pimples and oily skin. I wonder if you would send me whatever information you have on this.

MADELINE.

I'm so sorry that you did not enclose the necessary three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you will forward it to me at once, I'll be very happy to send you my leaflets of suggestions for overcoming oily complexion.

●

I have been using bubble baths for a long time now and love them, but would like to know why I must use more than the directions call for in order to get abundant bubbles. The water here is a little hard. BETTY.

Use one tablespoonful of pure glycerine in the tub of water. Or, if you prefer, use a water softener.

Point Anne Wins City Title Defeating Corbys 5-4 in Sixth Game by Hitting in Pinches

Winners Outhit but They Made Their Blows Count in the 'Clutch'

FINE HURLING DUEL

After knocking at the door and being contenders of the first water for three years, during which no championship was declared, the Point Anne "Cementmen" clearly demonstrated their claims as City Softball champions by winning the Belleville City Softball League championship and retaining the Bank of Commerce Trophy last night when Bubby Gaulin's charges from the Eastern Cement Village won over Corbys A.C. 5 to 4, taking the City Series four games to two in a best-in-seven play-off.

The Cementmen are worthy champions and deserve the honors they so proudly boast of today. In the previous two years no definite titleholder was awarded as the City Softball Championship was never concluded on the playing field with Point Anne having being contenders for three consecutive seasons, which doubtless made last night's winning of the league trophy the more sweeter.

The sixth and final game of a best-in-seven series was a direct pitchers' battle between Johnnie Bawden, who hurled a seven-hit game against the Cementmen, and "Ding" Luffman, who scattered ten hits well and eked out a narrow-margin win as his teammates played sterling defensive ball behind his clutch pitching.

Corbys Open Scoring

Corbys opened the scoring in the third when, after one was out, Chuck Barriage singled, Lunenberg went down swinging for a second out, Chuck Barriage and Ted Henn hit to count a run. The Cementmen came back strongly in the bottom half on their home diamond to score three runs on one hit. Doug Bennett opened the frame with a single, Luffman popped to Bawden, but Genereaux and Loft walked filling the sacks. All were safe on Whitehead's fielder's choice and Loft scored after Sero skied to centre. Kiser hit and scored for Corbys in the fourth, as did Hutchings for the homesters on Luffman's double. Corbys made a big bid in the fifth as Chuck Barriage opened with a double, but two went out before Henn singled scoring Barriage and Kiser banged out a triple scoring Henn.

Forge Ahead in Eighth

The score remained at four-all until the eighth, when the Cementmen forged one ahead. Sero opened the stanza with a single and scored on Mike Whalen's hard triple to centre. Pointer and Chuck Barriage singled in succession. Pinch-hitter Harold Bawden fouled to Green and Jim Barriage lined to right, without a resemblance of scoring. Henn singled and the bases were clogged, when Kiser skied to right and the game was over with Point Anne the 1941 Belleville City League softball champions.

It was little consolation to Corbys to know they had out-hit the Cementmen ten to seven, with Henn and Chuck Barriage getting three hits each. Kiser and Mike Whalen had triples for their respective clubs, as Luffman helped his own cause with a fourth inning double to score a run. The box score:

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr)

(Pinch-Hitting for Eddie Brietz)
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Aug. 15 —(AP)—The lowdown on all the beanings the Dodgers have suffered lately is that other clubs have been switching signals on 'em but the Brooks went right on swiping the old ones . .. That's what happened when the Braves' Dick Errickson nicked three. Catcher Ray Berres continued to give his old signs but it was Errickson who was signalling what he would throw.

When Lou Nova checked in at Doc Bier's training camp, Abe Simon packed up and left because "he didn't want to train with somebody who was so recently an invalid".

Words is words:

To make it tougher on sports writers, who were just learning to call him "the eminent oologist", Dick Harlow, the Harvard Coach, has switched his hobby from birds' eggs to ferns so now he's a pteridologist . . . Eddie Walker, the fight manager, lays 'em in the aisles with a story about how he took Henry Armstrong to London when Henry's hands were so sore he had to take violent ray treatments every day. . . .

Australian troops stationed in equatorial Africa have sent out an appeal for sports equipment. They are especially interested in baseball. . . .The same day that guy fell off the fence trying to climb into Ebbets Field, a soldier at Fort Slocum, which is on an island in Long Island Sound, went A.W.L., paddled a raft a mile and a half to the mainland and hitch-hiked to Brooklyn to see the Dodgers . .He may see them again about World series time, but not before.

JACK GRAHAM OF THE ROYALS GREAT PROSPECT

Slugging Outfielder Once in Yankee Chain but Now Owned by Dodgers

LEADS IN HOMERS

(By The Associated Press)

It's hard to pick any better major league prospects in the International baseball circuit than Jack Bernard Graham, who escaped from New York Yankees' "chain gang" this season to land on the Brooklyn Dodgers' Montreal farm, and Harold George White, one of many good flingers for Buffalo Bisons.

Graham, a slugging outfielder, 24-years old and left-handed, worked his way up from Akron to Newark in the Yankee chain and then was dropped back to Binghampton last season. He hit only .280 there but led the league in home runs. This season he's not only a contender for the home-run lead, but aleady has set a record for the Montreal club and is a big reason why the Royals remain in the pennant fight.

Last night Jack broke up the opening game of a doubleheader by clouting a two-run homer—his third hit of the game—in the last inning to give Montreal a 4-2 decision over Rochester Red Wings. He made three more hits in the 10-inning nightcap, but the Wings won it, 3-2, mainly because Max Surkont pitched two-hit relief ball in the last 3-2/3 innings.

White's performance last night wasn't so brilliant. He was pounded for a dozen blows but was credited with his fourteenth victory of the season, almost as many as he won all last year. White broke in with Rome of the Canadian-American League in 1937 after starring at Utica Free Academy.

Hal didn't have to work for last night's 11-4 triumph over Toronto. Seven Bisons faced Carl Fischer in the first inning. Five of them hit and one walked. Before Joe Vance retired the side eight runs scored.

The Jersey City-Newark and the Syracuse-Baltimore tussles were rained out.

GAME DECLARED NO CONTEST

Swaco and Deacons Battle 6½ Innings Without a Decision

It was no contest in the semi-final contest in the girls' softball league at the Armouries lawn last evening when after six and one-half innings of lusty clouting on the part of both SWACO and Deacons, Umpire Barney Smith was forced to call the game on account of darkness.

SWACO's took a somewhat commanding lead in/the early part of the game and going into the last of the fourth were leading 11-4 but Deacon's by way of some heavy hitting and aided by errors scored nine times to go out in front. The lead was short lived however and SWACO's piled up sixteen more runs in the next three innings. Deacon's were in the midst of a concerted batting rally in the final inning and were trailing by only five runs when darkness intervened with SWACO's leading 27-22.

Three home runs were conked out by each team, Sharpe for Deacon's getting two and Samain one, while for SWACO's Stead, Rowbotham and N. Corneal also hit for the circuit. Sharpe for Deacon's hurled steady ball until the seventh when she was relieved by McMurter, while Stead pitched the entire game for SWACO's.

O.A.S.A. STARTS ITS PLAYDOWNS

Three Teams From This City and District Start Quest for Provincial Title

It's play-off time again in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

The Belleville and District Softball League will send three clubs into the Provincial softball playdowns in 1941, one of which has already had the distinction of winning an O.A.S.A. provincial title, the Point Anne "Cementmen". This year Bubby Gaulin's classy Cementmen will seek another championship in the Intermediate "C" series.

In Belleville two clubs will launch upon that torrid grind of trying to win a provincial softball title, when Corby's A. C. will go out in the intermediate "A" championships, while Red Townsend's Esquire kids will seek similar honors in the Junior O.A.S.A. ranks. The local Juniors open their zone finals versus Oshawa in the Motor City on Monday with the return game scheduled to be played here on August 25th.

In 1938 Kingston eliminated Belleville in the Intermediate "A" series, but were in turn eliminated by Point Anne. In 1939, Belleville eliminated Kingston and advanced to the O.A.S.A. semi-finals to be defeated by Toronto. Last year Kingston pushed the Shell Oilers out in three games.

The 1941 playdown draw is as follows in Zone 4:

INTERMEDIATE "A"
First Round

Aug. 18—Trenton at Belleville.
Aug. 20—Belleville at Trenton.
Aug. 22—Third game if necessary.
Aug. 27—Oshawa at Peterborough.
Aug. 30—Peterborough at Oshawa.
Sept. 3—Third game if necessary.
Kingston a bye.

Second Round

Aug. 26—Belleville or Trenton at Kingston.
Aug. 30—Kingston at Belleville or Trenton.
Sept. 3—Third game if necessary.
Oshawa or Peterborough a bye.

Zone Final

Sept. 6—Peterborough or Oshawa at Belleville, Trenton or Kingston.
Sept. 10—Belleville, Trenton or Kingston at Peterborough or Oshawa.
Sept. 16—Third game if necessary.

Lawn Bowling
COMMENTS

(By CLIFF ARGUE)

On Monday afternoon next the Belleville rink, composed of H. Middleton, Herb Tilley, Charlie Iley and Charlie Sulman (skip), who won the championship of section "B" of District 15, will go to Brighton to enter the playoff for district title and district shield against a Campbellford rink who won out in Section "A". We are looking for Charlie and rink to bring back the shield.

Earl Fox of Stirling, who won the singles title of this group will meet Dwight Bennett of Campbellford.

A. J. Rendall and J. B. Hough of Deseronto, who won the title of this group, will meet a doubles team from Campbellford.

Winners of these events are awarded district shields and the right to meet winners of other groups for Ontario championship of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association at Hamilton on Labour Day.

Ab. Wonnacott is still at it. He with Clarence Clapp as vice and Doug. Row came through with high honors in the trebles tournament at Stirling on Wednesday. They took the three games high prize.

Cliff Argue with Jack Bean and Cleo Colling got away with two games.

Fred Harper and Joe Black and Davie Davison won one game, as also did Harvey Stewart with Alf Symons and Joe Blackburn.

Stirling and Campbellford have yet to decide the winner in playdowns for the Governor-General's cup. The winner of this game has to play off with the two Belleville rinks who defeated Kingston rinks last week. This will be played off on Monday night. One Belleville team will play in either Campbellford or Stirling, and the other team will play on our greens against a rink from the other town, with total aggregate score to decide the winner and right to enter into playdown against the winner of District No. 16 on a neutral green to be decided on. This has to be played off by Aug. 22. The winners of that game will then meet the winners of Quebec Province in Ottawa shortly after Labor Day.

It would be nice to see Belleville represented in the finals. We will need lots of the breaks and good bowling.

Ab. Wonnacott is leading a team into Oshawa next Wednesday to compete in the tournament at Oshawa for the General Motors gold cup. This is really a tournament and cream of Ontario's bowlers will be there. The other players will be Cliff Argue, Davie Davison and Doug. Row.

Carrasquel From Venezuela Only Unbeaten Hurler in Majors And He Is With Washington

A's Starting and Relief Hurler Has Won Six Games Without Loss

WHITE SOX CLIMB

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
Associated Press Sport Writer

One of the strangest stories of the present baseball season stars Senor Alejandro Carrasquel, the cabalero from Caracas, Venezuela.

He is the righthanded pitcher for Washington Senators whom some sport writers sought to have change his name to Alex Alexander a year ago only to encounter diplomatic opposition.

When Spring training began he was in Venezuela, or on the high seas, or the high jinks, or somewhere and white-haired old Clark Griffith squandered half his scouting budget on cable, wireless and telegraph tolls scouting for his Alex.

Eventually Carrasquel landed at Miami, Fla., and was held up by the immigration authorities until Griffith convinced them he wouldn't become a public dependent.

All of this prelude is by way of breaking, as gently as possible, the news that today Carrasquel is the only undefeated pitcher in the American League. He has scored six victories.

Started First Game in August

Carrasquel got into many games some of them tussles that Washington had a chance of winning and he got credit for a couple of his triumphs by the tides of fortune that go with relief pitching. But he didn't get a chance to start a game until Aug. 5.

Including that one he has started three games, finished all of them and won all of them—beating the third-place Boston Red Sox yesterday 6-3 by scattering eight hits in the seven innings before rain halted play.

Boston's defeat helped tangle up the teams trailing New York Yankees in the first division because Chicago White Sox came along in a night game and conquered Cleveland Indians 5-2 to climb within half a game of third place and within two games of second place.

St. Louis Browns downed Detroit Tigers 6-1 in another night game. Joe Grace hit a three-run homer for St. Louis to account for half the Browns' runs.

Rain kept the Yankees idle and curtailed the National League program to one game in which Cincinnati Reds stopped Chicago Cubs 3-1 for Johnny Vander Meer's 12th victory of the season.

Between Innings

For the first time in three years the City Softball championship has been won on the diamond and worthy title holders are Buboy Gaulin's Point Anne Cementmen. Last night the Ox Point nine came through to win the hard way. They had to make their few hits count into runs, as Corby's out-hit the Gaulinites ten to seven, but the Cementmen came out on the long end of a 5 to 4 score, which after all is the play-off. It was a great hurlers' duel between Belleville's Johnnie Bawden and Point Anne's "Ding" Luffman and the differences seemed to be in the fact that Luffman's hired help kicked in with an odd base hit that counted, while Bawden's assistants failed to punch out base hits when they were needed. This was clearly proven in the ninth when the Corby's left three stranded after having two aboard with only one away. Congratulations to the champs and now it's O.A.S.A. titles they are both seeking, Corby's opening here on Monday versus Trenton, while the Cementmen should cop the intermediate "C" title easier than whacking out these few lines.

Credit Sam Curry, of The Tweed News, with this fish story. Seems a man named Fetterly of Toronto, was angling in Sam's favourite haunts around Stoco Lake without much success recently. Disgusted with his luck, Mr. Fetterly, who had been casting for 'lunge, was reeling in his last cast in despair and as the plug left the water near the boat there was a mighty swirling of water as a monster "muskie" broke water. Before Mr. Fetterly could realize what happened the 'lunge was lying in the bottom of his boat, having missed the plug and dove right into Mr. Fetterly's boat. The anxious angler threw his whole weight upon the battling finy beauty and the battle was on between the shark of inland waters and man. Picking up a hatchet Mr. Fetterly stunned the fish and later proudly displayed a fifteen pound 'lunge that had actually jumped into his boat. And that's Sam's story.

Do you remember when Joseph Avenol, Secretary-General of the League of Nations at Geneva, presented Sir Malcolm Campbell with the "Cup of Nations" three years ago today for driving a speedboat at 127.4 miles an hour across Lake Leman, the swiftest run ever made over the lake.

When the Sacramento baseball fans put on Pepper Martin Night in honor of the Wild Horse of the Osage, who manages the Sacramento Senators of the Coast League with such eclat, they really gave him the works. Among the gifts they showered on Pepper were an auto, a hunting dog (Pointer), a crate of thoroughbred chickens and a welding machine. Apparently the welding machine was to help Pepper put himself together again in case he breaks down from rushing around the ball parks at excessive speed.

The Ontario Baseball Association rejected an amalgamated senior baseball entry from Peterboro and Oshawa at a sub-committee meeting on Thursday night. With baseball in the doldrums all throughout the Central Ontario region one would have thought the far-seeing (?) O.B.A. big-wigs would have jumped at the chance of rejuvenating the diamond game in this district. No doubt Kingston Bill Walshe will take up his old cry of "I told you so, the only place for clubs east of Toronto is in the Ottawa Valley baseball circuit." The O.B.A. as a whole has repeatedly made the baseball sailing rather difficult for clubs and leagues east of Toronto and their latest move will in no way assist the reviving of the game, especially in favour of that body. If and when baseball returns to favour with the fans east of Toronto, don't be at all surprised if places like Peterboro and Belleville toss their lot in with the Ottawa Valley sponsors.

Everyone has heard talk regarding Joe Louis retiring after he meets Lou Nova, but Joe has repeatedly denied such rumors. However, it would seem quite probable that Louis would like nothing better than to give Billie Conn another chance at his crown, as Louis is the type of person who would like to retire as a champion who has proven he is master of everyone who would like, or on his record, is entitled to a crack at his crown.

Louis has admitted that Conn gave him his toughest fight since he became champion. He has admitted that if the fight had gone the limit, as it probably would have done if Conn hadn't let the Irish blood that courses through his veins run away with his head that Billy would have been entitled to the verdict.

If it weren't for the shadow of Conn we wouldn't hesitate to say that Louis would retire right after the Nova fight next month. As it is we are pretty sure that Louis will give the former light heavyweight champion another chance after he has disposed of Nova.

It was no contest at the Armouries when SWACO and Deacons failed to complete seven innings owing to darkness last night. There were ten runs scored between the two squads in the seventh and that takes considerable time. Prexy Ted Schwab and his gals' softball bigwigs will have to get their play-offs away earlier, if they expect to declare a league champion in 1941.

Elsewhere in today's issue are the playing dates for the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns, so here are the Intermediate "C" and Junior O.A.S.A. play-off dates:

INTERMEDIATE C.
(Zone Final.)

Aug. 19—Rawdon Township at Point Anne.
Aug. 21—Point Anne at Rawdon Township.
Aug. 25—Third game if necessary.

JUNIOR A.
(Zone Final.)

Aug. 18—Belleville at Oshawa.
Aug. 25—Oshawa at Belleville.
Sept. 2—Third game if necessary.

Jack "Romeo" Gordanier, veteran sportsman of this city, spent his 78th birthday enjoying the gals' softball game at the Armouries last 'eve. Congrats Jack.

Whirlaway Appears To Be Cinch in Travers

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 16—(AP)—Whirlaway appears a cinch today to pick up a bundle of cash faster than Joe Louis makes it.

The dowagers and the dandies around this fashionable Spa try to tell you differently. They want to to sell you the argument that mud is on tap for the 72nd running of the oldest horse race in the United States the Travers Stakes. They point out that "it's Jim Dandy's kind of a track"—the same sort of slop in which Jim Dandy upset the great Gallant Fox in this stake 11 years ago.

But when you add it all up—mud, Jim Dandy and Saratoga tradition—there is no way you could see that Sam Riddle's Lord Kitchener, a brother of Whirlaway on his father's side, or William Dupont's Fairymant, son of Man O' War, have the stuff to whip Warren Wright's Kentucky flier. These are the only other entries in the classic mile-and-a-quarter, and as a result, the Blue Grass bullet figures to go postward at something near the legal minimum of 1 to 20.

Whirly is packing 130 to 112 for the others this time but he's given pounds away before and never suffered for it.

La Paz, Bolivia, Aug. 16 (AP) — The Chamber of Deputies last night named an eight-member commission, made up of representatives of eight political parties, to investigate anti-Bolivian activities.

AT THE CAPITOL

"PUDDIN' HEAD"

Republic's "Puddin' Head", Judy Canova starrer which opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, proves again that good, clean fun is the screen's best bet when it comes to entertainment.

By her performance in the current film Judy confirms the predictions made for her when she scored in "Scatterbrain" and again in "Sis Hopkins" that she is slated to become one of the ace comediennes of the screen. For all her slap-stick nonsense and her unbridled comic mugging, there is a certain sweetness about the gal that cannot be denied, and even while her audiences are laughing at her for the awkward situations in which she finds herself, they are also rooting for her to get out of them brilliantly, putting the city slickers in their places.

Francis Lederer is ideally cast as the foreign nobleman who is engaged by a wealthy family owning and operating a broadcasting station to buy the property next door, owned by none other than Judy. Their avidity to buy the property is intensified by the discovery that their million dollar skyscraper building overlaps one foot of Judy's land, and Judy can, if she wills it, force them to tear down the gigantic pile of masonry and move it over twelve inches!

"Saloon Bar."

Full of sensational surprises and thoroughly entertaining is the new Michael Balcon production "Saloon Bar", companion feature.

The star is Gordon Harker, unrivalled in his particular line of comedy, whether speaking real Cockney or with his famous "refaned" accent. His performance in this picture is superb and he is supported by an exceptionally competent cast including Elizabeth Allan, Joyce Barbour, Mervyn Johns, Anna Konstam, Cyril Raymond, Judy Campbell, Al Millen, Mavis Villiers and Norman Pieerce.

With the opening of the saloon bar at the "Cap and Bells", the customers have only one topic of conversation. A murder has been committed and Eddie, who is engaged to one of the barmaids, is awaiting execution for the crime.

"Saloon Bar" is proving one of the most popular English pictures to be shown in Canada. It ran for three solid weeks at the Eglinton Theatre in Toronto under the title "The Spanner Mystery", and warranted holdovers at many of its other engagements.

The same program includes the latest in the ever popular "Canada Carries On" series, "The Strategy of Metals", and a colored cartoon, "The Trial of Mr. Wolf".

IN MEMORIAM

PREST—In loving memory of a dear Wife and Mother, Cora Prest, who departed this life, August 17th., 1933.

Dear mother you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more;
Still in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
—Ever remembered by her family.

ALLORE — In loving memory of our dear aunt, Mrs. Jessie Allore, who passed away August 17, 1940.

Just when your life was brightest,
Just when your years were best,
You were called from this world of sorrow
To a home of eternal rest.
—Sadly missed by Marjory and Bill. A16

ALLORE — In loving memory of Mrs. Jessie Allore (nee Jessie Taylor), who passed away August 17, 1940.

Little did we know when we awoke that morn,
The sorrow that day would bring.
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.
From all life's dangers, now secure is she.
Wonderful she was, wonderful she ever shall be.
—Sadly missed by Brothers and Sisters. A16

JUDICIAL SALE

PURSUANT to an order of this Court there will be sold by public auction by the Local Master of this Court at his office in the Court House, Belleville, Ontario, on Saturday, the 6th, day of September, 1941, at the hour of 11 o'clock D.S.T. in the forenoon, the following two parcels of land: PARCEL NO. 1—the north 50 acres of the east half of Lot 4, Concession 4, in the Township of Huntingdon. PARCEL NO. 2—the west 33 1-3 acres of Lot 15, Concession 11, in the Township of Huntingdon. The above two parcels may be sold separately or together. Parcel No. 2 is said to contain a quantity of standing wood.

The above property will be sold subject to a reserve bid to be fixed by the Local Master.

Terms of Sale

The purchaser shall pay on the day of sale 10 per cent of the purchase money and shall pay the balance of the purchase money within thirty days, without interest, from the date of sale. No bid shall be made less than $10.00 above the former bid. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the usual terms and conditions of the Court.

Further particulars may be had from Frank Baalim, Barrister and Solicitor, Madoc, Ontario, or to Mrs. Dorothy Wright, Ivanhoe, Ontario.

"Three Loves Has Nancy"

It's daffy—it's looney—but it's grand fun and entertainment! That's what the critics claim about "Three Loves Has Nancy," which brings together three of the motion picture screen's greatest farceurs and most talented players—Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery and Franchot Tone.

Here is Janet Gaynor, once more a glamorous girl as in "A Star is Born." Here again is the suave, glib, sophisticated, slyly humorous Montgomery who first captured the hearts of American audiences in the same type of part and zoomed to stardom. And, here is Franchot Tone in a light, reckless characterization of a fun-loving man-about-town.

The mission of "Three Loves Has Nancy" is to entertain you, and you may depend upon it it will fulfill its mission to the last close-up. Here is an idea of the story: Montgomery, a fugitive from a designing mother who wants to marry her daughter to him, finds himself in a southern town where he meets Janet Gaynor who has just been left at the church by her intended bridegroom. Janet goes to New York to find her missing husband-to-be and winds up as Montgomery's cook. Franchot Tone, Montgomery's buddy, samples Janet's cooking and falls in love with her. Montgomery, in desperation, talks Janet into going away to avert her marriage to Tone. Then Janet's intended bridegroom shows up and Montgomery races to the pier station to stop her. When he gets there he forgets about the missing bridegroom, realizes that he loves her himself and asks her to marry him.

"Three Loves Has Nancy," is a wild, three-cornered, mad romantic farce. It is a topsy-turvy story of laughs and a tear. If you want laughs, grand laughs, laughs with a tug at the heart strings, see "Three Loves Has Nancy," which starts next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"The Ware Case"

With Clive Brook, Jane Baxter and Barry K. Barnes supported by an excellent cast of featured players, one of this year's most outstanding dramas combining mystery, romance and suspence, entitled "The Ware Case" will also be presented as a grand companion feature in addition to "Three Loves Has Nancy" at the McCarthy. Latest Fox News events will also be shown. The Glasbake Ovenware piece is the final deep dish, which make up the set; same may be procured afternoon or evening.

AT THE BELLE

Marx Bros. "The Big Store"

Five hit musical numbers feature the Marx Bros. newest funfest, "The Big Store", now at the Belle Theatre. Harpo and Chico have their usual solos on the harp and piano, while Tony Martin sings two songs and Groucho and Virginia O'Brien join forces in a novelty song and dance number.

Most spectacular number is "Tenement Symphony", sung by Martin, with Harpo and Chico playing their favorite instruments during one chorus. A forty-piece orchestra of youngsters and a twenty-four-boy choir furnishes the accompaniment.

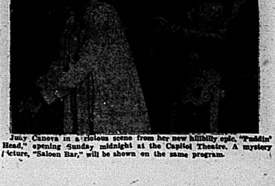
The story finds Groucho as Wolf J. Flywheel, private detective, assisted by Harpo and Chico, trying to protect Martin from an unknown killer in a department store, setting for most of the film. After almost demolishing the store and scaring the life out of the customers and salesgirls, the Marxes finally "get their man". Groucho also gets his woman, the wealthy owner of the store, whom he woos and wins in typical Groucho fashion.

Virginia Grey is featured in the romantic lead opposite Martin, while Margaret Dumont resumes her traditional role as foil for Groucho's mad love-making. Douglass Dumbrille, Marion Martin, Henry Armetta and William Tannen are included in the cast.

"The Big Store" was directed by Charles Riesner, noted comedy director. Although making his first picture with the Marxes, he has directed nearly all the important comedy stars of his day, including Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, Laurel and Hardy, Buster Keaton, Jack Benny, W. C. Fields, Jimmy Durante and Charlie Chaplin. Louis K. Sidney produced.

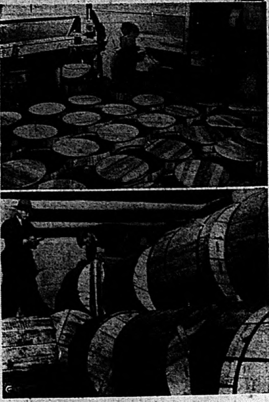
Three Short Treats

What Metals mean in war is revealed in "Strategy of Metals", the latest interesting and entertaining film of the Canada Carries on series to be exhibited on the same program with "Goose Goes South", a clever color fun cartoon, and the Belle latest world news events, continuous shows will be presented today.



Judy Canova in a riotous scene from her new hillbilly epic, "Puddin' Head," opening Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre. A mystery picture, "Saloon Bar," will be shown on the same program.

DRY MILK AND PRIME CHEDDAR FOR BRITAIN



At TOP here spray-processed milk is shown being packed in barrels for shipment to Britain. Much of Britain's dairy land has been put under cultivation to produce vegetables, so it is up to the American cow to do her bit for democracy. BELOW, a shipment of cheese is checked before shipment to Britain under the lend-lease act.

RIOTS REPORTED IN MANY PLACES

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation last night reported rioting and dissension against Nazi oppressors "from practically every country occupied by the Germans."

In France, the BBC said, riots occurred in Paris yesterday and in one instance a bomb exploded in a public square killing three people. The German Commander in Paris had threatened the population with the death penalty and heavy imprisonment for anti-German activities.

In Belgium more than 100 people had been arrested in Liege and others at Bruges. At Liege Belgian patriots damaged a submarine cable, destroyed spare parts in a steel works and sank a 9,000-ton German food ship in the canal, the BBC said.

Produce Receipts About Equal Demand

Toronto — All lines held firm in their recently strengthened positions at the close of trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Though they continued light, butter and egg receipts proved sufficient to meet the demand, which was only fair in both cases.

The egg market has maintained a firm tone during the current week because, while trading has been a shade quieter, the volume of fresh arrivals has continued in line with requirements. Due to exceptionally good local demand, spot prices on grades A pullet, B and C were increased half to one cent a dozen. Wholesale-to-retail prices reacted accordingly. Lower grades have been the centre of local activity the last few days, with the advanced prices of top grades apparently being too high for the purchasing power of the average consumer. I.C.L. shipments to the British West Indies and Eastern points have not been so heavy, but the usual volume has gone out to military supply depots.

The butter market held steady under slow trading. Though offerings were light, there appeared to be no pressure to sell. Buying was light and rather spotty.

Fowl continued scarce in trading on the poultry market this week and the general quality of the few arrivals was said to be only fair. Prices held unchanged from the previous week, with dealers expressing hope for a firmer tone shortly.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Aug. 16 (CP). — Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

Butter: First grade solids, jobbing price, 37 1-2c to 38c.

Eggs: Graded shipments offering at A-large, 35c to 35 1-2c; A-medium, 34 1-2c; pullets, 28½c; B grade, 27c to 28c; C grade, 24c. Receipts, 1,763 cases.

12 Ducks a Day Is Limit Set

Ottawa, Aug. 16—Migratory bird hunting regulations setting the duck limit at twelve a day in all Provinces this fall were announced by the Mines and Resources Department.

The regulations, continuing the ban against use of live decoys, sets the season duck bag limit at 150 in all Eastern Provinces.

Hunters in the five Eastern Provinces will be allowed five geese a day and fifty for the season, but the closed season will be in force for the Brant, a species of goose.

The department announcement said the new regulations are patterned generally after those adopted in 1936, when regulations were made more stringent to meet a "serious depletion of waterfowl" attributed partly to over-shooting.

Open season dates in Ontario:

Ducks, geese (other than Brant) and Wilson's snipe, Sept. 15-Nov. 15 or Oct. 15-Nov. 30, depending on location, except in the Counties of Essex, Kent and Elgin, where season for geese, other than Brant, will be Nov. 1-Dec. 31; woodcock, Sept. 20-Oct. 20, or Oct. 1-Oct. 31, according to district.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Russian Army today completed eight weeks of successful resistance to Hitler's invasion forces and the prospects appeared bright for continued fighting until the changing seasons force Germany to a winter standstill on the bleak 2,000-mile eastern front.

Confidence that no early collapse in the Soviet Army's fighting power is in prospect is reflected in the message to Stalin from Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt declaring the time has now come to "turn our minds to the consideration of a more long term policy."

Stalin readily responded today to the Anglo-American message, informing the British and the United States ambassadors who jointly delivered it to the Kremlin that he is ready to "take all necessary steps" for the suggested conference in Moscow to which Britain and the United States will send "high representatives."

At the front the military situation appeared steadier than of recent days. The Russians probably will lose the southern Ukraine, that is the territory south and west of the Dnieper River. But in this sector the Germans have not scored anything that could be described as a rout of the Russian forces, and it may be several weeks before the area is effectively occupied.

A nw drive has been started against Leningrad from several directions. The combined Finnish-German forces approaching from the north are making some progress but all in all the city seems to be as safe as it was a week ago.

In the central sector there has been no important fighting. The Germans are in possession of what is left of Smolensk but how far east of that city they have penetrated is not known.

Three Suspected Of Killing Dormoy

Vichy, August 16—(AP)—Police were reported working today on the theory that two men and a woman blown to bits by a bomb in the Albert I. Park in Nice Thursday were responsible for the assassination of Marx Dormoy, a Socialist leader under the Third Republic.

It was recalled that after Dormoy was killed July 26 by a bomb which exploded in his Montelimar Hotel room, police said they sought two men who took a room opposite Dormoy's and for women who visited him.

The police said they believed the two men and the woman were carrying a bomb in a valise and that it exploded prematurely while they were resting on a park bench.

It was announced that the Secretary of an important Rightist Movement in Vichy, described only as "a group with political tendencies," had been arrested on a charge of setting off a bomb which damaged the Vichy Synagogue.

Two others of the group were arrested as accomplices and two more were charged with stealing dynamite for the bomb from a nearby quarry.

Result of Strike Vote Awaited

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—Result of a strike vote was awaited today by 5,000 miners at 12 mines in this area after the staging of a one day "holiday" Friday.

The men quit their jobs after the Kirkland Mine Workers' Union called the vote, object of which was to show the union's strength. Decision to take the vote was taken last Sunday when proposals of a three-man Industrial Disputes Commission was rejected. The men offered to work Sunday to make up for lost time in taking the vote yesterday, but the mine operators declined.

Mine officials charged the unofficial holiday was actually an "illegal walkout" and charged that the holiday curtailed gold production to the extent of $86,845 for the 24-hour period involved.

T. McGuire, union administrator, said the miners offered to work on Sunday in place of Friday. "Had the operators accepted that offer there would be no loss in gold production," he added.

Mines affected by the stoppage were: Toburn, Sylvanite, Wright-Hargreaves, Lake Shore, Teck-Hughes, Kirkland Lake, Upper Canada, Brock, Bidgood, Golden Gate, Macassa and Morris Kirkland.

450-Pound Sea Lion Sets Out for Stroll

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Fifth avenue probably never had such a stroller on its sidewalks as it had today.

Against almost overwhelming odds, Peter, a 450-pound, seven-foot sea lion, escaped from a crate in which he was being removed from the Prometheus fountain in the Sunken Plaza of Rockefeller Center, and started for a stroll down the street.

For twenty minutes Peter defied the efforts of four keepers and three patrolmen—all armed with brooms—to get him back in his crate, which was baited with fish.

STORE LOOTED OF HOSE

Cincinnati, Aug. 16.—(AP)— A "raid" on silk stockings at the store of Nathan Kaufman today brought police action. Kaufman said burglars looted his store of 1,527 pairs of silk and Nylon hose valued at $1,498.

Market Prices Remain Steady

Prices for all lines of produce remained at essentially the same levels as quotations of last Saturday with increased offerings of peaches and plums featuring a crowded market.

Egg prices remained firm at the 35c level for Grade "A", while mediums went for 33c and pullets ranged from 28c to 30c. Butter was 40c per pound, while fowl held steady; broilers ranging from 80c to $1.75 the pair. Fowl remained at the usual 25c to 27c level with well-finished birds selling at $1 to $1.75 each.

On the outside market peaches retailed at 75c per six quart basket, while a wide variety of plums, such as Niagaras, Imperials and Shiros sold at 60c per basket. Burbank plums were 55c and green games 65c the basket. Although the season for raspberries is over, one or two vendors offered the blue variety at 30c the box, while huckleberries were also to be had at 25c quart. Summer pears were 35c per basket.

Tomatoes were $1 per bushel or 40c the 11 quart basket, with six quarts selling at 25c and 30c. Potatoes were held generally at 40c the peck, while cucumbers ranged up to 60c and 75c for gherkins. Large cucumbers were 5c each and 3 for 10c. Corn was 30c per dozen ears, pickling onions 20c the quart, cauliflower from 10c to 30c, melons, 10c to 25c and vegetables 5c per bunch. Fresh celery was 10c per head.

Well-colored Red Astrachans were in demand and sold at 40c per half peck while Melbas brought 25c per six-quart basket; Yellow Transparents 50c the peck and Duchess 40c.

Only whitefish were offered on the fish market, vendors asking the usual 22c per pound. Young porkers were more plentiful than for the past two weeks and were held at $5.50 up to $7 each, according to age and quality.

WHEAT KEPT IN MOTH BALLS

New Ulm, Minn., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Judges at the Brown County Fair thought a certain sample of wheat had a strong odor. "Moth ball", they agreed. A farmer who won a prize on the sample last year had kept it in moth balls for entry again this year. It didn't work.

New Pair of Artificial Legs May Be Flown to Famed Ace Now Prisoner in Germany

London, Aug. 16—(CP Cable)—It was officially reported here last night that the Nazi Air Force has offered to allow a Royal Air Force plane to fly new metal legs across the Channel for Sqdn. Ldr. Douglas Bader, legless R.A.F. ace, now a prisoner of war.

Bader's legs were reported broken in his descent by parachute to enemy territory when shot down earlier this week.

The reports said that the Nazi message had been sent through the International Red Cross after Sir Bernard Docker, chairman of the British Hospitals Association, had offered to buy a new set of artificial limbs for the British ace.

If the Nazi offer is accepted the legs probably would be dropped by parachute, it was indicated. Bader lost his legs in a flying accident before the war.

Lord Beaverbrook in Washington to Confer With U.S. Officials

Lord Beaverbrook, RIGHT, British minister of supply, who was present at the history-making conference between President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill somewhere on the broad Atlantic, is shown at the British embassy in Washington, D.C., shortly after his arrival from the epic meeting. At his side, holding a dachshund, is Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the U.S. Lord Beaverbrook, who arrived in Washington to discuss speed-up aid to Great Britain and Soviet Russia with British and American officials, issued an appeal to America "to send us as much as you can as quickly as possible under the generous terms of your lease-lend act."

AS PRESIDENT AND PRIME MINISTER UNITED AGAINST AXIS FOES

With high officers of their governments, armies, navies and air forces standing behind them, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are pictured on the deck of H.M.S. Prince of Wales during their historic meeting in the Atlantic. Harry Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, is pictured, LEFT BACKGROUND, standing beside W. Averell, lease-lend co-ordinator in London. Standing behind the President and Prime Minister are, LEFT to RIGHT, Admiral E. J. King, commander of the Atlantic fleet; General George Marshall, U.S. army chief of staff; General Sir John Dill, chief of the British imperial staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of U.S. naval operations and Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord of Britain.

6 CHILDREN KILLED

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—Six of R. W. Brumpton's seven children were killed today when a Royal Air Force plane crashed on their dwelling in Newark, Nottinghamshire. Two fliers also died in the Crash.

STORM-SWEPT PORTUGAL

Lisbon, (CP) — Unusually severe summer storms have swept Portugal destroying ripening harvests of fruit and badly damaging grain crops.

COOKING EGGS, CENTS

Manchester, (CP)—Over eggs "slightly deteriorated" but good for cooking are selling in shops of various English cities at 1s, 6d. a dozen, or about three cents apiece.

Fire Chiefs Meet At Peterborough

Over 300 delegates to the 32nd annual convention of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs are expected to convene in Peterborough starting Tuesday, Aug. 26th, when this organization meets for a three-day session. Fire Chief George Gimblett of Peterborough is President of the Association.

Highlighting the convention will be a 40-minute address on opening day by District Officer Daniel Ivall of London, England, when he will tell of experiences and fire-fighting practices of the heroic British Fire Fighters during blitz raids over London. Chief James Kelly of Ottawa will address the gathering on "Apartment House Fires," while Howard Johnston, former A.R.P. from London, England, will lecture on Wednesday.

Considering the importance of the convention and the promise of much valuable information to be gathered from the various lectures, Fire Chief William Lynch of this city is anxious that a delegation of at least two of the Belleville department be permitted to go to Peterborough at this time. Chief Lynch points out that fire-fighting practices discussed during such conventions often prove of great assistance in coping with fires that might occur in any locality.

MORE JAP TROOPS LAND

Saigon, French Indo-China, Aug. 16 (AP) — Forty-eight transports bringing additional Japanese troops to southern Indo-China are expected off Cap St. Jacques tonight. The troops probably will disembark Sunday.

Presumably they will complete the force stipulated in the French-Japanese agreement for occupation of bases in this region.

BRITAIN AND U. S.

Russia Not Beaten is Belief

London, Aug. 16 (CP)—A request by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt for a three-power conference with Russia was taken here today as sign that Britain and the United States consider Russia far from beaten.

(In Moscow, Premier Stalin said he would speed arrangements for the consultations.)

Although the Soviet army was reported retreating before a fierce German offensive in the Ukraine, war commentators emphasized that the message to Stalin referred to "consideration of a long-term policy", apparently indicating expectation the war would last a long time.

At the same time the fact that the two nations pledged Russia "the very maximum of supplies" brought a new crop of rumors that Britain would land troops in the northern wastes of Russia to keep open the important Arctic supply line.

Make One Line Safe

Supplies from Britain and American could enter Russia by two obvious routes going thru' the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Archangel or across the Pacific to Vladivostok. If Japan entered the war against Russia one of these supply lines would be gone, while a big German-Finnish advance in the north would cut the second.

For this reason, informed sources said, Russia, the United States and Britain would be anxious to consolidate the northern front and make at least one supply line safe.

One Other Route Possible

One other route was possible. Supplies could be taken through the Persian Gulf port of Basra, up through Iraq and across Iran (Persia) or Turkey to the Caucasus, provided those countries would consent.

Commentators expressed opinion that war strategy and other problems in addition to that of supply would be discussed at Moscow and it was thought that British and United States staff officers would travel to Moscow to join the talks.

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply, now in Washington, was believed to be Britain's star representative for the conferences but the name of Foreign Secretary Eden, who knows Stalin, was also mentioned.

Shows Desire Says Paper

London newspaper editorials said the request for the meeting showed the sincere desire of Britain and the United States to give Russia all possible help.

The Daily Mail said Stalin and his military leaders were "already fixing on the conduct of the Spring and Summer campaigns of 1942". It suggested the Russians hoped to hold the Nazi forces in unfavorable positions when the snows come ten weeks hence and "then gather strength and material sufficient to hurl them out next year."

The News Chronicle wrote:

"At one time there seemed to be a danger that Anglo-American help to Russia might be only partial and half-hearted. That fear is now largely dispelled. Russia is to be treated as fully an ally in deeds as in words . . there are two jobs ahead—to win the war and to win peace. The Atlantic meeting, has helped both forward."

The Manchester Guardian called the Churchill-Roosevelt letter "practical" and said "This is to apply to the common cause the rule of common sense."

"What Russia needs most of all could it be done is a land division by us which would draw off part of the invading armies. That is a matter for military calculation. What our resources make practicable must always be set against the forces which it would be in the power of Germany to concentrate at any given point in Western Europe. The possibilities must always be governed by the means."

WAC REGULATIONS

Candidates for appointment as officers must be 21 years of age at least, of the same medical categories as volunteers, and British subjects. They must hold certificates of matriculation from a university within the Empire or its equivalent and have "such training and qualifications as may be authorised by the Minister of National Defence, on whose authority appointments, promotions and requirements shall be made."

In due course, Col. Ralston said, an "officer administering" will be appointed to command the corps from National Defence headquarters. A C.W.A.C. officer will be appointed at each military district headquarters as staff officer.

Pay Two-Thirds of Regular Army

Further officers and other ranks will come under their own officers, warrant offices and non-commissioned officers respectively, except that the district officer commanding will be responsible for training, administration and discipline of the corps within his district or may delegate a senior army officer where the unit is located.

Pay for officers and other ranks is two-thirds of that in the regular army.

A recruit will receive 90 cents a day, a classified volunteer 95 cents, Lance Corporal, $1, Corporal, $1.15, Sergeant, $1.50, Staff Sergeant, $1.70, Warrant Officer (Class 2), $2.10, and Warrant Officer (Class 1), $2.80.

Five per cent of the daily rate of pay of both officers and ranks, commencing from date of appointment, will be held as deferred pay until discharge.

A subsistence allowance of 85c per day for volunteers, and $1.70 for officers will be made to those not living in camps or public quarters nor receiving rations.

Permission to marry may be granted officers and volunteers after six months' service.

All personnel will be eligible to receive medical and dental care, and sick leave on recommendation of a medical board.

Granting of Leave

Officers may be granted leave up to 14 days with pay on completion of six months' continuous service, with an additional 14 days' leave on completion of each year afterwards. Other ranks may be granted furlough of 14 days with pay on six months' service exclusive of the probationary period, and 14 days' leave on completion of each successive year.

Compassionate leave and furlough may be granted to meet special cases of hardship for a period not exceeding 14 days.

Training will include squad drill without arms, saluting drill, recognition of badges of rank of His Majesty's forces, first aid, gas defence, special training in the particular branch in which the volunteer is serving and such other training as may be decided by the minister.

After a recruit has been accepted for enrolment as a volunteer discharge may take place for the following reasons: Medical unfitness; not likely to become efficient; misconduct; irregularity of enrolment; services no longer required, on compassionate grounds; transfer to another branch of service; employment on other work of national importance; or on special authority of National Defence Headquarters.

Weese and Onderdonk Carry Wide Range of Tires and Accessories

Carrying a most complete line of tires and tubes, as well as a wide range of automobile parts and accessories for practically every known make of vehicle, Weese and Onderdonk, associate store of the Canadian Tire Corporation of Toronto, offers to district motorists in need of replacement parts or new equipment for their automobiles, one of the best services in the city.

J. Onderdonk

Superlastic and Superlastic "Master" tires are featured by Weese and Onderdonk, being tires widely recognized throughout Canada as on par with best tires manufactured in this country. Superlastic tires and tubes carry the company's liberal guarantee against manufacturing defects and against failure through any cause within a specified time.

"Morpower" batteries, manufactured expressly for Canadian Tire Corporation by one of Canada's outstanding battery manufactures, are carried in stock for every type of car while the range of their parts and accessory department, together with the prompt and efficient service given, is well known in the Belleville district as their volume of business would indicate.

Established Over Six Years

Since the local branch of the Canadian Tire Corporation was established in Belleville by Weese and Onderdonk, only six and one-half years ago, the popularity of the now well-known CTC brand of tires and auto accessories has grown immensely, the high quality of their products and their practice of keeping costs to rock bottom, meet with the approval of the motoring public.

The members of the firm Weese and Onderdonk, although not natives of Belleville, are nevertheless well known in Belleville and district. Mr. Earl Weese, senior partner of the firm, and Mr. Keith Onderdonk are sons of the soil, being born, and having farming experience, in Prince Edward County. Slightly over six years ago they entered partnership and started business in automotive parts and accessories on their present site.

Canadian Tire Corporation "Moto-Masters" oils and lubricants, together with British American gasoline in both retail and wholesale capacities are handled by Weese and Onderdonk. Electric fence kits are also one of their features. When in need of a new tire for your car or for a part that is needed quickly, call on Weese and Onderdonk, at 108 Front Street, or Phone 1083.

Nazis Forced To Stake All In Russia

(By EDWARD BOMAR)

Washington, Aug. 16 — (AP) — There are indications that Hitler may make a climactic effort to crush Russia quickly as an answer to the "Atlantic charter" drafted by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

At least one more supreme attempt to roll up the Soviet armies in the north and take Moscow and Leningrad is clearly within the power of the Nazi war machine before snow flies, and the day's news suggests it may already be taking form.

Five hundred miles north of the fighting front in the Ukraine the struggle is being renewed significantly in the centre near Smolensk, Moscow reports. Still further north the thrust toward Leningrad has gained renewed momentum. Indeed Soviet war despatches report that the fourth major Nazi drive of the invasion has started in that area.

The ten days that have elapsed since the main offensive was shifted southward to the Ukraine is sufficient for a formidable gathering of forces for another attempt to effect a decisive break-through in the direction of Moscow or Leningrad. The signs appear to point to another transfer of emphasis.

With the extent of the German triumphs in the Ukraine uncertain and the next offensive move a question, it is pertinent to recall that at the start of the invasion the most expert neutral military opinion held that the drive directly toward Moscow was of primary importance.

What took place on the flanks, in the expressed judgment of an outstanding American official analyst, was in the nature of a diversion. The axis of the drive to destroy Russia's main field forces was foreseen as the Brest-Litovsk-Moscow line and events bore out the prediction.

It was in the centre that the main German striking force was massed, and for a time the German armored divisions threatened to duplicate there the debacle of Northern France.

On the flanks are forces of Germany's allies, and those in the Ukraine particularly possess dubious enthusiasm for the role of shock troops for Nazi triumphs.

Advance calculations nevertheless have been pretty well thrown overboard by Russia's stubborn resistance to the invader.

A Berlin calculation was upset by the promptness with which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill accepted Soviet Russia as a recruit in the struggle to curb Nazi aggression, thus spiking the attempt to make the invasion a world crusade against bolshevism.

Then there was the widespread expectation that Berlin soon would undertake a peace offensive. The Red Army's stubborness has postponed any such coup. Now it may be that the declaration of British and American war aims has headed it off entirely.

JUST PROPAGANDA, SAYS BERLIN

Berlin, Aug. 16—(AP)—German spokesmen today asserted the promises of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to Joseph Stalin were "a propaganda attempt to cover up the flop of their high seas meeting."

They said, "The whole world realizes the eight points are a ridiculous outcome of so important a meeting. Hence, to keep alive world discussion, the message to Stalin was launched 36 hours later."

Hitchon's Radio Service Takes Great Pride in Perfection of Repairs

One of the few radio service shops in the city specializing in radios exclusively, Hitchon's Radio Service, 24 Victoria Avenue, offers in their sales department the product of General Electric, one of Canada's best known names in the electrical and radio manufacturing field, while in addition their service work is guaranteed by twelve years' experience in the service field.

Eugene Hitchon

To become a radio mechanic and to spend his life delving into the then little-known secrets of radio transmission was a boyhood ambition of Eugene "Gene" Hitchon, proprietor of Hitchon's Radio Service. During the period when he was receiving his education in Belleville schools he was wont to dream of the mysteries that lie behind peanut tubes, ear phones, condensors and dry batteries and like many of the successful radio men of today gained his initial experience the practical way.

Gene realised his boyhood ambition when in 1929 he went to work as a radio repair man in a local shop, but the ambition to be "out on his own" was responsible for setting up his own establishment. Since 1932 Hitchon's Radio Service has represented a zenith in radio servicing and, although Gene is always glad to show prospective customers the latest models in radio, his first specialty is the service shop.

Every Testing Equipment

Here practically every testing equipment used in the radio servicing world is expertly used to ferret out causes of trouble in your radio and it's Gene's claim that he can make almost any radio "work like new". Expert assistants have now been added to the servicing department but all work must have Gene's OK before it is returned to the owner.

Hitchon's Radio Service is the oldest service shop in the city where nothing but radios are repaired and although amateur shortwave transmitting stations are now forbidden by the Department of National Defence, it is the only service shop in town holding a shortwave licence. Before the restriction was placed Mr. Hitchon frequently conversed with other amateur "fans" the world over.

For expert radio service where satisfaction is guaranteed, phone Hitchon's Radio Service at 854.

25,000 NAZIS LOST IN RED COUNTER-ATTACKS

Lower Manhattan Shaken by Series Of Huge Explosions

American Freighter, Loaded Barges Aflame—One Burning Ship Set Adrift

MANY FEARED DEAD

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)— Two men were killed, considerable property damage was caused and a number of seamen were feared dead today in a fire which swept a section of the Brooklyn waterfront.

The blaze, touched off by a series of lightning-like explosions, destroyed the Bua Mail Line freighter Panuco, a 1,000-foot Cuba Mail Line pier, and damaged an adjoining pier and several craft assisting in the unloading of a highly inflammable cargo from the Panuco.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said he feared "many more men or bodies" were aboard the flaming Panuco which was towed into the East River after she caught fire.

25 Fished Out of Water

He said 25 men were fished out of the river, two of them, both longshoremen, were dead and 22 were taken to hospitals.

An hour and a half after a tongue of flame licked out of pier 27, ripping it apart and igniting barrels of oil on nearby barges, injured longshoremen and others were still being rushed to Long Island College Hospital.

Some of the victims were believed dying.

Meanwhile firemen scoured the New York harbor waters at the foot of pier 27 picking up stevedores and many others who either were hurled or jumped into the water at the time of the blast.

The Panuco, heavily loaded with quicksilver, minerals and hemp, was cut loose and drifted crazily down Buttermilk channel opposite Governor's Island and burned into a smoking empty hulk within an hour.

Five Barges Cut Loose

Five barges several of them loaded with steel cables destined for a U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, were touched off by the licking flames and likewise drifted harborward.

The explosion—described by longshoremen as a "streak of lightning" lashing out of pier 27—shook lower Manhattan.

Brooklyn and Manhattan fire departments, the city's largest and newest fireboats and coast guard cutters and small craft rushed to the area bringing the blaze under control within two hours after the first explosion thundered out at 11:40 a.m. E.D.T.

Many of the injured were said to have been crewmen of the Panuco of whom there were 55 but it was not known whether the full complement was aboard at the time of the fire.

Stranger's Dog Helps Girl in Fight for Life

Philadelphia, Aug. 18 (AP)—A little brown dog, a stranger's gift, is helping seven-year-old Geraldine Devlin in her fight for life.

The youngster, suffering from a heart ailment that baffles doctors, failed rapidly after her pet terrier, Sandy, disappeared a week ago.

"I want Sandy," she insisted, despondently, when more than 100 persons, many of them with dogs, called at her home.

Mrs. Thelma Fish read about Geraldine's illness and offered her Brownie, a terrier almost the image of Sandy.

"Gerry fell in love right away with Brownie," said Walter Devlin, her father. "From the minute that dog came into the house, she began to pick up and change for the better."

Devlin said doctors had told him there was nothing they could do for Geraldine.

All Church Bells In Norway Ordered Given to Nazis

Stockholm, Aug. 18 (AP)—All church bells in Norway have been ordered delivered to German authorities for use "for urgent purposes of state"—ostensibly war materials, the Norwegian correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported today.

The correspondent said the order was issued by Reich Commissioner Joseph Terboven. Several weeks ago police in Norway were told to gather information about the weight and quality of the bells.

The Germans agreed to pay for the bells and promised to replace them with new ones after the war.

Pointed to Ruins Of Viaduct Blown Up By Serb Irregulars

Cairo, Aug. 18 (AP)—British officers returned to Beirut in an exchange of prisoners with the French after the Syrian campaign, said today that while crossing Yugoslavia six weeks ago German guards pointed out the ruins of a viaduct blown up by Serbian irregulars who afterwards machine-gunned a trainload of Nazi troops.

(The incident apparently occurred while the British prisoners were being transported to France, since it was two weeks before capitulation of Vichy's army of the Levant.)

SAYS JAPANESE AND OTHER ALIENS ORDERED TO LEAVE

Tokyo, Aug. 18 (AP)—A copyrighted dispatch to the Japanese news agency Domei from Singapore said today all Japanese and other aliens living within a 15-mile radius of the British naval base at Singapore had been ordered to leave the area within two weeks.

The Japanese include residents and officers of concerns which hold vast rubber tracts in the zone. They are appealing to the authorities to reconsider the order, Domei said.

British Desert Warriors Strike Into Wastes That Even Bedouins Shun

(By GODFREY H. P. ANDERS)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

A Western Desert Oasis in North Africa, Aug. 18 (AP)—Sand sailors who venture hundreds of miles into the shifting dunes deep in Libya, navigating by the sun, moon and stars, are doing Lawrence of Arabia's job in this war.

Striped to the waist and barelegged in khaki shorts with Bedouin headcloth secured by tasselled cords, these warriors of the wide open spaces travel weeks at a time far beyond desert bases scouting an unknown wilderness of rock and sand.

Camels which served the famed T. E. Lawrence in the First Great War are too slow for the long range desert men of 1941. They are mounted on light trucks bearing outsized desert tires and strike boldly into wastes that even the Bedouin shuns.

Each man is equipped with special rations and only one gallon of water a day—and part of this must be poured into thirsty radiators.

All day he rides in an open truck with the sun beating mercilessly on his head. Whirling sand devils spiralling hundreds of feet into the air sometimes sweep over his vehicle, smothering him in choking dust. Often the wheels sink in soft patches, churning the axles deep into dunes as liquid as water.

Then it's all hands to scooping away the sand like terriers at a hole until canvas mats can be unrolled and edged under the whirring wheels. Finally the truck wallows free.

I have just returned from crossing hundreds of miles of these daring patrols. Charging across razor-back dunes, our trucks almost vanished at times under a blanket of sand, spray like foam in an emptiness which lacked even a sprig of camel thorn. Then again we hardly seemed to be moving as we sped across a flat, hard stretch. Keen eyes scanned the distant horizon, just as at sea. Ack-Ack gunners gazed hour after hour into the burning blue vault of the sky for a distant dot that might grow in a few seconds into a diving plane.

Sometimes there were sharp clashed with enemy patrols and high speed action progressed across the sands.

BRITAIN, RUSSIA ISSUE WARNING TO IRAN GOV'T

Nazi Infiltration into Iran Has Brought Second Protest From Both Countries

MAY TAKE ACTION

London, Aug. 18—(CP)—Indications grew today that Britain and Russia are planning a decisive step shortly in Iran (Persia) where reports of Nazi infiltration have brought a second protest from London and Moscow.

The Daily Mail said: "We cannot afford to go slow here" and called the country "on Germany's road to India." It claimed Britain had been caught napping when a revolt in Iraq threatened the entire Middle East position. Protracted fighting, which the British charged was instigated by the Germans in Iraq, finally ended with the withdrawal of German elements and re-installation of the rightful government.

Informed sources estimated about 3,000 German tourists and technicians, many of them at key communications points, now are in Iran, which has borders on Russia and India.

Newspapers warned Iran to heed the British and Russian notes against Nazi intrigues which might compromise the country as Germany did in the last Great War.

Air Bases Demanded Says Tass

(A broadcast by Tass, Russian news agency, quoted Ankara reports as saying that Germany was demanding air bases and aviation fuel in Iran and planning overthrow of the government. It said Nazi agents had filtered into the Iranian army and more were coming by way of Istanbul to headquarters at Tabriz.)

Officials would not discuss the possibility of a military move on Iran but it was recalled that Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons Aug. 7 that Middle East forces were being strengthened "for their next forward blow."

"I suggest to those lands in the Middle East that the blows which those forces will strike will be blows struck for their own independence as much as for ours," he said on that occasion.

Mr. Eden called Iran an example and said he hoped the Iranian Government "will not fail to heed this warning."

Other indications pointing to necessity for rapid action were the Nazi advance in the Russian Ukraine and the possibility that British aid could be provided most effectively through Iran.

RUSSIA'S EXAMPLE

London, (CP)—Britons can still give up much of their accustomed diets and live, says a writer to the papers, pointing out that millions in fighting Russia live on black bread and cabbage soup.

Churchill Arrives Safely In Britain After Meeting With Roosevelt at Sea

London, Aug. 18 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill returned to Britain safely today from an historic meeting at sea with President Roosevelt and a visit to Iceland, and was met by Information Minister Brenden Bracken to complete arrangements for a probable broadcast by the Prime Minister.

The date for the broadcast has not been announced.

British and United States troops assigned to Iceland were inspected by Mr. Churchill on his way back from the Atlantic rendezvous.

As Mr. Churchill and his party drove to a special train in three motor cars, persons in the streets cheered and shouted "best of luck."

The Prime Minister smiled and waved his hat.

"He looked very happy indeed," a spectator said.

The Prime Minister returned in the battleship Prince of Wales, which carried him to the historic meeting with the President of the United States. The port of arrival was not made public.

The Prime Minister was expected to return to London later today.

A British film of the meeting of the President and Prime Minister showed that at least one of their talks was held close to shore.

A rocky coastline was distinguishable in the background of a picture showing Mr. Churchill watching from the battleship Prince of Wales as a United States destroyer carried President Roosevelt away.

Visited Ship Once

The President, it was disclosed here, visited the British battleship only once. That was Sunday, August 10. He came aboard for religious services and sang, with Mr. Churchill, "Land of Hope and Glory" and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

During the services, it was said, patrolling planes droned overhead, sometimes drowning out the singing and music from the marine bands of the British battleship and United States destroyer.

United States sailors accompanied the President to the British battleship and engaged in backslapping with the British tars, to whom they brought presents of fruit and cigarettes.

President Brought Presents

The President also brought presents—one for every member of the British crew. Each bore a card which said, "Best wishes. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

TRADE AGREEMENT SIGNED BY RUSSIA AND GT. BRITAIN

Arrangements Also Made For a British Credit to Russia of $45,000,000

PLAN CONFERENCE

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 18 (CP Cable)— A new era in Anglo-Soviet relations was opened Sunday with the signing of a barter agreement supplemented by a British credit of at least £10,000,000 (about $45,000,000)—a move described by informed sources as "another proof that Britain and Russia mean business."

Announcement of the agreement came after it had been predicted that prompt arrangements would be made for a Moscow conference on war materials resulting from Premier Joseph Stalin's acceptance of the Churchill-Roosevelt proposals foh such a parley.

WAGE INCREASES GRANTED SEAMEN

Montreal, Aug. 18 (CP)— Wage increases of $5 to $10 per month are provided in a new agreement, effective as from Aug. 1, between the National Seamen's Association of Canada and a number of its contracting lake shipping companies, it was announced here last night by James Gibson, chairman of the Association.

New monthly rates, with the former rates in brackets follow: Deckhand, $75 ($67.50); Watchman, $82.50 ($75); Wheelsman, $100 ($90); Coalpasser, $75 ($67.50); Fireman, $92.50 ($85); Oiler $100 ($90); Porter, $65 ($60); Second Cook $75 ($67.50); Cook on canaler $130 ($122.50); Cook on Upper Laker $145 ($135).

BROTHERS ARRESTED FOR ARSON

Toronto, Aug. 18 (CP)— Two Toronto brothers, aged 14 and 15, were arrested today and charged with setting fire to their father's home. The fire caused damage amounting to about $2,500.

Police said the brothers, with another lad, were in the house when the fire started. Investigation resulted in finding two oil cans in the building.

Tobruk Garrison Harasses Enemy

Cairo, Aug 18 (AP)—The British Middle East Command said today that patrols from the besieged Libyan port of Tobruk were continuing offensive operations against the axis lines, "steadily inflicting losses upon the enemy."

Considerable bombing of the defence works by German and Italian planes was reported.

FASTER TEMPO IN U.S. TO HASTEN AXIS DOWNFALL

President Roosevelt Silent on Broad Strategy Decided Upon

'DEEDS, NOT WORDS'

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt resumed personal command in the capital today, with all signs indicating a faster future tempo for United States efforts to hasten the downfall of the axis.

The President continued to keep his own counsel on the broad world strategy worked out in his historic conference with Winston Churchill, and the belief was he would use deeds, not words, to disclose it when the time came.

The President started the new work week with an appointment with congressional leaders to survey the legislative situation, and it was thought likely one top item of discussion would be a new lease-lend appropriation—perhaps as high as $10,000,000,000.

Shoots Down Plane Without Knowing it

London, Aug. 18—(CP Cable)—Wing Cmdr. J. A. Kent, of Winnipeg, shot down a Messerschmitt-109 the other day without knowing it.

In a dogfight over France while leading His Royal Air Force Polish squadron, he had chased the Messerschmitt down from 17,000 to 3,000 feet, firing most of the time.

But because he didn't see the enemy fighter crash, Kent made no claim when he returned to base. Unknown to him, however, a Pilot Officer witnessed the crash into the sand dunes of the French coast.

Kent's Polish squadron yesterday was credited officially with downing at least five of Saturday's bag of Nazi fighters. The Squadron Leader holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Virtuti Militari, Poland's highest award for valor.

3 HOLLANDERS EXECUTED BY NAZIS FOR AIDING BRITISH

Amsterdam, German - occupied Netherlands, Aug. 18 (AP)—Three Hollanders paid with their lives today for assisting British fliers who made forced landings on Netherlands territory. Two others were sentenced to prison for life after court martial by German military authorities on charges they gave food, money and civilian clothing to grounded fliers said to have been caught trying to reach the channel coast.

BERLIN ADMITS RAID

London, Aug. 18—(CP) — The Royal Air Force, which pounded Germany and Nazi-occupied territories by day and night during the week-end, started many large fires last night in the oft-bombed German port of Bremen and the important industrial area about Duisburg on the Rhine River. One British bomber was lost of more than 100 taking part, the Air Ministry said.

Included in the week - end of smashing assaults were attacks on the French, Netherlands and Belgian coastal areas.

It was the second successive night assault on the Duisburg district despite unfavorable weather. Large forces of bombers braved bad weather and anti-aircraft barrages Saturday night to drop super bombs on the Rhineland industrial cities of Cologne, Duesseldorf and Duisburg. Docks at Rotterdam and Ostend also were blasted.

Large factories were left burning Saturday night in the attacks on the Rhineland. Thirteen British planes were lost, while a Nazi fighter was shot down by an attacking bomber.

A few German planes were over Britain last night, the Air Ministry said, bombing several coastal points. One plane was shot down.

Nine persons were killed and several injured when the raiders bombed a densely-populated residential district of Hull. Many others were trapped for hours.

Large numbers of Nazi planes approached the port, these reports said, but all but a few were prevented by R.A.F. fighters from getting through.

CRITICAL VIEW OF FAR EAST

There is Indication Russia Has Powerful Army on Siberian Border in Far East

Tokyo, Aug. 18—(AP)—Reliable indications that a Russian Far Eastern army of great strength has been fully mobilized and stationed on the Siberian border and an hour's-long conference between United States ambassador Joseph Grew and Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda stressed the critical situation in the Pacific tonight.

Significantly, Domei started off its European and American broadcasts with a discussion of rumored plans of the Chinese leader, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, to visit Moscow, interpreting such plans as evidence of China's weakness and the effectiveness of Japan's blockade.

The whole Japanese Press splashed reports under London date-lines that Chiang would visit Moscow.

The Grew-Toyoda meeting was reported to the utmost importance although there was no inkling of what they discussed.

25 Great Lakes Iron Ore Boats Recommended by O. P. M. for 1943

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—The office of Production Management recommended to the United States Marine Commission yesterday that an emergency fleet of 25 great lakes iron ore boats be constructed at a cost of about $50,000,000 for delivery in 1943.

Officials said the additional craft would be necessary to move iron ore for the expanded steel program, and that a greater fleet ultimately might be found necessary. The boats would be about 600 feet long and have net carrying capacities of 12,000 to 13,000 long tons each.

Soviet Admits Loss Of Black Sea Port And Mining Centre

Defence Forces Carry Out Stalin's Scorched Earth Order Before Retreat

UKRAINE TOWN SAVED

Moscow, Aug. 18—(AP)—Powerful Red Army counter-attacks, costing the Germans at least 25,000 men on the Central and Northern Ukrainian front, were reported today by the Russians while acknowledging the loss in the south of their big shipbuilding port of Nikolaev and the mining centre of Krivoi Rog.

In addition the Russians said their troops had crippled at least three other divisions which were said to have been beaten back after losses of 50 to 80 per cent of their normal fighting strength of 43,500 men.

Thus the Red Army was hitting back full strength against the northern flank of the long wedge the Nazis were driving past Odessa and east toward the Hydro-Electric power centre of Dnieperopetrovsk at the Dnieper River bend.

A Moscow communique issued at mid-day reported that "during the night of Aug. 17-18 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front." It named no specific centres of fighting.

Dockyards Blown Up

The midnight communique which acknowledged the Russian withdrawal from Nikolaev and Krivoi Rog said defence forces carried out Stalin's scorched earth order before falling back. The vast Nikolaev dockyards where the Bug River empties into the Black Sea were blown up.

The port, 60 miles northeast of the grain-shipping centre at Odessa, had been second only to Leningrad as a shipbuilding and repair base.

Krivoi Rog, in the heart of the Ukraine iron ore region, is 100 miles northeast of Nikolaev and midway between that port and Dnieperopetrovsk.

Ukrainian Town Saved

Red Star, organ of the Red Army, said the Germans lost 20,000 dead and wounded in a fierce Russian counter-attack which saved a Ukraine town identified only as "K" (possibly Kiev.)

Farther north, on the central front, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's defenders of the road to Moscow were reported to have hurled other Nazi troops back in large-scale counter attacks. Near a city identified only as "M" the Germans were said to have lost 5,000 men.

The Soviet Bureau of Information listed three German divisions as knocked out of the fight in battles within the past few days.

Indicating the intensity of guerilla operations in territory behind the German-Finnish lines, the Bureau of Information reported.

Eight Bridges Blown

"In the course of the past few days alone guerilla detachments blew up eight bridges, engineered 11 train wrecks, destroyed 35 planes, 18 tanks, 72 trucks and four armored cars, and killed 480 soldiers and 25 officers."

A Russian communique said two large Rumanian transport ships had been sunk in the Black Sea by Russian submarines.

Moscow had its twentieth air raid alarm of the war during the night but the Russians said the raiders were dispersed west of the city by night fighters and the fire of camouflaged, disappearing batteries of anti-aircraft guns which guard the capital.

Besides Capturing Nikolaev Nazis Also Claim Odessa Ringed With Steel

QUIET AT SMOLENSK

Berlin, Aug. 18 (AP)—The German High Command claimed today that Red army forces in the southern Ukraine have fallen still farther back toward the lower Dnieper and their flight has become in part a rout. The war bulletin from Hitler's headquarters thus again in vague language claimed further deterioration of Russian defences on the southern flank of the eastern front and reported "considerable results" in operations elsewhere in Russia.

The Black Sea naval base and grain port of Nikolaev, Germany's biggest prize in the 59-day-old campaign was occupied during the week-end, and the Germans claimed to be closing in around the port of Odessa.

German night raiders attacked Moscow and several rail lines, the communique said.

The German public heard of the capture of Nikolaev Sunday from the High Command which at the same time announced the Red army had been cleaned out from the Krivoi Rog iron-producting region 100 miles to the northeast.

The city of Krivoi Rog, west of the Dnieper River, was claimed captured last week.

Consider Ration System to Give Better Distribution

Labor Minister Bevin Addresses Transport Workers

Llandudno, Wales, Aug. 18—(CP Cable)—Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, told a transport workers' conference here today the Government was considering a fairly wide development of the rationing system not merely to control prices but in order to get better distribution.

Referring to the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration, Bevin said he believed the British Commonwealth, United States, China and Russia would play a role that hitherto no one had conceived in the organization of the world.

Raw materials, he said, must no longer be a scramble for speculation. They must be organized and if he had his way he would introduce for raw materials an international pool and would pool freight rates and make charges for their use with international control.

He added that no peace would be built until Prussianism was dismissed.

DUCK SHOOTING IN THIS DISTRICT TO OPEN OCT. 1ST

The duck shooting season south of No. 7 highway, which would include any shooting of ducks in the Bay of Quinte, will open this year on October 1st, Game Warden Herb McCabe announced. Previously a later opening date had erroneously been announced. North of No. 7 highway the duck shooting season will open on Sept. 15th, however.

A single day's shooting of wild ducks this year shall not exceed 12 ducks per hunter, Inspector McCabe warned.

TWO BICYCLES FOUND ABANDONED

Two bicycles were recovered abandoned in a clump of bushes on Lewis Street over the week-end, local police reported today. One of the bikes was owned by Jack White of Cannifton, who had reported the theft of his bicycle to city police late Saturday night. Police are of the opinion that the recent taking of bicycles in Belleville can be attributed to joy-riders only. The finding of two bicycles in the Lewis Street bushes leaves two more bikes that were stolen last week, unaccounted for as yet.

SPRINGER SPANIEL RESCUED FROM BAY

Found swimming in the Bay of Quinte off Massassaga Point a brown and white-colored Springer Spaniel dog was rescued by Mr. Millard of this city on Sunday. The canine had apparently been in the water some considerable time before being rescued. The animal was cared for and brought to Belleville and given into the custody of Thos. Thorne, city dog pound custodian.

DOCTOR'S CAR STOLEN IN CITY

Stolen from in front of his surgery, an automobile belonging to Dr. Jas. Forrester, 65 East Bridge St., was taken late Saturday. Dr. Forrester had left the car keys in the ignition switch when he entered his surgery. With the keys in place the car thieves made a hasty get-away. The vehicle was a 1941 model Chevrolet coupe bearing Ontario licence plates number D-1975.

TWO MEN REPORT THEIR PURSES STOLEN

Pick-pockets were reported active in Belleville over the week-end, two men complaining to police they had been relieved of their wallets on Sunday night. The men to lose their pokes were John Pringle, 73 Station Street, and William Markland, Picton, who told police there was $55.00 in his purse.

ESCAPED PRISONER HELD AT CORNWALL

Percy H. Smith, who escaped from the Belleville General Hospital while being held in custody on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses from a local bank, was arrested in Cornwall over the week-end, Chief Kidd was informed today.

Smith had been ordered to the hospital while an inmate at the county jail, but escaped custody from the former institution. During his period of liberation Smith wrote a personal letter to Gaoler G. H. French dated from Halifax and stating he was shipping on a Norwegian freighter. Subsequent check-ups by Belleville police, in cooperation with the Halifax authorities, revealed Smith had not left the country. He was arrested in Cornwall on Saturday and will be brought to Belleville facing charges of obtaining money under false pretenses and also escaping from custody.

Detective Fred Izard will proceed to Cornwall and bring Smith to Belleville for trial.

CORN STALK MEASURES OVER TWELVE FEET

Indicative of the almost phenomenal growth which fodder corn has attained during the past month a stalk of corn measuring a few inches over twelve feet in length was seen over the week-end. The stalk of corn grown on the farm of Mr. J. Campbell in the Oak Hills, was picked at random from the rows, and indicates that although the present season's corn crop may not be a record one, it will nevertheless compare favourably with that of the normal year.

BELLEVILLE BOYS' CAMP IS CLOSED

The echoes of happy laughter and the sporting of carefree days passed for another year, Belleville Boys' Camp, annually the camping site for holiday parties from the city, is closed again for another season. Over the weekend the camp was vacated by Camp Beau Lac, a camp sponsored by a Toronto leadership group, which for the past ten days had been convened at the site, and today preparations for closing the camp until another year were commenced by Mr. Ed. Shortt, of the local Y.M.C.A.

Three different camps annually are stationed at the Belleville Boys' Camp for periods not exceeding two weeks' term. Shortly after summer vacations commences, a camp of boys go in for a two weeks' stay to be followed by a girls' camp. Camp Beau Lac which goes in for a ten-days' stay each year winds up the camp activities for the season.

Men Overseas Grateful For Gifts of Smokes by C.N.R. Veterans' Assoc.

Started with the idea of raising money with which to buy cigarettes to send to former employees of the Canadian National Railways from Belleville now overseas, the Canadian National Railways' War Veterans' Association of Belleville in its first year of operations has collected a total of $297.23 for this purpose, it has been announced by Mr. A. W. Jones, in charge of the fund.

Although the fund was started with the intention of supplying "cigs" only to Belleville boys, the organization has not drawn the line very close in this respect and gift parcels of smokes are sent to the boys overseas every six weeks or sooner if the contributions of money permit.

At the present time there are fifty names on the fund's list to whom it is endeavored to send cigarettes regularly. To-date only one shipment of smokes has failed to reach its ultimate destination and in most cases 100 per cent delivery of the smokes has been effected. The committee in charge thanks all who have so generously contributed to the boxes and fund and express the hope of continued support in order that the boys in England may enjoy regular smokes.

$297. Raised

The amount of money contributed by each department of the local division is as follows:

Motive Power Box	$104.75
M.P. Mess Room	14.90
Yard Office	22.58
Station	7.00
Miscellaneous	28.50
Euchre parties	41.00
B. of L. F. & E.	10.00
C.N.R. W.V.A.	68.50
Total	$297.23

During this past year 267 gift parcels each containing 300 Sweet Caporal or Winchester cigarettes, total 80,100, 16 lbs. of Sweet Caporal pipe tobacco, 17 lbs. of Fine Cut tobacco, 8 parcels of gum have been sent.

Letters of Appreciation

Following are a few of the letters received from the boys overseas thanking the local railwaymen for their generosity in providing smokes.

Somewhere in England

Dear Sir:

Just a few lines to thank you and your association for the cigarettes which I received O.K. Well, things are looking better here these days. We have no raids during the day; they're afraid to come over in the day; they have a good reason.. they never go back. I watched our planes leave the other day. They went over and raided the invasion ports so now the boys are all hoping it won't be long till we're back in France to give them a real go and we're all for making as good a show as you fellows did last time. I know we will.

I can't think of any more to say now so I will close, thanking you for the cigarettes, I remain,

Respectfully yours,
(Sgd.) PTE. A. RIVERS, C-5287

Somewhere in England

Mr. A. H. Jones, Loco. Foreman,
C.N.R., Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir: May I have the honour and privilege of thanking you for your kind gift of Sweet Caporal cigarettes that are so helpful to us all. Owing to enemy action there is a very bad shortage of smokes over here and the cost is so high as it costs us 1s 5-1-2 for 20, that is to say about 35 cents and as we are not allowed only so many cigarettes your gifts are very much enjoyed by each and everyone of us and it is a pleasure to know that even though we are so far from home we are still in your hearts over there. I have the honour to be your friend.

(Sgd.) TROOPER W. J. REPPARD,
No. C-4345 1st Canadian Recci. Sqd.
1st Brigadoe, C.A.S.F.

Dear Mr. Jones:

I received your cigarettes yesterday and they could not have picked a better day to come, the day before pay day. Thanks a lot. Everthing over here is still under control and with a little imagination, I could even say that I like London. Cheerio for now and I will write soon.

(Sgt.) D. RAESIDE, A-21801.

Dear Mr. Jones:

Your 300 Sweet Caps arrived a week ago. Many thanks to you all for being so thoughtful and generous. I certainly appreciate it. May we soon be together again in good old Belleville. Give my best regards to all the boys. I sure think of you all a lot. My very best to you and thanks again.

(Sgd.) E. G. KENNEDY, (Dr.)

A Fine Garden

Mr. Arthur Thomas, superintendent of the Belleville cemetery, has good reason to be proud of the results of the hours he has spent in his garden to the east of his residence at the cemetery for this year it has looked probably the most beautiful in all the years of planning and culture which he has given to this place. Hundreds of varieties of flowers have been cultivated and in all their beauty, they have been selected and arranged by this master gardener, who knows the means of cultivation and the value of grouping and arrangement with the result here evident. The spacious lawn sloping south to the bay he has laid out so as to achieve the finest effects.

East of the garden is a fine plot of vegetables which have a unique growth. This year he has grown tomatoes, the seed for which came from England. This variety he has named "Regent Street" after the street in London where the seed was bought. The tomatoes have a fine flavor and are without blemish.

There are two groups of flowers and vines on the grounds which have attracted much attention. On the north side is a vessel with flowers and plants on the deck and with vines running up to the rigging. This has been named the "Margaret Rose" in honor of the young British Princess. On the south side at the foot of the slope is another craft on which the British ensign flies and flowers and vines grow.

Many citizens have visited the garden and grounds and have expressed admiration for the arrangements and beauty of the garden.

Several Large Muskies Landed At Stoco L. Lately

Tweed — Mr. Chas. Reese, of Toronto, who has been camping on Sugar Island for several weeks, landed a 30-lb. muskie on Friday night, after a tough struggle. Mr. Reese is a member of the Toronto police force who has been coming to Stoco Lake for a number of years.

Mr. Ross Fetterley also of Toronto who has spent the summer as guide at Breen's fishing resort, Stoco Lake, landed another huge muskie, a 26-pounder, his second of the season of the same weight, and his third in the 20-pound and over class. He was casting with a Jitterbug lure when the big fellow took hold.

Ernie Cronkwright, veteran local fisherman also captured a 22-lb beauty last week while casting on the east side of the lake. Other fishermen report numerous strikes in which the muskies outwitted them and broke away.

Mrs. Charles Howey replaces Mr. Claremont Morgan as teacher of music in the rural schools of Centre Hastings. Mrs. Howey comes from Campbellford where her husband is organist in the United Church.

New Accountant

Mr. P. A. Smith of Toronto succeeds Lieut. George Elwood as accountant at the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Smith with his family, will reside in the house formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Leman.

Two Truck Loads Salvage Collected On Saturday

Two truckloads of salvage were collected at the Market Square on Saturday, the entire amount being delivered in person by the citizens. "The response of the citizens in general towards the opening of the National Salvage Campaign here was magnificent. We wish to convey to the public our sincere thanks and also to the young ladies who were in charge of the truck," stated one official of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross, for whom the Women's Canadian Club War Service Committee is conducting the salvage campaign.

All types of salvage was brought to the Market Square and deposited in the salvage truck, which was provided free by the Trudeau Motors. Cardboard, metals of all descriptions, rags and other salvage constituted two large truck loads that were driven away and deposited at the local Red Cross depot.

Citizens enquired as to whether the National Salvage Campaign salvage truck would be available for calls to pick up such salvage as was too bulksome for personal delivery on Saturday. Mr. C. B. Morgan, in charge of routine work of the campaign, announced today that the local salvage truck will call on request for any large quantities of salvage. Citizens having salvage they wish to contribute to the Campaign are requested to telephone 2287, 118 or 1311 and the truck will be available for picking up salvage from private homes.

The National Salvage Campaign is Dominion wide and the public of Belleville is urged to contribute what salvage possible from their homes. Anything, except bottles and glass, will be acceptable and called for upon request.

POLICE COURT

Kornbloom Given 3-Months' Term

"Apparently this young man is determined to go to jail," remarked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., when Samuel Kornbloom, Belleville, appeared for sentence before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. Kornbloom had pleaded guilty to a charge of attempting to obtain money by forgery in a previous court last week.

"This man is on suspended sentence at the present time; having been charged with attempted suicide and also of a previous count of forgery," revealed Chief Kidd. His Worship sentenced the accused to three months in the common jail.

Given Reformatory Sentence

Charles Bulpit, 17, of Belleville, was given three months definite and not more than six months in the Ontario Reformatory when he appeared for sentence today. Bulpit had pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the refreshment booths at Belleville Yacht Club and also at Victoria Park and stealing small sums of cash and cigarettes.

"This lad is at present an escapee from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, but the officials there do not desire him returned," explained Mr. Donnan as he suggested the Reformatory term after introducing Bulpit's list of previous convictions.

Boys Given Suspended Sentence

Two teen-aged lads appeared charged with attempting to steal gasoline from the boathouse of Cecil Reeves. The lads admitted their guilt and were given a six-months' suspended sentence. At the request of Chief Kidd the boys' finger prints were taken and [illegible] on record.

Obituary

HENRY E. CRANDELL
(Orland, Ontario)

Henry E. Crandell, age 82 years, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, Aug. 16th. He was a patient in the hospital since July 29th.

THOMAS WILSON O'HARA

Thomas Wilson O'Hara died suddenly as the result of a heart seizure at his residence, 316 Coleman Street, on Saturday evening, August 16th. He was first taken ill on Friday, but his death came unexpectedly.

The late Mr. O'Hara was born in Belleville, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh O'Hara. All his life was passed in this city and he was engaged as Instructor in Carpentry at the Ontario School for the Deaf. He was well known and highly respected by many in this city and to numerous friends his death has brought sincere regret. In religion he was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church. In connection with the parish he was a member of the Holy Name Society and the League of the Sacred Heart; he was also a member of the Knights of Columbus.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Margaret Walker; one brother, Mr. James O'Hara, St. Catharines; two aunts, Mrs. John Lafferty and Mrs. Annie Mitchell, both of Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

EDWARD D. WELLS

Edward D. Wells died early this Monday morning at his residence, 223 William Street. He was in failing health for the past year. For many years he resided in this city and for some time past he lived retired. Friends will regret to learn of his death. Surviving him are his wife, three daughters and two sons.

MRS. CHARLES NESS

After a brief illness Mrs. Charles Ness died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, August 17th. The deceased was thirty-two years of age and prior to her marriage she was Miss Mary Rose Aube. She came to reside in Belleville a few months ago from Montreal her husband being employed in the rail saw department of the Canadian National Railways.

The body was forwarded this Monday from the Pinkston Funeral home to Valler, Quebec, where the funeral will be held on Wednesday.

POLICE BLOTTER

After spending two weeks' vacation at his Crowe River camp lodge, Chief Alex Kidd resumed his official duties at the police station today. Chief Kidd reported splendid fishing was enjoyed in Central Hastings waters during his vacation.

While attending market in Belleville on Saturday, two club bags were stolen from a parked car on Pinnacle Street, R. N. Smith of Toronto reported over the week-end. Mr. Smith had been a guest at a local hotel and after checking out and placing his bags in the rear trunk of the vehicle, proceeded to purchase farm products to take home to Toronto. During his absence on the market sneak thieves removed the club bags from his car, he told police.

A pair of inebriates ran afoul of the law over the week-end and were arrested on charges of intoxication.

Veterans Hold Decoration Day

Remembering those who have gone, the war veterans of Belleville held their annual Decoration Day service Sunday at the Belleville and St. James' cemeteries, where floral tributes were placed on the graves to the memory of fallen comrades. The Decoration Day program was under the direction of the Army and Navy Veterans' in Canada, Unit No. 201, and augmented by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

The service at the Belleville cemetery was conducted by Adjutant John Smith of the Belleville Salvation Army, as only prayers and a pointed lesson were heard in a brief, but impressive service. As efforts on the part of the Army and Navy Veterans to procure the services of a local band proved futile, no hymns were sung on the occasion, the service being purely one of prayer.

The veterans left the Armouries at two o'clock on Sunday afternoon over 100 strong, marching to the swirl of the pibrock as the Belleville Pipe Band headed the procession. The parade was marshalled by Sergeant Major Johnnie Browning and headed by Comrade Bill Ford, President of the A. & N. Veterans' in Canada, Unit 201 and other Canadian War Veteran dignitaries. At Albert College the columns dispersed and the parade was transported to the cemeteries in buses, provided gratis by the Rawson Bus Line.

Following the service veterans placed floral bouquets and tiny Union Jack flags atop of the graves of fallen comrades in both cemeteries, the bouquets having been arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary. Many civilians took advantage of the occasion to decorate the graves of their departed loved ones also.

During the afternoon the Pipe Band played the Scottish lament, while gathered around the graves of two departed members of their organization.

MARMORA

Mrs. Hugh Jones, Marmora, Celebrates Her 86th Birthday

Marmora (Special) — Mrs. Hugh Jones quietly observed the eighty-sixth anniversary of her birth on Sunday. A native of the Stirling district, she has spent the greater part of an active life in this community. Her husband passed away about thirty years ago. Three children share in her affections John and Jennie at home and Mrs. M. Donahue, resident in Toronto. With the exception of a slight deafness, Mrs. Jones retains splendid use of her faculties. She delights in exchanging visits with her friends and takes a keen interest in happenings in the home town and beyond. She is one of the oldest members of St. Paul's Anglican Church.

Fellow residents unite in congratulations on this further milestone in her life being reached and the hope that she may enjoy many more years in their midst.

3 EMPLOYEES ARE VICTIMS

Meet Death When Escaping Oxygen Takes Fire in Toronto Plant

(By The Canadian Press)

A triple fatality in Toronto, which took the lives of three men swelled the week-end total of accidental deaths in Ontario to 10. Highway accidents took three lives, two persons fell to their deaths, one man died in a fight while another died of injuries suffered several days ago when he was "dusted off" with compressed air by fellow workmen.

The three Toronto men, Sidney Wade, 24, Lewis Myers, 46, and Henry Maxted, were employees of the Canadian Liquid Air Company. They met death Sunday as a result of burns received when oxygen, escaping from a vaporizer, caught fire. Wade died almost instantly while Myers and Maxted died in hospital a few hours later.

At Grimsby Charles Burd, 35, truck driver, was found dead Saturday night in a downtown lane. A postmortem revealed that death resulted from kicks and blows. William R. Smith, 49, Indian deaf-mute, was arrested in connection with Burd's death.

Three Motor Fatalities

Mrs. J. Robert Duncan of Ottawa died in hospital following a highway accident near Cumberland, Ont., Sunday. James Boyle, 17, of Georgetown, Ont., was killed when pinned in his roadster after it overturned Saturday. Manfold Schler, 19, Fort Erie, suffered fatal injuries when his car overturned on the highway near his home Saturday.

Twenty-one-year-old Ivan Clare Hill, who fell from the roof of a Dundas, Ont., theatre several days ago, died in hospital at Hamilton Sunday. David Saunders, 40, Oshawa fell 40 feet to his death while crossing a railway bridge enroute to work Saturday. He is believed to have suffered a weak spell.

At Peterborough William E. Rogers, 68, died in hospital Saturday after being "dusted off" with compressed air by fellow-employees at the Canadian General Electric Company several days ago. Rogers was injured internally.

Cable Rate on Press News Between Empire Points to Be Reduced

London, Aug. 18—(CP Cable)—The Empire Press Union Sunday announced that a new low Empire Press cable rate at one penny a word would go into effect shortly.

Cheaper cable rates for news interchanged between Empire points have long been a goal of the Empire Press Union, led by the Canadian section, the ultimate goal of a penny a word now having been achieved. At one time direct rates to Canada were as high as 15 cents a word from India and South Africa, compared to five cents from London. The last reduction on Feb. 1, 1940, lowered the rates to a flat four and a half cents a word on newspaper copy between any two points in the Empire.

BANCROFT

Toronto Man Dies Suddenly At Bancroft

Bancroft, Aug. 18 (Special) — Stricken as he was about to begin his vacation, Mr. Archer Morrison of Toronto died suddenly in Bancroft on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Morrison had arrived in the village only a short time and after making arrangements with Mrs. Haase for the rent of a cabin for the period of his stay was heard to say as he entered the building, that he was suffering a sharp pain in his chest.

Mr. Morrison fell headlong on the floor of the cabin and although Dr. S. S. Lumb was hastily summoned, the stricken man expired shortly after the doctor's arrival.

Vehicles Badly Damaged

Considerable property damage resulted to two automobiles approximately ten miles north of Bancroft on Saturday morning, when a car driven by R. W. Robinson of this village proceeding south crashed into a northbound car driven by Mr. W. E. Crier of Toronto. Although both vehicles were badly damaged by the impact, the Robinson-driven car being almost a total wreck, only minor injuries and a shaking-up were suffered by the occupants. Riding with Mr. Crier were his wife, Woodrow Reber and Violet Below, all of Toronto, while M. G. McGhee of Bancroft, owner of the other vehicle, was riding with Robinson.

Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft investigated the accident and arrested Robinson and McGhee and brought them to Bancroft, where both were charged with intoxication, the additional charge of being intoxicated while in charge of a motor car being laid against Robinson.

On his return to Bancroft after arresting the two men, Constable Palmateer narrowly escaped losing control of his car on two occasions, when Robinson suddenly placed his hands over the constable's eyes. Only quick manipulation of the car by the police officer averted running off the road as the driver's vision was blotted out by Robinson's hands.

Later in the day the two men were escorted to Belleville, where they were both remanded until police court on August 26th.

Frankford

Frankford — The regular meeting of the W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. C. W. Scott on Thursday afternoon. The president Mrs. H. Terry was in charge of the meeting which was opened by the singing of a hymn and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. After the devotional period the meeting was open for business. An invitation from the Consecon ladies to visit them was not accepted. The roll call showed 35 ladies present.

The program opened with a reading by Mrs. Bert Bush. Mrs. Johnson sang a solo and Mrs. Roy Osterhout gave a reading. After a piano solo by Donna Osterhout, Mrs. Acton gave a Scotch reading. Mrs. P. Mikel gave a reading and the meeting was closed by the Mizpah Benediction. Grace was sung and a delightful lunch was served by Mesdames Coutts, Bell, Acton and Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Latta have returned to London, Ont., after spending the past six weeks with the former's mother, Mrs. Minnie Latta, Frankford.

Editor Believes Russia Will Triumph In War With Nazis

London, Aug. 18 (CP)—Frank Owen, editor of the London Evening Standard, said last night Russia will triumph in her war with Germany, and Allied soldiers will join hands with Russian soldiers — "Germany shall not stand in the way."

Mr. Owen was speaking on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Britain Speaks" feature.

"Make no mistake, Russia will triumph because Russia is fully prepared for war," he said. "Russians have sacrificed to provide for mighty war machines and this is a war of machines."

"Russians: It will be done as Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt promised. Allied soldiers will follow Allied arms to join hands with you and Germany shall not stand in the way."

Mr. Owen said that "if I were a German I would not be very happy tonight."

"If I were a German I would realize Germany has been trapped on the eastern front by the Russians; and I would be turning my eyes to the west and thinking of the meeting of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt on the Atlantic Ocean.

"If I were a German I would wonder why these two great men were permitted to hold a meeting on what Dr. Goebbels (German propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels) has termed 'a German lake'. I would wonder why less and less German submarines are being seen in the Atlantic and why British shipping losses are down."

Memorial Service For A. B. Purvis

Washington, Aug. 18—(AP)—High American and British officials and more than 500 persons attended Memorial Services yesterday at Washington Cathedral for Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, Director-General of the British Purchasing Commission, who was killed in England last week in a plane crash.

Viscount Halifax, the British ambassador, and Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply who is here on government business, sat in the great choir section of the Cathedral with Mr. Purvis' widow, who flew here Saturday from her summer home in Edgartown, Mass. A son, Blaikie Purvis, and Miss E. L. Brady, who for 23 years was private secretary to the Canadian industrialist, also sat with Mrs. Purvis. Munitions Minister C. D. Howe of Canada, here to see Lord Beaverbrook, also attended.

Harry Hopkins, Lend-Lease Administrator Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, headed the United States dignitaries at the services.

CRIPPLED NAZIS

London — (CP) — The Moscow radio reported that a captured Nazi stretcher-bearer said he had been ordered not to pick up wounded German soldiers who had lost legs or arms, but only wounded men who could be soldiers again.

Vital Cities In Russia Still Hold Out

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Washington, Aug. 18.—(AP)—In the eight weeks since Hitler hurled his mighty war machine against Russia it has ripped its way through Soviet buffer defenses from the Baltic to the Black Sea, and stormed into Russia itself an average depth of perhaps 100 miles on a 1,000-mile front; but it has signally failed as yet to achieve or closely to approach the quick and earth-shaking victory the Nazi war lords foretold.

Russians, Germans, Rumanians and Finns by the hundreds thousand, if not million, are dead, maimed or prisoners. More millions of helpless non-combatants are dead or homeless and faced with freezing and starvation this winter.

Yet no one of the three Russian cities of first magnitude has fallen to the invading hordes; none been brought under Nazi fire except by air bombs. And only days away are the September rains in Western Russia, and behind them, in early October, the snow will fly, and Russia's greatest ally, six months of winter, will enter the struggle.

Hitler was utterly unprepared when he struck at Russia June 22 for any such bitter resistance as he has met. As the ninth week of the vast battle opens his armies seem breathless and nearing the exhaustion point in the vital centre before Moscow. Only on the extreme flanks of the Baltic-Black Sea front is the Nazi blitzkrieg still rolling, and neither sector offers the Germans an assurance of conclusive victory before winter sets in.

When he struck in late June, Hitler unquestionably expected within seven weeks or less to engulf Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev and sweep the Russian Black Sea coast to the old 1918 German invasion line at Rostov, the gateway to Russia's great Caspian oil fields, to Iran and to India.

Instead only the Southern Ukraine and its potential resources in food and minerals seems yet within his grasp and its cost has been a great expenditure of German lives and German war reserves. Odessa is the first major Russian city to be closely invested by the Nazis. By Berlin accounting, a major Red Army disaster is in the making there which will deliver the whole Ukrainian plateau east of the Dnieper into German control and the announced evacuation of Nikolaev and Krivoi Rog appears to confirm this.

But given Russian will to fight on behind the Dnieper, even Nazi capture of the whole great bend of this river would not be a vital blow. Complete annihilation of Red Army forces in the sea-backed Odessa pocket seems improbable. Routes of escape by sea at least are still open. Natural water barriers offer possibilities of bitter rear-guard stands to keep open a wide sea frontage against encirclement. They even afford the means of prolonged siege warfare if Russian Army organization in the south has not broken down utterly.

It seems unquestionable that Hitler is desperately seeking to achieve in the Ukraine an appearance of victory on which to found some new peace offensive. Political and military gestures from Axis-aligned non-belligerent nations such as Japan and Vichy were synchronized too closely with the Nazi Ukrainian offensive to permit doubt that both were Berlin-dictated as diversions. Undoubtedly, too, the Roosevelt-Churchill joint declaration must be regarded as a counter move to offset in advance that expected Nazi "peace" bid.

The terms of that joint British-American statement beckon invitingly to the so-called "have-not" nations, great or small; but they also rule out peace on any terms with Hitlerism.

BRITISH WOMEN IN THE WAR

An appeal for 100,000 women for war services has been made by War Secretary David Margesson. In his statement the Secretary said that "Germany has an infinitely greater pool of manpower to draw from than we have. So the only practicable way to beat them is by utilizing our woman power in addition to our man power. This has been tried on a limited scale and the experiment proved a success. Now with your help we are determined to expand it."

Mr. Margesson went on to explain that the service of these 100,000 women was needed at once and that more will be needed later. "We want hands as well as heads. Big jobs cannot be done unless some one does the little jobs."

The magnificent response of all classes of citizens of Britain to appeals in the past and the stalwartness of the people through their trials assure the heartiest response to the present appeal.

In the trials of this war, the British people are ready to give their all for the best thing in the world, the right to be free. For their fortitude they have been and are the admiration of mankind. For their devotion to country in the service of the "little jobs" too they have earned a name. Their reward will be victory and the assurance that the things for which they strive are the things that will be guaranteed to them and to the oncoming generations.

HAVE INDICATED THE WAY

To the two great branches of the English-speaking race, American and British, came the honor of placing before the world eight points of a bill of rights on which they desire to see the post-war world based. The statement of the meeting of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt memorable in the light of the nature of these days and in the importance with which it is freighted to the world becomes a realistic document which may well mean a world in the future freed of the curse of tyranny, fear and want. From the hearts of the two outstanding representatives of democracy comes the program they would like to see "after the destruction of Nazi tyranny." In this document, the voice of British and American history speaks. It is an utterance invaluable for mankind because the principles enunciated have been proven within Great Britain and Her Empire and the United States. Enemy commentators may dismiss it as an ideal that will not work but it has proven workable in the case of these two greatest of world powers.

They have proven that they honor justice among nations and that they have a code of honor by which they stand. They respect the rights of other nations. Such powers therefore are the fitting ones to suggest a world order founded on these principles, when Nazi tyranny has been destroyed, for the English-speaking peoples know how richly blessed they have been through liberty and freedom. Therefore they hold up this noble picture of a world that can be realized.

To those free nations which have suffered from Hitler"s aggression, those fine democracies who have tasted freedom, this declaration must have come like a breath of the dawn of the day when freedom shall be restored to them. To other nations not so far advanced along the pathway of democracy, and yet who have been influenced by democratic principles, the statement of war and post war aims with all that they mean for security, peace, happiness and absence of want cannot but be one of the great documents of history.

By reading a man does, as it were, antedate his life, and make himself contemporary with past ages.—Jeremy Taylor.

The weakness of human reason appears more evidently in those who know it not, than in those who know it.—Pascal.

If we were faultless we should not be so much annoyed by the defects of those with whom we associate.—Fenelon.

HITLER'S BROKEN PLEDGES

POLAND

March 7, 1936

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "I would like the German people to understand the inner motives of National Socialist foreign policy, which finds it painful that the outlet to the sea of a people of 35 millions is situated on territory formerly belonging to the Reich, but which recognizes that it is unreasonable and impossible to deny a State of such a size as this any outlet to the sea at all."

(British War Blue Book, Page 3)

February 20, 1938

Hitler (to the Reichstag): ".....this most dangerous spot from the point of view of European peace has entirely lost its menacing character. The Polish State respects the national conditions in this State, and both the city of Danzig and Germany respect Polish rights."

(British War Blue Book, Page 4)

September 26, 1938

Hitler (in the Berlin Sportpalast): "We are all convinced that this agreement will bring lasting pacification. We realize that these are two peoples which must live together, and neither of which can do away with the other. A people of 33 millions will always strive for an outlet to the sea. It was a real work of peace."

(British War Blue Book, Page 5)

April 28, 1939

Hitler (to the Reichstag): said he had proposed to Poland (1) Return of Danzig as a Free State into the framework of the German Reich; (2) Germany to receive a route through the Corridor, possessing the same extraterritorial status for Germany as the Corridor itself has for Poland. This offer having been rejected, he denounced the ten-year non-aggression pact of 1934.

August 25, 1939

Anglo-Polish Agreement of Mutual Assistance signed.

September 1, 1939

Hitler (to the Reichstag, announcing annexation of Danzig and the invasion of Poland): "I will not war against women and children. I have ordered my air force to restrict itself to attacks on military objectives." The same day, Hitler's air force bombed open towns in Poland in defiance of international law and in spite of Hitler's pledge.

September 26, 1939

Gauleiter Greiser (in a speech to Nazi youth): "The German who goes East goes as master of the land. The Pole is his servant. Go there, German youth, go where the battle is to the strong. Sieg Heil!"

(Dutschlandender)

September 29, 1939

Germany signed a pact with U.S.S.R., partitioning Poland.

DENMARK

May 31, 1939

Hitler's Government virtually compelled Denmark to sign a treaty of non-aggression, whose first artcle ran: "The German Reich and the Kingdom of Denmark will in no circumstances resort to war to any other form of violence against each other."

(The Times, Oct. 7, 1939)

April 9, 1940

Just because Denmark offered an easy "Bridge" to Norway, Hitler ordered it invaded.

NORWAY

April, 1939

Hitler offered Norway a pact of non-aggression.

October 6, 1939

Hitler (to the Reichstag): "Germany has never had any conflicting interests with the Nordic States, nor has she any today. Sweden and Norway were both offered non-aggression treaties by Germany, but they rejected them because they thought that they were not threatened in any way.'

(The Times, Oct. 7, 1939)

April 9, 1940

Hitler's army and air force entered Norway.

April 10, 1940

"Germany's action in Scandinavia indicates her genuine desire to maintain the neutrality of the neutrals, and her determination not to infringe the territorial integrity and the political independence of Norway and Denmark now or in the future."

Mr. C. N. Vermilyea of this city won third prize in the District harness horse class at the Cobourg Horse Show with his horse "Model Warwick".

On Sept. 1st., the Canadian Northern Express Company and the Canadian Express Company will be amalgamated and the offices here will be united.

The motor fire trucks are now in place in the fire halls and the trial runs have been satisfactory. The horses will not be sold until the trucks have been thoroughly tested.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Mills of Chicago, Ill., are visiting relatives here.

30 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 18th., 1911.

The last Methodist Conference voted to have the historic chapel of Hay Bay taken over by the church and preserved as a relic and on Aug. 14th. a large number of people from various parts assembled at Adolphustown and the old building was formally taken over by the Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church. The church which was called the cradle of Methodism, was the first church built in Upper Canada. It was erected in the summer of 1792 under the direction of William Losee, the first itinerant Methodist preacher. It was enlarged and rebuilt in 1834 and was used until 1860, since when it has fallen into disuse and was eventually sold for use as a granary for the sum of $50. Mr. A. R. Davis, author of "The Old Loyalist" and chairman of the new Trustee Board, was present and told the history from the coming of the U. E. Loyalists to Hay Bay shore in June 16th, 1781 up to the time of the selling of the building years ago.

40 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 18th., 1901.

A large number of our citizens spent the week end at the 1000 Islands.

Mr. E. D. O'Flynn of Madoc was a visitor in town to day.

A maskinonge which weighed thirty pounds, less two ounces, was caught in the river near O'Brien's Bridge yesterday by Messrs. William Farnham and John Frizzell.

From reliable private sources we learn that the population of Belleville by the recent census was shown to be 9,000. The population of this city by the census of 1891 was 9,914; census of 1881, population 9,516, and census of 1871, population 7,305.

Mr. and Mrs. John Carmody of Rochester, N. Y., are in the city the guests of Mr. B. Conway.

50 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 18th., 1891.

A halter was stolen from Mr. A. Ackerman's harness shop on the market square this morning while he was absent from the shop for a short time.

Mr. A. Page, barber, caught a 'lunge in the bay last evening which weighed eight pounds.

Mr. S. G. Beatty of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, was in town to day.

The drilling continues for natural gas. A depth of sixty feet was reached yesteday and an odor of gas is noticed.

Two rinks of the Belleville Bowling Club left to day for Niagara-on-the-Lake to participate in the annual prize competition. In former years the local bowlers have been successful in winning valuable prizes and it is hoped that they will be successful this time. The following compose the rinks: No. 1., — R. T. Musses, J. Inglis, John N. Lazier, Charles Lavis, skip. No. 2, — William Webster, G. C. Biggar, J. V. Jenkins, W. H. Biggar, skip.

V FOR VICTORY

V for victory! Let it be
Boldly stamped for the world to see.
Print it on building, door and wall,
Private dwelling and public hall,
Till wherever the tyrant shall turn he'll see
Liberty's V for victory.

V on everything high and low;
Leave it wherever you chance to go;
Slip it in letters and let it be
On post and fence and ships at sea,
Till wherever the tyrant turns there'll be
Liberty's V for victory.

V for victory! Letter it high,
Write it in vapor across the sky!
V for victory, whisper it low,
Sing it or shout it wherever you go,
Till the tyrant visage shall pale
with fright,
And liberty's forces shall set things right.

Lightning Flashes

One of the perplexing conditions that sometimes occurs is little specks which apparently float across the front part of the eye. For some time it was thought that this might be a sign or symptom of some serious eye condition. However, eye specialists tell us that these specks or spots (muscae volitantes) are just shadows made by the drops or bubbles of the liquid matter that fills the eyeball. They have no significance as far as the eyes or general health is concerned. They are harmless.

Another eye condition that disturbs many individuals is what is called "lightning flashes". Dr. R. F. Moore, who wrote about this condition before", now tells us in American Journal of Opthalmology, of 33 additional cases.

The symptoms consist of the occurrence of flashes of light, most often likened by the patient to lightning; they are usually vertical (up and down) in direction and are accompanied by the little opacities or spots. They are more common in women; among the 33 cases, 26 were women. They seldom occur before middle age; of the 33 cases only three were under 50 years of age, the average being just over 60 years.

Now, just as the spots before the eyes has caused alarm, so even to a greater extent do these lightning flashes cause alarm.

However, Dr. Moore made a careful study of these flashes, fearing at first that they might be a sign of bloodvessel disturbance (high blood pressure) a growth, or, perhaps the tearing of the retina which receives the impression of objects before they are sent on to the brain. He found, however, that these flashes are not of serious importance, nor are they the forerunner of any serious condition.

"It is just a symptom that does not carry any serious implication, either at present nor in the future. Neither is it a part of or symptom of migraine (one-sided headache) although the flashes occur toward the side of the head".

I am passing along this information regarding these flashes so that readers will not be disturbed should they occur. It was some years before it was learned that spots before the eyes are harmless. It is gratifying to learn so soon that these lightning flashes are likewise of no significance.

ON THE RECORD
By DOROTHY THOMPSON

A Cup of Tea

London, Aug. 18—(By Wireless)—The Vicar said that Thursday afternoon a lady would come from the Woman's Volunteer Work Service, and all housewives were urged to attend her lecture. Miss Briggs went.

The lady wore a green-grey uniform with a wine-colored skirt and looked every efficient and nice. She said this war is not like other wars. In this war everyone had to be a soldier. The R.A.F. and sailors on the sea, the Home Guard and Territorials were not the only defenders. This war had to be won in every street. It had to be won not only for Britain, but for the Norwegians and French and Czechs and Poles and Dutch.

Miss Briggs felt very deeply about the Dutch. When she was young she had been a companion to a lady in The Hague and remembered romantically the little houses with their polished knockers, the clear canals and the tulip fields. She saw the Nazis walking over the tulip fields.

The lady said even housewives could help when the blitz came. Morale was very important. To be sure there were firefighters and wardens, mobile canteen and ambulance drivers, but some housewife in every block could do her bit. She ought to know everyone in the block who was ill or who had children, who would likely forget to use sand and water for incendiary bombs, and as soon as the siren sounded be ready to help the infirm to shelters and give those suffering from shock a cup of tea.

Miss Briggs thought this was a very nice idea. Adolf Hitler had block-workers too, but their business was to spy on the people. She thought it would be very nice to help Britain and, of course, the Dutch by getting her neighbors to shelters. And if she did say it, as she should not, there was no one in the block who made a better cup of tea.

Miss Briggs volunteered for her block and the lady gave her a blue and white sign to put in a window, marked "Housewives Service." And she put it up, rather titillated with the thought that now she was in the service like the soldiers and sailors and the R.A.F., although she was 50 years old and only a spinster housewife.

When the siren sounded she was quite excited. She went out, immediately remembering that Mrs. Blake was pregnant and ought to be gotten to a shelter; and Mrs. Wallace with those three little girls. But they were out hurrying off.

"Have you got the sand out?" she asked Mrs. Peterson, and Mrs. Peterson said she had. Then Miss Briggs thought of Mrs. Hinckley, who had an injured leg and could not move without two men to carry her.

Dear me, she thought, who will carry Mrs. Hinckley to the shelter? It must have been that the men were on fire service or night shifts in the factory for there was no man in sight to carry Mrs. Hinckley.

x—x

Miss Briggs went into Mrs. Hinckley's house and upstairs.

"The siren is sounding," she said "and I thought I would step in and sit with you."

"It's bad being alone when they come," said Mrs. Hinckley.

"Isn't that the truth?" said Miss Briggs, "it's all in having company."

Bombs began to come down with that weird, wheeing sound they made.

"Just like a bus starting, don't you think," said Miss Briggs. And Mrs. Hinckley said she did.

"They seem to be striking very near," she added.

"You never can tell," said Miss Briggs. "They all seem near. It's odd, but I've heard that however far away they fall it always seems they are right on top of you. What would you think about a cup of tea?"

Mrs. Hinckley thought a cup of tea would be comforting, and Miss Briggs brewed it on a spirit lamp by Mrs. Hinckley's bedside.

"I keep it right there where I can make it myself," said Mrs. Hinckley. "But a cup of tea alone is a dreary thing."

"I am afraid that must have been Number 18," said Miss Briggs as the house rocked. "That's Mrs. Blake's, but she has gone to a shelter."

She sipped her tea. This time the house rocked dreadfully and all the windows fell in.

"A blast," said Miss Briggs judicially. "Nothing but a blast. I always said, dearie, nobody goes before his time. The Lord has all of our numbers. It's all written in the Book."

She took another sip of tea.

They recognized Miss Briggs by her green cardigan. Her arm was stretching across Mrs. Hinckley. Her hands were all right, too. It had a ring on the forefinger, an odd porcelain ring...The handle of a teacup.

The W.V.S. put up a tablet to her with this inscription: "Died on duty."

JUTE FROM INDIA

Japanese farmers in the Amazon valley in Brazil are reported to be successful in their experiments to raise Indian jute.

The jute production in Brazil was 350 tons in 1940 and is expected to be more than 1,000 tons this year.

Jute is the long, glossy fiber of two species of tall plants native to the East Indies.

The word "jute" is supposed to be derived from a Sanskrit term meaning "matted hair."

India, where jute was first cultivated for fiber several thousand years ago, is still the largest producer and exporter of jute.

Jute is used for sacking, bagging, burlap, gunny-sacks, cheap twines, inferior cordage, rugs, carpets and other coarse fabrics.

Large quantities of jute fabric are used for coffee sacks in Brazil and for cotton-bale covers in the United States.

As a textile fiber jute ranks next to cotton and flax in the extent of its use.

Jute fiber, which ranges in length from six to fifteen feet, is woody, tenacious, readily bleached, dyed and spun, but is easily injured by moisture and therefore is not very durable.

Concrete is "cured" by keeping it damp for several days by covering it with wet jute burlap. Recently cotton has been substituted to some extent for jute for this purpose as well as for cotton-bale coverings.

Ordinarily jute products are quite cheap, but shortage of shipping space caused by the war has been rapidly raising the price and creating a scarcity in America.

Several plants closely related to the jute plants, including okra, are used as a substitute in making burlap.

One species of jute plant is grown in Egypt as a potherb.

Cotton bagging must be strong and is generally made with the fiber obtained from the thick, woody butt of the jute plant and known as jute butts.

Jute paper is a kind of wrapping paper made from jute.

"Gunny" in "gunny-sack" is an Anglicized form of the Hindu and Sanskrit "goni" meaning sack or bag. Since gunny-sacks are often made of jute, this fabric itself is sometimes referred to as gunny.

In India jute fabric is used as clothing by some of the poor classes.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was dressed in white sheer over satin with white silk net floor length embroidered veil. She wore the groom's gift, a yellow gold locket.

Mrs. Carson Stratton, sister of the groom, as matron of honour, was dressed in pale blue net, over satin with blue finger tip veil, carrying a bouquet of mauve and pink asters with baby's breath. Miss Marguerite Elliott was her sister's maid of honour, gowned in pink sheer over satin with pink finger tip veil and carried a bouquet of purple asters and baby's breath. Miss Mary Elliott was her sister's flower girl, dressed in pink taffeta and carried a basket of small pink and white flowers. She wore a yellow gold locket the gift of the bride.

Mr. Harold Carson of Bloomfield, cousin of the groom, acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. Tom Sarles and Mr. Harold Elliott.

During the signing of the register, Miss Laura Mason of Springbrook, sang "O Promise Me".

The bride's gift to the matron of honour, maid of honour, soloist and pianist, were bracelets. The groom's gift to the best man and ushers, were yellow gold tie pins.

Following the ceremony the guests numbering one hundred, were entertained in the Assembly Hall, near the church, where a wedding dinner was served by the W.A. of the United Church. Mr. Kenneth Stewart was toastmaster and proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom replied. Rev. Mr. Delve gave a fine address and others who spoke were Mrs. Devolin, mother of the groom, dressed in black sheer with black accessories, Mr. Clifford Elliott and Mr. E. T. Sarles gave short addresses.

After a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara and Buffalo, the young couple will reside on North Front Street, Belleville.

The bride travelled in grey pinstripe wool suit with rose sheer blouse and black and white accessories. She wore a corsage of sweet peas.

HATCH—BRANT

A very pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock on August sixteenth, in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rochester, N.Y., when Miss Gladys A. Brant, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Brant of Shannonville, Ontario, Canada, was married to Mr. George C. Hatch, only son of Mrs. Mabel E. Hatch, and the late Leslie D. Hatch, 56 Nicholson St., Rochester.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William S. McCoy, now retired, and who was formerly a rector of St. Luke's Church in Rochester. The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore the traditional gown of white satin made in princess style with shoulder puffed leg o' mutton sleeves and the full skirt forming a train. Her finger tip and face veil were caught with a halo of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a lovely strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a beautiful arm bouquet of white roses and white larkspur. She also carried a point lace handkerchief that the groom's mother and sister carried at their respective weddings.

Miss Marguerite Brant of Oshawa, Ontario, Canada, was the maid of honour. She wore a gown of pastel blue velvershayed marquisette and carried a bouquet of pink larkspur and blue delphiniums.

Little Virginia Kaiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Kaiser, 63 Shelbourne Road, Rochester, was the flower girl and carried a basket of Sweetheart roses, blue delphiniums and baby's breath.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of navy blue sheer with matching accessories, a large leghorn hat trimmed with a dusty pink satin flower and wore a corsage of pink roses.

The groom's mother wore a lovely street length dress of wine figured crepe with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of Token roses.

Mr. William Siegfried, 121 Mulberry Street, Rochester, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Joseph L. Richter, 19 Eglantine Road, Rochester, brother-in-law of the groom, and Mr. Stanley F. Glogowski, 207 Lehigh Ave., Rochester, N.Y.

The church was decorated with palms, white dahlias, larkspur and gladioli. The altar vases were filled with white flowers and tall baskets were filled with variegated pastel shades of flowers.

The wedding music was played by Miss Rena Dumas, organist of South Congregational Church, Rochester, who played the Bride's March Lohengrin by Wagner and Wedding March by Mendelssohn. Mrs. John H. Smith, 21 Reservoir Avenue, Rochester, sang very sweetly both at the ceremony and the signing of the register, "I Love You Truly" and "Because".

The bride's gifts to her attendants were, cameos to the maid of honour and soloist and a gold bracelet to the flower girl. The groom's gifts to the best man and the ushers were Ronson cigarette lighters.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at Green Gables Tea Room, 363 Oxford Street, Rochester. After the reception the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip east, through the Adirondack Mountains and crossing over to Montreal, Canada, then on to the home of the bride's parents, where another reception will be held in their honour on August 23. The bride's travelling dress was of sheer dusty pink made redingote style with turban to match. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Hatch will reside in Rochester at 56 Nicholson Street.

HORTON—KETCHESON

With a profusion of colorful gladioli and fern, as a background, a lovely wedding took place at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, August sixteenth, in Moira United Church when Norma Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ketcheson, Moira, Ontario, became the bride of Clare Burdette Horton, son of Mrs. Elizah Horton and the late German Horton, Corbyville, Ont. Rev. W. J. Davis, Cannifton, officiated at the ceremony. Miss Iva Horton, A.C.C.M., sister of the groom, presided at the piano for wedding music and Miss Helen Cook, Belleville, was soloist, singing "Beloved It Is Morn", during the signing of the register.

The charming bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of white chiffon, floor length, fashioned on Grecian lines. Her white tulle finger tip length veil was caught to her hair with seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and bouvardia. Mrs. Taylor Franklin, Belleville, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing turquoise sheer with matching tulle cap and shoulder length veil. Her bouquet was of Talisman roses and bouvardia. Miss Dorothy Fox, Belleville, as bridesmaid, was in pale pink net with matching tulle cap and shoulder length veil. She carried pink roses and bouvardia.

Mr. Donald C. Ketcheson, Belleville, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Donald Spencer of Rednersville, and Mr. Taylor Franklin of Belleville.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Ketcheson received in roseberry sheer with matching accessories and corsage of roses, assisted by Mrs. Horton, wearing dephinium blue sheer with corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Horton left on a wedding trip to Lake Huron district and Western Ontario, the bride travelling in a navy and red crepe suit with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside at Corbyville, Ontario.

Aiken's Sunday School Receives Donation

3rd Sidney — On Wednesday evening the Aiken's community gathered at the home of Mr. Stanley Spafford, superintendent of the Sunday School where an enjoyable time was spent. Earlier in the season it had been decided to dispense with the annual lawn social and hold a social evening when cash donations could be brought in for buying supplies for the Sunday School.

Mr. Fred Westover, assistant superintendent, acted as chairman for the program which opened with the hymn, Onward Christian Soldiers. Musical numbers were: piano solos by Mr. Harry Bailey of Toronto, who is visiting in the neighborhood; cornet solos by Gordon Spafford with Mrs. Lee Grills as piano accompanist; selections by Douglas McPherson, saxaphone and Gordon Spafford, cornet with Harry Bailey at the piano. Solos were rendered by Miss Barbara Hamilton "The King is Still in London". Mrs. Leon McMullen "Maria Elene" and Mrs. Perry Hamilton " 'Till the Lights of London Shine Again". A patriotic reading "The Little Boats of Britain" was given by Miss Ruth Spafford, Belleville, depicting the heroic part the "little boats" played in assisting in the evacuation of Dunkirk. The chairman paid tribute to Mr. Spafford in his regular attendance, and of performing his duties as leader of the Sunday School, and to Mrs. Spafford in her capable manner of teaching the Bible class. Mr. Wheeler, president of the class in voicing his appreciation, moved a vote of thanks to the family in opening their home for the occasion which brought forth hearty applause from the assembled gathering.

The National Anthem closed this part of the program after which lunch was served by the ladies present.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHE'S DRAWN A "CHAIR-WARMER"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have the worst luck when it comes to boy friends. For a year and a half I've been going with a young man, and really expected to marry him. He has been coming almost every evening and we play games or go for a walk or an occasional movie and he usually came to Sunday dinner. The other evening when we happened to get on the subject, he said his salary is so small that he can't support a wife.

"Once before this same thing happened to me. The first chair warmer took up three years of my time, and counting this one's year and a half makes four and a half years with nothing to show for it. I call that wasting my time.

"What do you think about a man who comes to see a girl time and time again with nothing more in view than a comfortable place to spend his evenings?

EDITH"

If the young man understands that you are receiving his attentions in the hope of getting married, decidedly it's not decent of him to "waste your time". But nowadays so many girls would rather have a pay envelope than a husband that very often you find such an arrangement as you have described. These so called "chair-warmers" spend evening after evening with girls and have no feeling of obligation in the matter.

Make your views clear the next time you favor a young man with your friendship.

LOVES HIM FROM A DISTANCE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am 21 years old and have fallen in love with a man I see every day, but he doesn't even know I'm around. He's engaged to a girl I've never seen — what am I to do? I've admired him a long time, and have tried to get an introduction, although he is unaware of my feelings for him and is betrothed to another.

"Perhaps if I could meet him, I could overcome this infatuation. Can you suggest how I might become acquainted with him? I'm sick and tired of this brooding.

HOPELESS"

That's an excellent idea — meeting this man. You've been idealizing someone and it's more than likely he will fall short of the Prince Charming you've been dreaming over.

Being engaged to someone else, he'll probably have the far-away look and manner of the engaged, that is, if he's of the dependable type. If he's flirtatious — well, my dear, don't take roving eyes too seriously.

HE CALLS HER AN ICICLE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Six months ago I started going with Jack. We always seemed to have a good time together, but all of a sudden he stopped coming to see me. And now he is telling everyone the reason he stopped is because I'm an icicle. Although I've been going out with other boys since then, I can't seem to forget Jack.

"I really love this boy and want him to come back to me. As far as I can find out, he doesn't seem to be interested in any other girl, and yet he won't come to see me.

DISCONSOLATE"

A really clever girl will understand how to steer her course between the rocks of too much petting and too much prudery. It can be done. If you went together for several months and he seemed to regard that as "steady" company, it might be a good idea to call him up or write him a short note, which you could sign facetiously "The Icicle."

The Correct Arrangements For An Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am having an informal morning wedding soon, with only one attendant. She and I are going to wear street-length dresses.

1. Would it be proper for me and my attendant to carry bouquets instead of wearing corsages? Or would it be proper for me to wear a corsage and for her to carry a bouquet?

2. Is it proper to send formal engraved invitations for an informal wedding? I want to have invitations, not announcements, and my relatives and friends are too numerous to write to each one.

3. I shall have a wedding breakfast for just the members of the immediate families, and I am inviting the minister and his wife. Is it proper, before the breakfast, to ask the minister to say grace?

4. I have been informed that the groom should not have any more attendants than the bride has. I am to have one attendant; the groom is to have a best man. Would it be incorrect to have two ushers? I am most confused about this, after what I have been told.

Sallie

1. For your informal morning wedding it would be more appropriate for both you and your attendant to wear corsages with your street-length dresses. In any event, your attendant shouldn't carry a bouquet if you wear a corsage — this would make her flowers more important than yours.

2. No, you mustn't send formal engraved invitations to bid your guests to come to an informal wedding. That's inconsistent. The kind of invitation sent is the sign of the kind of wedding.

Don't take the writing of your notes of invitation as a "chore". Think what a grand opportunity they give you to show that you're a gracious hostess inviting your guests to the most important event in your life! These invitations need to be only two or three sentences long, but you should be proud of the way you do them.

Also you may properly invite your relatives and close friends who live near, by word of mouth, if you feel you can't write so many invitations.

3. By all means ask your minister to say grace. Congratulations to you for having such a beautiful plan! He'll be honored and pleased.

4. Whoever informed you that the groom should not have any more attendants than the bride gave you the wrong information. This is never the rule in any kind of wedding, formal or informal. The bride and groom do just as they wish about this. Under the circumstances explained in your letter, you will definitely need two ushers, and you should have the groom invite them.

COURTESY TIP

I wonder if persons who are addicted to writing postscripts on their letters are the same ones who take a long time to leave a party after they rise and say they're going?

"Three Loves Has Nancy" is the gay romantic comedy now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and Nancy is none other than Janet Gaynor in another of the small-town-girl roles which have made her one of the most beloved stars on the screen. Robert Montgomery is co-star.

New Discoveries About Why Children Are Timid

Why are some children timid and others brave? This is a question which has concerned parents, teachers and doctors for a long, long time. There are some who say that a timid child is timid because of its heredity. However, timidity, like criminality, is a way of behaving. Sometimes children are timid because they imitate their timid parents. This, however, is not heredity but imitation.

Dr. Jacob H. Conn of Johns Hopkins Hospital has analyzed the behavior of 500 children over a period of almost ten years to see why some were exceptionally timid. He believes that the most frequent form of environment pressure is associated with the child's fear of failing in school. The parents also become fearful, fretful and disappointed when the child does not make progress. The parents are annoyed when the parents of other children tell how well they are doing. This results in a continuous barrage of questions and continued criticism which causes withdrawal by the child from ordinary activities and associations.

In attempting to overcome the fears of the child, it is recommended that each child be studied to determine exactly why it responds in a timid manner to various situations. Usually it will be found that the child has been overwhelmed and thwarted in his attempts to live his own life. He does not react by a suitable response to difficult situations but actually contributes still further to these situations, diminishing his own self-esteem and deceiving himself as to his situation.

Doctor Conn believes that the timid child is an individual who needs to realize himself. Such a child can observe any action in himself if he has normal intelligence. Then it can determine why it is afraid and overcome the condition. When such children are encouraged to express themselves as equals, particularly in the presence of their parents who in most instances have given the child the sense of appreciation, there is a prompt disappearance of the need for self-deception and the substitution of pride in being himself.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, August 19

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A VERY lively and probably exciting day is the augury based on an intriguing chain of planetary configurations. Unusual headway may be made under quickened mental, nervous and physical energies, especially through contracts, agreements, writings, publishings and promotional enterprises. These should reach satisfactory culmination through dexterity, skill, even artifice or subtlety, but would be defeated by rash, forced, impulsive or angry treatment. Social, domestic, or sentimental obligations may come up for decision and invite most pleasurable contacts, possibly with elders, although youth has its place also.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for an exceedingly lively and pleasant year if much astute, clever and subtle manipulation be exercised in dubious or perplexing situations. Impetuosity, haste, strife or recklessness might prove fatal. Writings, of a high or inspired order, should thrive, and publications, advertising, promotion, and intellectual pursuits of all angles are under benefic vibrations. Social, domestic and affectional affiliations call for consideration or duty where elders may be concerned. But it should be a very promising and happy year for the young and eager, if due restraints reign.

A child born on this day may have diversified talents, with literary or other professional abilities of marked degree. But in these as in general conduct sharp restraints are recommended, lest regret and peril follow.

Dazzling Promise

CHAPTER 8.

From then on, Dora and De Lane spent the night flying about in one taxicab after another to visit Bohemian clubs, frequented largely by Unadilla's sporting element.

They finally sat sipping hot coffee in the Peacock Inn. They were exhausted by failure, and ready to call off their hectic search for the elusive Bob Platt.

Dona suddenly felt numb and limp. De Lane, noting her paleness, jumped up and came around the table just in time to catch her as she fainted.

When she regained consciousness, she felt his cheek momentarily against hers, then as quicky forgot it.

He assisted her out of the poorly ventilated room to the street, and the cool fresh night air quickly revived her.

But De Lane was thoroughly shaken and for good reason. That flash of a bulb, when the unconscious Dona had been in his arms, might get them both into trouble. Two men had taken the picture, then ran out the door before he could make a move to catch them. Alice, his wife, had been attempting for months to get evidence so that she could sue for divorce. If she used this innocent lovely girl for such a purpose, he could never forgive himself.

It was four o'clock in the morning when De Lane left the weary Dona at the Platt mansion. She thought he had been as gallant as a Raleigh and told him so, while wondering at his preoccupied air. Did he think her too much of a busybody? He'd never know she'd been hired to be one.

Slowly, she dragged herself through the second floor of the house. She was somewhat taken back to see a light from Bob's room.

She stepped outside the open door and started as she saw the slight figure lying on the sofa.

Bob sound asleep! She had apparently flopped down there, unable to take off her crumpled gown or even her tightly strapped slippers. Her hair was a disorderly crown of black against a yellow satin pillow, and the room was filled with a rank stuffiness, reminiscent of some tawdry night-club taproom.

Dona shivered with disgust and impatience. If this wasn't a poor joke! She'd been out doing all the questionable night spots while the girl she sought was safely asleep at home. But Bob couldn't have been here long.

Dona quickly threw up a window and laid a thick woollen blanket over the heavily sleeping girl, whose gratitude for this, or any other favors, would never be shown.

At last, Dona crawled into her own bed, too drugged with sleep to fuss over anything further tonight. She dreamed fitfully of Tug — dreams filled with hazard and uncertainty. She felt herself clinging to the side of a cliff, calling frantically for help. Tug was clearly outlined above her, but he stood motionless and seemed deaf to her cries.

When she awoke around noon, she was utterly spent.

She raised herself on her elbows and looked out the open window at the sun-drenched world. This was a day calling her jubilance, for the counting of one's blessings. Perhaps after all she was lucky. This luxurious suite of rooms, all the wonderful new clothes Mrs. Platt was giving her—and Tug's love, in spite of all those horrid dreams—should make her happy. Dreams were silly things.

She got up and stretched her arms lazily. She thought regretfully, "What a fizzle I made of my job last night! I've nothing but failure to report to Mrs. Platt. I never dreamed Bob would insult Tom Castor—and the aCstor millions. Oh well, I should have known I couldn't get close to Bob."

But after she had bathed and dressed and finished the Melba toast and coffee brought up by Connell, she felt more hopeful.

Mrs. Platt had already gone out to play golf and Bob was nowhere about. She was probably keeping poor Jettie running for aspirin and ice packs. Dona considered offering her services then decided against it. She must keep friendly with Bob at all costs, and now of course Bob would feel like throwing things at every one who approached her.

From force of habit, Dona soon found herself wandering into the upstairs library. Flora Lambkin was on duty here and greatly relieved to see her.

"I need your advice," she immediately told Dona. "This job is all Greek to me. Mrs. Platt gave one hasty glance at her engagement book this morning, then flew out of the house without giving me the faintest idea of what is expected of me."

Dona's smile was sympathetic. One could easily surmise from whom Grace Platt's daughter inherited her irresponsibility. Bob shouldn't be blamed too much.

"Oh, just be careful to get the messages straight and you'll get on," Dona began. "And do whatever—"

The telephone bell interrupted and Dona waited to tell Flora Lampkin more about the Platt routine.

"It's for you, Miss Nickelson," came surprisingly to Dona's ears.

She took the receiver cautiously in her two hands. Immediately, gladness surged through her at the sound of Tug's voice.

"Hello, Tug!" she said eagerly. "It's so good to be—"

"No," he snapped, "nothing is good. Not after watching you weave through the door of the Savoy Cafe last night."

"Savoy? Was I—no, I think not. Perhaps. We went to so many places, I can't remember."

"You were decidedly not yourself, Dona. But I knew you, all right, even if you did have the hood of that blue velvet cape over your head. You wore that same outfit to Bob Platt's coming-out party, didn't you?"

Dona swallowed once—twice. She managed to blurt out, "Yes, I—I borrowed it from some one. But Tug—I didn't wear that cape last night. I was—"

"Don't tell me I saw the glamorous Bob Platt! What a wow of a story I can peddle to a certain columnist! That fellow with her was the notorious big-time gambler, Tony Treasor. Boy! What a scoop!"

Dona stiffened. Gossip? Exactly what Mrs. Platt wished to avoid. Oh, somehow Bob's name must be kept out of this!

With unthinking swiftness, she said, "You're all mixed up, Tug. I'll explain later."

This might at least keep him from doing a great deal of harm.

"So! It WAS you!"

There was a fatalistic quality in this declaration which sent a shiver through Dona.

Then she thought desperately, "I've done nothing out of order. Why should I bear the brunt of things for Bob Platt?"

She told Tug hurriedly, "When I see you tomorrow night—I'll give you the whole story. I—I can't—over the phone."

"I'm not so sure I'm going through with our plans—now," Tug announced coolly, and hung up before she could offer a protest.

Their marriage! Tug thought she was some one she wasn't! He wouldn't listen to explanations! He no longer—wanted her!

The receiver dropped from her trembling fingers and crashed noisily on the desk.

Flora Lampkin set it in its cradle, inquiring curiously, "Bad news?"

Dona nodded mutely. Then pale and shaken, she rushed blindly from the room.

Back in her own suite she began to pace the green velvet carpet. Up and down, up and down, she went, trying to reach a decision regarding Bob Platt, the girl who had everything money could buy. Even a blanket for scandal. It was so unfair that Dona Nickelson's life should be smashed so that the way ored, thoroughly selfish Bob. Here could be smooth for the more fav- she was about to lose the man she loved—or else expose this light-headed heiress she was hired to protect. It was an unjust complication—too unjust, to be endured. She wouldn't, she couldn't, that's all.

Then all at once, Bob herself stood in the doorway.

Dona halted abruptly and stared incredulously at the tightly drawn pale face, defiant now above the dainty silk negligee.

Bob came in without invitation and flopped down in a deep armchair. She winced as her head hit the chair's high back.

"Gosh—I feel rotten," she acknowledged, the lids drooping heavily over her black eyes.

"Would an aspirin help?" offered Dona, trying her utmost to feel generous toward this preverse girl.

"No—I've swallowed dozens—nothing helps. I'm a silly little goose—yes? Say it! You're thinking it."

"Yes, I think you are," Dona said frankly.

Bob bounced upright, her dark eyes blazing. "Why—you—you really mean it! You're—insufferable—you're—"

She suddenly clutched her head in both hands and sank back with a low moan.

"Oh, I can't stand it! I'm—so ill! I get no sympathy from any one."

Dona smiled a little crookedly and hurried to her bathroom.

(To be continued.)

CHAPTER NINE
Reconciliation

Dona drew a glass of water from the tap and took it quickly back to the suffering Bob.

"Drink this," she said, more kindly than she felt. "It may help."

Bob took the glass in an unsteady hand. She spilled more water down her lace jabot than she drank.

"For heaven's sakes!" she snapped, her nerves still raw. "Sit down! You give me the jitters! Why do you stand looking at me like that? Aren't you my new friend? You have to stick to me through thick and thin—you—"

"I'm not so sure," came doubtfully from Dona, not moving an inch. If this sort of thing went on much longer, she'd have to quit this glorified job, once and for all.

Bob looked astonished. "You mean—you mean you won't stand by me?" she demanded of this employee who defied her.

Then abruptly her mood changed. "I thought—I thought I could count on you," she wailed pathetically.

A tear rolled slowly down one of her wan cheeks and she resembled a penitent child.

This was a Bob that Dona had never seen before and, in spite of herself, she wanted to help her and could not censure her too much.

She said quickly, "You get into such jams, Bob. Why

"Looking for thrills, I guess. I get a kick out of doing the unusual. Besides—it annoys my mother. She wants a goody-goody daughter. It riles me—brings out my mean streak."

"She's thinking of what's best for you, that's all."

"But I'm grown up — I know what I'm doing! If I listened to mother, I'd be a social washout. I'll admit I took on a heavy date last night — probably made Tom Castor hate me. It seemed dangerous and exciting—but it was tame. The man was more of a gentleman than I expected. He bored me—nothing happened. Hereafter, I stick with my own crowd. They're more fun.

"There's one exception, though." Bob rattled on. "That tall handsome boy friend of yours—isn't he too devastating? He's taking me to a movie tomorrow night. Tugwell Nash—a nice name. I like the sound of it."

Dona sat down in the nearest chair rather suddenly. She tightly clenched her hands in her lap, thought swiftly, "Tug, dating Bob just to show me a thing or two! Dating her on the very night we planned to get married!"

"Yes—it's a nice name," she said, very carefully. She wondered if it would ever belong to her—or if she actually wanted it.

Bob yawned and rose. "Guess I'll crawl into bed again. Perhaps I can sleep this off. 'Bye'."

She left the room as unceremoniously as she had entered, leaving Dona in a whirling state of mind that distorted everything.

"Well, it's no use getting so worked up over a mere man," she told herself severely. "If Tug prefers Miss Roberta Platt to me — then so be it."

But tears clouded her hurt eyes, and she choked back a sob as she closed and locked the door.

Then, inconsistently, she decided to do something about ironing out her tangled problems. When Tug called her, he was hotly angry. Perhaps he had cooled off by this time. If she could only talk to him!

She went to her desk and dialed Tug's rooming house, scarcely expecting him to be in this time of day. But he answered immediately.

"I've been waiting for you to call—know you'd be as cut up as I was darling," he told her, with that low tenderness in his voice that she knew so well.

But his overcharged confidence set her on edge, making her nearly sorry that she'd been the one to give in.

"It was you Tug—who said everything was off," she reminded him quickly.

"Yes, I know. But I've been thinking. We're going through with our plans. I can't get along without you. Don't you see that, honey?'

"Oh, Tug—I'm all mixed up. I've been so—so sick about the whole thing. I can't have you thinking—"

"We won't mention it again. We'll drop the subject of the blue cape. But from now on, you'll watch your step—and I'll watch mine. Is that clear?"

"Yes, Tug," she agreed, provoked at herself, but loving him too much to let him go.

If he were willing to let matters drop without explanation, so much the better. She couldn't explain without getting in wrong with the Platts. And even if he promised to protect Bob, could she be certain he'd keep that promise? She wondered again why she was so determined to marry him. Was she distrusting him? "No," she thought stubbornly. "I even love his faults. No one is perfect."

But his dating Bob called for a showdown.

So she hazarded, "Too bad to break your engagement with Miss Platt—for tomorrow night."

"Oh that. Did she tell you? Don't you worry about anybody else now, honey. You meet me at the Mill Park entrance at eight tomorrow night—and nothing can separate us after that. Savvy?"

She laughed again happily into the mouthpiece. "Yes—I'll be there, Tug. You can count on it."

She said good-bye to him, relieved that he was not planning to pick her up here at the house where he might run into Bob and embarrassing complications. How he was going to cancel his date with the haughty Bob Platt was for him to figure out. Certainly, she wouldn't be the one to tell Bob that she was not the first in Tug Nash's affections, and it was unlikely that Bob would discover who was. It would be an evening off for Bob's glorified companion—with no questions asked.

• • •

Twinklink stars and a new moon made the night heady with romance. It was clear and cool and filled with dear promise. Her wedding night! Dona was nearing the Mill Park entrance at exactly eight by her wrist watch. Her heart was singing a lovely sweet melody beneath its rapid beat.

She saw Tug's car parked by the curb and hurried up to it.

The street lamp shone full on his face and she thought again that he was the handsomest man she had ever seen; she wondered again why he had chosen her out of a world of lovely women. Oh, she was lucky! She wanted so much to make him the right sort of wife!

"Exactly on time," he said, flinging open the car door.

She got in beside him, her face rosy and eager and adorable.

He leaned down and planted a hasty kiss on her warm cheek.

"Well—here we go!" he announced gaily, and immediately the little car went sailing down the street as if it were as glad to be taking them somewhere as they were to go.

"Such a heavenly night," softly breathed Dona.

"'Swell," came bluntly from Tug.

From then on, they said little. To Dona there was something deeply intangible, something dearly sacred about this trip to the minister's home. She wanted to tuck it safely away in her memory, lay it like a bit of exquisite lace in lavender to aromatize forever the precious years stretching ahead.

But the ceremony was over quickly. Within the hour, they were riding back up the street again. They had been married all of twenty minutes. It was exhilarating, Dona was thinking, to belong wholly to one man, even if she didn't have a wedding ring to prove it. But Tug had said there would be plenty of time for rings later—when they announced their marriage.

Now they had all evening before them and she didn't much care where he drove so long as they were together.

Then he said unexpectedly, "I'll rush you back to the Platt's now. It won't do to let them suspect anything, seeing that our marriage isn't being aired."

"But I don't have to go back—yet," came from her waveringly. "This is my evening off—I arranged it."

"If you're in early, it'll look more regular, won't it?'

She tried to think he was right; she tried desperately to get his viewpoint. Of course if they didn't want people to know about this marriage, they'd have to be discreet. Perhaps tonight didn't matter. Nothing could ever part them after this—that is, not for long.

Then for some unexplainable reason, Tug told her the truth.

"Sorry, hon—but I've got to keep that date with Bob Platt. You mustn't mind, darling. I'm getting her name on the dotted line tonight or know the reason why! One big policy like that, and you and I are set. You know that, don't you?"

But Dona's heart stood still. She had just become this man's lawfully wedded wife—and already she was trying to find excuses for him. Business—and Bob Platt? They were as far apart as the two poles!

CHAPTER TEN
Love, Doubt, Jealousy

Dona's pride had risen and, for a brief moment, it even exceeded her love for this man. She told Tug heatedly, "We've made a horrid mistake—we never should have married! I feel exactly as you do about—the whole thing!"

She was visibly trembling. Her world was threatening to crash and she felt that nothing that Tug Nash ever did or said again would make this night seem right.

He quickly swerved the little car to the curb and brought it to a jerking stop.

Before she could protest, he had her in his muscular arms and was raining swift kisses on her protesting lips, her closed eyes, the curves of her neck.

"You're mine, darling!" he told her passionately. "Mine — and I'll never let you go! I'm glad about the whole thing—and so are you—you lovely little spitfire."

Now in his arms, a suffocating sweetness enveloped her and she ceased to struggle and lay content a long divine minute. Then came the tantalizing memory of his baffling attitude toward their marriage and she was miserable again.

"Tug—I still think we acted too hastily," came in muffled tones from against his shoulder.

But this didn't ring true now, even to herself.

He laughed harshly, gathered her closer, and savagely set his warm, full lips against her mouth again.

"You—you hurt me," she finally managed, breaking away from him.

"I had to—to love you so much, honey. You've got to believe in me."

There was a deeply magnetic intonation to this declaration, which stirred her strangely. She suddenly flung her arms around his neck and burst into wild tears.

"I—can't!" Her voice broke sharply. "I—I want to believe in you. But—how—can I?"

He quickly unwound her arms and set her upright in the seat.

"See here — what is this? a scene?" he demanded harshly. "I hate scenes. We're married, aren't we? I never get down on bended knees to any woman. If you want me to stay in love with you—I'm warning you—don't shove me too far."

He snapped on the dome light, glanced at his wrist watch, and then at the gas gauge.

"Holy cat—look at that! Gas down to zero! Dry those tears, sweetheart. If we're lucky, we can make that filling station up ahead."

He spoke as if all were serene between them; as if he were her lord and master and that was all there was to it.

She was relieved when he switched off the light so that she could no longer see his handsome scowling countenance. She was thinking, "Yes, drive on—hurry. I've got to get away from you—forget you. I never imagined before what torture love could be. This is nothing like the love I've been dreaming about for so long. Maybe it isn't love—I'm not sure. And I'm married! What have I done? Oh, what have I done?"

Tug shot the car ahead and up sharply into a brightly illuminated drive. He stopped beside a red pump and told the attendant, "Fill'er up!"

Another attendant ran up and began spraying liquid on the dirty windshield. He began wiping it off with a big cloth and Dona, weak with misery, hoped he wasn't peering through the glass at her tear-stained face.

Tug was plunging his hands into trouser and suitcoat pockets and extracting scraps of paper, pencils, a handkerchief, nail file, keys and a package of cigarettes.

He finally replaced everything and turned to Dona with an exasperated sigh.

"Nice picklement I'm in! Must have left the rest of my money in my other suit when I changed. Lucky I had that five spot for the minister, wasn't it? Anything in your purse, honey?"

She fumbled with the catch of her handbag, took out a bill and handed it to him without a word.

"A twenty! Great! I'll pay you the next time I see you. I suppose you won't be needing any of this tonight—I haven't time to drive back to my room. A man can't be out in the world without change in his pocket."

"Not in Bob Platt's world," was on the tip of her tongue to say. But, "Hardly" was the only word she uttered.

Oh, well—it didn't matter. She'd just sworn to love, honor and obey this man. Perhaps he was, as he'd said trying to get a stake so they would "be set."

But she wondered if he were always so unpredictable, wondered if they'd ever be able to settle down and have absolute faith in each other. He hadn't mentioned the blue cape tonight, yet only yesterday he had seemed furious about it. Everything with him was touch and go. She'd have to be content to take him as she found him and not expect too much. Maybe that was what ruined too many marriages—expecting too much. And time only would tell about this one.

Now, heaven help her, she couldn't forget his kisses or what it meant to be held close in his arms. She loved him after all—and that was that. Nothing could ever change her love for him. Love could work miracles. Hers would make a new man of Tug. Oh, it must, it must!

Tug's last lingering kiss was still warm on her lips when she stepped into a bus which followed a roundabout course through the residential section and finally came within a few blocks of the Platt residence. Tug had proposed that she return this way. She knew it was because he would find it awkward to drop her and pick up Bob on the same doorstep.

Dona's head was in a turmoil of doubt, love and jealousy as the bus sped along the smooth streets. Yes, she conceded, she was furiously jealous of Bob Platt, who tonight was interfering with a honeymoon of sorts. At the best, it would have been but a makeshift honeymoon, yet it might have lingered in her mind as a beautiful light to go by in future hours when she was desperately lonely and discouraged.

She made her way at last into the Platt house. She was sick at heart but somewhat relieved to reach her rooms without encountering either Bob or her mother. She had made inquiries of Connell and learned that they both had gone out for the evening. At any rate, she wouldn't have to endure the agony of hearing Tug's car rattle out the drive, because apparently it had already gone—with Bob in it.

She could sit and think of them now—together — going wherever the glamorous Bob wished to go. The change from that twenty-dollar bill might give her quite an evening and Tug quite a thrill, before he got her name on the dotted line.

Dona entered her sitting room just as the little French clock on the mantel chimed out ten o'clock. The night was still young! Tug and Bob! Oh—Tug!

She slumped down in a big wing chair before the blazing log fire. Intently, numbly, she watched the flames lick greedily at the dry wood. Her eyes made out pictures in the flames—grotesque little people were there who taunted her with funny faces and seared her tormented thoughts more cruelly into her consciousness.

There were knights in armor, gnomes and fairies, all laughing and dancing in lush meadows. A bride stood in her beautiful satin gown, with her long flowing veil caught up by orange blossoms. But the bride stood alone. The bridegroom, if there ever had been one, had been swallowed up by the flames.

Dona averted her hot swimming eyes. This was too much. She couldn't endure it.

She got up quickly and went toward her dressing room to remove her hat and coat.

She halted in astonishment on the threshold. She stared in stupid fascination at the empty suit, hat and shoe boxes littering the floor, at the lovely creations of wool, silk, lace and velvet covering the chairs, filling the shelves and hangers in the large wardrobe, the doors of which stood open.

Clothes! Clothes for every occasion! Mrs. Platt had outdone herself; she had more than kept her word. These things had evidently been sent by the shopkeepers for inspection. The busiest society girl in town would have no more luxurious outfit than Dona Nickelson Nash. It was astounding.

Something like joyous anticipation began to creep through Dona now, but she shoved it back determinedly. No—she couldn't be happy. Nothing could ever make her perfectly happy again.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was opening her mail at breakfist, saying to pop, O deer what am I going to do about this my old graduation class is getting up an anniversity book, and they want a recent photograph of every member to print alongside of our old graduation photographs from the original class book, the idea of course being Then and Now. But Willyum, my photographs never do me justice. They all make me look older than I really am, haven't you noticed it, Willyum? she said.

I cant say I have, pop said. Of course they may make you look somewhat older than you really were, but dont we all? he said, and ma said, Now Willyum I demand to know the precise meaning of that last remark, personal or otherwise.

The precise meaning is strictly otherwise, pop said. It means that time is eternal and human beings are mortal, and never the twain shall meet except for a relatively brief space of time, but if you really want me to get personal, I'll tell you a little incident that happened the other morning. I was all dressed and shaved and you were still asleep and the reason I refrained from waking you was because you looked just like a baby lying there and I seemed to remember something about it being bad for infants to wake them out of a sound sleep, he said.

Why Willyum how sweet, ma said. I had quite a nice picture taken about 6 years ago, wich is fairly recent as time flies, so I think I'll send them that, she said, and pop said, My deer I assure you that you look younger than you did 6 years ago. So wouldn't that be giving them a wrong impression? he said.

O well, I'm not going to go and have my picture taken just to fan my vanity, ma said, and pop said, It's a woman's world.

Meaning ma is a perfect arguer.

Dodgers Lead National Loop By Half Game as the Cardinals Come East in Pursuit of Flag

Higbe And Wyatt Win Double Bill For Brooklyn And Cards Split With Pirates

YANKS WIN TWO

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The National Baseball League serves the dessert course this week.

Up to now, it's been a little of this and a little of that in Ford Frick's fiesta, and some of the boys got a sandwich and some came up with a juicy steak. Brooklyn Dodgers found a choice tid-bit yesterday in the Boston Braves and are resting, at the moment, at the head of the table by a half-game. St. Louis Cardinals picked a tough order of beef in Pittsburgh Pirates and sank from first place with a double-header split.

But beginning today, the table's cleared again and the pennant pie is trotted out to be cut up. The Cardinals lead the eastern charge of the western invaders for the last time this year, leading to a four-game series with the Dodgers.

As usual, the Yanks are going to have their American League duties done up early. The Bronx dandies mowed down Connie Mack's Athletics yesterday, 2-1, and 4-3 to push their league lead up to 17 games, with only 35 to go. It's all downhill now, especially since Cleveland has dropped out of second place.

The Cards move in for six games with the soft touches in Boston and Philadelphia as they work for the start of the Dodgers series next Sunday. The Brooklyns, meanwhile, entertain the Pirates and Chicago Cubs and it's "every man for himself".

Rest on Four Hurlers

Of the most recent activities, topped off by yesterday's proceedings, the whole business appears to rest on the right-hand elbowing equipment of Kirby Higbe and Whitey Wyatt so far as Brooklyn is concerned, while the Cards have to do their riding on the left wing of Ernie White and right arm of Mort Cooper.

Brooklyn's front-line flingers performed yesterday. First Higbe served up a five-hitter to scalp the Braves 5-1. Then Wyatt went out there and for 8 1-3 innings he had the first perfect game in nearly 20 years. But, with one gone in the ninth, Phil Masi, a batsman with an average currently soaring in the .230's, poked a pitch over second base for a single. Wyatt wound up with that one hitter for a 3-0 whitewash job.

Sparked by a four-run first-inning rally, the Cards coasted to a 7-1 decision behind Mort Cooper's seven-hit throwing. In the nightcap, the Pirates piled up an 8-2 edge, largely through a six-run second-inning party.

Giants Walloped Twice

The Phillies drew 8,587 to Shibe Park to watch the local boys larrup Bill Terry's Humpty-Dumpty Giants twice, 6-2 and 18-2.

Cincinnati Reds ran their winning streak to six games in the opener of their twin bill with the Cubs by clicking for a 6-3 victory behind Bucky Walters' steady tossing. But in the nightcap Old Charley Root won the 199th game of his career by taking a 4-2 decision.

Cleveland Indians lost two games to the charging Chicago White Sox and sank into a third-place deadlock with Boston's Red Sox. Bobby Feller dropped his fourth straight decision as he was out-pitched by Old Ted Lyons in the opener for an 8-2 setback, his tenth of the year Moose Solters scratched a hit with the bags loaded in the tenth inning of the nightcap for a 4-3 victory which boosted the Sox into second place.

Buck Newsom and George Caster exchanged Grade-A pitching performances in St. Louis. Buck hurled the Tigers to an 8-1 win over the Browns in the opener with a five-hit job. Caster then tossed a three-hitter for a 6-1 victory in the afterpiece.

Sid Hudson stopped Boston Red Sox with five hits to pitch Washington Senators to a 6-2 victory.

Saturday's Games

In Saturday's games in the National League Cincinnati made it four in a row over Chicago 4-1 behind Elmer Riddle's three-hit hurling. A three-run rally in the eighth inning, launched by Ernie White's wild throw on Frank Gustine's bunt, gave the Pirates a 4-2 victory over St. Louis Cards. New York Giants exploded a 15-hit attack on four Philadelphia pitchers to defeat the cellar-dwelling Phillies 4-1. The Braves clipped Luke Hamlin for four hits and as many runs in the second inning, with the help of effective seven-hit pitching by Tom Earley, made that enough to beat Brooklyn 4-1.

In the American League, Johnny Rigney of the White Sox turned in a three-hit 1-0 shutout over Cleveland for Chicago's 13th victory in 16 games. The Athletics started off against Charley Ruffing for 12 hits to whip the York Yankees 6-4. Boston Red Sox rallied in the last three innings to trounce Washington 8-6. Elden Auker, the Browns' submarine ball pitcher, torpedoed Detroit Tigers 3-2 on five hits.

HARBINGER OF FALL

Here's a reminder that the football season is just around the corner. Four of the collegians who will play in the backfield when the eastern college All-Stars tangle with the New York professional football Giants in a charity game at the Polo Grounds, New York city, Sept. 3, are shown racing down the field. They are, LEFT to RIGHT, Joe Osmanski (Holy Cross) of Providence, R.I.; Henry Toczylowski (Boston college) of Lynn Mass.; Francis X. Reagan (Pennsylvania) of Philadelphia, Pa., and Murt Landsberg (Cornell) of Mamaroneck, N.Y. It's the first day of practice for them on the grounds of the New York Military Academy at Cornwall-on-Hudson, N.Y.

WHEN DODGERS BIT THE DUST

But all the dust-biting was not performed by the Brooklyn Dodgers in that fateful doubleheader when the Giants blasted the league-leading Brooklynites into second place again. The Giants' own Babe Young is chewing up the surface of Ebbets field in this play. Babe was on second when Joe Moore singled to centre. Babe headed for the plate and seemed to be in the clear when the throw was wide. But Dodger Third Baseman Cookie Lavagetto intercepted the wide throw. Tossed to Catcher Mickey Owen and here is the finale with Umpire George Barr waving the Babe "out".

HOGAN LEADING PROFESSIONALS

Finished Second at Rochester to Place Earnings For Year at $12,733

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 18—(AP)—Little Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., still leads United States golf professionals in both 1941 money winnings and the Vardon Trophy race after his second-place finish in the $5,000 Times-Union open.

Hogan collected $750 for a season's $12,733, making this the 53rd consecutive tournament in which placed in the money. He shot 72-67—139 in yesterday's final for a 284 total.

Slammin' Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., winner with 277 garnered $1,200 to bring his earnings to $8,911. Snead also won the Canadian Open Championship at Toronto this month. National Open King, Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N.Y., finished third yesterday with 287, collecting $550 for a year's $8,166.

Fred Corcoran, Professional Golfers' Association Tournament champion, disclosed the figures and said the next stop for the pros will be in Detroit next Saturday and Sunday for the Ryder Cup team—Bobby Jones' team match for the United Service Organization's Fund, to be used towards recreations for United States soldiers.

Only Canadian in the Times-Union Open, Bill Kerr, of Toronto, finished well behind the leaders. His final score was 306.

DOUGLAS BONE SECOND AT AKRON SOAP BOX DERBY

Belleville Boy Makes Splendid Showing in International Race on Sunday

WINS ALL-CANADIAN

Douglas Bone, of Belleville, not only won the All-Canada event, but finished second in the International Soap Box Derby finals at Akron Ohio, on Sunday. Before a home town crowd of upwards of 60,000 Claude Smith of Akron won the All-American race and then nosed Bone out by a scant few inches in the International Soap Box Derby race.

Four entries faced the barrier in the International race, two from Canada, and one from Mexico and Alaska respectively. Bone won the All-Canada heat, beating Jimmy Drayton of Toronto with comparative ease. Lining up against the All-American champion, Claude Smith, and the Mexican boy-rider, Bone piloted his sleek racing car over the Derby Downs course to finish behind Smith a split second in arrears of the world's title.

Makes Fast Time

The best time made during the day's racing was in the All-American finals, however, when Smith guided his vehicle down the 1,025-foot incline track in the astonishing time of 26.79 seconds. Johnnie McDaniels of Charleston, W. Va., was second and Gene Bean of Washington was third. A triumphant International parade preceded the day's racing and was heralded by a track-packed crowd of patrons.

The Akron boy climaxed his national victory by also winning the International Soap Box Derby crown. Finishing behind Smith in the race among international champions was Bone, Canadian champion, and Eduardo Benton of Mexico City, third. Smith's time in the international final was 26.85.

In the first round, Bone had won the fourth heat, the all-Canada heat, in the time of 27.84. He defeated James Drayton of Toronto.

Lieut.-Col. Frank Harris, who celebrated his 75th birthday by walking 25 miles from Tunbridge Wells to London in 13 hours 35 minutes when the thermometer registered 86 degrees in the shade, turned to the leisurely game of cricket for his 76th anniversary. As member of an eleven playing against a team captained by C. Knott, Kent County cricketer, he showed that despite his years he can still bat and field a ball.

Success of one-day cricket matches during the war will be taken into consideration when post-war plans are made, according to Sir Pelham Warner, England's foremost cricket authority. "One day matches are not a panacea for all cricket evils," he said, "but nevertheless the matter is one for reflection. We must, of course, have some longer games, such as test matches and other representative affairs, but the experiences of the war will have to be taken into account when the time comes for arranging peace-time programs."

KINGSTON TEAM FINISHES THIRD IN BALL LEAGUE

Open Playoff Series Against Royal Canadiens Next Sunday

(By the Canadian Press)

The top four teams in the Interprovincial Baseball League standings—Hull B. and B., Ottawa Royal Canadiens, Kingston Ponies and Hull Volants—open the league playoffs in Hull next Sunday.

First-place B. and B. meet fourth-place Volants in the first game of a best-of-three series and second-place Royal Canadiens meet third-place Kingston in the first game of a similar series.

On Saturday, Aug. 30, Kingston will be hosts to Royal Canadiens while second game of the other series will be in Hull Labor Day. The dates of further games which may be necessary will be decided later.

Only one game was played out of four scheduled for the final week-end of the regular playing season. B. and B. defeated Volants 6-4 in Hull Sunday in what was to have been the second game of a double header. Smith's Falls Railroaders, to play Royal Canadiens in the opener, defaulted.

Railroaders and Buckingham, the league's tailenders were eliminated from the playoffs.

The Buckingham team was to play two games Saturday, one against Smith's Falls in the railroad town and the other against Ponies in Kingston but rain forced postponement of both and as they had no bearing on the playoff picture it was decided they would not be played.

Volants' loss Sunday was their second of the week. Friday they lost to Royal Canadiens 5-3.

LEAFS DIVIDE

(By The Associated Press)

Newark Bears aren't called the "Little Yankees" merely because they're the farm club of one of the more important clubs of the American League leaders. When they run into a really tough spot in the International League race, they act like the big Yanks, too.

For that reason, there's very little doubt left that they'll win the 1941 pennant. They ran up against the second-place Montreal Royals in a doubleheader yesterday to start a "crucial" series.

All the Bears did was to slap down their rivals 6-2 and 7-2 to the delight of 10,278 fans, and pull out six games in front. Since the other first-division clubs, Buffalo and Rochester, also lost doubleheaders, that made Newark's position comfortable.

Buffalo went down before the suddenly-revived Baltimore Orioles, 3-1 and 2-0, although Floyd Giebell pitched seven-hit ball for Bisons in the opener, the Orioles bunched their blows and came through with the aid of some fine relief hurling by Walt Sickles. Then Clyde Smoll turned in a five-hit job to get the better of Charley Fuchs.

Rochester Whipped Twice

The Jersey Giants staged a couple of uprisings to whip Rochester 3-0 and 4-3. Bill Harris, the Jerseys' 41-year-old pitcher-coach, yielded only three hits in the first game and didn't let a runner reach second base.

Syracuse and Toronto split the other bargain bill. The Chiefs took the first game 4-3, coming from behind with two runs in the eighth. Porter Vaughan pitched and batted the Leafs to a 2-1 nightcap victory.

In Saturday's games, the Leafs beat Buffalo Bisons in both ends of a doubleheader 8-1 and 5-3. Rapping the ball for a total of 25 hits, Baltimore Orioles swept a twin bill from Syracuse 10-1 and 6-5. Montreal piled up eight runs in the eighth innning for a 12-8 victory over Rochester. Newark made it two out of three in its series with Jersey City, taking the final game 6-0.

And His Name is Adolf

In case you see any resemblance between the above cat, owned by Walter Witt of Chicago, and a certain Fuehrer of a country at war with England and Russia, it is purely coincidental. Witt won't say why he named the cat "Adolf."

CHARLEY GETS A HOG

Fans gave Charley Root, 42, oldest active player in the Majors, this pig as a token of their esteem during a Root day in Chicago. Charley took the present in good fun and also received a station wagon and a cheque for $1,600.

Between Innings

Did You Know—It's Corp. Hank Greenberg now and he's in charge of a five-man anti-tank-gun crew ....The advancement gives him an increase in pay from $21 to $54 per month, but that's a long way off $55,000 per baseball season, his reported 1941 contract....The names of Greenberg and Charlie Gehringer have been mentioned as possible replacements for Del Baker, manager, of the Detroit Tigers....Perhaps a more logical man for Baker's job would be Red Kress, who did such a fine job coaching the Tigers when they won a pennant in 1940 ....It is rumoured that Kress did more to keep the Tigers on their toes during that pennant-winning drive than any other member on the Detroit board of strategy....And he was exceedingly popular with the players..See where Carl Voss, former Kingston amateur hockey star, is playing hockey in a summer league down California way.

Headed by big Jim Stacey, their ace moundsman, the Continental Can softballers will invade Belleville this evening for the opening of the O.A.S.A. playdowns versus the Corbys A.C. The return game will be played in Trenton on Wednesday. Stacey was the big noise with the crack Wooler Intermediate "B" team for the past three years, but this spring jumped to Trenton and hurled the "can-makers" into the championship of the Trenton softball League. Trenton having elected to play Intermediate "A" this season. Coach Harold Bawden is not selling the Trenton winners short and will doubtlessly start Johnnie Bawden tonight against Andy Anderson's Trenton sluggers here. Alf Ramsbotham has joined the Corbys and will share the Corby catching duties along with Tuttle and Pointer. While the intermediates are battling it out at the Flats here, Red Townsend's Esquire kids journey to Oshawa for the opening junior O.A.S.A. playdowns, versus Billy Taylor's Motor City kids.

The standing of the Belleville Ladies' Softball League semi-final play-offs reads:-

SWACO	1	0	.1000
Vikings	1	1	.500
Zellers	1	1	.500
Deacons	0	1	.000

Games this week: Tuesday: Vikings vs. Zellers. Wednesday: Deacons vs. SWACO, and Friday, Zellers vs. Vikings.

Do you remember when Joe Louis stepped into the heavyweight boxing challengers circle five years ago tonight with a third round knockout victory over Jack Sharkey of Boston. The Detroit fighter became champion June 22, 1937, when he knocked out Jimmy Braddock in the eighth round at Chicago.

A statistical-minded follower of tennis has put it down in black and white to prove that Bobby Riggs, former United States men's singles champion has traveled just a little under 11,000 miles since the first of the year to take part in 31 tournaments....But probably because he believes that there are still such things as amateur tennis players, this statistical-minded gentleman doesn't tell us how much money Riggs has collected in the course of his travels....Riggs is supposed to be a salesman of some sort or other in Chicago but we'll wager that he hasn't even seen his "territory" or worried about having to make a sale in the past six months..

And this from the pen of New York Times John Keiran in his column—"Sports of the Times," who says: "This came from the great naturalist, Jersey Jones, who beats the drums of ballyhoo for the Ranger hockey team and farm system:

"In keeping with the Eastern Amateur Hockey League's penchant for naming its teams after various birds, Bill (Pick) Hines, coach of the new Johnstown, Pa., team, sends along word that his club will be known as the Blue Jays. Of the seven sextets now composing the steadily expanding Eastern circuit, only the New York Rovers and the Boston Olympics have not been tagged with avian appellations. The other teams are known as the Baltimore Orioles, Atlantic Sea Gulls, River Vale Skeeters and Washington Eagles."

Mr. Jones should inform the National Audubon Society of the food, nesting habits and migratory routes of these rare birds he has discovered, the "Skeeters." Maybe Mr. Jones thinks these are the birds that are brought down at a skeet shoot."

Doug Bone, Belleville's entry into the Soap Box Race Derby at Akron, Ohio, finished second in the International championships, 14-year-old Claude Smith, of Akron winning the All-American and then nosing Bone out in the International event. A Mexican lad was third in this event. Bone took the All-Canada heat beating Jimmie Drayton of Toronto, who might have been driving a "kid kar" that once raced in Belleville. Doug Bone made the best showing of any Canadian ever to represent this fair Dominion in the Akron Soap Box Derby, as a matter of fact each year Canadian entries are commanding more respect. It is quite an accomplishment to win a heat at Akron, let alone finish second in the International race, and Belleville should be proud of the showing made by Douglas Bone at Akron yesterday.

Sport Spice — Remember Lefty Goldsmith and the old Collingwood Shipbuilders?....Well, we see where old Lefty is still chucking 'em over the plate, pitching as a relief hurler for the Meaford Knights.... The Yankees beat Phil Marchildon and the A's 4-3 yesterday, as the Canadian pitcher threw eight-hit ball against the Yankees....The Highlanders took another close-to-the-vest decision from the A's also.... Battling Jimmie Dykes' Chicago White Sox whipped the Indians twice yesterday and vaulted right into second place in the American loop. The Indians and Feller seem to have fallen on evil days....No major league pitcher has won 30 games since Dizzy Dean turned the trick away back in 1934....Having a no-hit, no-run game within his grasp, Brooklyn-Whitty Wyatt was touched for five hits and a run in the ninth by Boston yesterday, as the Dodgers won 5-1....Wyatt had hurled hitless ball for eight full frames before the Braves started popping 'em....Don't forget the boys in the back room.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his appetite and a boy went passed selling papers, yelling, Exter exter, big war news, paper mister?

No thanks, pop said.

And we kept on going, pop saying, It may be big news but it cant come big enough to surprise me any more. My duckless surprise glands dont function, they've been overworked. I wouldn't be surprised to hear that the Eskimoes have declared war on the Scotch and the osteopaths are fighting the vegatarians. These are screwy times and there's no more element of suprise, he said.

Well do you miss it, pop? I said, and he said, Naturelly, surprise is one of the spices of life.

Giving me an idea how to surprise him, and I said, Hay pop, that was our car in front of our house, wasn't it?

Certainly you ought to be able to reckonize it by this time it's old enough, pop said, and I said, Well did you notice all the fenders have dents in them?

What? All the fenders? What's been going on, a mass attack? Yee gods it must be a plot, I just paid too much to have one rear fender bumped back into shape. How can they all be dented for Peet sake, are you sure? pop said, and I said, Sure, pop, every one.

Sounding like enough of a surprise, and I said, Do you want to know what bumps they are, pop? They're the natural bumps that make them fit around the tires. Did I surprise you, pop? I said.

You surely did, and I'm going to reward you by giving you a dime, pop said. Making me feel lucky, and pop said, I'm going to give you a dime with a surprise element, and the surprising feature of it is that every time you remind me of it it'll be 3 more days before you get it.

Proving too much element of shock is libel to spoil the element of surprise.

CHILD INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Sustaining injuries in a motor car driven by her father on Highway No. 7 late last night, six-year-old Fay Malcolm of Slate Falls, Ont., was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital early today. Dr. George of Tweed, attended the injured child at the scene of the crash, while Dr. G. S Cronk was in attendance at the hospital. X-rays were ordered today to ascertain the extent of the child's injuries.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Puddin' Head"

Republic's Judy Canova lays just claim to the title "First Lady of the Sticks." In "Puddin' Head," which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, she followed up her previous successes in "Scatterbrain" and "Sis Hopkins," delighting her audience in her role of country girl who does all right by herself in the big city.

Miss Canova's nasal singing buffoonery, her good humored homeliness and infectious personality never fail to endear her to film goers. In her own inimitable style she sells herself forthrightly to the public, making "Puddin' Head" one of the most appealing figures to clown her way across the silver screen in many a moon.

The story is a down-to-earth musical with a touch of hilibilly, big business and high society, all coming in for their share of lampooning at the hands of the wickedly satirical Miss Canova.

Francis Lederer portrays the suave and charming foreign nobleman, glib of tongue but frayed of cuff, who sues for the affections of Judy with one eye on her personality and charm—and the other on her inheritance of valuable New York real estate.

Raymond Walburn and Eddie Foy, Jr., are a zany pair who, as Nicholas Q. Nickols, Jr., and Sr., make several abortive efforts to separate Judy from the pay dirt which is her birthright.

Alma Kruger scores as the redoubtable Nichols, owner of the United Broadcasting System whose new skyscraper office building overlaps Puckishly on one foot of Judy's property.

"Saloon Bar"

"Saloon Bar" is one of the finest mystery hits to come from the war-ridden English studios. It is proving very successful in Canada, and ran for three solid weeks at the Eglinton Theatre in Toronto under the title, "The Spanner Mystery." It is being shown on the same program with "Puddin' Head."

Based on the successful stage play of the same title, this A.B.F.D. release affords the star, Gordon Harker, plenty of opportunities to exploit his own particular brand of comedy in the role of a cheerful street-corner bookmaker.

The story opens on the eve of the execution of a young man for a murder which he did not commit. He is the boy friend of one of the barmaids at the "Cap & Bells" and the customers, certain of his innocence, set about finding clues to the real culprit. Joe Harris, a bookmaker habitue of the saloon bar, traces one of the notes stolen from the victim to Doris, barmaid at a rival pub, and tricks her into telling who gave it to her. Once on the track, Joe, aided by several staunch friends, eventually brings the crime home to its proper quarter.

The same program includes the latest in the "Canada Carries On" series, "Strategy of Metals," and a coloured cartoon, "The Trial of Mr. Wolf."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Three Loves Has Nancy"

Smartly dialogued, brimming with laughs and offering finished and believable characterizations by such stellar performers as Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery and Franchot Tone, "Three Loves Has Nancy" is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre as one of the most delightful refreshing and original romantic comedies Hollywood has come forth with.

The story is that of a flippant novelist who gets into difficulties with a Broadway actress. In an endeavor to escape the overtures of the too eager admirer, he persuades his publisher to send him on a lecture tour of the South. Here he meets Nancy, a small-town girl. Casually inviting her to seek his help should she ever get into trouble in New York, he forgets all about her, only to find her waiting at the penthouse apartment he shares with his friend, the publisher, upon his return. The ensuing complications provide some of the fastest and merriest comedy seen this season.

Janet Gaynor is excellent as the small-town girl who puts her trust in the non-too-reliable hands of her newly-found metropolitan friends. Montgomery plays the debonair novelist to the hilt, and Tone is ideally cast as the somewhat bibulous publisher.

"The Ware Case"

Starring Clive Brook, Jane Baxter and Barry K. Barnes, and as feature attraction number two, "The Ware Case" a decisive mystery drama, is also now showing at the McCarthy. Latest Fox News events is also shown. The "glasbake" piece presented this week to the ladies is the useful deep dish, the final one to complete the entire set. Same may be procured matinee or evening.

AT THE BELLE

Marx Bros. "The Big Store"

Not since the Marx Brothers last visited the screen of the Belle theatre have local movie fans enjoyed such a laugh as they did Saturday when Groucho, Chico and Harp unveiled their newest funfest, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Store."

Aided by a brilliant musical array, this picture rates on a par with the best accomplishments of the madcap Marxes during their eleven-year careers. Tony Martin sings two songs, Harpo and Chico make two appearances at their favorite instruments—the harp and piano, Groucho joins in a gay novelty song and dance number.

The climax sequence also is up to all the old Marx standards. A chase scene on roller skates, it has the brothers careening through every department in the store, threatening glass showcases and tables of pottery, perfume, etc., and being chased all the while by a mad killer.

Virginia Grey is excellent as the romantic lead opposite Tony Martin.

Latest "Kildare" Drama

"The People vs. Dr. Kildare" brings Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day and the rest of the Kildare favorites augmented by Bonita Granville as guest star, to the Belle theatre starting tomorrow in the most dramatic adventure of the series.

Dr. Kildare played by Lew Ayres, performs an emergency operation on Bonita Granville, playing an ice skating star, and when she suffers a paralysis is sued for malpractice. His mentor, Dr. Gillespie (Lionel Barrymore), and his sweetheart, Nurse Mary Lamont (Laraine Day), aid in the medical detective work that follows and solve the problem in a dramatic denouement.

Dramatic highlights include the motor crash the roadside operation, the incident of the hysterical patient, and the dramatic moment in court when Barrymore makes a plea to the jury reminiscent of his famous court speech in "A Free Soul."

Courtroom and other out-of-the-hospital action permits Miss Day to wear attractive modern fashions in addition to her nurses' costume, and Miss Granville in some sequences appears in elaborate wardrobe.

Jane Withers, Glamour Girl

Tomboy to glamour girl. It happens before your very eyes, and to none other than Jane Withers in her latest 20th Century-Fox film, "A Very Young Lady," coming next to the Belle theatre.

That's what love does to this former terror of the toughies. You'll hardly recognize her in a dazzling evening gown and the love light shining in her eyes. It's the real thing with heartaches and heartthrobs and culminates with Jane's first kiss. Richard Clayton is the lucky guy.

Nancy Kelly, and John Sutton head a cast of featured players.

The Belle News of the day will be shown on the same program.

FOR LACK OF SUN

Sun ray lamp treatments, given to night fighter pilots who sleep in the day time, have been extended to submarine crews.

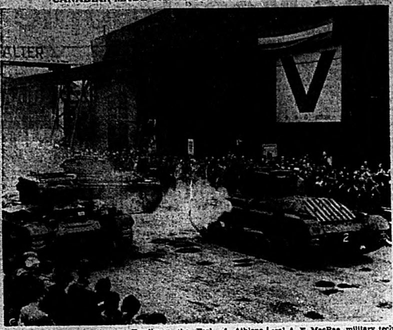
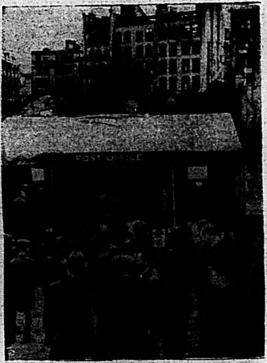
CANADIAN-MADE TANKS GO THROUGH THEIR PACES



Canadian-made tanks go through manoeuvres outside Angus shops whose munition works are turning out the fast, powerful machines at an ever-increasing rate for the benefit of the British armed forces. The exhibition was witnessed by His Excellency the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, and H.R.H. the Princess Alice, who visited the great Canadian Pacific shops near Montreal on an inspection tour Tuesday afternoon. They were accompanied by Major-General A. E. MacRae, military technical adviser to department of munitions and supply; Col. G. E. Butler, his assistant; D. C. Coleman, vice-president, and other officials of the Canadian Pacific railway.

FIRST MOBILE POST OFFICE IN LONDON



The first of a series of mobile post offices to take the place of bombed P.O.'s in blitzed London is hhown as it opened for business between Jewin St. and Aldersgate St., in the English capital. The office is carried in a van and can be assembled in 20 minutes. It has all the regular departments, stamps, money orders, parcels, etc.

Britain's First Woman General Inspects Forces

Mrs. Jean Knox, who holds the rank of major-general as director-general of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, is shown (nearest ranks) inspecting an A.T.S. regiment in Cardiff at the opening of an A.T.S. exhibition.

Albury

Albury — The Albury Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. R. Onderdonk on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. Mrs. Harry Peck took charge of the meeting. They decided to have an ice cream social very soon. Mrs. Harry Peck donated a gift and Mrs. Beuford Peck was the lucky winner. The hostess served cookies and lemonade.

Rednersville and Albury Sunday Schools joined in a picnic at Cedardale on Wednesday.

Miss Evelyn Young spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Beuford Peck.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Walkom and boys spent a few days in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hammond of Deloro, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 18—(CP)—Golds were narrowly higher on Toronto Exchange today. Other groups were firm. Trading was sluggish, only 60,000 shares trading.

Gains of small fractions were posted by Canada-Steamships, Imperil Oil, Shawinigan and C.P.R. losses predominated in senior oils, foods and miscellaneous industrials. Distillers-Seagrams weakened 1-2 and Canadian Celanese had the same drop.

Preston, Teck Hughes, Leitch and Upper Canada posted minor gains against small losses for other golds, including Kerr-Addison, East Malartic and San Antonio. Steep Rock was the base metals feature. It advanced 13 to 1.77 in active trading.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—The recovery theme sounded a bit louder in today's stock market.

Buyers appeared at the opening for rails, steels and aircrafts and gains ranged from fractions to better than a point in fairly active dealings. Prices were chipped down near the fourth hour, with volume dwindling.

Among stocks attracting bids were Santa Fe, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Union Pacific, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, United Aircraft, Westinghouse, Anaconda and Kennecott.

Among the Canadian issues, Canadian Pacific gained 1-4 while McIntyre lost the same amount. In the bond market Canada 4s lost 1-4.

Prices Unchanged In Produce Lines

Toronto, Aug. 18—Prices on all lines held steady at their recently obtained high marks at the close of a quiet half-day's trading Saturday.

The egg market continued firm at unchanged prices. Local demand for grade-A pullets was exceptionally good, creating almost a scarcity. Top grades closed at 35, 34 and 26 cents a dozen, respectively, in the country dealer section, while the two lower grades, which have been enjoying considerably more local activity lately, rested at 28 and 24 cents a dozen. Quotations to the retail trade remained unchanged.

Prices on all grades held steady in quiet trading on the butter market. Buyers were reported to be showing very little interest in the market of late and there has been no pressure to sell. Offerings continued very light. No. 1 creamery solids closed at 37 1-2 cents a pound, while first-grade creamery prints cost the retail trade 39 cents a pound.

Butcher cows $5 to $6.75; stockers $5.50 to $8.35; veal calves $12.50 to $13.00 for choice with common vealers downward $8. Grassers $6 to $7.

Butcher steers and heifers $8 to $8.75; bulls $6 to $7 with fed calves $9 to $11.

Good ewes and wether lambs $12 with bucks $10 to $11. Sheep $3 to $6.50. Culls brought $8 to $9.

Previous close on hogs $14.50 to $14.60 for dressedweights. No price was established up to mid-session today.

Montreal, Aug. 18—(CP)—Prices were steady to firm on Montreal livestock markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle 1,342; calves 1,548; hogs 701; sheep and lambs 1,985.

A few lots of good steers made $9-$9.75. The bulk of the steers were plain to medium quality, and sold from $7.25-$8.50. Medium good heifers sold around $7.50, medium heifers $6-$7. Good cows were $6.50-$7, medium $5.50-$6.25, and bulls $4.50-$6.50.

Grass calves were strong. Good veals made 11-$12, with about a half dozen at $12.50. Medium kinds were $10-$11. Drinkers ranged from $7-$8.50, and grassers made 5.75-$6.75. Yearlings were $4.50-$5.

Lambs were 50 cents higher. Good ewes and wethers were $11.50-$12. Sheep made $4-$7.50.

There was a strong undertone to the hog market and no early sales.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 18 (CP)—Dressedweights and liveweights were unchanged at all bacon-hog markets reporting today.

Liveweight Chatham $10.

Dressedweight Brantford $14, plus transportation; Chatham $13.70; Hamilton 14.50, delivered; Hull $14 plus transportation; Kitchener $13.90 plus transportation; London $14.25 delivered; Stratford $13.90 plus transportation.

LOWER

The stream of fire was seen opposite Governors' Island, on the edge of Buttermilk Channel which links the East River with New York harbor.

Fire Spread Very Quickly

Harry Garcia, Superintendent of Pier 27, said the fire broke out at 11.40 a.m. E.D.T., in a series of explosions which sent "flames leaping 125 feet into the air."

"I don't know whether anyone was injured," Garcia said, "but the fire spread so quickly some must have been trapped."

It was not immediately learned what was stored in the 525-foot long pier or its sheds.

The 3,570-ton Panuco, owned by the Cuba Mail Line, successors to the old Ward Line, arrived yesterday from Tampico and Progresso, Mexico, and was unloading when the fire started.

Ship a Total Loss

Built in 1917 at Seattle, the 351-foot ship had been in the New York-Mexico run for several years, Cuba Mail Line officials said she was expected to be a total loss as firemen were unable to place a line aboard in first attempts.

The teeming Brooklyn waterfront was endangered as hungry flames and smoke flooded the area near the Brooklyn Bridge.

The fire started one mile below the New York Navy Yard on East River. A fire of undetermined origin last July 1 swept a pier at the Navy Yard, injuring one man and damaging a coast guard cutter and two small naval craft.

One mile upstream above the Navy Yard lies Greenpoint, Brooklyn, where another mystery fire last Monday destroyed lumber stocks accumulated to fill army and navy orders.

300 Firemen Used

The city's newest and largest fireboat, the Fire Fighter, was dispatched to the scene to aid a fireboat already playing streams upon the pier.

From Manhattan, three engine companies were sent to augment the Brooklyn equipment. In all, 300 firemen from 26 companies were at the scene and coast guard headquarters sent seven boats, including two cutters, to patrol the area.

Clouds of dense smoke spread over Manhattan's financial district just as lunch hour crowds poured out of skyscraper office buildings.

Charges Pending After Accident

Tweed, Aug. 18—When the driver of a motor car shifted his eyes to read the finger boards at the intersection of Highways No. 7 and 37 north of here over the weekend, Mrs. Isobel Herrington, of Ottawa sustained lacerations and bruises, that necessitated her being taken to the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Herrington was riding with her husband, Clement S. Herrington, who told Chief Hayes he had taken his eyes off the highway to read a finger board, when the vehicle in some manner veered towards the centre of the highway and was in collision with an eastbound car driven by Clifford Moad, Port Credit, Ont. There was a sideswiping and damaged to over $500.00 resulted to the vehicles. Mrs. Herrington was thrown out of their family car, while Mrs. Ruby Moad sustained scalp injuries, which were treated in this village. Charges against Herrington are pending, Chief Hayes stated.

1,283 CONTRACTS AWARDED

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—(CP) —The Munitions and Supply department announced today that 1,283 construction contracts valued at $117,785,230 have been awarded since July 14, 1939.

Contracts awarded during July totalled 132 and involved expenditure of $7,249,026. These were divided as follows, with value of contracts in brackets: Air Force 88 ($5,167,268); Army 35 ($1,101,031); Navy nine ($980,726).

Bomb Kills 10

London—(CP)—Six children and four adults were killed when a bomb hit a huse during a daylight raid over Southern England.

PASSENGERS HAD NARROW ESCAPE

This is a view of the scene after a Northwestern Pacific railroad train came to grief near Petaluma, Calif. The locomotive of the train is shown in the creekbed after a 35-foot plunge from the trestle above. A baggage car may be seen balanced precariously on the wrecked structure. Two of the train crew were injured. Twenty passengers escaped with a shaking.

Population Expansion Forecast in Britain, U.S.

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP) — Britain and the United States are entering a period of population expansion.

Until now many statisticians have maintained that the two countries had passed the period of "200 years in blossom" and that their civilizations were beginning to decline.

The newest figures, however, indicate that these experts have been wailing at the wrong wall. Britain, despite all the bombings, is holding her own in the number of babies born; there are as many or more marriages today than there were in peacetime, and the birth rate in the United States is climbing.

Guy Irving Burch, director of the Population Reference Bureau and leading United States analyst of population trends, said that at the present rate the population of the United States will rise from the present 132,000,000 to about 152,000,000 in 1980 providing the country can support and properly educate the twenty million additional children.

Miss Irene Barnes Taeuber, coeditor of the Population Index, said that figures reported recently from England, Scotland and Wales show that the birth rate in England in 1940 was only three-tenths of one per cent lower than in 1939 but was much higher than in 1933. The number of marriages in 1940 was the highest on record for the British Isles. She added that German bombs have apparently not caused any defeatism or as many casualties as might be expected.

230 Officers Posted in Navy

Ottawa, Aug. 18 (CP)— Two hundred and thirty officers have completed a three-months course at the Officers' training establishments on the East and West coasts and have been appointed to active duty in various capacities with the Royal Canadian Navy, it was announced today.

During their period under instruction these sub-lieutenants received intensive training in discipline, gunnery, torpedo, signals, navigation and anti-submarine warfare.

Their place will be taken on Sept. 1 by another class of officers.

Six Children Burned in Fire

Punxsutawney, Pa., Aug. 18. —(AP)—Six children, ranging in age from two to eleven years, perished early today as flames destroyed their farmhouse at Grange, near this western Pennsylvania community.

Merle Bush, 47, father of the children and a W.P.A. worker, reported the fire started from an explosion of soot in a coal stove which he was firing. Bush, his wife and two other children, Elva, 14 and Cloy, four, escaped from the home.

Eleven Occupants Of 2 Cars Injured

Tweed, Aug. 18—Eleven of the twelve occupants of two motor cars involved in an accident on Highway No. 7 east of here last Friday night received medical attention, while six-year-old Fay Malcom, of Slate Falls was taken to the Belleville General Hospital.

Five members of the R.C.A.F. were proceding eastery on Highway No. 7 near Actinolite when the car was struck in the centre at an intersection by another motor car said by Chief J. C. Hayes to have been driven by Sherman Mountenay of Slate Falls, Ont.

The car carrying the five airmen turned over four times and rolled into the ditch, all occupants being injured and attended at the scene of the crash by Dr. George of this village.

In the other car Fay Malcom and her smaller brother and sister and Mrs. Chas. Ball of Denbigh all were injured and needed medical attention. Mountenay's car was a complete wreck, while the vehicle carrying the five airmen was badly damaged after rolling into the ditch. Chief J. C. Hayes, of Tweed, who investigated the accident, stated that charges were pending against Mountenay.

FORD'S NEW PLASTIC CAR

Here is Henry Ford's new plastic car, unveiled in Detroit. Still in the experimental stage and not ready for production, the car is not radically different in appearance from the steel models. The new body contains steel only in the tubular frame on which were mounted 14 plastic panels that make up the unit. The car weighs approximately 1,000 pounds less than a steel unit of comparable size. The car body was made of a mixture of synthetic resin with a fibrous material derived from wheat, flax, hemp and other crops.

BESIDES

The Nazis claimed they virtually completed a ring of steel about Odessa, largest Ukraine port, through which flows vast quantities of the territory's grain exports. Odessa normally has a population of 604,000 compared with the Nikolaev's 140,000 and Krivoi Rog's 70,000.

Only a gap of 25 miles from Nikolaev down the Bug River estuary to the Black Sea coast appeared to be left open beneath Odessa and the rest of the Ukraine.

Say Advance to East Not Held Up

Appraising the military situation, Berlin commentators claimed the clean-up and "combing through" of the Ukraine was not holding up the Nazi advance to the east.

The commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland, spoke of the German units engaging Russian forces on the banks of the Dnieper where, it claimed, there was an impending Soviet withdrawal.

The capture of Nikolaev was looked upon by Nazi as a good omen at the beginning of the ninth week of Hitler's campaign to smash Russia. The value of the harbor possessing floating drydocks and various other navy and flying corps equipment was stressed. (The Russians said they blew up docks at Nikolaev.)

While the centre salient of the German line around Smolensk appeared fairly quiet, the northern wing about Leningrad was characterized as one of the areas under heavy pressure.

CHURCHILL

The United States sailors, like the President, remained for lunch on the battleship. Afterward they sent over hams, eggs and butter to replace food they had eaten.

The film of the meeting showed a black cat episode as the President left. The cat, a Prince of Wales mascot, ventured onto a gangplank from the battleship of the destroyer and sat there purring while the President and his party side-stepped by.

Taken to Ship by Destroyer

The Press Association said Mr. Churchill began the journey by train from London, going to a British port where he boarded a destroyer that took him to the ship.

Naval personnel and others at the port were sworn to secrecy about the trip and none knew where he was going.

The Prime Minister wore his hat at a jaunty angle and puffed a cigar as he stood on the destroyer's bridge when she put out at sea.

Mr. Churchill then transferred to the flagship King George V. where he was received by Admiral Sir John Tovey. He lunched on the flagship, then transferred to the Prince of Wales for the Atlantic journey.

(The BBC heard in New York said Mr. Churchill stopped at Iceland on his way back and inspected British and United States troops.)

Presents Much Appreciated

President Roosevelt's gift to each man on the Prince of Wales was a carton of cigarets, some fruit and a half-pound of cheese.

The party of ten distinguished men who went with Mr. Churchill included the newly created peer, Lord Cherwell, inventor of the balloon barrage, formerly known as Prof. Frederick Lindemann.

Destroyers from the home fleet escorted the Prince of Wales on the outward trip and others steamed out to bring her back.

In contrast to President Roosevelt's heralded return to Maine and his prompt Press conference, the Prime Minister slipped in secretly to avoid a possible potshot by a Germany raider.

No public account of his arrival was expected beyond the details released this morning.

Hens of Country 'Out for England' In Big Way

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—The hens of the country are going all out for England in a big way.

With patriotic but pardonable pride, government poultry experts announced today the feathered flocks of farmers were breaking production records for both eggs and chicks.

Reporting that a "total of about 1,000,000,000 chickens" was being raised this year, the Department of Agriculture said this would exceed "all past records," adding that one of the causes of this production jump was the "demand for more poultry and eggs to meet the needs of actively employed people and the populations of the battling democracies."

Although enormous shipments of eggs are going to Great Britain under the war-aid program, the Department reported hens had met production demands by establishing egg laying records for July, latest checkup period. This showed a four per cent gain over egg production a year ago although the average number of layers was up less than one per cent.

MILLION FRANCS REWARD OFFERED BY PARIS POLICE

Vichy Dispatch Says Public Co-operation Needed to Check Sabotage in Paris

DISCONTENT REPORTED

Vichy, Aug. 18, (AP)—Simultaneously campaigns were launched in Vichy and German-occupied Paris yesterday against government officials accused of betraying Marshal Petain's National revolution and Vichy appealed by radio to overseas possessions to remain faithful.

This coincided with pressure by Vichy and German authorities against what they said were continuing Communist and other anti-collaborationist activity in the occupied zone.

On Saturday Paris police, warning the population that sabotage on railway lines serving the occupied French capital is threatening the city's food supply, offered 1,000,000 francs reward for information leading to the arrest of the wreckers.

Attempt at Security Abandoned

The police abandoned all attempts at secrecy in warning that the sabotage has reached such serious proportions that co-operation of the public is necessary to stop it.

The announcement came only a day after Gen. Heinrich Von Stuelpnagel, commander of German armed forces in France, announced the entire population of occupied France, not merely the guilty, would be held responsible for sabotage, which he attributed to Communists.

Joseph Barthelemy, new Minister of Justice, in an interview criticising officials attempting to sabotage the government's work expressed himself in almost the same terms as editorial writer Marcel Deat in L'Oeuvre in Paris.

The Paris writer said that the difference between the Marshal's plan for National unity and the way the government was being administered was so great that discontent had reached a stage worse than in the period preceding the development of the popular front in 1936. He warned that "violent reactions might come."

After referring to "this type of wait and see policy," Barthelemy said "it is no longer permissible for any interpreter of Marshal Petain's wishes to carry out his orders with feebleness."

New Commercial Accord

The signing of a British-Russian commercial and economic accord providing for large-sale exchange of goods was announced in Moscow Sunday, while preparations continued for a supply conference of British, United States and Russian representatives.

A United States-Russian trade treaty previously had been extended for a year.

Under the British-Soviet accord Britain granted Russia credit of £10,000,000 (approximately $44,000,000) for payment of goods during the next five years. Observers said they understood Britain planned to send Russia rubber, tin, wool, hides, jute, shellac and similar commodities in exchange for platinum, hemp, flax, manganese, glycerine and timber.

ITALIAN COMMUNIQUE

Rome, Aug. 18 AP) — The Italian high command claimed today that Italian bombers sank a British merchant ship escorted by British warships between the Egyptian ports of Matruh and Sidi Barrani.

The daily war bulletin said German planes renewed their attacks on British positions at Tobruk and reported that a 1,000 ton ship previously reported hit was found to have been sunk. (

(These claims lack British confirmation.)

British bombers again attacked Bengasi and an Axis air base nearby where anti-aircraft fire downed one of the raiders, the high command said.

British aircraft also were said to have renewed aerial attacks on isolated Italian outposts in the Gondar region of Ethiopia. The Italians claimed British troops attempting to close in on Italian outposts in that area were driven back.

Daylight Sweep on Sicily

(Nazi sources in Berlin admitted raids last night over the Reich by the R.A.F.)

76 Planes Lost in Raids

Officials said the R.A.F. lost 76 planes in the week ended Sunday morning, which they considered satisfactory in view of the large number of planes used.

Commentators said the R.A.F. had shown it could now take the offensive day or night for losses smaller than those of the Nazi air force last year in the Battle of Britain.

Axis losses were put at eight bombers and 39 fighters during the week.

During the day yesterday two British fighters and a bomber were reported lost while seven German fighters were destroyed. It also was announced that a British convoy was attacked yesterday but escaped; one German bomber was brought down and two others damaged in the assault.

Following the lead of the R.A.F. on the western front, British planes in the Mediterranean area made a daylight sweep Saturday over Sicily.

Night bombers attacked Catania Friday night also and an 800-foot high flame was seen to rise from an explosion. Many fires were started.

Other planes bombed eastern Libyan ports and military areas. The Air Ministry news service said that in 48 hours British bombers sank 17,000 tons of Axis shipping in the Mediterranean.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, told R.A.F. bomber crews that while fighters saved Britain from defeat last autumn, bombers now will smash the war industries of Germany and break German morale.

Huge Fires Started

Cairo, Aug. 18 (AP)—Huge fires and violent explosions were caused in a British air raid on the Sicilian harbor of Syracuse Saturday night, the Royal Air Force Middle East command announced today.

Bombs dropped from low altitudes on the central mole and railway sidings started several fires which eventually merged into an intense blaze with flames rising 300 feet, the communique said.

"A number of violent explosions accompanied the fire, which lit up the whole harbor area," it added. "Considerable damage must have been done to shipping."

The same fleet air arm formation fired the barracks at Cape Passero with incendiary bombs.

Hurricane fighters returned to the harbor yesterday to machine-gun seaplanes and one Italian craft was destroyed and others were severely damaged.

Air Gunners Receive Insignia At Mountain View Gunnery School

The largest class of air gunners to receive their wings at No. 6 Bombing and Gunnery School at Mountain View graduated on Sunday afternoon when a group of Canadians with the addition of a man from Newfoundland a member of the R.A.F. were presented with their silver half wings.

Peter Ralston of Toronto, distant relative of Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, headed the class of air gunners and was presented with a certificate testifying to the fact he had attained the highest efficiency in all subjects in No. 12 wireless air-gunner's course.

One Belleville boy, W. V. McQuaid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert McQuaid, Geddes Street, was one of the class to graduate. Bill McQuaid was prominent in junior sporting circles here in Belleville, starring on the junior baseball team as well as on the gridiron.

Group Captain F. G. Wait, Officer Commanding of the station, presented the wing badges and sergeant's chevrons, stating, "It should be remembered that you are a team and the strength of a team is only as strong as the weakest member."

"Now that you have graduated you will soon meet actual tests. So live that thou bearest the strain", he told the graduates.

Residents from Ontario who were presented with their coveted wing were: Sgts. Peter Ralston, A. Flowers, J. D. Hinchcliffe, G. A. Paterson and A. F. C. Ratcliff, all of Toronto. Other Ontario graduates were: Sgts. E. M. Brennan, St. Catharines; John Wood, Port Dover; C. A. Roberts, Ridgeway; E. H. Whitney, Niagara Falls; H. H. Butcher, Sudbury; S. C. Simons, Durham; W. V. McQuaid, Belleville; A. C. Wauthier, Caledonia; V. H. Munro, London; A. M. Wyatt, Cornwall; V. A. Murray, Penetang; G. W. Roney, Napanee; J. P. Sullivan, Sudbury; A. J. Walsh, Lake Simcoe; J. H. Watt, Pelee Island.

AIRMAN FOUND ALIVE 3 DAYS AFTER CRASH

Two Companions Killed Instantly When Plane Hits Mountainside

RESCUE DIFFICULT

Calgary, Aug. 18 (CP)—For 44 hours Lac. A.M.R. McGruther, 26, of Edmonton, patiently waited rescuers after the crash of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber on a mountainside had left him the lone survivor of a crew of three.

Hungry and weak from injuries, Lac. McGruther rested in a Calgary hospital today after a search party chopped their way through tangled undergrowth and crags to the 7,000 foot level of Mount McDougall where they found the airman Saturday sitting beside the wreckage, nursing his fractured leg.

Nearby were the bodies of Fo. I. M. Sutherland Brown, 21, of Victoria, instructor, and Lac. F. W. Greenfield, 22, of Madison, Sask., who were killed instantly when their Avro-Anson machine smashed into a shoulder of the mountain, 50 miles southwest of Calgary, shortly after leaving Calgary on Thursday afternoon on a routine instrument test flight. The airmen were members of the No. 3 Service Flying Training School of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Fo. Hewie and Fo. Lowery (initials and home towns unavailable) climbing along an axe-hewn trail over the rough mountain during intermittent rainstorms were greeted with a weak smile from Lac. McGruther who asked for "eats."

Carried 13 Miles

Given food and drink and first aid, rescuers carried the airman 13 miles over the newly-made trail to an ambulance which had moved six miles into the forest over a roadway chopped by R.C.A.F. ground parties and volunteer woodsmen.

Lac. McGruther, the son of W. McGruther, president of the Civil Servants' Association of Alberta, said he was unable to get emergency rations from plane, but was able to hobble down to a creek for water several times while waiting for rescue.

An R.C.A.F. Court of Inquiry began its investigation and Wing Cmdr. A. D. Ross, officer commanding No. 3 S.F.T.S. said the machine clipped a tree top and crashed 100 yards further on. Lac McGruther was thrown clear and suffered a fractured leg, cuts and bruises while his companions were killed instantly.

Dead Flier Well Known

Victoria (CP)— Fo. I. N. S. Brown killed in the crash of an Avro-Anson bomber, 50 miles southwest of Calgary last Thursday and discovered Saturday, was the son of Brigadier Sutherland Brown, former officer commanding Work Point Barracks here, and Mrs. Brown.

Fo. Brown was born in Ottawa and received his education there, in England and Victoria where he attended University School and Victoria College. He was 21 years old.

He was an instructor at No. 3 Service Flying Training School of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Calgary and joined the air force last December after spending three years at Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. His eldest brother, Captain M. C. Sutherland Brown, is on active service overseas.

Workers Ask Right To Organize Unions

St. Johns, Que., Aug. 18 (CP. — The Provincial Government will be asked by the Quebec Provincial Federation of Labor to give workers in the Province the right to organize into unions of their own choosing without interference from employers.

The Federation decided shortly before conclusion of its fourth annual convention yesterday to ask for the legislation because "it is now well recognized that in order that labor obtain fair wages and fair treatment at work, it is necessary for the workers in industry to be organized into unions of their own choosing...."

Delegates to the three-day convention urged that the Federation demand the Provincial Labor Department to "propose and enact legislation giving the workers the right to free elections in all factories and industries to choose the union they wish to belong to, and to represent them in collective bargaining relations with their employees."

Such legislation, the delegates believed, would be similar to that enacted in the United States and known as the Wagner Labor Relations Act and the National Labor Relations Act.

Germany Launches Major Offensive In North Says London

London, Aug. 18—(CP)—Authoritative sources said today the Germans apparently have launched a major new offensive in the north, aimed at Leningrad from Estonia.

This drive, they said, seems to be timed with the final withdrawal of Marshal Semeon Budenny's Russian Forces across the Dnieper River on the Ukraine flank of the eastern front.

The battle was said still to be raging there, however, despite heavy attacks by Field Marshal Gerd Von Runstedt's army group estimated at more than 1,500,000 troops.

Sources here said there was no indication yet whether the Red Army would attempt to maintain its Odessa garrison as an outpost within German-held territory as the British command has done at Tobruk, Libya.

Once the Russians complete their withdrawal beyond the Dnieper they will have an exceedingly strong defence position, sources here pointed out.

The river is more than a mile wide for 100 miles from its mouth. Banks are steep. The river would be difficult to bridge temporarily, it was said, and the current is so swift that light boats would be useless in crossing it.

It was estimated here that Von Runstedt's command includes 40 to 50 infantry divisions, four to six armored divisions and 40 to 50 divisions of Italians, Hungarians, Rumanians and Slovaks.

SEVERAL SHOTS FIRED

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 18 (CP — Charles Harpell of Kingston was arrested today after a chase during which several shots were fired by Patrol Sergeant V. McQuaide of the Kingston Police and held on three charges. Harpell was chased more than five miles before he was captured.

He is charged with having liquor in a public place, careless driving and operating a motor vehicle while his licence was under suspension.

Drew are Mrs. Drew, their son, Edward, age 3 and a half years and their daughter, Sandra, 15 months. Col. Drew, noted military analyst and writer, is the author of "Canada's Fighting Airmen," history of aces of the last war, which is the basis of the official pamphlet presented to every Canadian pilot on receiving his wings. He plans a series of articles on his trip for a leading newspaper syndicate.

Galt Woman Killed In Freak Accident

Galt, Ont., Aug. 18 (CP)— Mrs. Clotilda Rush, elderly Galt widow, was killed here last night in a freak accident involving two automobiles. Don Stafanuk, also of Galt was seriously injured in the same accident.

Police said an automobile driven by Stefanuk struck Mrs. Rush as she crossed the highway. Stefanuk stopped his car to aid the injured woman when a light truck driven by Pte. Lawrence Thomson of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, Camp Borden, Ont., collided with both Mrs. Rush and Stafanuk. Both were dragged some distance along the highway and Mrs. Rush died before medical aid arrived.

Pte. Thomson is being held pending further investigation.

Bad Weather Gives The Duke of Kent Another Day of Rest

Kenora, Ont., Aug. 18 — (CP)— The Duke of Kent faced the prospect today of another good rest beside a roaring fire in the open fireplace of a Lake of the Woods island home as the weatherman promised continued cloudy skies with showers.

During his week-end stop at the summer home of the late E. W. Kneeland, of Winnipeg, His Royal Highness yesterday was forced to cancel a boat cruise because of rain although he did enjoy an early morning swim.

Arriving here Saturday from Winnipeg after a busy two-week inspection tour of Western Canada's British Commonwealth Air Training Schools, the Duke received a welcome by hundreds of Kenora and district citizens. He and fellow officers of the Royal Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force will leave for Fort William tonight to continue the inspection trip.

Forty-Three Ships Carry Names of Cities

Ottawa, Aug. 18 (CP)— Forty-three ships of the rapidly-expanded Canadian navy now carry the names of Canadian cities and towns on active service in the defence of Canada and in operations overseas.

Largest vessel of the group is the destroyer Hamilton, an over-age but still serviceable destroyer transferred from the United States navy to the Canadian service.

"There will be many more ships bearing Canadian place names but they are not yet commissioned," one R.C.N. spokesman said.

The navy's policy in general is to name destroyers after rivers, minesweepers after bays and inlets, yachts converted into patrol craft after animals and corvettes after cities and towns—but there are exceptions.

Every province but Prince Edward Island is represented in the 43 place names used so far. Ontario and British Columbia lead with 10 each, Quebec has eight, Saskatchewan four, Alberta and Nova Scotia three each, and Manitoba and New Brunswick two each. The 43rd ship is named after Dawson, Y. T.

Bader's Batman Ready to Deliver Artificial Leg

London, Aug. 18 (CP Cable) — The Sunday Chronicle said Sunday that Sqdn. Ldr. Douglas Bader's batman, whom it did not identify, has offered to parachute to enemy territory with an artificial leg for the legless flier who was taken prisoner by the Nazis a week ago.

Bader was reported to have broken one of his artificial limbs when he bailed out from his plane over enemy territory. First reports said he broke both metal legs.

The batman was said to have made the offer to Mrs. Bader. It was reported previously that the Nazis offered to allow a Royal Air Force plane to fly over the new metal legs and drop them for Bader.

More Money to be Spent

Mr. Roosevelt intimated Saturday when he landed from his ocean trip that more money would be sought soon to supplement the original $7,000,000,000 lease-lend fund voted by Congress last March.

Upon his return to the White House yesterday after an absence of a fortnight, the President devoted more than two hours to a review of the international situation with State Secretary Cordell Hull.

Affairs in the Far East and the closer alignment of the Vichy government with Germany were understood to be two of the subjects discussed.

Japanese Situation to Fore

Weekend developments tended particularly to keep the subject of Japan to the fore. Japan refused to permit the steamship President Coolidge to call at a Japanese port to pick up 100 U.S. Nationals who wish to return home.

Although Japan's action in the President Coolidge case was considered comparatively minor, it was known the State Department is studying means for removal of citizens who desire to leave Japan.

The Japanese action, however, aroused Rep. John Dingell (Dem.-Mich.) who said he would recommend that the President "order imprisonment in concentration camps in Hawaii of 10,000 alien Japanese within 48 hours after transmission of a note to the Tokyo government" if the Americans were not allowed to depart.

As for the projected Anglo-American talks with Soviet officials in Moscow, arrangements here apparently were proceeding undeterred.

TRADEAGREEMENT

Latest unofficial reports say that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Lord Beaverbrook will lead the British delegation. One source pointed out, however, that it may be impossible to spare Mr. Eden from his post for a mission dealing principally with matters of supply. But the possibility of the Foreign Secretary's going was not ruled out in view of his previous success at Moscow and good relations with the Soviet Ambassador in London, Ivan Maisky.

(Anthony Eden met Joseph Stalin in Moscow in 1934 when the Foreign Secretary, then Lord Privy Seal, conferred with leaders of various European states during League of Nations moves to establish collective security, moves which the Nazis charged amounted to encirclement of the Reich.)

Wide in Range

It is indicated here that the conference will be wide in range. Russia will need replenishment of aircraft, tanks and certain raw materials. It will be necessary to see that the supplies arrive safely and it is understood that Anglo-Russian service experts already are studying the problem.

Additional evidence of Anglo-Russian collaboration came with yesterday's report of a new move by Moscow and London to induce Iran to get rid of German "tourists" now in that eastern kingdom.

"You can take it as absolutely definite that the British cannot tolerate the possibility of a fifth column growing up in Iran," one source commented.

THREE TIERS STABLES AT DETROIT TRACK SWEPT BY FIRE

Detroit, Aug. 18 (AP)—State Police today searched the charred ruins of three tiers of stables at the Detroit Fair Grounds race track which were swept by fire Sunday.

The blaze, which threatened State Fair buildings near the track, was discovered at the north side of the track, almost opposite the point where fair grounds employees noticed the second fire.

Because the racing season closed here last week, only three horses were quartered in the 90 burned stalls and none was injured. Police said a gasoline can containing a small amount of liquid was found near the stables.

ANOTHER CASE REPORTED

Toronto, Aug. 18 (CP) — City health authorities today reported another case of infantile paralysis in Toronto, bringing the total cases in the city to four. A nine-year-old boy was stricken with the disease Saturday, officials said.

Officials still are confident the disease will not reach epidemic proportions. All cases so far have been of a minor nature.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The period of grace in which to halt German infiltration granted Iran (Persia) by Foreign Secretary Eden in his statement of August 6 appears to be drawing to a close. Official circles and the British press have resumed discussion of the Iranian situation, emphasizing the urgency of forestalling Nazi intrigue.

Acting in close co-operation, Britain and Russia have served a new warning on the government at Teheran, with strong hints dropped that action will follow unless the 3,000 German technicians and "tourists" already at work in the country are promptly thrown out.

It's a long way from the Southern Ukraine, where the Germans are now heavily engaged with the Soviet Forces, to the Caucasian hills on the northern frontier of Iran, but the dangers of putting off Fifth Columns have been demonstrated too often in this war for Britain to tolerate for long any delaying tactics on the part of the Iranian Government.

Prompt intervention in Iraq and Syria which enabled Britain to undo the work of the German advance guards sent British prestige soaring in the Moslem world, where vigorous action is highly respected and Britain's friends throughout the Middle East are looking to London for a similarly forceful move in Iran.

Mr. Eden, in his August 6 statement in the House of Commons, warned that the British Forces in the Middle East "are being strengthened for their next forward blow" and added: "Those countries must co-operate with us in ensuring they do not afford the opportunity to Germany or the Axis to create troubles, disturbances, upheavals and uprisings to further their war effort...."

In the case of military intervention the operations will be under the direction of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, the Commander in Chief in India.

Three Children Burn to Death At Carleton Place

Carleton Place, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pomminville were burned to death late last night when fire destroyed their home here.

The dead: George Pomminville, 14, Marie, six, Rolla, 18 months.

The fire was believed to have been caused by an overturned oil lamp. Flames raced through the frame house of the Pomminville's in this town 36 miles west of Ottawa and trapped the children while they were asleep.

By the time neighbors noticed the flames they had made such headway and the heat was so intense that rescue was impossible.

The house and its contents were destroyed.

Mrs. Pomminville and two other children were fetching water from a neighbor's pump less than 200 yards away when flames engulfed the flimsy frame structure.

Mr. Pomminville left Carleton Place some weeks ago to enlist and so far has not been located.

'New German Battleship' Pictured in Nazi Papers

Vice-Admiral Walther Warzecha Says Nazi Navy Must Show Offensive Spirit

Berlin, Aug. 18—(AP)—A picture of a warship described in caption as "a new German battleship" firing 15-inch guns appeared in newspapers today following a statement by Vice-Admiral Walther Warzecha that the German Navy must show offensive spirit.

The newspapers did not explain whether they meant they 35,000-ton Tripitz, which has been completed for some time, or another ship.

(Jane's Fighting Ships, British naval manual, lists two 35,000-ton battleships as under construction by Germany. There were to have been four battleships of the same class but the first to be completed, the Bismarck, was sunk after the Bismarck had sunk the British battle cruiser Hood last May.)

RAF BOMBS START LARGE FIRES ON FRENCH COAST

Total Death Toll Of $1,500,000 Fire Probable Mystery

Two Score Missing And 55 Seriously Injured as Investigation is Opened

HULK STILL SMOULDERS

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Seven persons were known to be dead and some two score missing today as an aftermath of a blazing inferno which swept a Brooklyn pier, eating up cargo and destroying the Cuba mail line ship Panuco and numerous small craft, but an investigator said the total death toll of the $1,500,000 fire may never be known.

At least 55 persons were in hospitals seriously injured as a board of inquiry of the United States Marine Inspection and Navigation Service opened a formal investigation of yesterday's tragedy.

The hulk of the Panuco still smouldered, holding nobody knew how many victims.

As police strove to account for those definitely known to have been aboard the Panuco, they succeeded in boarding the stern in their search. They issued the following tabulation:

No. 1 hold—four men safe, five missing; No. 2 hold—17 men safe, three missing; No. 3 and No. 5 holds—18 missing; No. 4 hold—nine missing. Except for No. 2 hold these figures did not include any of the Panuco's own crew, but rather stevedores working on the vessel at the pier.

"As a matter of fact," said Assistant District Attorney Edward [illegible], after an all night investigation, "the actual number of dead may never be known."

The Cuba mail line said that in addition to one member of the crew known to be dead, five other crewmen were missing and the fate of two others was in doubt. The Panuco carried a crew of 35.

Although the fire took place on a defence-vital waterfront,—virtually within sight of the Brooklyn Navy Yard and numerous lease-lend loading docks, possibility of sabotage is considered unlikely. Damage was estimated at more than $1,500,000.

Fire officials who responded to the five-alarm blaze that was witnessed at mid-day by many thousands said there was no immediate indication the fire was the work of saboteurs.

From Washington, however, a board named by Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones was sent to participate in an investigation started by Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer, police and fire officials of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Churchill Sees Movies of Meeting Of Roosevelt, Self

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—One of the things Prime Minister Churchill did on his first day back in London after his sea conference with President Roosevelt was to go to the Ministry of Information with Mrs. Churchill this afternoon and view motion pictures of the meeting with the President.

Hundreds of officials and clerks leaned from windows and cheered at Mr. Churchill's appearance.

Search Parties Scouring Bush For Missing Woman

Kingston, Aug. 19—(CP)—Search parties directed by Provincial Police from Kingston today were scouring the desolate country near Clear Lake, 25 miles north of here in Frontenac County, for Mrs. George Macomish, a farmer's wife, who has been missing since Sunday.

The middle-aged woman disappeared in the dense bush Sunday afternoon while looking for a herd of cattle. Searchers were able to track her footprints deep in the bush, but all signs of the woman suddenly disappeared.

It is understod that Mrs. Macomish was dressed only in a light summer dress when she left her home at Hardwood Bay, at the head of Clear Lake. Since her disappearance the nights have been cold and residents fear she may have perished from exposure.

TWELVE INJURED IN BOMBINGS OF HAVANA, CUBA

Police Silent on Possible Motives For Terrorist Bombings

MANY STORES WRECKED

Havana, Aug. 19 (AP)—Havana counted its toll of injured at 12 today from terrorist bombings which damaged two shoe stores, a mirror factory and a supply house, some of them in Havana's central shopping district.

Police were silent on possible motives for the bombings, which occurred late last night, but said they sought a black sedan from which two men were reported to have been seen hurling some explosives.

Premier Carlos Saladrigas promised strong steps by the government "to meet this attack against order, life and property."

The business houses wrecked were operated by Spaniards. Police found "V for victory" cards among the bomb-strewn wreckage.

The first explosion was at the La Mode Shoe Store. It shattered windows of the big El Encanto department store, another shoe store was the scene of the next blast. The mirror factory damages is in Ensanche, a suburb. In Jesus Del Monte suburb a bathtub and sanitary supply establishment was damaged.

Cards found near the scene of one explosion bore a portrait of Antonio Guiteras, Leftist revolutionary leader killed three years ago in a brush with Cuban soldiers.

4,007,000 TONS OF AXIS SHIPPING SUNK TO AUG. 16

Figures Include 51 Ships Estimated at 200,000 Tons Claimed Sunk by Russians

AIR FORCE ACTIVE

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that approximately 4,007,000 tons of axis shipping had been sunk, captured or scuttled from the start of the war to Aug. 16.

Of this total, an announcement said, German losses constituted 2,321,000 tons, Italian 1,533,000 tons, Finnish 34,000 and "useful to the enemy" 119,000.

The figures include ships sunk by air attack and 51 ships estimated at 200,000 tons claimed sunk by the Russians.

Axis losses since the last report was given July 10 were put at 616,000 tons by an Admiralty spokesman.

The Royal Air Force accounted for a large part of this figure in attacks on German shipping along the Norwegian, French and Netherlands coasts.

There was no new announcement of British losses. Officials declined to go beyond the report covering June, which showed grand totals sunk during the war as follows:

British: 1,074 ships of 4,601,120 tons.

Allied: 334 ships of 1,496,017 tons.
Neutral: 326 ships of 1,004,942 tons.

$100,000 Fire Loss At Blasdell, N. Y.

Blasdell, N.Y., Aug. 19—(AP)—Fire destroyed most of the Exelon Company, Inc., plant last night, causing damage estimated by firemen at more than $100,000.

D. M. Ramsey, branch manager of the concern, which was engaged in defence production of abrasives, said the loss was "terrific" with machinery and equipment virtually impossible to replace destroyed.

Firemen from Buffalo and nearby suburbs fought the blaze, origin of which was undetermined. About 25 of the company's 120 employees were in the plant when the flames were discovered but all escaped.

Churchill Declines Option on 600 Of Favorite Havanas

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—Explaining he did not wish to become a hoarder, Prime Minister Churchill declined an option on 600 of his favorite Havanas, though the supply is dwindling and probably will not be replenished before the end of the war, his cigar merchant said today.

The Prime Minister buys his cigars—"not expensive but good"—25 at a time, said the merchant, a Turk named Zitelli.

The 57-year-old Turk said Mr. Churchill is the finest judge of a cigar he has ever met.

Strange Trial of Seven Eskimos Charged With Murder Opens Wed.

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Belcher Islands, Aug. 19 (CP)—In a strange setting one of the strangest murder trials in Canadian juridicial history opens tomorrow on this barren island in Hudson Bay. Seven Eskimos, charged with the murder of nine of their own race in a religious quarrel, will stand trial in a court house that is nothing more than a large tent. Two of the accused are women. Four of the nine who died were children.

The judicial party, headed by Mr. Justice C. P. Plaxton of the Ontario Supreme Court, reached the fur trade post on the island today after a journey by schooner from Moose Factory, Ont. The trip, due to bad weather, occupied 13 days compared to the usual four or five and at Great Whale river alone a week of travelling time was lost because of fog and storms.

About 50 Eskimos, representing one-third of the islands' population, smilingly greeted the party on its arrival and among them were those whose lives were at stake in the trial. Ablaykok, one of accused men greeted Constable George Dexter affectionately, throwing arms around the Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer. Dexter was Ablaykok's custodian at Moose Factory following the Eskimo's arrest in April.

For the first time the judicial party learned of the death of Sarah Keytowiek, one of the witnesses.

The woman, widow of one of the men slain in the religious outbreak, died Aug. 8.

In addition to Ablaykok, the accused are Peter Quarack, Charlie Ouyirack, Ales Apawokok, Peter Sala and the women Akeevik and Mina. Majority of the slain Eskimos were women and children who were driven out into the open last February and left to die of exposure in the snow.

Defence counsel J. P. Madden has already announced he will plead insanity when Mina comes up for trial. The woman suffered a mental breakdown after her contact with the outside world following her arrest and was in Toronto for a time for observation.

Police action in the case followed the receipt of fragmentary reports of violence via radio and R. C. M. P. constables flew 1,000 miles from Ottawa to the island to make an investigation and the subsequent arrests.

Torpedo Boats and Bombers Sink German Sub And Two Transports in The Baltic—Guerilla Warfare Continues

MOSCOW RAIDED

Berlin, Aug. 19 (CP)—The German high command today claimed capture of a 35,000-ton battleship, a 10,000-ton cruiser, four destroyers and two submarines—all under construction at Nikolaev, Russia's southern ship-building centres and Black Sea port.

The communique claimed all territory west of the Dnieper River has been taken by German forces and said attacks now in progress are aimed at Odessa, Black Sea naval base, and Dnieper River bridge heads between Kiev and the sea.

(Kiev, the Ukrainian capital and third largest city of Russia, is west of the Dnieper, although its capture has never been claimed by the German high command.)

Russia's Black Sea naval units in service were estimated by German sources last Saturday at one battleship, one airplane carrier, a heavy cruiser, three light cruisers, two torpedo-carrying cruisers, five destroyers and 30 submarines.

Of the active units, it was claimed that one gunboat was sunk and another severely damaged in the Nikolaev action. The Germans also claimed capture of a floating dock laden with railway engines.

Keels Laid at Nikolaev

(In connection with the German claim that the battleship captured was under construction, the authoritative naval publication, Jane's Fighting Ships, says the keel of a 35,000 to 40,000-ton battleship was laid at Nikolaev recently, in addition to three of the same size being built elsewhere.)

AIM AT ODESSA

(By HENRY CASSIDY)
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 19 (AP)—The Red Army, holding positions to which it had dropped back in the last several days, fought fiercely today against a continuing German offensive stretching from the Lake Peipus region to Odessa.

Announcement last night of the abandonment of Kingisepp, 75 miles from Leningrad in the northwest sector, followed upon strategic retreats from Smolensk, on the central front, and Nikolaev, in the southwest.

New Line Firmly Held

The new line appeared to be firmly held under the Soviet command's tactics of keeping the Red Army intact to inflict the heaviest possible losses upon the invaders.

Today's communique, without listing positions, said only that battles continued during the night along the entire front.

Soviet and German armies were reported, however, to be battling within 75 miles of Leningrad, Russia's second largest city, after the withdrawal from Kingisepp.

Making Fresh Efforts

Soviet abandonment of Kingisepp, inside Russia proper near the old Estonian border on the Tallinn-Leningrad Railway, indicated the Germans were making fresh efforts to advance toward the former capital. Action appeared to be heaviest on the northwest front and in the southwestern zone defended by the army of Marshal Semeon-Budenny.

Moscow's Millions Maintain Slavic Calm Despite Almost Nightly Bombing

(By HENRY CASSIDY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 19 (AP)—Moscow's millions, who have been keeping an almost nightly rendesvous with German raiders for a month, have adjusted their lives to make the appointment as pleasant as possible.

The most noticeable change in life in this capital has been the disruption by the modern aerial visitors of the centuries-old Muscovite custom of calling at the home of friends and passing the long evenings drinking tea and talking.

Muscovites take it all with characteristic calm. Whether it be bombing or some other discomfort of war, they shrug their shoulders and say "Nichevo"—so what.

Until the bombings began July 21 the war had wrought comparative few changes in life in Moscow.

The capital was blacked out, a midnight curfew was established, rationing was introduced, patriotic posters appeared, and men marched away to war, but for those who stayed here the front seemed far away and in Moscow it was business as usual.

Bombings brought the aerial front to the capital.

The Metro, which Muscovites regard as the most modern subway system in the world, took on new importance as an air-raid shelter.

Since the bombings began trains have stopped running at 8 p.m. Children and women accompanying children are permitted to enter the stations at that time to sleep in the long tunnels.

Nurses and militia are on duty and wake the women and children and send them home when the all-clear sounds.

The raids have become lighter and more sporadic recently, prompting sarcastic comments from the crowds.

Russians who still invite friends over for the evening make advance arrangements for air-raid shelter facilities. An alarm sounded one night recently while I was having dinner at a Russian friend's apartment. We went to the basement, where I found bunks already prepared, like the cabin of a ship.

Restaurants and theatres continue to operate, but close before the hour when air-raid alarms usually sound. Movies also are open, showing newsreels from the front, patriotic shorts and full-length features.

Sports events, interrupted early in the war, have been resumed.

To Form Squadron Every Three Weeks

Melbourne, Aug. 19—A(P)—New Royal Australian Air Force Squadrons will be formed abroad at the rate of one every three weeks to reach Australia's new objective of 23 overseas squadrons by next May.

This expeditionary Air Force is expected to play a major role in the great British air offensive against Germany.

Australia's original contribution to the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, which provided for 16,000 air crew members and 25,000 ground personnel for service abroad by the middle of 1942, has been expanded considerably. R.A.A.F. overseas formations already include fighter, army co-operation, reconnaissance and bombing squadrons and it now is expected that Australians soon will be entrusted with heavy bombers of the latest British and United States types.

Already R.A.A.F. men have been gaining experience on these under Royal Air Force tutelage.

RUSSIA'S EXAMPLE

Cruiser Donated To Canadian Gov't

Midland, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP)—The cruiser Siyo II, owned by W. Ranking Nesbitt, Toronto lawyer, was turned over by the owner to the Federal Government for use with the Royal Canadian Air Force at a brief ceremony here today. The craft has been presented to the Govrnment for the duration of the war.

An air force crew boarded the vessel for the trip to Trenton, Ont., where it will be put into use. The cruiser, 42 feet long, has a speed of 26 knots. Built at a cost of $23,000, it has been given to the Government without remuneration.

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP)—John Pulfer, for forty years an employee of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian National Railways here and at Montreal, died at his home here today at the age of eighty. He came to Canada from England as a boy and had lived in Cornwall for the past fifty years.

PRIME MINISTER BACK IN LONDON TO GIVE REPORT

Hitler's Navy and Subs Unable to Prevent Meeting of Churchill and Roosevelt

ADMIRALTY PRAISED

London, Aug. 19—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill returned home today from his Atlantic conference with President Roosevelt and, after a rousing greeting by street crowds, plunged immediately into the task of reporting on what he had done.

He presided at a special meeting of the War Cabinet, giving a detailed account of his conversations with President Roosevelt and of the plans to step up the fight against Hitlerism. He reported also on the world survey made by British and United States experts who attended the historic parleys at sea.

Next came luncheon with the King, at which the Prime Minister gave His Majesty a letter from President Roosevelt. On the ocean, Mr. Churchill had delivered to the President a message from the King.

To Broadcast Sunday

The public at large must wait a few days for its report direct from the Prime Minister. Mr. Churchill will broadcast next Sunday at 8 a.m. (4 p.m. E.D.T.)

Mr. Churchill arrived in London in the morning by train from the port where he disembarked yesterday from the battleship Prince of Wales. Despite the fact that the time of his arrival was kept secret, hundreds of Britons were on hand.

Sleepy-eyed cabinet members and high military officials were at the station for the arrival, and with them was United States Ambassador John Winant.

Mrs. Churchill, wearing a purple suit and grey furs with a red flower, was the first to greet the Prime Minister.

At this point a train full of London commuters on the next track recognized the Prime Minister. "Three cheers for Mr. Churchill," yelled an aged man wearing striped pants and a wing collar. A hundred commuters burst into a roar.

Mr. Churchill, puffing on a cigar characteristically clenched in his teeth, with his wife's arm through his, led an impromptu procession up the platform.

Here hundreds of others who realized something unusual was up burst into cheering. The Prime Minister waved back, nodded and smiled. He wore a naval cap and brass-buttoned blue naval jacket.

MOSCOW-U.S. MAIL SERVICE SPEEDED UP

Moscow, Aug. 19 (AP)— Mail service between the United States and Russia has been speeded up by more than two weeks.

Mail which formerly took more than two months to reach Moscow from New York now is arriving via the Far East in six weeks. New York newspapers dated as recently as July 6 were delivered in the Russian capital today.

British Paratroops Find the Training Hard But Packed With New Thrills

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—The spartan, thrill-packed existence of a trooper in Britain's' parachute corps—the armys flying daredevils created after the battle of Flanders—has attracted tough men of the Dominions from the tedious foot-slugging of the regular British army.

These "paratroops" who volunteer for the corps and draw extra pay daily, include at least two Canadians and some Australians, New Zealanders, and South Africans. Naturally, their number is small compared with the number of Britons who answered the call.

"Dropping from a low-flying plane "is the greatest thrill on earth" said wiry, sandy-haired Jack Moir of Montreal. "I couldn't give it up for anything in the world."

Moir, 31, who joined the British army six months before the war, said the only other Canadian he knew was Sgt. Dolly Gray of Toronto. Former Sudbury miner and Winnipeg steel-worker, Moir came to Britain four years ago when employment was scarce at home.

"There's nothing I like better than to get up in that plane and jump," he said. It was a "hellish feeling" though for the first few seconds until the chute opened "with a jerk that pulls your head back."

"The Best Yet"

A raw-boned Australian-Sgt. Jerry Manley—veteran of India's northwest frontier, backed him up. "It's been the best time in the army yet," said Manley. He had intended quitting when his cavalry regiment was mechanized but formation of the parachute corps gave him a new interest.

The "paratroops" are weird-looking figures in the khaki, knee-length overalls worn over their battle-dress to cover equipment in descent. Once they are down, the overalls come off in a hurry. A blue eagle with white parachute for a head adorns the left shoulder as corps identification.

Training is rigorous. Even before practising jumping they get two weeks of physical "jerks" to loosen muscles. They learn to jump first from a standing board and then through holes in the floor. After a month they are ready to take to the air.

All the men must be skilled map readers and possess the woodland lore of an Indian scout.

Eastern, Western Germany Feel Sting Of British Bombers

Russian Bombers Also Attacked Points In Eastern Germany Says Air Ministry

106 TARGETS HIT IN JULY

London, Aug. 19—(CP)—Royal Air Force planes shot down eight German Fighters over Northern France today in a daylight followup to powerful attacks overnight on the German cities of Cologne and Duisburg.

Six British Fighter planes engaged in a large scale sweep against German objectives in France were missing, but the pilots of two were safe, authorities said.

Large fires were started at both Cologne and Duisburg.

Another group of bombers battered the docks at Dunkerque in Occupied France while Fighter planes attacked Nazi airfields in Northern France.

Eight British planes were lost.

Russian Planes Attack

Reuters News Agency said that while the R.A.F. was over Western Germany Russian planes attacked points in Eastern Germany.

Early today, watchers on the English coast reported large fires flared along the Occupied French coast from Dunkerque to Boulogne after a British raid on Channel ports and occupied territory farther inland. Watchers heard the crash of bombs then saw the flames rise.

Loads of Explosives Dropped

After the attack on Duisburg a great oil fire raged on the west bank of the Rhine opposite the city's inland docks, the Air Ministry News Service reported.

Load after load of incendiaries and explosives were dropped on factories and railways both at Duisburg and Cologne.

Returning pilots reported many large fires were started in both cities. One said that the Duisburg oil fire was "burning explosively with a heavy cloud of black smoke over it," and that the flames were visible for many miles.

The service added that the Germans appeared to have brought up new defences for both the Rhur and the Rhineland, with a fierce anti-aircraft fire rising from both sides of the river at Cologne.

One bomber was held in the glare of searchlights for a full hour.

The Nazi Air Force made a small-scale attack on the east coasts of England and Scotland. A communique said some persons were killed in attacks on two points in northeast England while some damage was caused at one point in northeast Scotland.

NEW RUSSIAN PLANE

Moscow, Aug. 19 (AP)—The army organ, Red Star, reported today that a new model pursuit plane—described by test pilots as remarkable in speed, range and armament—was being put into service with the Soviet air force.

"Tomorrow," the publication said, "these planes will be at the front."

Churchill to Speak Over Radio Next Sunday at 4 P. M.

London, Aug. 19 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill will broadcast to the Empire at 9 p.m. Sunday (4 p.m. E.D.T.) on his meeting at sea with President Roosevelt.

After considerable speculation the time was announced today on the Prime Minister's return to London. Previously the day but not the hour had been fixed.

UNITED STATES PROMISES BRITAIN FAST AERIAL AID

Ferry Service Will Shuttle Planes to Africa and Then to Middle East

ROUTES NOT SPECIFIED

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—The United States promised Britain faster aerial aid in the Middle East today by establishing a South Atlantic ferry service to shuttle American warplanes to West Africa and thence to the front.

President Roosevelt's announcement that the service was being established was given two interpretations:

It presented an advance move to neutralize the value of the French base of Dakar if it should fall into German control and it foreshadowed a revival of major activity in the now generally quiet Mediterranean theatre of war.

The White House announcement last night laid stress on the value of the new ferry system, noting that "the importance of this line of communication between our country and strategic outposts in Africa cannot be overestimated."

Under the agreement concluded, Mr. Roosevelt said, Pan-American Airways will ferry the planes from the United States to West Africa and then to the Middle East.

To supplement the ferry service, Mr. Roosevelt added, Pan-American also is establishing a transport service covering the same routes. This will carry spare aircraft parts or other essential items and will be used for returning ferry personnel. The service, he added, likewise will be available for general commercial use between the United States and Africa.

Exact routes were not specified, but it was said they were so arranged they would not pass through any zone of actual warfare.

CANNIFTON NINE SURPRISES LATTA

Battling with their backs to the wall and facing certain elimination in defeat, last year's champion Cannifton nine in the South Hastings League sprang a surprise win over Latta on the latter's diamond on Monday evening when they eked out a close 2-1 decision. The series, a best three games out of five, now stands at two games to one for Latta and will continue on the Cannifton diamond Wednesday evening, when a win for the northern lads will proclaim them champions, while a loss would tie the series at two games each, necessitating the series going the limit.

CHILDREN BUILD BONFIRE IN BARN

A group of young lads playing in a barn in the rear yard at the residence of Sgt. Major and Mrs. Cecil Holway, 131 Burnham Street, caused the local fire brigade a run shortly after the supper hour on Monday when they built a bonfire in one corner of the building. Fortunately the flames were noticed by more responsible persons before they had advanced far enough to be out of control and with a line of hose played on the fire, was soon extinguished without any material damage to the building.

At mid-afternoon the brigade was called to the residence of Mr. Chas. Arnold, 301 Pinnacle Street, where curtains and the window frame in one of the rooms was found to be blazing. Children playing with matches or cigarettes was held by firemen as being responsible for the blaze, which was soon extinguished, the damage being held to the loss of the curtain and a scorched window frame.

TOMATO PRICES FIRM AT DOLLAR A HAMPER

Despite the advancing tomato season, the price of tomatoes held at the $1 mark for hampers on the early mid-week produce market this morning. Six quart baskets likewise held at the usual price of 25c.

Prices for other lines of produce held firm with green corn selling at 20c per dozen ears while potatoes declined to 35c per peck or $1.25 per bushel. Green gages were offered at 75c per six-quart basket with plums selling at 15c the box. Long black berries sold at 25c per quart box and cucumbers from 30c the basket upwards to 75c for gherkins. Vegetables were bunched in the usual five-cent lots while eggs were 35c per dozen, ranging down to 28c for pullet eggs.

PETERBORO DEVISES NEW DELIVERY PLAN

Peterborough merchants favour one delivery a day to customers, but are at a loss to know how to put their newest gasoline - saving creation into practical use.

One Peterborough merchant has evolved a system where delivery is made three times daily by co-operative system of delivery in which eight or nine other business houses all pool together and employ one trucking firm to make all deliveries.

The idea has proven a success and other business houses in Peterborough are planning to link up with the co-operative delivery plan.

EMPLOYMENT HITS ALL-TIME HIGH

May Fifth Month in Row in Which Trend Has Been Upward to Touch 153.0 on June 1

Ottawa, Aug. 19 (CP)—The largest increase in employment for any month since first records were kept in 1920—May was the fifth month in a row in which the trend was upward—boosted Canada's official employment index to an all-time high of 153.0 at June 1.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported last night that 1,528,834 Canadians had industrial work at that date, compared with 1,451,322 at May 1.

"This gain of over 77,500 workers, or 5.3 per cent, reflected the establishment of a new all-time high in industrial activity in the Dominion," the bureau said.

"Ordinarily the expansion between May 1 and June 1 is greater than that between any other two consecutive months in the year," it added, but the May 1-June 1 increase this season was "the largest advance recorded (since 1920)."

Slight Increase

Not only was the number of employees higher at June 1 but the bureau also reported a slight increase in average earnings of industrial workers. This wage survey was based on a comparison between earning paid in the final week of May compared with the last week of April.

"The May figure was higher by $2,028,675 or 5.6 per cent than that for April," the bureau said.

Earnings of the 1,526,834 employees reported by 12,091 employers having 15 or more employees totalled $38,622,330 in the last week of May and $36,569,655 in the last week of April.

The employment index figure of 153.0—based on the 1926 average as 100—compared with 145.5 in the preceding month and 120.9 at June 1, 1940. The previous high figure for June 1 had been 122.2 in 1929.

"The seasonally corrected index, standing at 151.1 at May 1, rose to 153.0 at the date under review." the bureau reported.

Find Lost Plane, Say 12 Injured

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Aug. 19 (AP)—Searchers today found the Panair Do Brasil plane which was lost yesterday with 13 persons aboard, and first reports said 12 had been injured in a mountain crash.

The plane, which disappeared shortly before 1 p.m. yesterday, was found near Sao Paulo. The craft's radio had gone dead when the plane was only five minutes from here.

Kiwanis Karnival To Start Wed.

With perfect weather promised and plans all completed, the Kiwanis Street Karnival will get underway on Wednesday evening and continue until the midnight hour of Thursday. This is the annual function of the Belleville Kiwanis Club to obtain funds to conduct the business of the club for the year and assist in all worthy projects sponsored by the organization.

Front Street from Bridge Street to Campbell Street will be suitably decorated and the different booths will be attractively arranged and manned by members of the club. The games will be distinct and different from the games of other years according to Frank Domenico, who is in charge of this department of the Karnival. The Plymouth car, which will be drawn for at the conclusion of the Karnival, will be placed in a convenient place and tickets will be sold on the vehicle up to the time of the draw and those, who have not purchased their tickets will have an opportunity at the Karnival. The Hope Chest, which is sponsored by the ladies of the club under the direction of Mrs. Jim Barclay will be on view and tickets will also be available during the Karnival.

General Chairman of the Karnival, Jack McVeigh, issued an appeal today to all residents of the city and district to turn out and help put the affair over the top. "This is your Karnival and a way to show your appreciation of the work done by the Kiwanis Club in the community" said Mr. McVeigh. "Without your help we cannot look after the underprivileged child, the V.O.N. and the poultry project, which is of interest to the rural population and other projects nonetheless important. The club will give the patrons of the Karnival first class entertainment and it is hoped all will have a good time."

POLICE BLOTTER

Held for investigation in the matter of the disappearance of several tires missing from the Belleville Motor Car Company premises on Coleman St., Everett Stewart of this city, was arrested yesterday.

City police allege Stewart took the tires some time ago and disposed of them in Trenton. They were new tires. Stewart appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace today and was remanded in custody until Friday.

Lost Timepiece

H. E. Barrett, Ottawa tourist, sought the assistance of Belleville police in the possible recovery of his watch, which was left in the washroom of a local restaurant recently. Mr. Barrett told police in a letter he had removed his wrist watch while washing and forgot to replace it. Police are attempting to recover the timepiece.

A lone inebriate shared the cell block at the police station last night. He was removed to the custody of the county jail on remand at noon.

BURKITT FAMILY PICNIC

On August sixth, the third reunion of the Burkitt Re-union Picnic was held at Sarles' Beach, Oak Lake. A bountiful picnic dinner was served to about ninety persons. Several families came in after dinner.

The President Mr. Frank Burkitt, called the gathering to order for the election of officers. The officers for the present year are:—President, Mr. Harry Thompson; Secretary, Doris Thompson; Treasurer, Mr. George Thompson; Sports Committee, Chris Burkitt, Charles Burkitt, John McInroy, Burton Bateman, Clayton Burkitt; To buy prizes, Mrs. George Williams.

It was decided that invitation cards would be purchased and sent to the head of each family. It also was decided to hold the picnic next year the first Wednesday in August at Oak Lake.

The weather was ideal and a pleasant time was spent in swimming and bathing.

Better Living for People of All Nations Aim of 'Atlantic Declaration'

"From the recent "Atlantic Declaration" of Prime Minister Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the world will learn anew the fundamentals of the "Anglo-American ideal," stated Rev. Archibald Young, M.A., D.D., supply minister at the Tabernacle United Church, as he addressed local Rotary members at the regular weekly luncheon meeting at the Quinte Hotel on Monday.

The establishment of common rights for all peoples, the adoption of a co-operative program and a good-will policy between nations with ultimate total disarmament and peace were the aims of the now famous "Atlantic Declaration" of Churchill and Roosevelt, stated the speaker, which he said bids fair to be among the historic documents in the world and which has written a new chapter for human freedom.

Rev. Young likened the entire population of the world as inhabitants of a town or city living all on one street and declared that anything affecting any one person would ultimately affect every one on that street. The task remains to weld this neighbourhood into true Christian brotherhood of peace and goodwill, he said.

Compares With Rotary Ideals

The policy of Rotary in its program of respect for human personality based on helpfulness and co-operation with an international spread was held by the speaker to compare with aims of the "Atlantic Declaration" as set down by the leaders of the two great democracies.

The rights of freedom and of self-government are traditions which were brought into this country by the colonists. We must be free said Rev. Young as he quoted the words of Patrick Henry ending in "Give me liberty or give me death."

Equal rights for all nations to the raw materials which so abundantly are spread over the earth was included in the co-operative program set up. These raw materials were placed on earth for the equal enjoyment and needs of all God's children he claimed.

Goodwill Crowning Phase

The policy of goodwill among nations was claimed by the speaker to be the crowning phase of the "Atlantic Declaration." "Religious mankind knows no such superiority of one race over another as is claimed by Hitler for the Germans, but the Nazi policy calls for the trampling of all countries underfoot."

In conclusion Rev. Young claimed that the "Atlantic Declaration" would lift the standards of life for all peoples. "We can all do something to help by gestures of goodwill, friendliness and neighborliness. Let us never lose faith in the capacity of the human heart to put into practice what this declaration calls for," he urged.

After being absent from luncheon one week ago owing to attendance at Rotary convention at Lindsay, President W. J. Morrison had charge of the meeting and stressed full attendance for next week which will be the occasion of official visit of the district governor. Jack Deacon favoured with two much appreciated solos and sang the verses of "Rule Britannia" with the members joining in the chorus. Morley Duff introduced the speaker of the day, while Jamieson Bone expressed Rotarian appreciation.

Old Tires and Other Rubber Articles Wanted as Salvage

Ottawa, Aug. 19—(CP)—Salvage of waste rubber articles—"the newest way home-front Canadians can help beat the Nazis"—was recommended by the National Salvage Headquarters.

"Canada's army and air force need rubber," the statement said. "Motor transport and artillery carriage tires, airplane tires and electric wire installation, medical corps supplies — these are a few of the military uses of rubber.

"Auto tires and tubes, bicycle tires, boots and shoes, hose and tubing, wringer rolls, rubber mats for the floor or sink or for scrubbing, water bags, belting and gaskets are some of the articles containing recoverable rubber.

"If your home has these things lying around as waste, donate them to your nearest salvage depot."

The statement said reduced shipping facilities and heightened demand for rubber in war industries might render available supplies "barely adequate."

Fifty-three firms were producing rubber good and 62,000,000 to 78,000,000 pounds were imported annually, principally from the Straits Settlements, Ceylon, British India and Trinidad.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The vast system of communications organized to ensure Britain the full benefits of United States war production receives a notable addition in the South Atlantic air ferry service. Together with existing shipping facilities, it represents for the Middle East a supply line comparable to the intricate North Atlantic system which keeps the British Isles equipped for war.

The official statement in Washington announcing that the ferry service will be organized and operated by the Pan-American Airways system emphasizes that the importance of "this direct line of communication between our country and strategic outposts in Africa cannot be overestimated."

To the United States the term "strategic outposts" primarily means Dakar, the west African bastion pointed dagger-like toward the Western Hemisphere. The possibility of the Germans occupying this strategic area with the acquiescence of the Vichy French has been a constant nightmare for the United States authorities, and ever since the occupation of Iceland there has been speculation as to whether President Roosevelt might not extend his system of defensive outposts as far as the West African coast.

For Britain the new development means that when fighting is renewed in the Middle East the Air Force is assured a steady flow of bomber and reconnaissance aircraft not dependent on sea communications. Once these planes reach the Valley of the Nile, they can be sent on over existing routes to where they are needed most—to the Egyptian-Libyan frontier area, Iran, India, Singapore or even Australia.

Establishment of this aircraft delivery system that may be extended so that it reaches almost around the world coincides with the appearance of communications difficulties in the Pacific arising from American-Japanese tension. The Japanese are campaigning vigorously against United States shipments to Russia by way of Vladivostok and other major difficulties may arise at any time. The existence of a well-developed alternative route to the Far East will strengthen the hand of the United States and Britain in future dealings with Tokyo.

DUKE OF KENT AT FORT WILLIAM

Starts Inspection After Two-Day Holiday at Lake of Woods

(By Marshall Bateman)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fort William, Aug. 19. —(AP)—The Duke of Kent, refreshed after a two-day holiday at a Lake of the Woods summer home near Kenora, Ontario, arrived here early today aboard a private railway car to resume his inspection tour of British Commonwealth Air Training Schools in Canada.

His Royal Highness inspected the No. 2 Elementary Flying Training School at the Fort William Airport, met civic and military officials, toured both Fort William and Port Arthur and visited the Canadian Car and Foundry Company and the Port Arthur Shipbuilding Company.

At the No. 2 S.F.T.S. the Duke was welcomed by Mayor C. M. Ross of Fort William, Mayor C. W. Cox of Port Arthur, Sqdn. Ldr. H. C. Johnson, chief supervisory officer of the Air School and others.

The ducal party will leave by plane for Porquis, Ont., at noon (1 p.m. E.D.T.)

At Kenora last night several thousand persons waved and cheered as the train pulled out.

Standing on the rear platform of his special car, the Duke waved back to them and called out: "Good-bye"—Goodnight".

Having Top-Hole Holidays

Kenora, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—The Duke of Kent yesterday met seven young "victory visitors" from Kent, England, on a Lake of the Woods Island.

It was an unscheduled meeting, a pause in a six-hour cruise of the lake that climaxed the Duke's week-end stop-over at the summer home of the late E. W. Kneeland. The seven "victory guests" were holidaying at the Treaty Point Camp for girls.

The Duke asked each girl her name and where her parents lived. Unanimously they declared they "just loved" Canada and were having "top-hole holidays".

Surviving are are two daughters, Mrs. B. H. MacMillan, and Miss Greta Mabel Mikel, and one son, Mr. Clarence J. Mikel, all at home. Her husband died in the year 1932. She was the last of her family.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home until this Tuesday evening, then at her late residence, 31 Octavia Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Diamonds, Saved In Hun Invasion Of Belgium, Stolen

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP)—Diamonds saved when Germany invaded Belgium last year were stolen last night when thieves broke into the mid-town apartment of Mr. and Mrs. J. Nunes Vaz.

A diamond technician who fled from Belgium at the time of the invasion, Mr. Nunes Vaz carried with him a few diamonds he had time to gather before the Germans came. Most of his diamonds were left behind, however.

Mr. and Mrs. Nunes Vaz set their loss at about $2,000. Three platinum rings set with diamonds, a platinum wrist watch set with diamonds, a diamond brooch and other articles of jewellery were taken.

Thieves who stole a typewriter and other articles from an apartment on the same street, occupied by Lieut. William F. Treschow of the Royal Norwegian Air Force are in for a disappointment, as far as the typewriter is concerned. It has a Norwegian keyboard.

Vice Admiral A. E. Evans Turns First Sod for Housing Scheme At Batawa And Inspects Plant

Distinguished Visitor Welcomed by Thomas Bata, Founder of New Industry

MAKING WAR PRODUCT

TAKE 1—VICE ADMIRAL/ S.D.

Patriotically flag-bedecked especially for the occasion and with full emphasis focused on the "V" for Victory campaign now sweeping Canada, the village of Batawa, Hastings County's newest industrial centre, went all out Monday afternoon in its welcome to Vice-Admiral A. E. Evans, British Admiralty Technical Commission in Canada, as he turned the first sod in a new housing development scheme which will see approximately 100 new dwellings added to the growing village two miles south of Frankford.

Over eight hundred employees of the company witnessed the impressive ceremony as Vice-Admiral Evans, with company officials and governmental dignitaries taking part, accepted the polished spade from Victor T. Goggin, Director of Wartime Housing Limited, and turned the sod signifying the start in the construction of the new community which he fittingly designated as "Admiralty Square."

The impressive ceremony on a tree-studded knoll to the south and overlooking the Bata Shoe plant and the residential area of Batawa, was a fitting climax to the part of the afternoon's program which saw the Vice-Admiral, together with Mr. C. E. Wright, Department of Munitions and Supply and Lieut. G. Taylor and accompanied by Mr. Thomas Bata, inspect the Bata machine shop at Frankford.

Saw Employees at Work

Here the Admiral and his staff saw expert machinists at work on the production of a special order of Vickers twin anti-aircraft gun mountings for British Admiralty. In the assembly room Admiral Evans took keen delight in manipulating the various controls of the gun which when in operation will spew red hot lead into the path of diving enemy bombers.

Lieut. Taylor showed particular interest in the various phases of manufacture and assembly of the gun mountings, and rightly so, because this intricate piece of machinery that can be so quickly brought into play against oncoming aircraft is of his own particular design. Charles Featherstone, technical expert of Vickers-Armstrong on loan from his company, is in charge of manufacture and assembly of the gun mountings at the Frankford plant.

Welcomed by T. Bata

On a dais specially constructed on lot No. 1 of the new residential area and specially decorated with evergreens and flags, Mr. Thomas Bata officially welcomed Vice-Admiral Evans and his staff to Frankford to participate in the opening ceremony for the new housing project.

"We are a refugee industry," stated Mr. Bata. "We have seen the destruction of democracy in our native Czechoslovakia and in a comparatively few hours were exiled from our country and forced to seek freedom and liberty in the North American Continent.

"But we are not here solely to seek refuge for ourselves. It will ever be our efforts through the products of our factories to help restore freedom and democracy throughout the world."

Mr. Bata claimed that many difficulties had been surmounted in the establishment of their factory in Canada but through the influence of an intelligent press and far-seeing government officials achievement had resulted—achievement which had been gained through the co-operation of workers and officials. Their entire manufacturing facilities were at the command of governmental authorities for the production of machines to crush Hitler and restore freedom to the world, was his promise.

The enthusiasm of the workers at their various jobs was the one feature that struck him most as he inspected the machine shop during the afternoon, stated Vice-Admiral Evans as he replied to the address of welcome given by Mr. Bata.

Necessity of Production Stressed

The necessity of the production of the tools with which to defeat Hitler and Mussolini in their desire to conquer the world was stressed by the Admiral. "It is only natural for a young man to wish to be in the firing line at a time like this," continued Admiral Evans, "but let me warn you," he said, "we cannot go on with any sense of security unless we furnish the tools with which to fight this monster that is threatening democracy. It is therefore essential that many men must stay on the home front to produce the tools that are needed in the fight for freedom."

There should be no thought that the man in the factory was shirking his duty to his country, asserted the Admiral. When the war is over the factory worker and machinist can point with pride to the fact that he did his part in producing the tools that were so vitally needed.

In conclusion Vice-Admiral Evans paid special tribute to the Bata Factory when he stated that it was the only Canadian factory that was turning out complete anti-aircraft gun mountings.

Naturally the high point in the afternoon's proceedings was Admiral Evans turning the sod which officially signified the commencement of the housing project. Clad in the uniform of his rank, the Admiral was an imposing figure as he deftly manipulated the spade presented to him by Mr. Goggin of Wartime Housing Limited.

Guard of Honor

In the procession of the dignitaries up the winding trail leading to the site of the housing project, a guard of honor was formed by members of the Trenton detachment of the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary, while a band from the Frankford unit of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment struck up "O Canada" to officially open the ceremony. The band also brought the ceremony to a close with the rendition of the National Anthem.

Vice-Admiral Evans has been stationed in Ottawa since the formation of the British Admiralty Technical Mission here, but prior to this led an active life with the British Navy. During 1914-18 he commanded a destroyer in the home fleet and later was in command of the H.M.S. Exeter and as such was on duty as Commodore of the South American Station.

While in charge of the Exeter he was promoted to Rear Admiral and later became Rear Admiral in charge of H. M. Naval Forces and Naval Establishment at Gibraltar. It was while stationed here in June, 1939, that he retired but rejoined the navy again as soon as war was declared. He became Commodore of Convoys and on one of his trips across the Atlantic was torpedoed.

Machine Which Sings, Laughs and Talks Will Be Seen at C.N.E.

The Voder, the marvellous apparatus which actually creates speech, will be one of the features of this year's Canadian National Exhibition. Demonstrations will be given several times daily in the National Industries building (formerly Ontario Government building) throughout the two weeks of the fair.

Three of the 24 long distance telephone operators who demonstrated the Voder at the New York World's Fair and Golden Gate Exposition, San Francisco, will preside at the key-board of the "electrical voice," which resembles the console of an organ. They will make the Voder sing, as well as laugh and talk!

Both scientists and humble lay auditors have pronounced this apparatus as one of the marvels of modern scientific development.

All proceeds of the demonstration, which is presented by the Bell Telephone Company, will go to the Red Cross British Bomb Victims' Fund and The Evening Telegram's British War Victims' Fund.

Miss Anna Mae Swenson, one of the three long distance telephone operators who will demonstrate the Voder at the Canadian National Exhibition. Although she is only 21 years of age, Miss Swenson, who is seated at the console of the voice-creating apparatus, demonstrated the Voder at both the World's Fair in New York and the Golden Gate Exposition, San Francisco, in 1939 and 1940.

Dr. J. B. Collip Named to Head New Institute

The Westmount Examiner, of Montreal, announced recently that Dr. J. B. Collip, a native of Belleville, has accepted new responsibilities. Following is the report as given in The Examiner:

Dr. J. B. Collip, of Sydenham Avenue, Westmount, has resigned his chairmanship of McGill University's department of biochemistry to direct the new Research Institute of Endocrinology, establishment of which was announced at the University Monday.

Scientifically speaking, endocrinology is that field of physiological and biochemical science which deals with the ductless glands, or the glands of internal secretion. The secretions of these glands are known as hormones.

The discovery of new information regarding these hormones will be the central task of the new Research Institute, which will conduct basic studies of their chemical and physiological properties as well as investigations designed to reveal their therapeutic value in the treatment of patients suffering from various types of glandular deficiency.

James Bertram Collip, M.A., Ph.D. (Toronto), M.D., D.Sc. (Alberta), Hon. D.Sc. (Harvard), LL.D. (Manitoba), F.R.S.C., F.R.S., F.R.C.P. (London), Gilman Cheney Professor of Biochemistry, studied as an undergraduate and as a research student at the University of Toronto, where he gained the degree of Ph.D. in 1916. He was then appointed to the staff of the University of Alberta, at first as lecturer and eventually as professor of biochemistry, being awarded the D.Sc. and M.D. degrees.

His stay at Edmonton was interrupted in 1921 for a year when, as Rockefeller Fellow, he returned to Toronto and was associated with Banting, Best and Macleod in the discovery of insulin. Returning to the west, he added to his reputation by his discovery of the hormone of the parathyroid glands.

In 1928, he was appointed professor (later Gilman Cheney Professor) of Biochemistry at McGill University; since that time, he and his associates have made many further contributions to endocrinology, the science of hormones.

Among the many honors he has received may be mentioned the honorary LL.D. of the University of Manitoba, the the honofary D.Sc. of Harvard, the Flavelle Medal of the Royal Society of Canada, the Frederick Newton Gisborne Starr Medal, the Cameron Prize of the University of Edinburgh, and recently the Charles Mickle Fellowship of the University of Toronto.

He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of London, the Royal College of Physicians, London, the American College of Physicians, and a member of many other learned societies. Dr. Collip is also a member of the National Research Council of Canada and succeeded the late Sir Frederick Banting as Chairman of the Council's Associate Committee for Medical Research. In this capacity he has lately given much of his time to the study of medical problems of military importance.

Transport Is Necessary To Axis Rule

(By EDWARD E. BOMAR)

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—The German capture of Nikolaev and encirclement of Odessa mean that the Nazis are a bit closer to controlling the Black Sea. If they can dominate that body of water, they will be a bit nearer their objective of setting up a blockade-proof "new order" in Europe.

While the German press hails the occupation of the iron ore region as a shattering blow to Russia, official Berlin is presumably under no illusions that access to the Ukraine's riches can profit the Reich economically until some time after the Black Sea is opened to Axis tankers and other cargo ships.

Of immediate importance, therefore is the degree to which the Soviet naval forces have been weakened by loss of the Nikolaev base. That has not yet been disclosed.

Transportation is a bottleneck in the effort to create a Nazi-dominated, self-sufficient Europe. Water routes, which include the 700-mile long Black Sea along with the Danube, canals, the Baltic and ultimately the Mediterranean, are as vital to that effort as the overtaxed, war-damaged railways.

The bulk of approximately 7,000,000 barrels of oil Russia is credited with having supplied the Nazis last year move at least part way by water. Some economists suspect, indeed, that every drop was shipped by tanker across the Black Sea to Constanta, Rumania's chief port, or to near-by points, and thence up the Danube.

Russia's railways, inadequate even in peacetime to meet Soviet domestic needs, were relied on during the period of the strange Hitler-Stalin friendship for only relatively small shipments of less bulky products. On both sides of the fighting front, these railways must be in a sad state now.

Thus the Black Sea, extending from the Danube's mouth to the Caucasus oil fields, paralleling the Soviet granary, is even more essential to Germany's economic war than to the military effort to crush Red Army resistance.

Belief that control of the Mediterranean likewise is essential to any lasting Axis triumph figured in the prediction made to Congress by Gen George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, that the next Nazi campaign would be an attempt to break Britain's dominance of this great maritime highway.

Should Germany some day be able to ship Russian and Rumanian wheat and oil from the Black Sea through the Mediterranean to Marseille, Trieste and Fiume, for distribution by rail from these ports, much of the problem of feeding and supplying Europe would be solved.

The Mediterranean route already is being used to a limited extent at the risk of attack by British warships and bombers. Italian tankers have made stealthy trips through the Dardanelles to Rumania. To hamper the traffic, Britain last week bombed the Corinth Canal, a short cut through Greece.

Whatever the future success for the "new order", for the time being Germany must do without all the supplies once drawn from Russia. Last year, according to some estimates, these supplies included enough grain to feed all Greater Germany for three months, oil, cotton, chromium and manganese, and 500,000 tons of other supplies.

IN NAZI-HELD LANDS

Natives of lands which have fallen under the German Nazis' aggression know the feeling in the hearts of those people on the continent who wave good wishes to the Royal Air Force crews as they cross to bomb military targets in the German Reich and in the occupied countries. The other day British fliers who were not more than fifty feet above the ground saw people in the fields and streets make the sign of "thumbs up" as the British went on their great mission.

Such people forced by the Hun into subjection by his blitzkrieg are brave. They do acts which may bring them death. Yesterday three Hollanders gave their lives before a Nazi firing squad because they had helped British fliers with food, money and civilian clothing to escape after they have been forced to make a landing. Two others were sentenced for life. That is what these people are doing for the Allied cause.

Underneath the enemy subjection is a very living spirit of the subjected. Not even the cruelty of the enemy can keep them down.

These people know who is defender, they realize that Britain is the knightly nation which is fighting the dragon of Nazism, they are proud that in the British forces are units and groups of the men of the overrun countries who are giving a heroic account of themselves, exacting toll on the forces of the aggressor.

The numbers of the people who feel this way are legion, are counted by the millions. They form the greatest group of the kind in all history. This vast number struggles and prays for the day of liberation which they know will come. Though the Hun has put his heel upon their countries, they are bold, they are free, in heart in mind and spirit, they work as they can to lift the burden of the great curse which Hitler and his crowd have brought on mankind.

Allied Europe knows the sign of "thumbs up."

The "V" symbol too is at work.

THOUGHTFULNESS

National Revenue Review for August tells of an incident which happened recently when clearing customs at the international boundary at St. Stephens, N. B., after a motor trip through New Brunswick, an American tourist found himself the object of unusual attention, being addressed by name by the customs officer who asked him if he had all the money he should have. The traveller tapped his pocket in a gesture to prove that he had but was surprised to find that it was empty. He puzzled and looked at the official and the latter explained that the same morning more than a hundred miles away a tourist cabin proprietor found a bulging wallet containing seven hundred dollars in bills under the pillow in the tourist room, where he had apparently placed it for safety. The proprietor notified a N. W. M. P. constable who broadcast a description of the tourist and his car. The official had got his man.

That story is worth telling. The proprietor had gone to the trouble of notifying the Mounted Police and that organization with the aid of the Customs undertook to locate the man.

A tourist appreciates such courtesy and thought of all concerned in seeing that the loser of the wallet was saved as much inconvenience as possible who they know would be anxious once he missed his pocketbook and money.

DRIVING MORE SLOWLY

Motorists are listening to the appeal to drive more slowly so as to conserve gasoline in the country's war interest. Those who travel the roads and highways have noticed this.

Slow driving saves because it takes less gasoline to go a mile at a slow rate than at a faster rate. Then as there is less distance covered in a given period of time, this means another means of saving in gas.

Such saving to the motorist is substantial and to the country's gasoline supply it means much.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

HOW TO SLEEP

You imagine that no rules about sleep are needed—that one just gets into bed and does it. Wrong, as usual!

History and literature are full of people who did it in the wrong place or at the wrong time, or even for the wrong purpose. Hamlet's father not only had the gross habit of sleeping in the afternoon, but though he had an excellent bed (of which we hear rather too often) he regularly made off into the orchard, and so fell an easy prey to his murderer. He is the original of all those victims about whom we read in detective stories—"his bed had not been slept in."

Shakespeare does indeed omit to make the casual monarch throw a few things hurriedly into a suitcase and climb down the ivy; but he has seized the main idea. As he says elsewhere: "Let me have men about me that . . . sleep o' nights," not in the afternoon. And consider Eutychus, the young man who went to sleep during a sermon of St. Paul's: he fell out of the window and was killed. I say nothing about the occasion: what was he thinking of to sleep on a window-sill? People choose the queerest places. I have myself slept for many minutes in an American sleeping-car. There was a Duke of Devonshire who dreamed that he was making a speech in the House of Lords and woke up to find that he was.

But I had intended to avoid discussing dreams, because they are a more difficult subject than sleep, which is a kind of non-existence and therefore limits garrulity. Still, now that we have begun . . . Coleridge's dream is perhaps unique. He dreamed a poem. We have all done that; but the terrible point is that Coleridge, when he awoke, remembered the lines and began to write them down. He had put some fifty on paper when the famous "person from Porlock" called: after his visitor had gone, Coleridge found that the rest of the poem had escaped his memory. The outcome of this affair was the fragmentary Kubla Khan, which is faithfully printed in all anthologies, "thick pants" included. As might have been expected, it is incoherent raving, though it does contain what some have supposed a prophecy of Tennyson's work:

> Where Alph, the sacred river, ran
> Through caverns measureless to man
> Down to a sunless sea.

How many of us have wished that we could get a reputation as easily as most of the English Classics! What do you suppose would happen to you or me if we wrote things like Tristram Shandy or Clarissa Harlowe?

Orchards are not the only spots to be avoided by the businesslike sleeper. King Saul perversely slept in a trench, whereupon David came and took away his spear and water-jug. As he explained next day, he could just as easily have killed him — it would have saved a good deal of fuss if he had. Many centuries later, at Ephesus, seven young men fell asleep in a cave, and what was the result? They didn't awake for two hundred and fifty years, a melancholy feat surpassed only by Endymion, who slept permanently: that is, he would be slumbering today on Mount Latmus had he not been proved a myth, which is enough to make anyone sit up.

So much for where: now a word about how. Take no notice of those who would have you count sheep or take fattening messes because of night-starvation. If you can't drop off naturally, invite some true friend to give you his complete views on—well, on anything; then, lulled by his honest and unending voice, sink deliciously into slumber. We all know how pleasant it is to doze at a meeting, but the snag is that you have to get home afterwards.

Finally, why? Perverse moralists insist that one-third of our lives goes to waste because we spend eight hours of the twenty-four in this pursuit. Nonsense! If we dispensed with sleep, we should do fifty per cent more harm than we have time for at present. During one-third of your existence you are on a level with the saints.

—Gilbert Norwood, in Judge.

RULE FOR GRANDPAS

An empty-handed grandpa is a sorry sight to see,
And he's something I am certain that a child should never see
Since a tragedy so dreaful childhood never understands
Every grandpa worth the title should have something in his hands.

An empty-handed grandpa is a disappointment keen,
He is either most forgetful or he's very, very mean,
Or he doesn't know the children, for the minute that he lands
A youngster's sure his grandpa will have something in his hands.

A lot of folks come calling and it's little that they bring,
But a grandpa at the doorway is a very different thing!
And it's very, very tragic when your grandpa pays a call
To find him empty-handed as you greet him in the hall.

So I write this rule for grandpas: They must always keep in mind
The greatest joy of childhood is two grandpas who are kind.
And if looks of disappointment it will bother you to see
Then an empty-handed grandpa you must never, never be.

Give the Boys a Lift

When you see them by the roadway,
Weary, dusty, sad at heart;
Just smile and say, "Climb in boys",
That's such a little part.
Driver, give the boys a lift,
When you see them standing there,
The soldier, sailor, airman
That can be your share.
After all, your bit is small,
Their's the greater part;
Driver, give the boys a lift
And cheer the aching heart.
'You haven't time to stop', you say,
Well maybe that's quite true—
But did you ever stop to think
They're in uniform for you?
These boys are many miles from home,
They've answered duty's call,
They've taken time to stop for you,
They're giving up their all.
So driver, give the boys a lift,
You've room and room to spare.
Just how would you feel in their shoes
If they left you standing there?
They're leaving home and country,
They're bidding all farewell.
So Driver, give the boys a lift,
They're playing their part well.
Now you can play your part as well
If you will stop and say—
"Hello boys, would you like a lift?
I'm going right your way".
They stand there lonely by the road,
As far from home they drift,
But you can cheer their aching hearts
By giving them a lift.

The Extra Few Minutes of Eating One Cause of Overweight

Three adults can eat the same amount of food get the same amount of rest and do the same physical work, and one will gain five pounds in thirty days another will lose five pounds, and the third will remain the same weight.

It is known also that an overweight will eat the same amount of food as one who is underweight and gain weight steadily whereas there is no change in the weight of the one who is underweight.

It is this fact that some overweights do not eat any more food than underweights that causes some overweights to give up a reducing diet believing that in their case anyway it is not the amount of food they eat but some gland disturbance that is responsible for their excess weight. What they forget is that although they do not eat more food than underweights, they nevertheless eat more food than they need so that to lose weight they must eat less than they are eating at present.

However "weight" specialists all know that the great majority of overweights really eat much more food than do those of normal weight or underweight. The reason for this is that while they may not feel any more hungry than those of normal weight when they sit down to eat, they apparently do not feel "satisfied" as soon, and continue to eat for some minutes longer. It is these few minutes longer, when the dessert or double dessert is being served, that has much to do with increasing weight in those with a tendency to overweight. It is because desserts appeal to the eye and "invite" use, that cafeterias have desserts placed first in the row of foods. If the desserts were placed last and the individual saw that his plate or tray was already filled or nearly filled, he might forego dessert.

The point, then, is that nearly all overweights eat more than those of normal weight, that they do not feel "satisfied" as soon, and that it is eating for these extra few minutes, during the dessert course, that has much to do with causing their excess weight.

To get a "satisfied" feeling sooner, overweights should "fill up" on bulky foods—salads—which take up much room in the stomach but are not rich in food or caloric value. Such foods are cabbage, celery, asparagus, lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers and other green vegetables.

Editorials Express Concern Over U. S. Aid to Russia

Japanese Gov't. Denies Intention to Hold Americans as Hostages

GREW GIVES OPINION

Tokyo, Aug. 19—(AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph Grew said today that for a considerable period of time he had been "talking with the Japanese Government concerning restrictions on Americans leaving Japan and other problems related to United States citizens."

The ambassador's statement came as Koh Ishii, Cabinet Information Bureau spokesman, denied that the Japanese Government intends to hold Americans as hostages.

Supplementing press conference statements, Ishii declined to elaborate on what problems were related to the departure of Americans and other aliens, but intimated they were not trade, political or other international issues.

It was pointed out that new Home Office restrictions on foreigners' entry and residence, issued Aug. 15, applied to all aliens regardless of nationality and these were compared with similar legislation of other countries, including United States laws effective Sept. 1st.

The Japanese spokesman said Japan could not remain indifferent to the shipment of munitions by the United States to Soviet Russia by way of Vladivostok.

Willing to Keep Peace is Claim

"We will keep peace in the Orient," he said. He contended that American diplomacy "should have delicacy" in handling the tense Far Eastern situation.

Editorials in the Japanese press expressed concern over U.S. aid to Russia. One newspaper, Chugai, said that "even if British-American supplies fail actually to reach the Soviet, the fact can not be overlooked that it (aid to Russia) has at least the effect of reinforcing Soviet troops in the Far East."

Ishii's remarks on aid to Russia followed his comments on State Secretary Cordell Hull's statement that the Japanese had not given a satisfactory explanation concerning their failure to let approximately 100 United States citizens leave Japan aboard the liner President Coolidge.

The problem of permitting the Americans to leave the country hinged, he said, upon "other inconveniences" in U.S.-Japan relations. At first, he said, the U.S. Embassy had asked to send home 22 officials aboard the President Coolidge, and the Japanese agreed. Later, however, the Embassy asked that a great number of Americans be permitted to leave Japan on the same ship, he said.

"This was contrary to a past promise," Ishii said. "We could not accept. The Coolidge question is only one of principle in keeping promises."

Letter to The Editor

DO NOT RE-BUILD A FOOT BRIDGE

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:—

History tells us that over seventy years ago the foot bridge across the Moira River was constructed. Three times it has been damaged or destroyed. When it was first proposed, progressive persons advocated continuing Victoria Avenue (then Hotel Street) by a bridge across the River for vehicles and foot passengers.

(1) The travel by vehicles is now twenty times greater than it was when the foot bridge was constructed and if it was desirable then it is twenty times more desirable now.

(2) This bridge continuing Victoria Avenue across the River would open up Coleman Street for another business street and relieve the traffic on Front Street.

(3). It would improve the value of property on Coleman Street and in most of West Belleville.

(4) The money proposed for the road through the back yards on the east side of the River could be expended in procuring the land and constructing a vehicle and foot bridge across the River at Victoria Avenue.

(5) The West Side of the River deserves more consideration.

(6) The East Side has the city buildings, the market, the Court House, the two railway depots, the wharf, the Post Office, the banks, the hotels, the fire station, places of entertainment, most of the churches, the Collegiate Institute, most of the industries and larger stores.

Gossip Jeopardized Churchill's Life Naval Writer Charges

London, Aug. 19—The Daily Herald's naval correspondent, A. J. McWhinnie, said that gossip "jeopardized the life of the Premier" while he travelled on the Prince of Wales.

"They guessed rightly that he had gone to America," he wrote; "they guessed wrongly that he went by bomber.

"Then somehow the story that he was travelling in the Prince of Wales began to get about. On the wings of gossip it swept London.

"On the other side of the Atlantic, too, stories were being freely told of Churchill's mission.

"Anxiety of the Admiralty became more pronounced.

"Nothing could improve the protection of the battleship. But at the same time nothing could stop the gossip.

"Days dragged by. At the week-end Churchill's homecoming was only a few hours away.

"I heard one naval officer say, 'the danger is as acute now as it has been since the Prime Minister left. There's always a chance they'll find him.'

"People who know the war at sea from first-hand experience remembered ships sank within sight of land. Their memories went back to Lord Kitchener, lost in the cruiser Hampshire off the Orkneys in 1916.

"I do not doubt that Hitler knew the man he hates most was crossing the Atlantic. And who can doubt that he ordered his U-boats and long-range bombers to sink the Prince of Wales at all costs?

"But they failed."

Billingsgate

Profanity and vulgar language generally are known as billingsgate.

The term is derived from the Billingsgate market, famous fish market in London.

For centuries the Billingsgate fishmongers, particularly the women venders, called fishwives, have been known for their abusive, course, scurrilous and foul language.

It is said that the great Dean Swift used to visit the Billingsgate fish market to improve his vocabulary and sharpen his wits by verbal exchanges with the fishwives.

On one occasion a fishwife put the Dean temporarily to silence by her torrent of unprintable epithets and vituperation.

Finally Swift, in a desperate attempt to match the verbal abuse of the foul-mouthed female fishmonger, called her "an isosceles triangle."

The poor woman broke down and cried, charging that the dean had exceeded all the bounds of decency in the contest.

Billingsgate market is below London Bridge on the left bank of the Thames on the site of a water gate in the ancient wall that protected London on the river side.

The oldest wharf on the Thames was called Billingsgate as early as 949 A.D.

One tradition says Billingsgate was named after Belin, a king who reigned over that part of Briton about 400 B.C.

Another tradition traces the name to Bilings, the English name of the royal race of the Varini, an ancient tribe of Britons mentioned by the Roman historian Tacitus.

Records show there was a market on the site of the old Billings water gate as early as the time of the Norman conquest.

For hundreds of years it was a general market for all sorts of produce and foodstuffs, but since the reign of William and Mary it has been used exclusively for the sale of fish.

Even today Billingsgate market is one of the impressive sights of London, particularly in the early hours of the morning, when most of the wholesale business is done.

Striking examples of Billingsgate rhetoric may still occasionally be heard in the famous London fish market.

Other great London markets are the London Central Markets at Smithfield, the Metropolitan Cattle Market, the Leadenhall Market, the Spitalfields Markets, the Foreign Cattle Market, the Borough Market, and Covent Gardens Market.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was starting to read his paper and ma was doing the bridge problem in hers saying, Willyum what is the exact meaning of metabolism. I mean precisely? I'm always coming across that word in an abstract sort of way, and this afternoon at the bridge club Blantche Hipple was bragging about a metabolism test her doctor had put her through, just as if anybody couldn't have the same thing by paying the same fee. But just what is metabolism, Willyum? ma said.

Well, it's slightly complicated, pop said. In the first place our bodies, in order to live and carry on, either uselessly or to some good purpose, must burn up a certain amount of energy, he said, and ma said, There's nothing useful about the way Blantche Hipple carries on, she's a proverbial human butterfly and lives only for the passing hour.

And ironically enough, she may have a more perfect metabolism than a saint in women's clothing who expends every ounce of her energy for the good of others, pop said. But let's look at the subject a little more objectively. Our whole life is a continuous process of building up protoplasm and destroying it, he said, and ma said, Blantche Hipple is good at the destroying part, I can vouch for that. She destroyed all my chances for a small slam by passing my forcing bid. I told you what a butterfly she is, her mind must of been completely eltswhere, ma said.

It was among the honeysuckle and roses no doubt, pop said. And he started to get behind his paper again, saying, You must remind me to explain to you about metabolism some time, and ma said, Why Willyum I think you've explained it just beautifully.

And she kept on doing the bridge problem.

Mountain View Girls Take Part in Achievement Day

Mountain View — On Thursday the girls of the Vanity Club attended the Annual Achievement Day held at the Wellington Town Hall. Registration and placing of exhibits took place between 9 and 9.30. There was a fine exhibit of record books, slips, charts and darning on display. The morning was spent in judging low cost menus and slips, a half hour spent in darning and a quiz on "Playing Safe". At noon a picnic dinner was enjoyed in Wellington Park.

The early part of the afternoon was spent in judging a "Safety Patrol on the Highway" and a "Dress Parade". The girls with one speaker representing their Club explained their exhibit of "Six books I have read", "A Health Defence Chart" and "How to Look Your Best". Demonstrations were given on "First Aid in the Home" and "Spending our Time Off." Thirty members of the different clubs received their Certificates of Achievement. Miss Frances Wallbridge assisted by several of the girls served afternoon tea.

At six-thirty the ladies of the Wellington United Church served a banquet to over one hundred girls and boys. The tables were nicely decorated with summer flowers. After the singing of Grace all enjoyed the bountiful banquet the ladies had prepared. With Miss Velma Vanderwater leading, a lively sing-song was enjoyed. With Mr. William Nightingale acting as chairman a short program took place. Presentations were made to both boy and girl winners and the names of those winning trips to the C. N. E., Peterboro and the short course at Kemptville were read. Mr. McPhail of the Kemptville Agricultural School was the guest speaker of the evening. Afterwards all enjoyed dancing in the Wellington Town Hall.

AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT RETURNED AFTER HISTORIC CONFERENCE

President Franklin D. Roosevelt waves to the crowd from his car after leaving the White House yacht Potomac. The president returned from his epic cruise in which he met with British Prime Minister Churchill on the high seas and formulated an eight-point war-aims program. Seated in the car with the president is, RIGHT, Harry Hopkins, lease-lend administrator. Next to the chief executive is his naval aide, Capt. John Bardall.

Churchill's Voyage to Rendezvous Described by Special Correspondent

(By a Special Correspondent of Reuters News Agency.)

With the Royal Navy Aboard a British Destroyer, Aug. 19 — The battleship Prince of Wales bearing Prime Minister Winston Churchill has reached a home port, ending the war leader's remarkable round-trip journey across the Atlantic to meet President Roosevelt.

Escorted by destroyers of the Royal Navy and the Royal Canadian Navy, the battleship broke her homeward voyage to allow Mr. Churchill to pay a day's visit to Iceland where he took the salute at a march-past of British and American troops stationed there. He made a short speech to the troops.

I was on board one of the British destroyers which formed the escort on the homeward trip. Never once did we sight any hostile craft in the air, on the sea, or beneath the sea.

It was a glorious afternoon as we sailed out of the naval base to keep our rendezvous with the Prince of Wales somewhere in the North Atlantic and at that time no one except the captain of the ship knew the importance of the task which lay ahead of us.

Early one morning some days after leaving the naval base we sighted a smudge on the horizon and as we approached we could see through our glasses the outline of a giant battleship flanked on both sides by Canadian destroyers.

The great ship truly was a noble sight plunging through the Atlantic swell and throwing up great clouds of white spray as she dipped her bow into the waves.

We approached from head on, and as we swooped in to take our position, there was a sudden flurry of destroyers all around the battleship.

In a very few minutes, however, we had turned around and with a slight increase of speed we had taken our positions and were zigzagging with the other warships.

During the afternoon Catalina flying boats patrolled the air over us and one of them reported there was a large convoy some fifty or sixty miles ahead bound for Britain. The Prime Minister had never seen a large convoy at sea, so with slight alteration of course we made toward them.

After two or three hours we could see the convoy on the horizon. It was an incredible sight. As far as the eye could see there were ships, tankers, freighters, supply ships, big ships, little ships, ships of every conceivable size and sort.

Stretched Eight Miles.

They were ranged in lines—in all over eight miles of ships. Around them scurried their escort of corvettes and former American destroyers keeping stragglers in line and always ready for the possible approach of danger.

We steamed straight toward them and then passed right through the middle of the convoy. Each of the Prince of Wales' escorts chose its opening among the ships and as we dashed through the lines of merchantmen we could see that they realized who was paying them this novel visit.

We saw men running to hoist the "V" signals in flags while others stood on deck cheering and waving.

The Prince of Wales was a proud sight. She had cocked up all her great 14-inch guns to their highest levels and if Mr. Churchill was thrilled it was nothing to the excitement that it caused among the vessels of the convoy.

We steamed on to perhaps two miles ahead of the convoy and then the Prince of Wales and her escort turned around and once more we went through the lines of wallowing ships. If there had been enthusiasm before it was nothing to what greeted us the second time.

Every merchantman had had time to hoist flags and the crews lined the rails waving caps and shouting.

We wished them godspeed and then resumed our original course, which was to bring us to Iceland. Here we made a day's stay and in the evening sailed again for England.

Earlier in the day in which we met the convoy the Prince of Wales carried out a practice shoot with her anti-craft guns, watched by the Prime Minister and his party.

She first fired a smoke shell which exploded into a compact ball of smoke high up in the sky. Using this as a target she let loose with her A-A guns, plastering the area around the ball of smoke with exploding shells.

This was followed up by an exhibition of barrage fire, using every anti-craft gun on board. The battleship's sides seemed constantly flaming, so great was the rate of fire, while the air all around her was black with exploding projectiles. It seemed unbelievable that one ship could put up so devastating a barrage.

The journey from Iceland to Britain was quite uneventful. With her escorts screening her, the Prince of Wales reached home safely after the most remarkable transatlantic voyage of the war.

Addresses Madoc W. I. Members on Story Of the Union Jack

Madoc — The Madoc Women's Institute held the August meeting at the home of Mrs. C. Henderson on Friday afternoon, August 15. With the president, Mrs. E. Moon in charge the meeting opened with the Institute Ode and a short time spent in sing-song. Accounts and communications were dealt with and Mesdames V. Tanner, L. Parks and Tayler were appointed to attend the local leadership class to meet at Ivanhoe in September. The roll call which was to be answered to by naming prominent Canadians showed attendance of 32. Current Events were ably given by Mrs. B. Tanner.

Miss Mary Mackintosh was the guest speaker and gave a very fine talk on "The Story of the Union Jack and the Canadian Flag". This was followed by an appropriate poem "Salute The Flag" by Miss Edith Miller. Two instrumental duets were played by Miss Aileen Tanner and Stanley Hawthorne. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the speaker and the young musicians who helped to make the meeting a very enjoyable one. The meeting closed with the singing of "Oh Canada" and the National Anthem. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. E. Phillips, Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. J. Reid, Mrs. R. Lewis and Mrs. C. Whytock in serving afternoon tea.

On Wednesday afternoon the O'Hara Red Cross Unit met at the home of Mrs. William Miller. About twenty members were present and arrangements were made to hold a sale of clothing and home baking very soon in Madoc village with the proceeds to be used for Red Cross work. A short time was spent in community singing with Mrs. F. Robinson presiding at the piano. Two quilts were quilted during the afternoon. The hostess served afternoon tea and a silver collection was taken to aid in the work.

The Madoc I. O. O. F. No. 179, held their annual Decoration Day Service on Sunday afternoon. Headed by the Belleville Salvation Army Band about sixty brethren marched to Lakeview Cemetery. Pausing at the cenotaph in the Thompson Memorial Park, Bro. Capt. Don. B. Whytock placed a very beautiful floral V at the monument in memory of the soldiers of the last war. While a bugler from the band played the Last Post and Reveille at the cemetery Mro. Dr. S. R. Beatty, P. D. D. G. M., gave the Decoration Day Service with Bro. Percy Holland as Chaplain. Bro. C. I. Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BRITAIN'S NEW WAR MEASURE: SMALLER DIAMONDS FOR ENGAGEMENT RINGS

Several months ago the Diamond Manufacturer's Association of Great Britain urged courting couples to buy engagement rings with smaller diamonds. The stated reason was that all diamonds possible are being exported at the present time to the United States to raise dollars for the war. Like almost everything else hard to bear in the world today, this cutting down in the size of diamonds is laid to the door of Herr Hitler. When the Nazis invaded the Low Countries, all the diamond cutters and merchants who could manage to make a getaway fled to the United States.

You will remember that the Vargas diamond, one of the largest in the world, weighing over seven hundred carats, was cut recently in New York. The Vargas was named for the President of Brazil, where the $2,000,000 gem was found in the dry bed of a creek. Perhaps if you or I had seen it, we wouldn't have bothered to pick it up, thinking it perhaps a lump of plate glass with some sandy accretions. It's possible that pieces from the Vargas will not find their way into wedding rings among the boys and girls who are plighting their troth today.

Diamond-cutters in this country who never bothered before about tiny stones are just beginning to handle them, but at a much higher price than the European diamond-cutters previously enjoyed for their labor.

As a result of war conditions, the prices of small diamonds has sky-rocketed, and there is at the present time a demand for antique rings which may often be bought at half or a third of their intrinsic worth.

But there are a great many girls who decline to accept an antique ring, no matter how lovely it may be; it's a new diamond ring or nothing for them. They regard it as seriously as the "I do's" in the marriage ceremony. There is yet another school of thought to be found chiefly among girls about to be married to soldiers, who say, casually, "Why bother now about an engagement ring? He'll buy me a diamond when he comes home."

Here's hoping that even if engagement diamonds are smaller than they were a generation ago, there may be no diminution of the happiness associated with them.

August Weddings

McFEE—BROWNE

St. Bartholomew's Anglican Church, Ottawa, was effectively decorated with standards of gladioli and quantities of Summer blooms for the marriage at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon of Miss Una Fraser Browne, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. W. Browne, to Mr. Allan Symington McFee, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. McFee, of Ottawa, formerly of Belleville. Rev. Wilfred H. Bradley officiated and Mr. Cecil Skuce played the wedding music and "Until" during the signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. George Browne, of Toronto. For her wedding she chose a street-length ensemble of sky blue silk jersey. It was fashioned with a fitted bodice and full skirt and had a three-quarter-length fitted jacket flared at the back. The jacket was made with wide revers and three-quarter-length leg-o'-mutton sleeves. Her hat, an accordion pleated sunburst halo of matching material, was crownless with a blue tulle veil. Her shoes were in matching shade and she carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and bouvardia. She also wore a gold necklace, set with pearls and aquamarines, the gift of the bridegroom.

As matron-of-honor, Mrs. Vincent B. Loney, of Brockville, was wearing a shell pink silk jersey frock with a fitted bodice and full skirt, the hip-length matching jacket trimmed with tiny self-covered buttons. Her turban of the same material had a pink tulle nose-tip veil and she carried an arm bouquet of gladioli and blue cornflowers. Her accessories were white.

Mr. John Mingay, of Kitchener, assisted the bridegroom as best man and the ushers were Mr. Frank W. Richardson and Mr. Colin Ross, of Ottawa.

Mrs. Browne was in a Churchill blue crepe ensemble with a navy picture hat and accessories and a corsage bouquet of Better-time roses for her daughter's wedding.

Mrs. McFee, mother of the bridegroom, chose a palm green sheer redingote frock with a white hat and accessories and a corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Fraser, Ottawa. Later Mr. and Mrs. McFee left by motor for Northern Ontario and the Muskoka Lakes. The bride travelled in a flowered silk frock in rose, powder and navy blue under a navy blue light wool coat. Her hat was a Dutch bonnet model of wool with navy accessories and she wore a corsage bouquet of Butterfly roses. They will reside in Toronto.

ZIEGLER—THRASHER

An interesting wedding took place at Centenary Church, on Saturday afternoon at two-thirty, when Dorothy, daughter of Mr. Roy Thrasher, Belleville, R.R. 5, became the bride of Walter Carl Ziegler, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ziegler, Kitchener, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mercer, the church being beautifully decorated with garden flowers for the occasion. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Jas. Radford, grandmother of the bride, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Mercer was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her gown of dusky rose with white hat and accessories. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Miss Aileen Reid, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing powder blue with white hat and accessories and bouquet of sweet peas. Mr. Russell Radford, cousin of the bride, was groomsman.

A reception following the ceremony was held at the bride's home which was most attractive with a profusion of garden flowers. Mrs. Thrasher received wearing rose with black hat and accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler left on a wedding trip to Kitchener, and other western points, the bride travelling in a light blue ensemble with navy hat and black accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Sidney.

RICHARDSON—LA RUE

A quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon at two-thirty, in Colborne, when Annie Alberta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. La Rue, Belleville, became the bride of Ross Martin Richardson, Frankford, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Richardson, Rev. Geo. D. Campbell officiated. After a wedding trip to Wasaga Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson will reside in London, Ontario.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, August 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EXCITING, thrilling, surprising and not-to-be-forgotten state of affairs is read from the predominant aspects, in which all the forces and faculties move under high tempo to meet a series of events of an unforeseen and unpredictable nature. Sudden upheaval, strange adventures, glamor and intrigue, hold sway in all human relations, business, professional, romantic, emotional, even spiritual, rising to curious crises of far-reaching effect.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised should a year of the unpredictable and unprecedented overwhelm them. This in their business, domestic, social, intellectual and emotional relations in life. There is an uprooting and shaking force at work, with side issues of the subtle, bewildering and curious, to dramatize the activities and to postpone the mysterious denouement into the distant future. Underneath are solid, dependable and enduring substrata promising stability and security despite vicissitude and hazard. Enjoyment and fair fortune should follow.

A child born on this day should be richly endowed with talents and abilities of a high and exceptional order. Its inspired and subtle genius may be fortified by reason.

GOOD MANNERS

By MORRIS FISHBEIN, M.D.

ARE YOU PROUD OF YOUR GUEST ROOM?

Has your guest room a "come-hither" personality? If you are a hostess who is given to hospitality, you will be proud when you show your visitors into the guest room. First it will be charming to look at, and then it will be comfortable to stay in.

It's a traditional and excellent piece of advice that the hostess who really has the comfort of her guests at heart makes a point of spending a night in her own guest room. That'll show her just how pleasant and comfortable a room it is, and how adequately it is equipped to meet a guest's requirements.

Don't jump to the conclusion that I'm going to set forth a list of luxuries for your guest room — these concern only you and your individual budgets. I would, however, like to talk with you about certain details that you may have forgotten to provide.

The first necessity is a comfortable-bed, freshly-made of course, with one medium hard and one soft pillow, with sufficient blankets and with one extra blanket or comfortable on the closet shelf.

The bureau drawers should be empty, and each drawer should be lined with fresh white paper. (Luxury note: sometimes padded satin or silk linings are placed in the lower drawers.) In one of the small drawers the thoughtful hostess puts a tray with plain and safety pins of various sizes, and perhaps a compact box of sewing equipment. On the top of the bureau may be one or two decorative items (a pair of lamps, for instance), but mainly the top should be left uncluttered, to provide space for the guest's own toilet articles.

Ideally, there is a chaise lounge or small sofa, with a throw and soft cushions, comfortable for the afternoon nap. If possible, too, a dressing-table (easily and inexpensively home-made), with a really good light. The long mirror, for space-saving, may be on the closet door. A comfortable arm-chair is a must, and beside it either a small table and lamp or a floor lamp. Then there must be at least one more chair, a straight chair, or a pert little slipper chair. It's nice to have a desk too, but a table is a good substitute, equipped with some writing material.

On the bedside table should be placed a shaded light, at good reading-height, a book or two, one or two current magazines, a carafe on a tray, with a small glass, and a cigarette box (with fresh cigarettes), matches, an ash-tray.

No family oddities stored in the closet, please! With a minimum of budget you can equip your closet so that it will be an artistic delight. Use colorful shelf-edging, and supply a generous allotment of various types of hangers, shoe-trees, skirt and trouser-hangers, hat-stands. You might like to follow the custom of some hostesses and leave in the closet an inexpensive terry cloth (washable) bathrobe and a pair of terry cloth slippers, for the forgetful or unexpected guest.

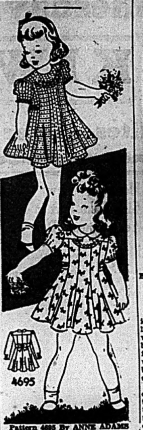
If the guest room hasn't its individual bath-room, the hostess sets aside, in the family bathroom, a special rack for the guest's towels (bath towels, hand towels, face cloths) and a shelf for the guest's soap dish, drinking glass, and toilet articles. On the tub ledge should be a small scrub-brush or cleaning-cloth for the tub. In the bathroom should be a box of cleaning tissues, a box of powder puffs, a box of absorbent cotton.

Most hostesses keep on hand now a make-up box (any attractive box will serve) with trial sizes of various beauty aids, hand lotion, shaving cream, and so forth; a comb and inexpensive tooth-brush in a cellophane wrapper; an inexpensive razor.

Other equipment-suggestions: a clock, preferably an alarm clock; a clothes-brush; an electric pad or hot water bottle; a luggage rack; a waste basket; cigarettes, ash-trays, matches. In many guest rooms these days, and especially in those where the beds must be placed so that the light glares in the guest's eyes, we find that the hostess has thoughtfully provided eye-shades!

As the final welcoming touch, put flowers in the room. One or two flowers in a bud vase will show the right spirit.

Gay Panelled Kiddie Frock



Pattern 4695 By ANNE ADAMS

What a cherubic style for a tiny belle of the nursery set! This captivating dress for a little girl is an Anne Adams original, Pattern 4695, and easy to make as can be with the Sewing Instructor to lead the way. Those panelled lines are wonderfully quick to stitch straight down — you might cut the alternating panels on a cross grain if your fabric is striped. The front yoke dips into a curve that's gay and unexpected. A sash from the side panels may tie crisply in back; buttons and ruffling may be used for pretty trim. Leave the neck plain and round or add a tiny contrasting or matching collar; make the sleeves short or long.

Pattern 4695 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, dress without collar, takes 2 3-8 yards 35 inch fabric and 1 1-8 yards ruffling; other dress, 2 3-8 yards 35 inch fabric and 1-4 yard contrast.

Send TWENTY CENTS (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Office Rating Affected by Vocabulary You Use

Errors Are Tattle-Tales

"This here is my first day!" the little filing clerk confides.

She couldn't have made a worse impression if she'd slapped the boss' son on the back. For vocabulary errors like "this here" instead of "this" jar on educated ears like squeaky chalk. They don't help you when you try to make office friends or when promotions are considered!

After all, why should any bright girl let herself say "she's to lunch" instead of "she's at lunch" and "lenth" instead of "length"? Checking your speech, you can easily learn to say the right thing.

Instead of shockers like "I can't find the AD-dresses anyPLACE . . . I EXPECT that DAT-TA was COMPLETELY destroyed" you say smoothly, "I can't find the adDRESS-es anyWHERE; I BELIEVE that DATA (day-ta) was destroyed."

You leave "Okey-doke" behind you forever, along with "ain't," "you bet" and "it was him." And soon you may find yourself not only lunching with the higher-paid secretaries, but being one yourself!

Our 32-page booklet tells how to speak correctly, interestingly. Lists errors in grammar and pronunciation, right forms; explains words often misused; helps enrich your vocabulary.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR VOCABULARY to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Give Finger Nails Daily Care

Bess Johnson, radio star, gives her hands a nightly creaming to keep them soft and smooth.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN ADDITION to the weekly manicure, finger nails should have a little attention each day. After washing the hands, press the cuticle back gently with a soft towel. Be fussy about soap. Many a woman who bawls about broken nails will be rid of her trouble if she will find a blander soap.

Housekeepers must avoid strong cleaning agents; if they have to use them in their occupation of keeping the home in apple pie order, let them wear rubber gloves. It is a crying shame to dim the little pink talons; do things that make the fiber heavy and brittle.

Removing Hangnail

If you find a budding hangnail, don't do what a lot of bad girls do—bite it off. You'll have a wound, and any wound is likely to become infected. An infected finger is nothing to yodel about; it is a health menace.

Apply cuticle cream to the nail, lift the flesh away from it. Keep on working with a rotary movement until the hangnail is loose. Snip it away with the curved needle-point scissors, holding the ends toward the nail base. Don't let the flesh thicken at the sides of the nails; that won't happen if you use cream or olive oil freely. Put it on at night after you have given your complexion a five minute massage treatment.

Even though you are an addict of blazing nail polish, you should endeavor to keep the pretty claws of good coloring. That can be done by massage. The nail fabric is colorless and transparent. It gets the rose tint from the underlying flesh. If circulation is good the nails will be a deep pink.

When filing, work from side to tip, being careful not to cut down too far. Run the orange wood stick under the nail eave, then use a beveling file of emery board which gives a smooth finish.

HOW TO GET RELIEF FROM PAINFUL FEET IN SUMMER

In the summer the feet seem to suffer much more with swelling, pain and irritation than in the winter. We use them more in summer and, as Dr. Philip Wiles, British surgeon, writes, "The feet are the hardest worked and most misused part of the body. They have to carry the whole body-weight and withstand the shock of meeting the ground at each step. Moreover, they are confined in shoes that are often ill-fitting, and they have to stand on surfaces that seem to become harder and harder as civilization advances. The surprise is not that there is so much foot trouble, but that there is not more."

Incidentally, flatfeet is not in itself a painful condition but only becomes painful when some other factor is present. The specialists in diseases of the bones and joints recognize a condition that they call chronic foot strain. The ability of the feet to resist strains depends largely on the elasticity of the ligaments and the muscles. Normally the muscles of the feet yield as the feet receive the body weight and provide the spring for the next step. The ligaments which tie the muscles to the bones and tie the bones to each other are under tension whenever the feet are moved in extremes. Usually the muscles prevent the ligaments from suffering continued strain or great injury. When, however, a person has been standing a long time, particularly a person who is not used to such standing, or when there has been a rapid increase in the body weight or whenever there has been a long illness, the muscles will fail to keep their elasticity when they are fatigued.

When many hundreds of thousands of young men change from civilian to military life and begin to wear heavy service shoes and boots, they find their feet are not able to stand the strains. When the muscles relax, the feet do not stand with the same posture that they had previously. There is a tendency to turn the feet outward in order to sustain the body weight somewhat better.

In the new position which the feet assume there may still be tiredness and aching but there is not pain. At first this pain is felt only when the person is standing and when the feet are bearing weight but in time the feet may become chronically inflamed; then there is constant trouble.

The answer to this problem is the maintenance of mobility and suppleness of the feet. Any foot that is stiff is likely to be painful when subjected to unusual strain. The pain and stiffness may be associated with swelling of the soft tissues. The various ways in which this condition may be controlled include the wearing of arch supports which restrict the movement and prevent the weight from falling on the ligaments. This, however, is only palliative and will not cure the condition. Soldiers are not permitted to wear arch supports because of the difficulty of constant replacement. Such feet are helped, however, by massage and manipulation, by alternate hot and cold baths, and by suitable movements in order to keep the muscles and the ligaments elastic and flexible.

BROILING STEAKS

To broil streaks out-of-doors, build a large fire and let it die to a mass of red, glowing embers, advises Inez S. Willson, home economist. This is important as it gives the slow, even heat that is best for broiling. Place the steaks on a rack far enough from the coals to keep them from cooking too quickly. The steaks will be more juicy and flavorful if cooked slowly at a moderate temperature. The steaks should be brown on one side in about half the cooking time. A steak one-inch thick will be done in about 12 to 15 minutes. When browned on one side, season, turn and finish broiling.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Bob Reports

Listlessly, Dona picked up a fragile whisp of crimson chiffon that lay across a table. Such an exquisitely beautiful evening gown!

"I'm sorry, Miss Dona."

It was Jettie, with new respect in her tone. "I tried to get everything unpacked before you returned. Mrs. Platt wanted to surprise you. There are more boxes downstairs—but you look so tired—I'd better bring them up in the morning.

"Yes—I'll try on things—tomorrow," Dona said faintly, letting the crimson chiffon slip from her fingers to ripple around her blue suede shoes.

Jettie flung her a scrutinizing glance and began laying the sheerest of hose in a chest drawer.

"You're sure fortunate, Miss Dona, having Mrs. Platt take such an interest in you," Jettie could not resist saying.

"Yes — very fortunate," came slowly from Dona.

Then she added disconsolately, "It's like—like being a bride, isn't it?"

But before Jettie could advance an opinion about this, Dona was in her bedroom and had closed the door between them.

She flung herself across the orchid satin spread on her bed and burst into racking sobs.

Dawn came altogether too quickly for Dona who still lay fully dressed on her bed. She opened her eyes and closed them again. She dreaded being thoroughly awake, dreaded to face a new day.

But she knew that somehow she must bury her tormenting thoughts behind a thick curtain of determination. There was no other way. Last night she had taken a step that might be good or bad or merely filled with risk. Only time would tell. But if she expected to accept a salary from Mrs. Platt for occupying a peculiar position in this household, she couldn't be so self-centred.

Those lovely, lovely clothes! She'd seen the time when the mere sight of such resplendent loveliness would thrill her beyond bounds. But now she was so discouraged, nothing counted.

This would never do! She must get up and try on hats, gowns and shoes. What she couldn't use she must send back to the shops. She owed this courtesy to Mrs. Platt, even if all the fine raiment were in exchange for certain services that night end disastrously.

But the worst of it was, she had as yet accomplished nothing tangible with Bob and wasn't at all sure that she ever could.

She met Grace Platt in the great high-ceilinged dining room where two lone women seemed small and inadequate against the background of massive carved mahogany furniture and huge desert paintings that covered most of the wall space.

"It's the first time I've been home for luncheon that I can remember," began Grace Platt, unfolding her napkin. "It's a relief to have a breathing spell and discuss things, Dona."

Connell was placing the soup and she told him curtly, "That will be all for the present, Connell."

"Very good, madame," returned Connell, and immediately left the room.

A few seconds before this, Dona had attempted to thank Mrs. Platt for a dazzling surprise she had arranged, and been eloquently silenced by a shrug and wave of jewelled fingers.

It's nothing at all—nothing," Mrs. Platt assured her warmly "You do your part, Dona—and I'll never be able to repay you."

Connell had been nearby, so Dona had hesitated about making a protest against continuing with this job. Now, alone with Mrs. Platt, she could speak plainly.

"Mrs. Platt—I'm really not getting anywhere with Bob. At the opera she—"

"Bob told me. She's sorry she ran away. She says you're the only person who understands her—that you and she are going to be friends."

"She — did?" came uncertainly from Dona. "It sounds encouraging—but—"

She hesitated, thinking of last night. If Tug took Bob out and brought her back at a reasonable hour, who could complain? It would be silly even to mention such a date.

"I'm greatly encouraged. You're gaining Bob's confidence—making the right start. She says you opened her eyes to how horrid she's been acting. It's the first time she'd confided in me for months."

Grace Platt dipped a spoon into the mushroom soup, a contented smile playing about her highly rouged, selfish mouth. Too much make-up on her round, expressionless face made her look startlingly artificial, and the fussy design of white beads on the front of her wine-colored dress gave it a basement-bargain look. Legions of smart shopkeepers and beauticians were constantly playing up to her vanity and love of falderals. Consequently, her hair was always too waved and curled, her clothes were too tucked, frilled, pleated and trimmed. Appreciation of simple elegance was not in Grace Platt's make-up.

"The next big affair is the New Year's Eve dinner dance Tom Castor is giving in his home," Mrs. Platt rattled on. "I do hope Bob doesn't act in bad taste. Dunning Castor—he's Tom's father, you know—is sure to be there. Tom's mother died when he was three—and Dunning has been a marvelous father. Tom actually wanted to go into the Castor brokerage firm the instant he was graduated from Yale. Most boys these days refuse to have anything to do with their father's business."

"Mr. Castor must be a model son," remarked Dona, trying to keep her mind on what Mrs. Platt was saying.

Dona was wishing that Bob would appear and talk about what she and Tug had been up to last night. If Bob were seriously interested in Tug, she'd probably have little to offer. She'd act secretive and a little self-conscious. Dona resolved to watch for all signs.

But then, wasn't she borrowing all kinds of trouble? Hadn't Tug said that his date with Bob was strictly business? Why couldn't she trust him?

"If Tom and Bob would only announce their engagement, I'd feel better. Then we could begin to plan the trousseau. Bob would have so much to think about she wouldn't have time to get into scraps."

Dona brightened. "Engagement? Then it's all settled—Bob's going to marry Mr. Castor?"

Grace Platt tightened a gold earring, laughed lamely.

"Oh, I suppose I'm premature. But I know the instant Tom thinks Bob is ready to listen, he'll propose. A man hates being refused—specially an eligible one who can pick and choose."

Dona's spirits wilted. She bit her lower lip and tried to concentrate upon buttering a wafer. She thought, "If Mrs. Platt only knew how anxious I am to see her unstable child tightly promised to Tom Castor she'd triple my salary!"

"I should think it would take plenty of courage for any man to ask a girl to be his wife,' Dona said, thinking aloud. "If he proposed, surely he'd love her and—"

"You adorable idealist! These days, love and marriage is complex. It's nearly impossible to arrange dinner parties without seating people next to their ex-husbands or wives. The marriage standard has changed. Whether we like it or not—it's so."

Grace Platt's fork went quickly into the eggplant souffle Connell had just set before her. "Think of living a lifetime with a man you despise!"

"But if you could—could help him—if he depended on you—together you might solve some of the problems," ventured Dona. "Why not give marriage a chance?"

"Perhaps you're right. If people get adjusted—"

"Who's adjusting what?" interrupted Bob, abruptly entering the room.

Her bright green wool dress and gray squirrel jacket and hat were vivid contrast to her scowling little face. She walked up to the table and sulkily surveyed the food.

"Crab meat and eggplant — Thousand Island on romaine! Raspberries!"

"Oh, darling, do sit down and lunch with us!" begged her mother "We're having such a pleasant chat."

"Gracious, mother—where'd you find that dress! You wear the craziest duds!"

This cruel criticism made two red splotches settle on Grace Platt's cheeks. She began uncomfortably, "Yes—I know. I never like what I buy, either."

Bob looked down at her in amused intolerance and drawled out, "Then why do you show such abominable taste?"

She started away, then paused to explain, "I'm meeting Della Trowbridge at the Twizzlewig Inn to plan the Spinster's ball. And, Dona—I asked Tug Nash to take me to the Castor dance. But you're welcome to him—in fact, I insist you take him off my hands. Any man who wants to sell me insurance doesn't have to date me to do it. I was out with him last night—and insurance is practically all he talked about!"

Dona soared with delight. Her cheeks were crimson. She stammered out breathlessly, "You—you want me to—me to—go with him?"

"Yes. It's settled. I told him you would."

Relief went sailing wildly through Dona. Dear, clever Tug! He'd maneuvered to get himself invited to one of the ritziest parties of the season—and he was taking his own wife!

CHAPTER TWELVE

No Future

The dining room in the Dunning Castor house was fascinating, with its coral damask draperies and smoke-blue carpet shadowed by the magic glow from tall ivory tapers in crystal candelabra. The French provincial sideboard, cabinets and serving tables vied in beauty with the glass-topped thirty-foot long dining table. Along its center, silver boats, holding rose camellias, set off the heavy elegance of old family silver, shining damask and priceless china. Around this table sat twenty-five gay-minded young couples, the pastel-shaded gowns of the girls in glamorous contrast to the conventional black and white attire of the men.

The food would tempt an epicure. Clam and shrimp cocktails, duck and wild rice, compote of fig, quivering jellies in wine, avocado salad, various ices; sherbets and frothy puddings were served in deft succession and champagne glasses were constantly being refilled.

Dunning Castor never did anything by halves and his son had been brought up in the same tradition. Servants moved swiftly and noiselessly about the room and, although there was a modern lavishness about this feast, it was combined with elegance and stability.

The Castors were stable. Dunning Castor came from a line of dignified landowners in New York and even his grandfather, a forty-niner, struck gold in the new western country without too blatant acclaim.

Above her gown of moonstone faille, matching her blue eyes, Dona's sweetly anxious face was peculiarly arresting. She sat between Tug Nash and Jerry Armstrong, trying to keep her mind on the general conversation and away from her own harrying doubts.

She was apparently borrowing trouble, she thought. Yet this newly acquired husband of hers was very handsome tonight in his evening clothes. Every now and then, a pretty face at the table turned toward him, making Dona fear for his equilibrium. So many handsome men lost balance under too much feminine adoration, and tonight would be a severe test for Tug.

Most of all the big dark eyes of Roberta Platt strayed in Tug's direction and Dona wondered what, if anything, Tug was going to do about them.

Bob Platt was a beguiling siren now in her daring strapless silver lame gown and diamond and sapphire jewelry. She looked opulent enough to purchase anything on earth that she wanted—including another woman's perfectly good new husband.

Then suddenly an inner strength flowed through Dona. For the moment, she felt equal to any emergency. She held the dear secret of her marriage close to her heart and coated her worries with an inner satisfaction that made her feel safe. Tug loved her or he wouldn't have married her; he was devotion itself. Jerry Armstrong could scarcely get a word to her edgewise. The other people at this table she had met at Bob's coming-out party; and they were exactly as cordial to her tonight as they'd been then.

Yes, this was a lovely evening. She nearly convinced herself that she had never experienced a lovelier one.

But Tug's eyes grew glassy and his tongue thick, and when they rose from the table, his step was uncertain. So Dona led him quickly out to the terrace which bordered the long length of the living room.

The Dunning Castor house, high on a hill, commanded a widespread view of the valley below where nestled the business district of Unadilla. Red, green and amber lights seemed to blink brighter and faster now in keeping with the buoyant holiday spirit, making a veritable fairyland of color and display.

Suddenly bells, sirens and whistles shouted in unison, making a clatter that sailed gaily through the clear chilly night.

"Happy New Year, darling!" sang out Dona quickly.

Tug was lighting a cigarette, his hands cupped to his face. He tossed away the match, said, "Yeah. Another year to go bust in." He gave a dry laugh. "I used to imagine I'd be sitting pretty some day—but the breaks don't come my way."

"But, Tug—it's a new year—a new chance."

"A new chance if Lady Luck comes a-knocking." A thick cloud of smoke floated from his nostrils. "But luck's down on me lately."

"What's happened, dear? You're not really discouraged, are you?'

"So much so, you'd better be sorry you ever hooked up with me."

She laid a hand gently on his arm. "Tug—I'm not sorry—I'll never be. You have years before you. I can wait. You'll be a big insurance executive some day."

"That's out! I've quit insurance—there's no future to it."

"But, Tug—you've hardly given it a trial. You just went into insurance a short while ago."

She was afraid for him. Where was he drifting? He'd been on a newspaper, then gone into insurance in the comparatively short time she'd known him. How many jobs had he held before that? Tug mustn't be a rolling stone. She wouldn't allow it.

He flung away his cigarette and she tucked a hand in his, leaned her head lovingly against his arm.

"Just because you didn't sell Bob Platt that policy ought not to discourage you, Tug. She's only one of hundreds of prospects in this town."

"Say—does that gal tell you everything? Prospects be hanged! I'm sick of peddling stuff to people. I'd like a business of my own. You don't want me to be away from home all the time, do you?"

"No—but—"

She paused abruptly, afraid of saying the wrong thing. And she had to convince him that forever chasing rainbows would get him nowhere.

"You must be practical, dear," she went on. "You can't gather momentum eloping from one job to another. And how can you start your own business—on nothing?"

He drew her to him a little roughly and pressed a hasty kiss on her quivering lips.

For a long, unbearable sweet moment, she clung to him silently, while the music from the tower ballroom floated romantically down to them like a rapturous benediction. Now in his arms, she could nearly forget her fear for him as a lilting tide of love soothed her whole being. She loved him completely. His desires, hopes, mistakes even, she would follow through and accept with him. For better or worse, she loved him.

A cool breeze suddenly blew her curls against his cheek.

"Bur-rrh!" he exclaimed. "It's chilly! Have to get you inside before you catch cold."

He was more like himself now, and she went with him willingly enough to an elevator in which they were carried up to the ballroom.

Here the air was already heavy with the scent of flowers and perfume, and a famous orchestra was playing a Strauss waltz to irresistible dance rhythm.

Tug and Dona joined the merry dancers. In his arms, her head against his cheek, her brain was in a whirl of elation. The low lights, softly strummed guitars and muffled drum beats made her feel like some one other than herself and sent her earlier doubts to swift oblivion.

Tug leaned down and whispered, "I love you, darling. Believe it?"

She nodded mutely, wanting only to remember the sound of his words, uninterrupted by hers.

But soon a succession of admiring men began cutting in, and Dona was obliged to meet well turned phrases in gay abandon and forget Tug for a time.

Finally, her mind reverted back to the business of the evening — Bob Platt's behaviour. At present it appeared to be unbelievedly correct. Bob was dancing a great deal with Tom Castor and Mrs. Platt's plans and hopes might blossom into reality this very night, if indications counted for anything. Stranger things had happened, thought Dona, although she had difficulty visualising the intractable Bob as the wife of so fine a man as Tom.

Then all at once she was surprised to find herself dancing away with Tom himself and feeling slightly perturbed over it. His hazel eyes were twinkling and he certainly was looking very pleased over something.

She smiled back at him in her best manner and after they had exchanged a few pleasantries, she got out deliberately, "Bob's looking very lovely tonight, isn't she?'

Then she hated herself and this ridiculous job of hers that made her a promoter of lies and deceit.

Tom Castor answered absently, "Bob? Yes, she's always well groomed."

He brought Dona to a sharp halt before a closed door.

"I'd like to show you something," he told her with a shade of tenderness in his voice.

She looked at him wonderingly. This shouldn't be happening to her, she thought apprehensively.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Another Tug Surprise

Tom Castor had opened the door and Dona followed him into a warmly hospitable, lovely room where an older man sat reading beneath a green-shaded lamp.

"Father, I'd like you to meet some one rather special," Tom announced, filling Dona with surprise and self-consciousness.

Dunning Castor's newspaper fell to his knees and his massive gray head turned quickly in Dona's direction. He stood up and came forward. His big bulky figure was immaculately groomed and he looked every inch the powerful financier he was. His smile was slow, but there was approval in the sharp, gray eyes now surveying Dona.

"It's an honor to meet so charming a young woman," he greeted her affably.

At the touch of his hand on hers, Dona knew from whom his son had inherited many fine inner qualities.

Her eyes were luminous stars now as she told him earnestly, "I'm so glad to have the opportunity to know you, Mr. Castor."

"Sit down, my dear," he invited, pulling up a comfortable white leather chair.

Dona quickly complied and Dunning Castor seated himself beside the lamp again.

"I'm leaving her here to get acquainted with you, father," put in Tom.

"Splendid! But what's the hurry? Why not join us? It's a pity to leave this pretty girl to a crabbed oldster like me."

"It won't be for long—don't flatter yourself," laughed Tom.

Then he added, "Bob wants to see that bird of paradise. It's bloomed since the last time she was here, you know. I'll be back. Excuse me, Dona."

She nodded with a wry smile. It was somehow unsetting to be dropped in just this way, although she told herself that it was part of the Platt plan—Bob and Tom Castor—the plan she was supposed to promote.

Dunning Castor frowned as Tom disappeared. He rubbed a thick broad hand meditatively over his mop of wavy gray hair.

"Roberta Platt, eh?" he said, more to himself than to Dona. Yes, I've known her mother for years. Lively girls—both of them."

He hastened to laugh this off, but Dona gathered that he approved of neither Bob nor her mother.

Dona straightened, a determined look in her flowerlike face. Now that she had the opportunity to earn at least a part of her increased weekly salary, she swiftly ransacked her mind for the right phrase.

Then she blurted out, "Bob is really accomplished, Mr. Castor. She rides, swims, dances beautifully. She's had marvelous advantages. She's lovely looking—she's—"

"You're a loyal little person, aren't you?" he interrupted, with a crooked smile. "I know all about the Platts—but nothing about you. What's your aim in life—if any?"

She was slightly dismayed by his bluntness and fidgeted in her chair. Her softly curved mouth was a bit unsteady when she told him, low, "To be a good wife, I think."

He elevated his bushy gray brows. "Quite an order, isn't it? But perhaps you're different from the usual run of today's debutantes. Yes," he added reflectively, "I believe you are."

"But I'm not a debutante, Mr. Castor," she said frankly. "I'm a—a working girl."

"On a holiday?"

"We-ell—you might call it that."

She looked very childlike and appealing as she sat there with her frothy skirts rippling around her. Dunning Castor saw a singleness of purpose and an endearing graveness about her that made her, as Tom had said, some one rather special. The moonstone lights of her dress enhanced the loveliness of her fair little face, brought out the golden glints in her hair and the blue of her eyes. Even her saucy little tilted nose was one of her good points now.

Dunning Castor was fascinated by all this and also by her entire absence of pretention. Some of these modern girls, who acted every minute, disgusted him. If Tom ever got mixed up with one, he'd break his neck.

"Tell me about yourself. I'd like to know all about you, my dear," Dunning Castor urged now.

And strangely enough, Dona found herself giving him a complete history of her drab earlier life with Aunt Lucy, all about their struggles to give her a high-school education; and on to her entry into the Platt domicile as secretary.

After which she explained rather lamely, "Now, Mrs. Platt has taken me out of all that—given me lovely clothes—and — and I'm whirling about like a frivolous butterfly."

"That so? It's the first time I've ever known Grace Platt to be benevolent without a purpose. You'd better take care, young woman—the goblins will get you if you don't watch out."

He laughed heartily and she joined in. But she had a feeling that there was a subtle warning behind his levity.

She quickly sobered, remembering that she had been here a long time and Tom Castor apparently had forgotten her.

She got uncertainly to her feet. "I—I think I've taken up enough of your evening, Mr. Castor," she told him. "I'll go back to the party now. It—it's been a pleasure to talk to you."

But he stood up, took her gently by the arm and led her across the room, saying, "There's no reason why we shouldn't examine that bird of paradise, too. It's one of my prize possessions. Let me take you to the conservatory."

"Oh, thank you!" exclaimed the beaming Dona. "I'd love it! I've never seen a bird of paradise. Does it really look like a bird?"

"It's probably the nearest a flower can ever come to looking like one," he assured her.

They walked through a softly carpeted corridor, out across a brick-paved patio and into a huge glass house. Here everything was sickishly fragrant with blooming plants and treated soil—and it was occupied only by two persons standing beside a playing fountain.

Bob Platt pulled herself abruptly out of Tug Nash's arms.

Dona's heart lost a beat. Her fleeting glance took in Bob's disorderly hair, her flushed cheeks; she saw the look of indecision on the handsome face of Tug Nash.

Something bruised beyond recall now fell out of Dona's heart. She knew she could never forgive Tug for this. Suddenly, she realised that she detested him. He had taken all her love, played with it carelessly, with no intention of being a real man. She wondered dully why he had done it, but could find no answer.

She turned her back on him and all he represented as Dunning Castor already had generously done. But out of the corner of her eyes, she saw Bob hastily disappear out a rear door.

Dunning Castor, ignoring the incident completely, began explaining in his deep, resonant voice, "The botanical name of this plant is Strelitzia reginea. It was named after the wife of King George III—Charlotte Sophia."

Dona's troubled eyes hypnotically fastened on the slender blue and yellow petals, which looked like a lovely graceful bird poised at the top of the long green stem.

"It's—it's beautiful," she breathed tremulously, and hoped that she didn't sound as brokenhearted as she felt.

Footsteps from behind now filled her with trepidation.

Tug Nash, unabashed, joined them now, with, "Good evening, Mr. Castor. What a crazy-looking flower! Like a lily that's mixed its paints—a blue petal—a yellow petal—a—"

"Yes, but you must agree the result is unique, and rarely beautiful," said Dnning Castor defensively.

Dona knew by the gentle reverence in his voice that she was seeing a side of this man that none of his hardheaded business associates suspected he possessed.

"It's unique all right," came unappreciatively from Tug, "but I'll take roses any time. To me roses are—"

"Glad you like my pet flower, Miss Nickelson," interrupted Mr. Castor laconically. "We'll talk again later, I hope."

And before the pale, trembling Dona could reply, Mr. Castor's big muscular legs had carried him swiftly out of earshot.

She was alone with Tug Nash.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Disillusionment

"I know what you're thinking, baby," Tug began hurriedly. "But you've got me wrong. I don't give a hoot about Bob Platt. Why, she can't hold a candle to you! She's vain and silly—can't you see what I mean?"

Dona turned away. She mumbled over her shoulder, "I only wish I could."

Tug caught up with her and pulled her down beside him on an iron bench.

"You've got to listen, Dona! I'm in love only with you—my wife. If I seem interested in Bob Platt, there's a reason. She's rich."

Dona shivered. She glanced up apprehensively at his flushed face, his darkly burning eyes, and she knew her faith in him had somehow evaporated. She could never trust him again. Something had gone out of her. In the twinkling of an eye, she had changed. She could stand on the sidelines now and look for cool aloofness at the utterly mad infatuation she formerly had for this weakling.

"Why didn't you try to marry Bob then—instead—instead of—"

He leaned so close that his breath was hot on her cheek.

"Because I love you, that's why," he told her passionately.

He jumped up, began rocking on his heels before her.

"You have a queer way of showing your love," she burst out indignantly. "After all I thought you were—after what I planned—"

"Stop it, Dona! Can't you understand? Bob Platt is too sophisticated to tie to. She knows all the answers. I don't want a wife like that. Naturally—as a financial asset—she's tops."

"I see. You make her fall in love with you—get her to finance some of your wild schemes—then drop her. Why—I think—I think you're contemptible."

He leaned down and roughly grabbed her shoulders. She tried to pull away, but she was helpless. Beneath her sheer faille gown, her breast rose and fell in painful agitation.

She wondered how to rectify the cruel mistake that had tied her to a man like this. She had gone into marriage with her eyes blinded by love. Love? What was love, anyway? Why did it fly away as quickly as it came, leaving this horrible empty feeling in the heart?

But Tug was talking rapidly, fiercely.

"How do you think I can ever have my own business if I don't take advantage of opportunities" he asked. "Here we are—madly in love—and I can't even support you."

He paused dramatically.

Dona was staring blindly down at her tightly clenched hands in her lap. She made no reply.

"I'm wild about you, honey." Tug's tone was entreating now. He leaned down again, took her pale taut face in his two hands, lifted it and kissed her mouth before she could avoid him.

"Sit down!" Dona burst out finally, nearly beside herself with anger.

Tug dropped to the bench with surprising quickness. He flung an arm over its back, all attention.

"Well," he said, carefully tender, "what's on your mind, Honey?"

"Tug, what kind of business is this you're planning to go into—how much money will it take?"

A swift plan was running through her mind. Perhaps if she could sound the depth of Tug's character, perhaps if he weren't so desperate, had his chance, he could make good. Anyway, he mustn't be a cheap chiseler. He was her husband, whether she liked it or not, He had to be honorable, make something of himself, even if she could never love him or thoroughly trust him again.

"I'm going to open a radio shop—on a big scale. Sell all makes—specialize in television. Big future to that. It won't take much capital. I'll work it on commission."

Dona seriously pondered this a moment, then suggested, "You could rent a store downtown where rents would be low."

"Not in Unadilla, I couldn't. This town is dead. Los Angeles is the spot for me."

He wanted to leave town! Fine! At least, he would be out of sight if not out of mind. Perhaps after he'd gone, she could decide what to do next. When he was around with all his wild money-making schemes, his superconfidence and conceit, he made her dizzy. She couldn't think things through to the end. He never did. His balance wheel was loose somehow.

She said slowly, avoiding his eyes, "If you want to go to Los Angeles and line up things, I could send you two or three hundred."

Now that she wasn't buying her own clothes, she could do what she liked with her salary. Of course, she had planned to save it for an emergency. But wasn't this one?

"Swell! You'd do anything to keep me away from another woman, wouldn't you, baby?"

She bit her lower lip between sharp little teeth. She told him resentfully, "It's not that at all. It's only because—"

"I'll send for you seen, darling. I'll be hitting the big money in no time. We'll get a little apartment."

She cringed from him as his hand fell to her shoulder in a half embrace. She wondered if she had started something from which she couldn't escape. The way she was feeling now, she never wanted to consummate this marriage of theirs. She didn't know exactly how to escape from it, but at any rate she would put it off as long as possible.

"It's expensive to run a home, Tug. When you're doing well—"

"Gosh! Where's your spirit? Still fussed over Bob Platt going for me? Cheer up, honey. Let's see you smile."

He attempted to draw her close again, but she managed to slip to her feet.

"Until you prove you're on the up and up, Tug, I can't—can't have much faith in you. I'm sorry—but that's how it is."

He jumped up and sullenly confronted her.

"So that's it? When I make my pile, I'll be good enough for you! I can slave like the devil, while you play around with the bigwigs and laugh up your sleeve at me! Say—what kind of guy do you think I am?"

But this violent outburst did not impress her as it would have done a short while ago. She was too filled with resentment. She was learning all about Tugwell Nash. She had already learned too much. It was only duty now that prompted her to be halfway civil to him. He was her husband and he needed help. He was weak and foolish, and here she was trying to find a spark of decent manhood in him to kindle into a blaze! Oh, it was simply ridiculous even to attempt it!

Then he played a trump card. From his coat pocket, he brought out a piece of folded newspaper.

He opened it quickly, held it before her eyes and said, "Here we are! In black and white! Now—laugh this off!"

"Intention to marry," she read. And down the column that listed those who had obtained marriage licenses were the name of Dona Nickelson and Tugwell Nash.

why I'm so—so charitable," she told him low, her face whiter than the calla lily beside her.

But he mistook her meaning and a peculiar smile of satisfaction crossed his dark, good-looking face.

"That's the spirit—my darling wife," he told her exultantly.

"But the marriage announcement—how about that?" she asked quickly.

He laughed confidently. "Don't worry. I've fixed that. You won't see that in the papers."

She wondered a little anxiously if she could rely on this. But even if she couldn't, she'd have to take what came.

"I'm leaving town tomorrow," he went on. "A check will be welcome—any time."

"I'll mail one at once." She wheeled about and took quick nervous steps away from him.

She walked out of the conservatory, her heart dead within her. She was thankful that he made no move to follow her.

She entered the house, sick with fear and disillusionment; she wondered if any one who knew her or Tug had seen that intention to marry column. She was now more desirous of keeping their marriage a secret than Tug had ever been. She fervently wished she never had to see or think of Tug Nash again.

But at least she had prevented him from doing a cheap, cowardly thing. He wouldn't need Bob's assistance now, and any money that Tug's lawfully wedded wife sent him would be Platt money, paid to her for looking after Bob. If she wasn't doing exactly that now, she didn't know what else to call it.

She slipped past groups of gayly chatting guests in the spacious lower hall and vanished into a dressing room to repair the damage that Tug's rough lovemaking had done to her hair.

She stood before a mirror and reddened her drooping lips and powdered her drawn face, making the operations last as long as possible. She dreaded to mingle again with the merry guests out there. Her heart wasn't in it.

But most of all she dreaded having to see Tug again tonight, even the few minutes it would take him to drive her back to the Platt residence would be torture.
